My Lord, it is a matter of satisfaction to the people of Bengal that the Government after having indulged in its traditional habit of laissez faire for over a century in industrial affairs as compared with other provinces is now showing signs of activity. The increased provisions in the Budget under the heads of Sanitation, Agriculture, Irrigation, Fishery and Development of Industries clearly indicate that the Government is earnest to take an active part in the industrial organization of the province. Agriculture and sanitation are the two important factors in the development of industries, and they are essential for the improvement of the economic condition of the people of this country, especially of the masses. We cannot be fully prepared to expand our industries until we are able to train labour to a higher standard of work. Industrialists in Bengal hailed with joy your Excellency's ardent desire to combat the malady of hook-worm. It is clearly established that this disease greatly impairs the energy and efficiency of our labour, and if this degenerating malady can be completely eradicated from the province of Bengal it will be a great blessing and will help the cause of industry. My Lord, I may be permitted to offer our grateful thanks to your Excellency for your foresight in this matter. Adverse criticisms have been made in this Council in regard to the grant in the Budget of a small sum of money for the expenditure on Fishery. Any one who has read the report of the Industrial Commission on this subject should be convinced of the prospects of this branch of industry in Madras where nearly two lakhs of rupees were expended in 1916-17, and I see no reason why in Bengal we should not be equally successful. In many countries this branch of industry is considered a national asset. In Bengal fish is a staple food and, therefore, Fishery should be organized on a scientific basis not for the sole purpose of increasing Government revenue but to develop this branch of industry in Bengal.

My Lord, attempts have been made by well-known leaders to divert the funds provided for Sanitation, Agriculture and Fishery to other channels. It is painful and hard to believe that our politicians are still not convinced and cannot yet realize that our political regeneration which we all cherish at heart depends upon the development of the industries and resources of the country.

Government have already taken steps to facilitate and improve technical education. It is also believed that Government will be able to give tangible assistance to mufassal municipalities who will be anxious to promote primary education on the lines of the new Act passed the other day, but who will be unable, owing to the poor condition of the people, to meet the increased expenditure that must be incurred. Technical and primary education must precede the progress of the expansion of industry.

The increased provision in the Budget for co-operative societies and the continuance of the support for the improvement of Cottage and Home Industries are calculated to further the cause of the improvement of the economic condition of the masses.

It is obvious that Government are now seriously directing their attention to these matters, and I beg leave to congratulate the Government and to tender our grateful thanks to your Excellency for the interest Government are now taking for the improvement of the material condition of the province and to express an earnest hope that the Government will year by year steadily increase the Budget grants under the heads I have mentioned as circumstances could permit.

The Hon'ble A. K. Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

My Lord, in offering a few remarks on this year's Budget, I wish to draw your Excellency's attention to the wasteful expenditure on certain departments, which in my opinion might profitably be stopped, and the saving thus effected utilised for more urgent and pressing needs of the country. I do not know whether your Excellency will condescend to take these remarks into consideration, but I shall feel very much relieved when I have had my say in these matters, because I will then have the satisfaction of having raised a note of warning in time and thereby humbly attempted to have discharged my duty both towards your Excellency's Government and my country.

The first major head of expenditure on which I wish to offer a few remarks is Agriculture. The following figures will show the expenditure under this major head for the present as well as previous years :—

1917-18	7,80,000
1919-20	11,58,000

There is far more beneath this dry roll of figures than appears on the surface. During the three financial years 1916—19, a sum of more than 26 lakhs of rupees has been spent out of the revenues of the country over this particular department, and the public have a right to enquire what beneficial results, if any, have followed all this heavy expenditure. On a question like this, the self-laudatory annual reports of the department are of very little value. The departmental officers have got to justify themselves and their work, and they cannot but speak in the highest terms of their own achievements. The Government resolutions on the annual reports of the working of the various departments cannot also be expected to be too critical : for I believe it is a rule of official etiquette for Government officials not only to say no ill of one another, but to heap even ill-deserved praise on subordinates all along the line. In order, therefore, to get at correct facts and to form an accurate estimate of the working of any department, we have to look outside the pages of official reports and resolutions. We live in this country, and if anything remarkable has really been achieved, it ought to strike the eyes of the lay and unprejudiced public. In order to test the work of this particular department, from the point of view of actual achievements, let us see what the facts really are.

If we turn to the report of the department for 1917-18, we find that the Director of Agriculture claims that during the last 3 years the department has been able to show considerable progress. But when we come to read his summary of the progress it amounts to this, that there is now scarcely "a district in the province where the seed of departmentally-selected varieties has not been distributed." Over and above this, the activities of the department seem to have been confined to certain matters about which a vague idea is conveyed to the public mind by means of the technical botanical terms in which this portion of the report is couched. The most important part of the work is no doubt about the experiments conducted in what is known as the Kakhya-Bombai jute and the Indra-Sail variety of rice. This is all the sum total of the results of the many-sided activities of the department for which more than 26 lakhs of public money have been spent during only the last 3 years.

My Lord, the popular feeling is that the department is not being properly worked and that the money spent is disproportionately excessive as compared with the results achieved. This is not my own personal view, but I believe this view is shared by many of my colleagues in this Council and by an overwhelming number of my countrymen outside. My friend the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has lent the weight of his opinion to the view which I now put forward in this Council, and I am glad that he has spoken out in clear and unmistakeable terms. The following are however the chief points on which efforts should be concentrated to economize expenditure.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

First.—There is hardly any necessity for the highly-paid staff which is being maintained by the department. We find that out of the 26 lakhs which I have spoken of as having been spent on the department, a sum of over Rs. 8 lakhs has been absorbed by the salaries and allowances of the Director and his troop of assistants. This is really paying too much for the whistle. I do not object to one or two experts being retained in the department, but most of the other posts ought to be either abolished or replaced by others of lesser value. This is one of the few departments where the head of the department need not be a highly-paid European officer at all. The Director might more properly be an Indian with the necessary qualifications, and I believe there are even now several Indian officers in the department who can be safely placed in charge of the work.

Secondly.—Government must realize that for a large amount of the work of the department, non-official help and sympathy must be sought and secured. It is no use telling us that non-officials are not coming forward in larger numbers. Proper efforts must be made and in the proper spirit, and it will be found that non-officials will come forward far beyond expectation.

Thirdly.—Strict watch should be kept over the amounts spent under the head "touring charges." In last year's Budget a sum of Rs. 55,000 had been allotted, and this year the allotment has gone up to Rs. 66,000. I can assure your Excellency that the major portion of these allotments represents money that has been absolutely mis-spent in the past and will not be better spent in the current year. The system itself is also responsible to a certain extent for all this waste. We are told that there are officers who have spent as many as 28 days out of every 30 days on an average on tour. This is a physically impossible feat and it is obvious that much of the touring can be classed in that category only technically, and ought never to entitle the officer to any touring allowance. Under present conditions, an officer has only to move more than 5 miles away from his headquarters and he is then supposed to be on tour, even though he may be on a visit to his father-in-law's house or to renew old ties with distant relations and friends or have a good time of it with a cousin or a sister-in-law. He is entitled under the rules to be reimbursed from public coffers, and this at so generous a rate that the officer is able not only to recoup himself, but also make a substantial profit which he looks upon as a legitimate addition to his salary. It is difficult for the head of the department to exercise any effective check or control on such irresponsible touring, for the officer concerned has only to mention that he was imparting agricultural education or carrying on demonstrations at some experimental farm, or supervising the demonstration of Kakhya-Bombai jute or distributing packets of Indra-Sail seed for transplanted winter rice. I confess that all these remarks imply a serious reflection on the integrity and honesty of the officers; but I can assure your Excellency that this picture is not at all drawn from my imagination, but generally reflects the popular impression in these matters.

Fourthly.—More money should not be handed over to the department than can be properly utilized or spent by it. In every case sufficient details ought to be given of the nature of the contemplated expenditure. It is extremely objectionable to hand over large sums to a spending department under the head "Miscellaneous" and then give the officers of the department a blank cheque to deal with this money as they please. We find that under the head of "Experimental Farm" a sum of Rs. 81,580 and under the minor head of "Sericulture" a sum of Rs. 60,000 have provided for under this vague heading of "Miscellaneous." I can only say that a provision in the Budget for an expenditure of nearly a lakh and-a-half, without any specification of what the expenditure is likely to be, seems hardly a justifiable method of imparting information to the public as to the manner in which public money is going to be spent.

My Lord, I next pass on to another department, where again public money is being wholly wasted under a delusion that the greatest possible good is being done to the people of the country by the activities of the department.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

I refer to the Department of Co-operative Credit. Here again I do not wish to underrate the importance of the department itself, for I know very well that co-operation in various forms has produced marvellous results in all civilized countries; and I can have no doubt that, if properly guided, the co-operative movement will also do for my countrymen what it has done for mankind in other parts of the world. Unfortunately, however, in this department too money is unnecessarily wasted and the tendency of Government is to go on increasing the Budget allotments without waiting to see whether money already placed at the disposal of the department has been properly utilized or not. The Registrar himself is a highly-paid officer on Rs. 1,500 a month plus a local allowance of Rs. 150 a month; he has one Personal Assistant on Rs. 400 a month, and 4 joint-registrars, 1 on Rs. 500 a month and 3 on Rs. 400 a month, each drawing a local allowance of Rs. 100 a month. Over and above all these, there is a chief auditor, 22 inspectors, 14 auditors and it is proposed to appoint 20 more inspectors and 2 divisional auditors with a correspondingly large increase in the clerical staff of the department. Now, what is the work which all these officers are expected to do? There are roughly 3,200 co-operative societies of all kinds in the province and if this number is distributed amongst the 64 officers I have mentioned, they will each have about 50 societies a year to look after. Having regard to the fact that the officers of this department are supposed to be exceptionally brisk and active and can spend on an average about 300 days in the year on tour, each officer will have roughly 6 days to devote to a co-operative society in his charge. I do not mean to say that this is exactly what will happen; but this calculation will give the members of this Council an idea of the disproportionately large increase of officers as compared with the co-operative societies placed in their charge. I wish to make the following specific remarks as regards this department :—

First.—The Registrar need not be a highly-paid member of the Indian Civil Service. I believe there is a standing circular order of the Secretary of State that the Bengal Registrar must always be an I. C. S. man; I am speaking from memory, and if I am right in my recollection, this bar to the appointment of other qualified men to the post should at once be removed. In my opinion the Registrar need not be an I. C. S. man at all, but an Indian on a much lower pay.

Secondly.—The Registrar may be given one Personal Assistant, but all his other gazetted appendices should be removed as early as possible.

Thirdly.—Strict control should be exercised over the touring expenses of officers. The same remarks apply here as in the case of officers in the Agricultural Department. There is an allotment in the Budget of Rs. 60,000 as the travelling allowance of officers and establishment; this is simply a monstrous waste. I have no doubt that a large portion of this amount will be absolutely unjustified expenditure.

I find also the following allotments for this Department in the Budget :—

	Rs.
Temporary establishment	15,000
Lump provision for additional establishment ...	32,336
Office expenses and miscellaneous ...	15,000

My remarks with regard to the allotments under the head "Miscellaneous" in connection with the Department of Agriculture apply to these allotments also. As it is, the department can hardly be credited with having usefully spent the money placed at their disposal and it is a bad policy to encourage them in their wasteful expenditure by placing large sums of money without specific limitations as to the manner in which the money is to be spent.

Raja Hrishikesh Laha.

My Lord, I am sorry I had to speak so disparagingly of two departments which have got the possibilities of being amongst the most beneficial of the departments of the administration ; but I have yielded to a sense of duty in making remarks which I should like to have been the very last to make. I can assure your Excellency that I have not given full vent to my feelings ; and it is obvious that the rules of debate to-day impose a serious restriction to a detailed examination of the questions from all points of view. I will, however, make certain suggestions to remedy what I consider to be the present defects in the working of these departments, and I hope your Excellency will take these remarks into consideration. In the first place, the fact must be recognized that without the fullest measure of non-official help and co-operation, all the activities of these departments are bound to end in failure. Non-officials are always ready to co-operate with officials, but in order that the right type of men may be got in adequate numbers, the officials must come forward to enlist non-official sympathy and co-operation in the right spirit. When this non-official help and co-operation is secured the work which is now being done by Government servants should be delegated more and more to non-official workers. It does not stand to the credit of the Department of Co-operative Societies that there are at the present moment only 50 honorary organizers in the field of actual work. It is a mistaken policy to officialize a department like this ; this kind of officialization has produced the most baneful results in other parts of the world, and there is no reason why different results from such a system will follow in India. If non-officials can be secured, a small remuneration by way of travelling allowance (and so forth) will suffice for their compensation and there will be an immense saving effected in the Budget allotments for the departments.

Secondly, till this non-official help is secured, the work that is being done by the present staff of Government servants in the Departments of Agriculture and Co-operative Societies may profitably be handed over to circle officers who will be appointed under the forthcoming Village Self-Government Act. These officers should be entrusted with the actual work of imparting all the knowledge about improved methods of agriculture to cultivators, looking after their agricultural needs and requirements, as also supervising the work of co-operative societies within the area placed in their charge. They ought to have a place of residence within this area of their charge, and they should be required to go out constantly on tour to form a real link between the Government and the people. Several lakhs might be cut down from the Budget allotments under the head of "Agriculture and Co-operative Credit" and might be better utilized in appointing a large number of circle officers for the purpose of supervising the working of the departments like that of Agriculture and the Co-operative Credit.

My Lord, I had a mind to say a few words about the expenditure on the Police Department, but I find the time at my disposal is limited and, moreover, experience teaches me that all remarks regarding the curtailment of expenditure regarding the Police Department always fall on deaf ears. I would only say that in my humble opinion Sir Henry Wheeler, the Finance Member, ought not to be entrusted with the portfolio of such a spending department as that of the Police.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha said :—

Your Excellency, I must congratulate the Government on the very satisfactory Budget which has been presented to the Council and which affords little scope for criticism. I am glad to note that ample provision has been made for carrying out urgent and important schemes of sanitary improvement. After the pointed attention which was recently drawn by your Excellency to the alarming prevalence of the hook-worm disease, I welcome the provision made in the Budget for an enquiry into this insidious disease which is sapping the energies and enfeebling the constitution of such a large proportion of the population. Your Excellency, shortly after the assumption of the charge of this Presidency, announced that the carrying out of anti-malarial measures would receive your special attention. I am glad to be able to bear my humble testimony to the methodical manner in which effect is being given in successive years to this most timely announcement.

Provision has been made for the establishment of two new District Agricultural Farms in continuance of the scheme for the distribution of improved paddy and jute seed and for the appointment of nine additional District Agricultural officers. In this connection may I be permitted to add that the agriculturists gratefully appreciate the fact that, in spite of the enhancements of the rates of interest charged by the Government of India to your Excellency's Government, no change has been made in the rate charged by your Excellency's Government for loans to agriculturists. I should like to suggest that portion of the sum of Rs. 1,80,000, which is available for the development of agricultural education, may be profitably utilized in carrying on propaganda work in the direction of popularizing improved methods and implements in carrying out agricultural operations, as is proposed to be done in regard to the education of the people concerning matters of sanitation.

My Lord, now that the Primary Education Bill has been passed, I consider it an auspicious augury that the Government has in hand a sum of Rs. 1,17,00,000, representing the unspent balance of Imperial grants for education, and I do hope that it may be found possible to utilize a portion of this money in assisting district boards and municipalities in disseminating primary education over and above the lump-grant of Rs. 5,50,000 provided in the Budget for the development of primary education.

The Munsiffs are among the most hard-worked public servants. I therefore welcome the provision of Rs. 1,25,000 for the increase of their pay and of Rs. 50,000 for providing residences for Additional Sessions Judges and eleven Munsifs.

My Lord, I am not in favour of starving the policemen, notwithstanding their various shortcomings. I, therefore, approve of the provision made in the Budget for raising the pay of head-constables. In this connection may I suggest that regard being had to the difficulty experienced in obtaining recruits from Upper India for the rank of the constable an experiment may be made in the direction of attracting Bengalee youths, possessing the requisite qualifications, to the Police Department to join as constables by offering them a slightly higher pay, especially for service in Calcutta. I venture to think that the Bengalee soldiers who have returned from the war would furnish excellent material for such recruitment.

I welcome the provision of Rs. 5,000 for a course of training to enable young medical men to take the Calcutta D. P. H. degree, so as to qualify for appointment as District Health Officers.

The demand for D. P. H. men to be employed as District Health Officers is already in excess of the supply, and it will increase year after year.

A salutary provision has been made in the Budget for the payment of half the salaries of Health Officers to be employed by the municipalities. I earnestly hope that the same liberal principle will be followed in regard to the salaries of the additional sanitary staff that may have to be employed by the more progressive municipalities in order to carry out sanitary reforms and improvements. As the District Boards will be required to appoint Health Officers in 1920-21, I hope Government will show equal generosity to the Boards and provide in the Budget for the year for half the salaries to be paid to them.

Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur said :—

My Lord, we are grateful to your Excellency's Government for the grant of fifteen lakhs of rupees for the Dacca University. The University Commission has now finished its labour and we hope that the Dacca University will soon be an accomplished fact. I may here mention that the University will be incomplete without a Medical College. Year before last I brought this matter to the notice of your Excellency's Government, and this year also a resolution to that effect was moved by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, and I am glad to say that on both these occasions Government had been sympathetic to the proposal and was only waiting for the Commission's report. It is a patent fact that the Calcutta Medical College has to refuse admission to a good number of boys every year, most of whom unhappily happen to be East Bengal students. A Medical College at Dacca will thus go to remove a long-felt grievance of the people of my part of the country.

My Lord, there is a feeling in the country, and a feeling justified by facts, that a large portion of money under Education is eaten up by excessive number of inspection staff and by erecting large magnificent hostels; that paraphernalia engages the attention of the Government more than the actual spread of education. My Lord, the people want education first and not palatial buildings fitted up in the most costly modern fashion. The country is poor and cannot afford to spend so big a sum on mere luxury. There is another aspect of it. It is not the rich alone that come in for education. Our schools and colleges are mostly fed by boys of poor parents. They live in their homes in humble huts and in a modest style. They come to the hostels from the log cabin to the White House. What is the effect of these palatial buildings on the young impressionable boys? They unconsciously adopt a style of living that they can vainly seek to find at home. A feeling of discontent is the result. There is another evil also. The hostel charges are gradually increasing, and is a serious strain on the purse of the poor parents and guardians. General education should not be made costly. It should be within the reach of the people of all classes. I must not be misunderstood to say that I am against hostels and boarding-houses. They are necessary. Our complaint is that hostels should not be fine specimens of Gothic or Saracenic structures embellished with electric lights, fans and other costly unnecessaries. The money saved thereby—and I am sure a good decent sum it will be—can best be utilized by educating a comparatively larger number of boys.

The question of waterways in East Bengal stands in need of immediate solution. We are grateful to your Excellency for allotting Rs. 50,000 this year for the improvement of khals at Dacca. The money is rather inadequate. In reply to my interpellation last year the Government was pleased to state that the project report was not completed yet. I believe it is still unfinished and hence this small sum. More than six months in the year the channels remain dry and the difficulty of conveyance is great. In order to meet the expenses for re-excavating and keeping in order the silted-up khals I suggested the levy of small tolls on every boat that passes through them. I am sure nobody will grudge it, as the people now pay a much heavier sum for other forms of conveyances and an incalculable benefit can thus be done both in improving the communication and rural sanitation. In East Bengal, specially in the Dacca district, channels are the principal if not the only means of communication, other means not being feasible. I urge upon the Government to see that the entire allotted sum be spent during the year and, if necessary, more money may be found for the improvement of khals. In this connection I may add that in reply to my interpellation to consider the desirability of either permanently retaining an officer at Dacca or until such time as all necessary projects for improving the waterways and channels are completed, the Government was pleased to state that the question of the desirability of extending the scope of the enquiries was under the consideration of the Government. I now urge upon the Government that in order to effectively carry on the work of the improvement of rivers and khals in East Bengal an Irrigation Division be opened there. I understand that a new headquarters station is proposed to be located at Khulna. Khulna is not suitable to be the headquarters, as it is not the central place. Most of the affected rivers and channels are within the districts of Dacca, Faridpur and Mymensingh in East Bengal, and if the headquarters of the new proposed division be located either at Dacca or Faridpur, the work can most effectively be carried out. Besides, in Sundarbans, only waste-lands will be reclaimed, but here thickly-populated areas will be immensely benefited.

Mr. Phelps.

My Lord, we are glad that the Government has granted Rs. 25 lakhs for sewerage at Dacca and has allotted Rs. 3 lakhs for the year. I believe the attention of the Government has been drawn to the speech recently delivered at Dacca by Mr. Williams, where he told a most melancholy tale about the sanitary condition of the town of Dacca, justly described as the most filthy municipality in the world. Though the sum seems to be insufficient to meet the exigency of the situation I appeal to your Excellency's Government that the entire allotted sum for the year be spent during this year and, if possible, more money be found for it. This is a matter which cannot wait any longer. I urge upon the Government to allot a very big sum, if not the entire balance in the next year's Budget. It will not be out of place to mention here that your Excellency's Government has announced the intention to partition the Dacca district. Though I make bold to say that on the face of the very strong protest against the proposed measure, which in the opinion of the people concerned is not at all to their interest, Government will consider the advisability of dropping the scheme altogether; but in case the Government is bent upon doing so, a plea may not then be raised to stop or postpone the carrying out of the project of improving the municipality. So I urge that the sooner it is finished the better.

The attention of the Government must have been drawn to the prevalence of small-pox in Dacca. The people have suffered for want of immediate help. For some days there were no lymphs or only bad lymphs were available. Many people could not be vaccinated in time and, if vaccinated, most of the cases were unsuccessful. I ask the Government to open a lymph depôt at Dacca and direct immediate steps to be taken by the municipality to combat this fell disease.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. H. Phelps said :—

My Lord, I congratulate the Government on the very satisfactory Budget which has been presented to the Council.

I am convinced as a business-man, long resident in this great country, that the welfare of Europeans in India is so bound up with the best interests of the Indian people, that it behoves us to work hand-in-hand with the people, and it equally behoves the patriots of India to cherish our comradeship and our energies in the advancement materially and morally of the body politic.

There is, I regret to say, still lingering in the minds of a few of my countrymen a sort of indefinable dread of the loss of prestige lurking in political reform. There was the same honest dread lurking in the minds of English conservatives when compulsory education was advocated in England fifty years ago. The dread was, as I say, an honest one, but it was none the less a misplaced and unnecessary one as was proved before many years had elapsed. The conservatives of the present day are more liberal than the liberals of a former generation, and I have not the slightest doubt that the spirit called liberal will continue to assert itself in English minds as it is striving to do in the minds of the leaders of thought in this country.

Nothing can stop it; I am convinced that it is the will of God. If it were not so, we should not have made the progress we have already made, we should not see the signs of progress we see to-day. We should not see the strivings after education and sanitation, pure food and local self-helpful government in the cities and in the rural districts.

It sometimes raises a feeling of distrust in the minds of the rich and the educated when they see leaders from among the people come forward as champions of the poor, but is not history in this respect repeating its better self? Let us have, therefore, less suspicion of others who have a mind to co-operate for the general good, even if their position in life is lowly and their education in book-learning is defective.

Touching the education of the masses I often think that much more might be done in the matter of hygiene and sanitation, in farming and in the industrial world, if the Government could be induced to set apart a modest sum for a touring department of educational cinematography. Just think how quickly and forcefully conviction could be brought to the minds of the most ignorant and illiterate by a series of living pictures illustrating the advantages of public hygiene! Why, a person might learn in a single hour as much as a reader might learn in a month. And this might be learnt by those who were utterly unable to read.

And look what millions of drab lives might be gladdened for a brief spell and given an impetus to think, by the expenditure of a comparatively small sum. There would be no necessity to build halls and theatres; the entertainments could be given free in the open under the healthiest conditions.

Your Excellency's Government must have noticed that even in such simple matters of the need for elementary education and village sanitation the general education of the masses lags behind legislation; the people are legislated for in advance of demand of any but the more public-spirited few, and even after all your legislation there is a dead mass of inertia to contend with before the benefits of the legislation can be appreciated. How much better it would be if enlightenment could receive first attention so that the people could ask for legislation instead of having it thrown to them or thrust upon them.

It has been observed by the best educationalists that the best form of education is that which equips a young person with a desire to learn and a capacity to think.

Whilst I am on this subject I should like to observe that as a film censor I have constantly regretted that so little provision has been made to suit the requirements and attainments of the Indian youths who flock by their hundreds to cinemas where they are often entertained with English social problem plays and the adventures of very undesirable persons including dacoits and sharpers and even murderers. Many of these poor people will spend a day's pay on an entertainment which is of less than doubtful good to them, although quite harmless and even of positive benefit to others of European tastes and education.

It is notorious that stripped of all the accessories of gorgeously-decorated theatres and other luxuries the cinema in itself is about the cheapest form of entertainment and most instructive and might easily be provided in the open, immediately after sunset, free of all charge in rural districts, and would not only entertain the populace, but afford them something to think about, and develop a desire to improve their condition.

It is quite possible to attach too much importance to cheap labour. Conservative minds are apt to make this mistake, but English employers are becoming convinced that what we want most urgently is efficiency even at the price of better wages.

There has been too much restfulness and contentment in India with the one-man-one-job kind of contentment which prohibits a man or woman from extending their usefulness to their employers. So long as this remains a special feature of the average Indian, so long as he refuses to become more versatile and accept new ideas, so long will he relegate himself to the restrictions of grinding poverty.

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

My Lord, in making these remarks of a general nature I do not claim a mandate from any one but my own experience, but I have lived long enough in India to love it and I am prepared to devote the rest of my days to the service of this great country.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I beg to congratulate your Excellency's Government for a larger grant made this year under the head of Sanitation for the lasting benefit to the people. I invited the attention of your Excellency's Council by moving several resolutions and also asking many questions in connection with the pollution of the water of the Bhagirathi, the Amta Drainage Scheme in the district of Howrah, the improvement of the Berhampore Sluice in the district of Murshidabad, famine relief for Bankura, prevention of floods in the districts of Howrah, Hooghly, Burdwan and Midnapore, the appointment of some additional district judges, subordinate judges and munsiffs to relieve the congestion of judicial work which is steadily increasing in several districts, the improvement of the pay of the officers of the provincial judicial service, the establishment of the hygiene institute, and a new medical school to afford increased facilities for medical education, the new eye hospital at the medical college, Calcutta, the increase in the number of district agricultural farms as well as district agricultural officers and seed stores and the establishment of agricultural middle schools at Chinsurah and Dacca. On behalf of the public, I thank your Excellency's Government for providing funds for all these items in the Budget for 1919-20.

My Lord, the Hon'ble Finance Member should be congratulated on the aggregate increase of revenue, but I feel disappointed to point out to your Excellency's Council that a portion of it has not been applied to minimise the suffering of the loyal band of hard-working clerks drawing a salary of Rs. 100 or less per month who are ungrudgingly offering their best services in the various departments of your Excellency's Government within the presidency of Bengal.

I deeply deplore the fact that nothing has been done as yet for improving the prospects of the teachers in the subordinate educational service, specially those in the lower subordinate grade. Owing to high price of food-stuffs and other necessities of life, the sufferings of these under-paid teachers employed in Government Schools are evidently on the increase, and it is certainly a disgrace to the Department of Public Instruction which has so long overlooked the just claims of these loyal servants who are devotedly rendering most valuable services to our country by training children, the future citizens of the Empire. It is a pity that persons responsible for the efficient administration of this department have hitherto failed to cure the gravest evils of the existing system. I was surprised to go through the revelations made at Dacca in connection with the social service exhibition which was opened by your Excellency the other day and proceedings of which appeared in the columns of the Englishman of 8th March last that "Indian school-masters are worse paid than coolies." Something substantial ought to be done to improve the material prospects of these teachers in villages.

In the current year's Budget, I hope and trust that the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction will fully utilise the amount of money sanctioned by Government for expenditure during the present financial year and under his administration the expenditure during this year will not again fall short of the sanctioned estimate as in the year just past.

From the reply given to me by your Excellency's Government at a meeting of the Council held on the 26th November last, I understand that the amount of surplus or rather profit to Government from the Hindu and Hare Schools, Calcutta, during the last six years from 1912-13 to 1917-18 amounted to more than Rs. 24,000 and Rs. 36,000, respectively. Referring to pages 16 to 24 under the head of Hindu and Hare Schools, in the printed list of staff of the Government Educational Institutions in the Presidency of Bengal, corrected up to 1st April 1918, and published by Government, I am really sorry to bring to the notice of your Excellency's Council that in spite of a very large surplus of money being available annually from these premier schools of Bengal, salary of most of the teachers employed in these institutions offers little or no inducement to competent men to work with full energy. The teachers find it very difficult to make both ends meet and maintain the members of their family and dependants in these hard times. The initial pay should be raised at once according to rank held by each of the teachers, and provisional arrangements should be made at once for the payment of bonus and house allowances to these deserving men out of the large surplus derived from these schools. The higher rate of fees are levied from among the students of these schools; many of the private schools in Calcutta, including some recently-established ones, which charge lesser fees from students, are already fitted with electric fans; but unfortunately the Hindu and Hare Schools are still without electric connections. The provision for electric fans for nearly 600 boys of well-to-do classes in each of these schools is not a matter of luxury, but it is a matter of urgent necessity owing to the unprecedented heat of the summer. I hope and trust that your Excellency's Government will take immediate steps to remedy these gravest defects in the premier schools of Bengal which are under the direct supervision of the Principal of the Presidency College, Calcutta, and the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction.

The allotment for industrial and technical education is not adequate. Materials for the manufacture of pulp for papers abound in Bengal. These should be fully utilised. Definite steps should be taken by your Excellency's Government for the revival of the sugar industry in the different districts of Bengal. I hope that with the introduction of responsible Government in the near future and in connection with the scheme of constitutional reforms in the direction of separating Imperial and Provincial finance, impetus should be given by your Excellency's Government to the earnest desire on the part of the people to take to industrial pursuits. More money should be spent and the amount as provided in the Budget should be fully utilised in connection with irrigation works in Bengal for the development of the insecure industry of agriculture and minimise the sufferings of the raiyats. Immediate effect should be given by your Excellency's Government to the recommendations of the Industrial Commission so as to improve the economic condition of the people and relieve their acute distress caused by the war.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

My Lord, my Hon'ble friend Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray began his speech by saying that this year's Budget was of great interest to the land-holding classes whom he represents in this Council. I think, my Lord, that this year's Budget has got a peculiar interest to the locality from which I come. In the first place as an inhabitant of the Burdwan district and representing a constituency in that division, I would be failing in my duty if I did not express my gratitude to your Excellency's Government not only for the provision made in the budget for mitigating the effects of the floods of the Damodar and the Ajoy, but also for the steps and measures adopted for giving effect to it. My Lord, it is more than half-a-century that the people of a large tract of land in the Burdwan Division suffered from damages on account of the inundations from the rivers Damodar and Ajoy. The question no doubt engaged the attention of the Government of Bengal but nothing substantial was done to relieve the distress. It was reserved for your Excellency's Government to take effective measures to mitigate the effects of the damages, and I am glad to acknowledge and I do it with gratitude, that in this matter at least your Excellency's Government have not followed the usual habit of dilatoriness in all Government proposals and measures, and that the matter of this flood has been taken up by Government in right earnest and I believe and trust that the battle of these two rivers has been fought and I hope will be won in the very near future.

I have also to thank your Excellency's Government for the provision made for starting a zilla school in the town of Burdwan. Burdwan happened to be one of the two districts in Bengal without a Government High School, and we are thankful to your Excellency's Government for supplying us with this High School which was a great necessity in the town of Burdwan. I am personally interested in it as I happened to place a proposal like this before your Excellency's Government about a couple of years back. I have further to thank your Excellency's Government for selecting Burdwan as one of the first places where to start a medical school. The need of medical schools is no doubt keenly felt all over Bengal and I hope and trust that more medical schools will be started very soon and provision made for them; but as a Burdwan man I must express my gratitude for the one which is about to be established in my native town.

My Lord, the people of this province fully appreciate, and gratefully appreciate, the endeavours made by your Excellency personally and by Government to fight the battle of malaria, and we at the same time appreciate the services rendered by Dr. Bentley in the matter of minimising the effects of malaria and preventing it. I think, my Lord, that in spite of all that has been said in this Council by my friend Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq a little more money is needed by Dr. Bentley to carry on the programme which he has in view. I think that he not only wants a larger sum for the experiments he wants to carry on but also to give actual relief to the people.

It is an old tale, my Lord, to talk of police expenditure and if I refer to it it is not again to raise up the old cry; but I say that although police expenditure has gone up by leaps and bounds in these few years, I am afraid there has been no material improvement in the pay and prospects of Police Inspectors or Sub-Inspectors or even constables on whom, your Excellency's Government will admit, the brunt of the work falls. At this time when our resources are limited and we want more money in various other departments, I venture to submit that the raising of the salary of the members of the Indian police is rather extravagant.

My Lord, I think we have in this Council more than often brought to the notice of your Excellency's Government the need for a larger number of Muhammadan hostels, both in and outside Calcutta and Dacca, and to-day I want again to press that Government should take steps to establish hostels for Muhammadan boys at all important centres of education. The question of Muhammadan education is a serious matter, not only in the interests of Muhammadans themselves, but in the interests of the whole province, because as long as the Muhammadans are not properly and as well educated in such proportions as their Hindu fellow-countrymen they are bound to be a dead-weight on the other communities in their march for progress and advancement as well as for a responsible Government.

We are grateful to your Excellency's Government for the promise made by the Director of Public Instruction that they are thinking of providing for a larger number of Muhammadan scholarships in primary and secondary schools, and I trust that effect will be given to the promise at an early date.

My Lord, during the official year that has just closed we had in this province an epidemic of influenza which at least in my part of the province has been followed by an epidemic of cholera and small-pox, and a large percentage or rather an appreciable percentage of my countrymen has fallen victims to these diseases, and in my humble way I beg to suggest to Your Excellency's Government that in these days when medical aid is not available in the rural areas a system of travelling dispensaries should be started and Government should take the management of these dispensaries in its own hands. No doubt attempts have been made by District Boards to relieve the people, but the resources of the District Board being limited and their arrangements defective, by the time they could arrange for it, great loss had already been sustained.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

My Lord, a few years back, when discussing the Financial Statement, I made a proposal that to further Muhammadan education some aid should be given to the private institutions, aided or unaided, on the condition that they provided facilities for the teaching of Arabic and Persian in their schools and colleges, and I again repeat that request because it has been times without number mentioned in this Council that Muhammadan boys find difficulties in getting education in colleges and a prayer for a Muhammadan college has also been made, but the difficulty to some extent would be solved if we find that in colleges and high schools provision is made for the teaching of Arabic and Persian because Muhammadan parents hesitate, and rightly hesitate, to send their boys to schools where they cannot receive an education suitable to Muhammadan boys.

My Lord, my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has said that the expenditure on the Department of Agriculture has been very high. I am sorry I cannot and do not agree with him in that; the expenses have been not very high. I agree with him up to this, that the department has not been as well managed as he or others of our countrymen could wish, but I think I shall not be far wrong if I say that of late the department is making a steady progress and the experiments made by the department are now proving very useful, but I am sorry that I cannot say the same thing about the Department of Co-operative Credit Societies.

My Lord, by a resolution of which notice was given in this Council by one of the Hon'ble Members, attention was drawn to the fact that there was great distress among the cultivating classes on account of the high prices of commodities, and I think Government should take some steps to relieve the distress, and I humbly suggest that one of the measures which would be adopted, if it is practicable to adopt it, would be to prevent the export of food-grains and cotton goods from this country because we are absolutely in need of them and cannot supply our own needs and demands.

Lastly, before I conclude, my Lord, I would venture to say that even though I am afraid my proposals will be characterised as preposterous, and with due deference to the opinion of Sir R. N. Mookerjee, I beg to submit that we—at least a large section of the people—have not been convinced that the Department of Fishery has been doing any good in this province. We have had an experienced and able member of the Indian Civil Service and an experienced member of the statutory service at the head, helped by experts brought from Europe, but all the same, up till now there has neither been an improvement in the supply of fish or fish cultivation, nor has there been any increase in the revenue of Government; at any rate the industry may be very useful but the working of the department has proved absolutely a failure, and I think it is extravagance to spend any more money on that department.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

I thank the Government for furnishing us with more detailed information in connection with the Financial Statement of this year than had been the practice hitherto. The Civil Budget Estimate for the year 1919-20 enables us to understand the figures in the Financial Statement much better than the lump sum figures in the Budget. But our main complaint has not yet been remedied. The Finance Committee comes into existence late in the year and cut-and-dried statements of new works are placed before them. A bare statement of probable receipts and expenditure under main heads is furnished, and the whole business is finished in two or three sittings. The detailed Budget is placed before the Council and, except a general discussion, no practical results ensue. Transfers and reappropriations in the Budget are freely and extensively made during the year, and the Finance Committee which ceases to exist during the rest of the year have nothing to do with them. The Council is in blissful ignorance of the changes made in the Budget during the course of the year of the progress of sanctioned works, of any new projects undertaken, or of projects abandoned. A thorough change in the method and procedure of dealing with the Budget in the Council is required. I venture to reiterate my suggestion that the Finance Committee should be made a Standing Committee and should be authorised to examine and deal with all proposals which tend to vary the Budget as finally passed in the Council and to keep watch over expenditure. Otherwise the control exercised by the Council is illusory. The progress and development of the country whether sanitary, educational, industrial or in any useful direction depends upon finance and its proper utilisation. The people want to be associated with the Government in this matter. With this intimate knowledge of the finance of the country the non-official members may be in a better position in submitting their proposals and to see that the schemes are executed in time and that the allotments may not lapse. The Reform Scheme contemplates that Standing Committees of non-official members are to be attached to all provincial departments. I believe that the Reform Scheme will not come into operation before another 12 months or more, and is it too much to hope that Your Excellency's Government will be pleased to anticipate the coming change and allow this Council to appoint a standing Finance Committee at the beginning of the financial year?

Forests.—One source of revenue which augments the resources of the country without inflicting any hardship on anybody is the yield of the forests. The estimated receipt is less by 2 lakhs than the revised estimate of last year for which an explanation has been given. But I believe this revenue is capable of improvement. The development of forest produce will also help in the industrial advancement of the country. May I have some information as to what steps are being taken to increase the forest products and how they are being utilised?

Excise.—The excise revenue is going up by leaps and bounds. The actuals in 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 156½ lakhs. The revised estimate for 1918-19 amounts to Rs. 178 lakhs and the Budget estimate for 1919-20 Rs. 187 lakhs. The total revenue in Calcutta alone in the year 1917-18 was 57½ lakhs out of a net revenue of 146 lakhs for the whole province, i.e., nearly 40 per cent. of the total revenue. It is therefore desirable that Government should devote a portion of this revenue in improving the condition of primary education in Calcutta and thereby help to spread literacy. The Corporation of Calcutta is also willing to help the Government in this matter.

In Bombay the Corporation gets a revenue of nearly 12 lakhs from excise and tobacco licenses, not to speak of 16 lakhs from octroi. This enables the Bombay Corporation to make liberal provision for primary education in the city. Calcutta, if I am right, contributes the bulk of the provincial revenue. The enormous revenue realised from income-tax, law and justice and stamps from this city in addition to excise forms the main financial strength of Government. Cannot the city, therefore, expect a fair and reasonable contribution for the primary education of its children who, properly trained and educated, constitute an asset to the country?

Education.—For years past I have been crying hoarse over the neglected condition of female education. My chief concern is the orthodox Hindu girls' education. While a capital grant of one lakh is budgetted for the Calcutta Girls' School which is evidently intended for European and Anglo-Indian communities, I regret the Government seems to be apathetic in the matter of the education of Hindu and Muhammadan girls. There is only a trifling provision of Rs. 22,000 for zenana teaching in East Bengal and Rs. 42,000 for the training of mistresses and Moslem women teachers which no doubt include lady teachers of all classes. Is this quite adequate for the promotion of education of Hindu and Muhammadan girls of the orthodox class? The present system of female education is unsuitable for orthodox Hindus, and I believe also for Muhammadan girls. The courses of study, lessons, etc., should be made to conform to orthodox rules if we are not to be denationalised.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Special schools should be started on new lines approved by the community at large in which western ideas should not prevail. A Committee, if I remember aright, was appointed a few years back with Sir Asutosh Mookerjee as President, to devise a scheme for the education of Hindu girls, but nothing has been heard of it. It is high time that a comprehensive scheme should be framed and the public given an opportunity to express their opinion on it. Such popular schools for girls as the Mahakali Patahala and others should be given all aids, and additional schools should be established in different parts of the country.

Commercial and Technical Education.—It is high time also for larger allotments to be made for the improvement of commercial, technical and industrial education. The commercial school in Calcutta should be improved and enlarged and commercial education should be encouraged by providing outlets for the employment of successful students. The mining schools in the colliery districts should be placed on a firm footing and greater facilities should be given for the admission of boys into the mining class of the Sibpur Engineering College by removing age and other restrictions. The rules for the admission to the Sibpur Engineering College generally should be revised so as to enable those who have not got university education but are otherwise fitted by general education, training, intelligence and inclination to pursue engineering education to enter its portals. I am grateful to Government for the assurance lately given that a Technological Institute is to be established in Calcutta. This has been deferred too long. May I ask whether it is likely to be an accomplished fact during the next year? In this connection I would like to be informed what steps are proposed to be taken to give effect to the recommendations of the Indian Industrial Commission. Provision of Rs. 2½ lakhs has been made for the development of industry. May I enquire how it is proposed to utilise this sum?

Medical.—I am glad that Government is taking steps to spread Medical education.

A provision of Rs. 1½ lakh has been made for the improvement of the pay of I. M. S. officers.

Assistant Surgeons.—The Assistant Surgeons are an efficient and hard-worked body, and their number is inadequate. Wherever they may be, in the remote mufassal stations or in rural villages, they work unremittingly to save the lives of the people, and yet their minimum pay is Rs. 100. Will not the Government kindly consider the grievances of the Assistant Surgeons and increase their emoluments?

Sanitation.—It is gratifying to find that the lump grant for Sanitation has been raised from Rs. 8,50,000 to Rs. 13,70,000, but neither in the sanitation Budget nor in Budget Item 43 (Minor works—Navigation) provision has been made for the improvement of the Bhagirathi river.

Improvement of the Bhagirathi river.—The safety of the port of Calcutta is connected with this river. I understand the Bhagirathi was recently surveyed, but with what result it is not yet known. If the upper reaches are well maintained, then there will be no want of good drinking water on both sides and consequently malaria and cholera will not be able to play havoc.

New Bridge across the Hooghly.—In connection with Bhagirathi river I would like to know how the question of building a new bridge across the Hooghly stands at present, when we may hope that this scheme will materialise, whether the floating bridge will be shifted higher up for direct communication between Northern Howrah and the city. The river system of the Presidency should be improved by the removal of silt and other obstruction, and good and wholesome water provided throughout the year in several parts of Bengal. I do not presume to offer any advice or suggestion to Government on this matter, but as the Government coach moves slowly, it would be interesting to know what is the Government scheme on the subject and what progress has been made in this connection.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Reserved tanks.—The cry for pure drinking water in rural areas is unabated. It is not possible to introduce filtered water-supply system everywhere, but much may be done to mitigate the distress by the provision of reserved tanks.

Not only the number of reserved tanks should steadily be increased every year but there should be constant inspection of these tanks to prevent their deterioration or pollution. From my personal knowledge I have found that some of the reserved tanks are not properly looked after and are consequently deteriorating. They are gradually converted into cesspools and become a menace to the health of the public.

Enquiry into question of river pollution.—May I enquire in this connection when the scheme for supplying filtered water to the riparian municipalities in the neighbourhood of Calcutta is likely to mature? While on this subject, I desire to express the gratitude of my countrymen for the provision of Rs. 25,000 for enquiry into the question of river pollution. The septic tank is the chief source of pollution, and not only the river water is polluted but also the religious feelings of the Hindus are hurt. Your Excellency will earn the gratitude of the people by adopting a measure to prevent this pollution.

Influenza.—Influenza played dreadful havoc during the last year desolating many a smiling home in the fairest village of the Presidency. For want of proper medical men and medicines, thousands and hundreds of thousands who could have otherwise been saved fell victims to this dreadful disease. The need of more dispensaries and medical men and above all the provision of travelling dispensaries with travelling doctors has been forcibly brought home by the appalling death-rate. I hope that the investigation which I understand is being made by the Government of India will result in the adoption of timely preventive and precautionary measures and that we will be spared another devastation from a recrudescence of this disease.

Floods in Burdwan District.—I thank the Government for the provision of funds for mitigating the effects of flood in the Burdwan Division and for the provision of Rs. 2,50,000 for rebuilding the Kidderpore Bridge.

Re-construction of the Kidderpore Bridge.—In connection with the re-construction of the Kidderpore Bridge, I would like to be informed about the width of the proposed bridge compared with its existing width, and whether the Tramway Company are paying a portion of the cost of the re-constructed bridge as their line will pass over it.

Canalisation of Tolly's Nallah.—For the partial canalisation of the Tolly's Nallah, I note that a sum of Rs. 75,000 has been provided in the budget. May I enquire for some particulars about the scheme and how far it will restore the former navigation of the channel and also render the water pure for religious purposes?

Bankura famine.—The recurrence of famine in Bankura has, I hope, attracted the attention of Government. Why should this district or other districts in this Presidency fall an easy prey to famine? No doubt the people are extremely poor. What are the economic causes that have brought about this poverty? It is said that the cultivator is not advanced. The proportion of non-cultivated area to the total cultivable area is, I believe, 37 per cent. against 79 per cent. in Birbhum and 80 per cent. in Faridpur. Irrigation is necessary in the greater portion of the district. Excavation and re-excavation of irrigation tanks seem to be necessary if any permanent improvement is to be effected. Besides, local handicrafts should be encouraged. Temporary relief is no doubt necessary, and I am sure the Government is doing its best. But as no one is in a better position than the Government to consider what permanent and preventive measures should be taken against the recurrence of famine in this district, the people would be thankful to know what the Government is contemplating to do in this connection.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Before I conclude this subject, I would draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government to the intense economic distress prevailing throughout the country and in every home by reason of the extraordinary high prices of all the necessaries of life. Poor and half-starved as the bulk of the people are in normal times, they have now been reduced to a desperate condition. It behoves the Government to take up the question in right earnest, and adopt measures to mitigate the present distress.

Provincial Executive Service.—The Government deserves the thanks of the public for the provision made in the Budget for the improvement in the salary of the Provincial Judicial Service. The grievances of the Provincial Executive Service deserve no less consideration. The total number of appointments in either of the two Services is about the same, i.e., about 300, and the number of grades inclusive of probationary Deputy Collectors is also the same. But, whereas, officers in the Judicial Branch who entered the service in 1893-94 are drawing Rs. 1,000, their contemporaries in the Executive Branch are drawing Rs. 500, i.e., only one-half of what the former are getting. No wonder the Service is discontented and many are anxious to seek fresh fields and pastures new in foreign service as in the case of the appointment to the post of the Secretary to the Corporation. The Provincial Civil Service forms the backbone of the general administration of the country. The pay and grading of the Service were fixed more than fifty years ago. The Public Services Commission made certain recommendations which are certainly inadequate, but nothing however has been done in revising the cadre of the Service. The Provincial Executive Service, like the Judicial Service, has deservedly won a high reputation for ability and integrity. Sir Valentine Chirol who cannot be accused of undue partiality towards Indians said: "The Provincial Civil Service constitutes the backbone of the civil administration. It is drawn for the most part from the same class of Indian society from which the bulk of the Indian members of the Indian Civil Service are themselves drawn. In proportion, as the work of administration increases, and it is found to go on increasing steadily, an increasingly large proportion of the more responsible duties hitherto discharged by the Indian Civil Service must necessarily devolve upon the Provincial Civil Service. The importance of raising the general standard of efficiency in the Provincial Civil Service and of bringing it nearer the level of the Indian Civil Service is, therefore, beyond dispute." The Public Services Commission was appointed so far back as 1912 and the Commissioners published their Report in 1915, but nothing has been done as yet to improve the pay and prospects of the Service. It may be said that the Report is under the consideration of the Government of India. It is the clear duty of the Local Government in the interest of efficient administration to ask them to come to an early decision on this highly important question.

Ministerial Service.—I may now be permitted to refer to the grievances of the ministerial service in the Province. The members of this service have been very hard hit by the extraordinary rise in the prices in consequence of the war. They have been literally driven deeper and deeper down the abyss, and until something is immediately done to improve their pay and prospects, they will cease to exist before long. They belong to the poor bhadralog class and their abject poverty and their wants and their sufferings have evoked universal sympathy. It is stated by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler that Government is contemplating to grant grain allowance to ministerial officers drawing Rs. 30 and under. I do not know what that miserable pittance would amount to. The sufferings of others drawing salaries above Rs. 30 are not less acute and an enquiry would reveal the fact that many of them are seriously in debt, and it would perhaps be hopeless to extricate them from the hands of their creditors until timely action is taken by Government.

My Lord, we are entering into what, we hope, will be the last year of our existence under the present constitution. We are looking forward to the fulfilment of the promise of the 20th August, 1917, both in letter and spirit.

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

A new era of progress—political, industrial, educational and sanitary—is dawning, and happily the distractions and financial embarrassments consequent upon the war are passing away, and the reconstituted Government will, we hope, be in a position to embark on the comprehensive task of improving the material condition of the people.

[At this stage the Hon'ble Member had to conclude his remarks, having reached the time-limit.]

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

My Lord, before saying anything on the Budget I think I ought to congratulate the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler on the improved method in which the Financial Statement has been prepared this year. Last year I complained of the indistinctness of the Statement, pointing out my difficulties in following the Budget figures, and I am glad to notice that this year I had no serious difficulty in grasping the salient features of the account.

Last year, my Lord, there was some talk about the waste of time in moving Budget resolutions—some of us resented it. This year also a pretty large number of resolutions were moved. We are constrained to admit that very little useful purpose is served both by such resolutions and by the Budget discussion. The members may with advantage be asked to submit their recommendations and suggestions before the Financial Statement is presented to the Council. The financial situation may be intimated to the members in a rough outline to enable them to make useful suggestions. It seems to me it is quite unnecessary for the members to suggest as to how the proposed expenditure should be met. If the importance of the thing can be established it is for the Finance Department to find out ways and means. I hope and trust some such procedure should be adopted in order to give a real character to these rather useless and showy Budget resolutions and discussions and the rules regulating the Budget consideration may be amended accordingly.

I am sorry, my Lord, I am to complain again as regards the administration of the Education Department. Out of a provision of Rs. 1,03,00,000 for Education there is a saving of Rs. 18,00,000 in the year just closed. It is said that there was some transfer of money to the Public Works Department for educational works, but the actual amount utilised has not been shown, though the actual transfer to the Public Works Department could be shown under head Police. This large saving under Education has not been re-allotted in the current year's educational Budget. On the other hand in the current year's estimate there is a decrease of about Rs. 5,00,000 as compared with the last year's sanctioned estimate. The curious explanation is that this decrease is mainly due to larger probable savings in the light of the expenditure incurred by the department in recent years. Are we to understand, then, that the department is inefficient and is unable to carry out the wishes of Government for some excuse or other? If the provision for capital expenditure of Rs. 3,00,000 reserved for the Dacca University is taken out of consideration, the real decrease in educational expenses comes to nearly Rs. 8,00,000. Surely the Education Budget cannot be accepted under the circumstances as really a progressive one, though in the case of the Budget as a whole it is surely progressive both in receipts and in expenditure. Decrease is explicable if there is no necessity for further expenses, but nobody would say that there is no necessity for larger educational expenditure in Bengal. If the department is really inefficient—and under the circumstances of this we cannot but come to the conclusion that it is really so—a thorough investigation and laying down a definite educational policy for the guidance of the department and adequate supervision for carrying out the provisions conducive to healthy development have become a necessity. When money is available the best interest of Government and the country demand a fair and judicious distribution in the several departmental expenditures.

On several occasions I pleaded for the cause of the Rajshahi College as I have some personal experience in the matter. It would not be out of place to say that at present there is no principle according to which the staff of a Government college is determined. It seems to be done in a haphazard way, the necessity of the moment being met in the way which the Director, on the representation of the Principal or the Governing Body concerned, thinks best. I may be permitted to cite a concrete case for example. I understand that the Chittagong and the Hooghly Colleges are going to be affiliated in B. A. Economics (Pass) and two Professors in the Provincial Educational Service are going to be appointed for the same. In the Krishnagar College Economics is taught by the Principal who is an Indian Educational Service man. But the Rajshahi College, though affiliated since about 5 or 6 years in B.A. Economics (Pass), and several students are coming out successful in that subject each year, has been compelled to rest satisfied with a Lecturer in the Subordinate Educational Service. May I ask on what principle the teacher of Economics in the Rajshahi College should be in the Subordinate Educational Service? Even the demand for the affiliation of the institution in Economics (Honours) with an appointment of an additional Professor in the Provincial Educational Service to be at the head of that branch of study has not met with the approval of Government, though such a development could be naturally expected in due course of progress. The University, on the recommendation of the College Inspectors, has been insisting for some time upon the appointment of additional Professors of English. I understand a rather curious instruction was issued some time ago for reducing the number of students by 100 or so, so that for the sake of avoiding a monthly expenditure of Rs. 200, a loss of Rs. 600 a month was suggested as a remedial measure. The Rajshahi College is bigger than the Hooghly, Chittagong and the Krishnagar Colleges taken together as regards the number of students. In fact up to the B.A. and B.Sc. standard the Rajshahi College is not inferior to the Presidency and the Dacca Colleges as regards the number of students and the result of University examinations. A library and reading-rooms are necessary adjuncts of a college. Would the hon'ble members believe there are no buildings for these purposes in the Rajshahi College? The books are huddled together in the small rooms of the common room building, constructed out of private contribution for a different purpose, and for this, the sanction of the donor had to be obtained. What is most surprising is that there is a librarian in charge of the college library on a petty salary of Rs. 20 a month, and this librarian is expected to guide the studies of the B.A. and the B. Sc. students. In all colleges there are gymnastic teachers for college boys but in Rajshahi there are none. As regards the teaching staff again there is a large number of Indian Educational Service men in the Presidency and the Dacca Colleges and at least one Indian Educational Service man in each of the Chittagong, Hooghly, and Krishnagar Colleges. But the Rajshahi College is the unfortunate exception in this respect. Although by a Government order the men in Indian Educational Service and the Provincial Educational Service are, in the superior service, theoretically at par as regards rank, but there is a special arrangement of an allowance of Rs. 100 a month when a Provincial Educational Service man acts in place of an Indian Educational Service officer.

For short vacancies local arrangements are desirable no doubt, but in long vacancies of which there have been too many the men in the favoured institutions have been enjoying that allowance and the unfortunate officers of the Rajshahi College have been practically deprived of it. Babu Raj Mohan Sen, Senior Professor of Mathematics, is now retiring after about 30 years of meritorious service in the Rajshahi College. He is an exceedingly capable man and is an ideal teacher, but he had never had any opportunity of acting in the Indian Educational Service although men much junior and, I think, also inferior to him enjoyed such acting allowance for years together in other favoured institutions, and this for doing no higher additional work.

Rai K. K. Banarji Bahadur has been serving as Principal of the Rajshahi College since over 20 years. The college was in a moribund condition, although there was an Indian Educational Service man as Principal before him. The Rajshahi Association was offered to take up the college with a fixed Government grant and Government were contemplating the abolition of the B. A. classes. At this critical moment he became the Principal of the college and, thanks to his admirable efforts, untiring zeal and tact, he saved the tottering institution. It has been growing steadily under his management and Rajshahi College now is one of the best colleges in the province. This gentleman, however, has got no allowance as Principal during this long period, excepting a small house allowance of Rs. 60 a month for the last 6 or 7 years. Because he has been tied down to the Rajshahi College he had no opportunity of ever acting in the Indian Educational Service and getting the allowance which was obtained by men considerably junior and inferior to him in other institutions. Recently a few Provincial Educational Service men have been promoted to the Indian Educational Service, but Rai Kumudrai Kanta has been superseded by one who was appointed long after he had been confirmed as Principal of a first grade college. Is this, my Lord, at all fair? The Government decision is, I understand, that all administrative posts such as Principalships or Chief Inspectorships should be officered by Indian Educational Service men. The result of the Rajshahi College unmistakably shows that the Principal is a deserving and well-qualified officer. Is it not reasonable, then, that he should be at once promoted to the Indian Educational Service or a suitable special allowance should be granted to him? Recently the fee rate in the Rajshahi College has been raised from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 per month and the Government plea is that this has been done for the sake of uniformity. If uniformity is to be observed it should be done in all other respects—I mean uniformity in the advantages which the students in other colleges receive in return. Over 300 students in the Rajshahi College live in hired houses with many disadvantages in the absence of hostel accommodation. There are large endowments for the Rajshahi colleges for the spread of education in North Bengal which is admittedly very backward in education and inhabited mostly by Muhammadans of very limited means. Affiliation of this college in I. A. and B. A. Botany and the re-affiliation in B. L. and some of the M. A. courses are to my mind urgently necessary. There is a provision of Rs. 50,000 this year for hostel accommodation at Rajshahi, but it is very inadequate as the sum cannot provide for more than 50 students at the most.

As the time-limit will not allow me to treat the Subordinate Educational Service and the Lower Subordinate Educational Service at length, I may be permitted to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government for taking proper steps for their much-needed reforms. The initial pay of Rs. 15 a month for any one in the Educational Department is a mockery, if I may be permitted to say so: I believe it is an exceptional case in the Educational Department only. The case of the Lecturer entrusted with the duties of teaching in the B. A. classes requires no repetition. A complete reorganization of the whole service is a necessity, and I refer to the case of the most pitiable for special reference only.

We are thankful to Government for the special consideration shown for the spread of agricultural education in Bengal. It is an agricultural province and nearly 78 per cent. of the population live by agriculture. In this respect the Punjab Government, I believe, have taken practical steps for giving sufficient impetus to the spread of agricultural knowledge. It is time that Bengal should have an agricultural college of its own and every district if not each sub-division should have an agricultural demonstration farm with attached cattle-farms for practical instruction in the improved method of scientific agriculture and for the improvement of cattle. The educational curriculum should include if possible a compulsory course on Agriculture in Primary Education and an optional course in the secondary stage. The experimental farms, as experience has shown, are no safe guide for the spread of agricultural education. I may be permitted in this connection to urge for special arrangement for seed distribution in special cases.—I mean where economic pressure due to failure of crops or flood or overindebtedness cause distress and the cultivators are not in a position to arrange for the necessary supplies. Advancing seed at cost price to be realized at harvest time may with advantage be adopted for ordinary cultivators of limited means.

No useful purpose is served by crying hoarse on ever-increasing Police expenditure. Improvement of the department we all want, and both the Government and the people are vitally interested in it. The real difficulty is how to accomplish it. As far as I have been able to study the question I think the department should be presided over and managed by the Civilians with the help of some experienced Deputy Magistrates, instead of by Superintendents of Police with the help of Deputy Superintendents of Police mostly recruited from lower ranks. The pay and prospects of the Superintendents of Police and Deputy Superintendents are not considered inadequate still improvement in that respect is also under the consideration of Government. But, my Lord, the real point is efficiency.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

“ My Lord, I do not propose to delay the Council more than is necessary. but I feel it my duty on behalf of Government to reply to some of the points raised by the speakers this morning relating to the departments under my charge. I have first of all to take up the Sanitary Department, and would prefer to call it the Department of Public Health. It is gratifying to Government to find that the large provisions made for this important part of the public welfare has met with general satisfaction. Our Budget allotments for public health have, in fact, been rising more rapidly than many people know. The Budget estimate for 1917-18 stood at a little under 6 lakhs, last year it was very nearly 12 lakhs and in the present year it reaches the record figure of over 18 lakhs of rupees.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareshwar Ray says that though an allotment of nearly Rs. 14,00,000 has been made, no details have been given of the schemes on which the money is to be spent. I am afraid the Hon'ble Member could not have gone very carefully into the Budget, or else he would not have made this mistake. Details are given on page 83 of the Budget under no less than 25 heads and in introducing the figures on the 19th March I referred to this statement and gave some further particulars of the different schemes. As he seems, however, to still have some misapprehension, I may say that the Rs. 13,75,000 have been provided for works of three kinds :—(1) anti-malarial works, (2) works of sanitary engineering, such as schemes of water-supply, drainage and general improvement, and (3) certain items for recurring expenditure, such as quinine grants to local bodies, contributions for health officers and sanitary inspectors and works in connection with the Calcutta sewerage and the drainage of the Fringe area. The anti-malarial works are works of drainage drawn up on scientific lines devised by Dr. Bentley which, some members of this Council may remember, were explained in an address delivered by Your Excellency to a Conference of District Boards in this Council Chamber a little over a year ago. These works will either be carried out entirely by Government or Government will assist the district boards who will carry them out under the Bengal Sanitary Drainage Act with the help of loans which Government will also grant. I may mention here in connection with the Sanitary Drainage schemes, and I should like to bring it to the notice of the Hon'ble Kumar Sahib, who has given me a pleasant surprise this morning by advocating the cause of tenants as strongly as that of zamindars, that the Manikhali and Bargachia Drainage projects are not only anti-malarial projects, but will indirectly benefit landlords of the adjacent areas, and, if I may say so, at the expense of Government, and I believe one of the gentlemen whom I am sorry not to find here to-day who will be largely benefited by the Manikhali Khal project will be the Hon'ble Member who was in charge of the Primary Education Bill, for he happens to have large properties there. I went down to see this project yesterday morning with Mr. Cowley and Mr. Adams-Williams, and we hope that it may be possible to open at least part of it before the next rains, and I hope to be able to look into one or two other projects of a similar nature before long. I may point out that these schemes have been taken up by Government and are a new departure because these schemes are going to be financed entirely by the Government to redeem the promise which Your Excellency made when you took over the reins of office, viz., to take up the question of anti-malarial measures in Bengal in right earnest. Before I leave the subject of Sanitation, I may perhaps be permitted to refer to the provision that has been made for an enquiry into the river pollution and the prevalence of kala-azar. The enquiry into the river pollution is due to the interest taken on the subject by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, while the investigations into kala-azar is the outcome of questions on the subject asked by the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishore Ray Chaudhuri. I mention these particularly because charges are not infrequently made that Government goes on its own way sublimely without regard to questions and resolutions in Council. I think that the provisions we have made in this direction are a proof that when good cases are made out, the Government are responsive to the expression of public opinion.

I now turn to the subject of Education on which a number of speakers have expressed their views. The first point which I have to notice is the complaint regarding unspent balances. The reason for the deficit in expenditure has already been explained by the Director of Public Instruction in introducing the figures for Education on the 13th of March last. His arguments were briefly as follows :—

- (1) non-utilization in full of Imperial grants as certain of the proposed schemes have been sanctioned only in part ;
- (2) transfer of money to the Public Works Department for educational works ;
- (3) deputation to military duty of several officers of the Education Department with the consequent saving of salaries and house allowance ;
- (4) stoppage of the payment of exchange compensation allowance ;
- (5) impossibility of recruiting officers for the Indian Educational Service ; and
- (6) decrease in contingent expenditure on account of the economy enforced by war conditions.

The greater part of the lapse is caused by our inability to spend fully the grant of 9 lakhs made by the Government of India for the improvement of the pay and training of teachers, and of the 5½ lakhs for the development of primary education. Our inability to spend fully is due to causes beyond our control. The savings on the 9 lakhs grant amount to no less than 5½ lakhs ; they are due entirely to the fact that we have not yet received sanction to our proposal for the improvement of secondary education and for our scheme of guru-training schools. Details have been given to-day in reply to a question by the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray and from that some interesting facts will be revealed. The 5½ lakhs grant was received during the year and all building work under this head has not been completed. Further as our schemes under this head contemplate the building and subsequent maintenance of various schools, and as maintenance charges would not arise until the buildings are ready, it was impossible to contemplate the full expenditure in the first year of the grant.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has referred to the grant for private colleges which he says has been suspended for the past few years. He goes on to say that he had looked forward not only to the restoration of the grant, but also to the payment of arrears and he is disappointed to find that item altogether omitted from the Budget. I must point out that he is entirely under a misapprehension. The grant was never withdrawn, but payment from it was restricted after the first year of the war. Like other allotments it fell under the embargo laid down by the Secretary of State against expenditure which was not justified by immediate necessity, and the University were free to make recommendations for any grant which fulfilled this criterion. Not only was the grant not withdrawn, but it still appears in the Budget. If the Hon'ble Member will refer to page 137 of the Civil Budget Estimates he will find the sum of Rs. 1,29,000 provided as usual. The Hon'ble Member is anxious that this grant should be increased. It must, however, be remembered that this is not the only source from which Government assists private colleges. The ordinary grant-in-aid allotment of the Education Department is an additional source of help. Grants from this source are given on a contributory basis and the expenditure during the last four years has not by any means been light.

Two speakers, viz., the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookerjee and the Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharjee have expressed the hope that Government will give assistance to municipalities that will promote primary education on the lines indicated in the Primary Education Bill which was passed by this Council a few days ago. The latter gentleman goes further in referring to the absence of provision for the development of primary education under the new Act. This reference appears to ignore the principles on which a Budget must be framed. Provision cannot be made for possible developments under a Bill which at the time of the preparation of the Budget was merely a proposal before the Council and which when it becomes law will imply fresh expenditure only after certain preliminaries had been attended to. The survey of educational needs in each municipality has first to be made, estimates of its requirements prepared and then will be the time for municipalities to approach Government and to ask for financial aid, and for the Government to examine each scheme on its merits and then to consider what assistance it has got to give to partly finance such schemes. Before I leave the question of primary education, I think I ought to make some reference to a remark of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur made in connection with the proceedings of the Dacca Social Service Exhibition, stating that Indian school-masters are worse paid than coolies. This I think relates mainly to primary school teachers who, it must be understood, are not Government servants. Their humble emoluments are provided by Government grants and district boards' grants by fees paid by those whose children they teach. It is true their position is steadily being improved, but improvement must be difficult if the general public, according to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur, go on paying coolies more than village gurus. A change is certainly necessary and it is not a change entirely for the Government to introduce, but it must be a change in the public point of view regarding the pay of these gurus.

I may perhaps now refer to the complaint made by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri regarding the absence of Indian Educational Service officers in the Rajshahi College. His remarks on the subject, I may assure him, will not be overlooked, and I can promise him that I will take up the matter in consultation with the Director of Public Instruction. Both he and the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur have urged the need of improving the prospects of the men in the Subordinate and Lower Subordinate Educational Services. I may remind them that this matter formed the subject of a resolution over a year ago, and my predecessor, Sir S. P. Sinha, explained that it would be impossible to take up the reorganisation of the lower services till the higher services had been reorganized. It is necessary to decide what is to be the dividing line between the two. The minimum pay of the higher services must be determined before the maximum pay of the lower services can be fixed. In fact, I can only repeat the promises of Lord Sinha that the matter will be taken up when the Secretary of State passes orders about the higher services.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur has also brought up the matter of giving the Hindu and Hare Schools an installation of electric fans. My Lord, I may say that there are punkhas there and it is not a fact that there are no fans at all. It is rather a problem for the Government that on the one hand we are asked to provide fans, and on the other hand, we have the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur who wants a much simpler style of living, and complains that 'our schools and colleges are mostly fed by boys of poor parents; they live in their homes and humble huts and in a modest style; they come to the hostels from Log Cabin to White House. What is the effect of these palatial buildings on young and impressionable boys? They unconsciously adopt a style of living that they can vainly seek to find at home.' It is very difficult to know what to do in these circumstances. Perhaps the Government does indulge in large buildings and hostels, but I must remind the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur that if Government makes a grant towards hostels, Government must insist on a reasonable standard of light, ventilation and accommodation and for other conveniences, and to see that the claims of hygiene and sanitation are not forgotten, and that the students are living in a clean and decent manner. That the charges in hostels are increasing is not generally a consequence of the hostel system in many cases. Hostel rents are increasing because the buying power of money has been diminishing rapidly during the last four years, nor is the Hon'ble Member correct in his nomenclature regarding the palatial buildings of Gothic and Saracenic architecture. If I may say so, the style of architecture usually adopted by the Public Works Department or private contractors is inspired first of all by considerations of economy and not of art and the Hon'ble Member will have to travel far in Bengal before he finds hostels with architecture reminiscent of the Saracens and the Goths. They would rather remind him of the art of their kinsmen, the Vandals.

In connection with the question of hostels, I think I must make some reference to the question of hostels for Muhammadans which has been raised by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem. I may say that no schemes brought forward have been rejected. We have six schemes in hand, two for Government schools and four for private schools. The present hostel accommodation is not fully utilised, and Government has failed to find evidence of any pressing demand for extended accommodation. However, as has already been stated, Government is not unmindful of the fact and Government is doing all that it can to meet requirements. The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq also complained at a recent meeting of the Council that the Muhammadans were being inadequately provided in the schools and hostels. I may say that Government is in possession of facts to show that this is not really the case.

Before I conclude, Sir, I must make some reference to the question of female education which has been brought forward by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. He has made a passionate appeal—though he did not cry himself hoarse here to-day, although he says he has done so on many occasions—for providing girls' schools for bhadralog classes. My Lord, I do not think it is realized that so far as the education of girls is concerned, Government is really more alive than the people themselves to the question; our main difficulty is one of getting a sufficient number of educated women to come forward as teachers; but I must here also point out that in a matter of this kind Government has to treat the subject as a whole. The question of special schools for girls of bhadralok classes, or as the Rai Bahadur points out—of schools of a purely orthodox or semi-orthodox nature—must be solved by the gentlemen concerned themselves. It is too much to ask the Government to provide for these special institutions. Government can only provide for the general education of girls and can certainly take up the question of special institutions for girls of the bhadralok classes in Calcutta or other large towns in the mufassal if there is not only demand for it from the classes concerned, and if that demand is supplemented by funds from these bhadralok classes, but not otherwise.

I may also refer to a resolution which was recently put down (but not moved) in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Dutta regarding the elevation of the status of the Government Girls' School at Comilla. A scheme for increasing its accommodation at a cost of Rs. 1 lakh is ready; but the Department of Education was not successful in securing its retention in its list on page 52. A petition for the elevation of its status has recently been received, but it was not known whether the demand would justify this. The matter cannot, however, be investigated until we are in a position to proceed with the building for increased accommodation which is a prior requisite to any kind of development with reference to such an institution.

My Lord, this is all I have to say in connection with the departments under my charge; and I may once more remind the Hon'ble Members of Council who have been taking great interest in the question of primary education lately as well as in sanitation, that whilst Government is fully alive to the needs of the province in these respects and whilst Government will do all it can and all that lies in its power, the people have got to make up their minds if they are really in earnest about improving the health of their poorer countrymen, or if they want really to see the spread of primary education they have got to put their hands into their pockets and have got to realize once for all that special taxation in special areas must form one of the principal features of advancement in respect of these necessary measures of reform in the province."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, the subjects regarding which I propose to offer a few observations to the Council are the items of agriculture, famine relief and the co-operative movement which are under the control of the Revenue Department, and irrigation projects which are under the control of the Public Works Department. At the outset I should like to acknowledge the friendly reception which the estimates of the department under my charge have received from several Hon'ble Members; and, in particular, I should like to draw attention to the remarks of the Hon'ble Sir Rajendra Nath Mukherji.

When discoursing on the subject of agriculture, the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has complained of the standoffish attitude and exaggerated notions of self-sufficiency of the Department of Agriculture. He has also drawn special attention to the Agricultural Farm at Rajshahi, where, he states, he has seen no sign of activity. In answer to that observation, I may say at once that one who has no small knowledge of Rajshahi district informs me that this farm has done much good work, particularly in connection with sugarcane.

Again, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, who has done me the courtesy of giving me a copy of his remarks at the beginning of the present sitting, has repeated in another form the statements made at a previous meeting of this Council, suggesting that the work of the Agricultural Department is all wrong. He is, of course, entitled to his opinions; but I desire to protest strongly against the indiscriminate charges, suggesting moral obliquity, which he has thought fit to make against his own countrymen. Now, with reference to the charge of aloofness of the Agricultural Department,

Mr. Cumming.

I concede at once the proposition that the Department can effect little except in close co-operation with the people. But I repudiate the suggestion that the Department is manned by learned experts who are engrossed in their theoretical experiments and scientific researches,—to use the words of the Hon'ble Kumar himself. I venture to think that the Hon'ble Kumar has never met Mr. Milligan, the present Director of Agriculture, or the experts to whom is due all credit for their efforts in connection with the distribution of selected paddy and jute seed, the importance of which both the Hon'ble Kumar and the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq are inclined to depreciate. In this connection I have to say that it is a matter of regret to the Bengal Government that, by reason of ill-health, the Director is compelled to go on leave. Mr. Milligan's appointment was hailed with acclamation when it was made; and I have heard golden opinions about his work from various quarters. I am, therefore, surprised to hear the accusations which have been levelled at the Department to-day. Regarding these criticisms, it appears to me that the Hon'ble Members who make them do not realize that this Department is still in its infancy. I may say in passing that the Public Services Commission stated that in its present form it was born in the year 1905. Further, the Hon'ble Members do not realize that this Department has been nurtured from its birth by some of the best officers that Bengal has possessed; that its activities have been extended, are being extended and will be extended, and that the immediate lines of activity are the following:—the establishment of demonstration farms and of seed stores, the appointment in every district of agricultural officers and of trained demonstrators and the extension of agricultural associations. Regarding the view which has been put forward by these Hon'ble Members that there is a general lack of co-operation with the public, I need only say that I am prepared to pit my own experience against such a view; I have myself seen what the close co-operation of the people with the Agricultural Department can effect. There are three districts in particular, Sir, in which this co-operation has been highly developed: one in Northern Bengal, one in East Bengal and one a district in West Bengal. After all, Government do hold certain guiding principles for their action. As the Agricultural Adviser to the Government of India has well said, the great fact in Indian agriculture is that it is useless to improve agricultural practice if the seed is not good; and the second great problem is an organization to disseminate good seed. These two cardinal points the Government of Bengal keep in view.

I now turn, Sir, to the head of famine relief; and on this point the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has asked a very pertinent question. He says:—'Why should the district of Bankura of all districts in the Presidency of Bengal fall an easy prey to famine?' He asked us what are the economic causes that have brought about the poverty of the people in that area. He has suggested the excavation and re-excavation of irrigation tanks. Now, the economic causes are patent to anyone who has first-hand knowledge of the country which lies west of Bankura town on the confines of Chota Nagpur. In that area, we find a poor thriftless people who depend almost entirely upon one crop in the year. In years of moderate rainfall, they can obtain a good return from the low lands; but in years of the failure of the monsoon, the high lands bear no crops. As the population has increased, the cultivation has encroached on these high rocky unfertile lands; and the law of diminishing return comes into operation. The population seeks a remedy by migrating to obtain agricultural work in the districts of Hooghly and Burdwan; but the fact remains that they are forced to grow crops on land which is unsuitable for cropping and which will give a return only in a favourable year. For this reason the district of Bankura has suffered in the past: Bankura suffered contemporaneously with the great Orissa famine of 1866, the Bihar famine of 1874, with the distress of 1885 and the North India famine of 1897. The work that was done in this district during the distress of 1915-16 and the work that is done now, which I recently inspected, will help the district by improving communications and by affording facilities for irrigation ; but the real remedy which, I trust, may possibly be obtained by the help of the Agricultural Department is the evolving of a drought-resisting autumn paddy which will grow on these high lands in years of defective rainfall.

Proceeding now to the subject of the co-operative movement, we have heard that the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq wishes the Council to believe that this movement has become officialized. I can only claim, Sir, that his judgment is entirely at fault ; and that if, in the general opinion of the public, there is one department regarding which it may be said that the administrative activity is primarily unofficial, it is the Co-operative Department. Under the same head, I find that the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has made a complaint regarding the selection of Naogaon for the headquarters of the Joint-Registrar of Co-operative Societies. In this matter, I think, he must be under a misapprehension, because this appointment of Joint-Registrar is not intended for Naogaon alone, but for the whole of northern Bengal. The problem before Government was to find out a place which was centrally situated with reference to the districts in the Rajshahi Division ; with reference to railway communications ; and with reference to the co-operative movement in that division. The selection of Naogaon which is practically Santahar—the importance of which as a railway centre the Hon'ble Kumar would himself concede—was made after an examination of all the considerations involved ; and for its selection I take full responsibility.

The second main head, on which I may offer a few remarks, is that of irrigation. The Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur has questioned whether the sum of half a lakh is sufficient for the improvement of water-channels in the Dacca district. The answer is that experience has shown that in the commencement of such projects as the Dolai khal and the new navigable route from the Padma to the Dhaleswari expenditure cannot proceed at a rapid rate ; and the amounts which have been allotted for the present financial year are meant primarily for land acquisition and other preliminaries. The same Hon'ble Member rather has, with a light heart, suggested the levy of tolls on all boat traffic in these water-channels. This raises a very large question indeed, into which I shall not enter here. But it cannot be unknown to the Hon'ble Member that there is a school of thought which maintains that such a tax on transport is indefensible on principle ; and I venture to wonder what the Hon'ble Member's attitude would have been if the suggestion had come from Government. Under the same head, I should like to correct a misapprehension on his part regarding the selection of Khulna as the headquarters of a waterways division. It is not intended that Khulna should be the headquarters for the Eastern Bengal areas, such as Dacca and Mymensingh ; obviously, it would be a most unsuitable selection. On the contrary, Khulna has been selected as headquarters for the areas which lie immediately to the east of Calcutta, namely, those in south and central Bengal.

Under the head of Irrigation, there are two remarks of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to which I may briefly refer. As regards the enquiry concerning the construction of the new bridge across Tolly's Nulla at Kidderpore, I may say that the width of the bridge will be double that of the old one.

As regards his enquiry on the subject of the dependence of the port of Calcutta on the Bhagirathi river, I may inform the Hon'ble Member that the Report of the Nadia Rivers' Committee is approaching completion ; and I have no doubt that it will contain an exhaustive examination of a number of important hydraulic problems and will furnish helpful suggestions for the consideration of Government.

There are other points, my Lord, on which I might take up the time of the Council, but it would suffice to say that the Hon'ble Members who have raised them may rest assured that the comments which they have made have been noted and will be considered by the different departments concerned."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord. I propose to confine myself to the particular departments which are in my charge, and the points that have been raised in connection with them are fortunately few. At the outset, there is the main question of the form of our budget, and I am glad to find that the attempts that we have made to cast the estimates into a form which is more easily intelligible have met with general appreciation, and I acknowledge the kind remarks that have been made in various quarters on that score. The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari made a useful suggestion that we might supplement the budget by an index, and the suggestion is well worth consideration, which it will receive. But otherwise, subject to any further modifications of detail which experience may indicate during the year, I think we have now got the budget into a fairly clear and simple shape.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has repeated his old suggestion that we should graft on to our present financial procedure the machinery of a standing Finance Committee. I can only give the same answer that I did on a previous occasion, namely, that he is really asking for a change which is closely connected with pending reforms which have been mooted; but as matters stand we can only carry on our financial procedure on the lines which have been laid down for the whole of India and which govern all provinces. Further large constitutional changes must await whatever decision may be come to on the Reforms Scheme which will shortly occupy the attention of Parliament.

Turning to details, perhaps the department that has loomed largest on the financial side this year is that of Excise, and I welcome the opportunity of making a few remarks about it, as I fully recognize that the large increase in our receipts under this head has quite properly attracted attention and possibly, in some quarters, has caused a certain amount of uneasiness. It is the case that our Excise receipts during the current year show a large increase over those of the preceding year, as we have made no attempt to conceal. On the contrary we emphasized the fact in the budget, and I again emphasized it in the remarks which I made in this Council. The three main items with which we are concerned in the Excise budget are country-spirit, ganja and opium. As regards ganja and opium I do not think there is any particular cause for anxiety, as the revenue during the last five years has been fairly steady, and the statistics of consumption show a marked decrease. If we take the consumption figures for the first ten months of each year—I take ten months in order to get an up-to-date comparison with the year 1918-19—the consumption of ganja, which was roundly 92,000 seers in 1914-15, was only 67,000 seers in the corresponding period of the current year, a very marked fall. Similarly, in the case of opium, the figures for the same ten months in 1914-15 were 52,000 seers, but in the first ten months of this year only 34,000; again, a very noticeable decline. So in these two respects it may be said that there is no evidence that the province is being unduly demoralized. But when we come to country-spirits, I admit the case is different, and taking the same ten months' basis, we find a consumption of 594,000 gallons in 1914-15, as against a consumption of 649,000 gallons in the current year. The four districts which are mainly responsible for this result are Calcutta, the 24-Parganas, Hooghly and Howrah; and it has been brought about largely by the following causes. In the first place there is the substitution of the fixed-fee system of settlement for that of auction, which was introduced in Calcutta on the 1st of April, 1917, and in the other three areas on the 1st of April, 1918. That change greatly discouraged the practice of dilution, and has enabled us to gain current information about the progress of the trade which has rendered possible a very substantial increase of duty at comparatively short intervals.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The second main cause is the progress which we think we have effected in checking illicit practices; they still continue, of course, but we believe they are less owing to departmental efficiency. The third cause is the rise in price and decrease in supply of foreign liquor, which has encouraged the resort to Indian-made foreign liquor. Those are the three principal causes which have been operative, and the first as has been acknowledged by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, was introduced in response largely to the advocacy of temperance reformers, and I have here many extracts from reports, memorials from temperance workers, etc., which would substantiate that claim. The idea is that under the auction system there is a tendency for license fees to be forced up, thus compelling vendors to push sales in order to recoup the heavy bids which they may have been led into making at the time of auction settlement, and it is thought to be a sound feature of Excise policy to reduce the proportion of revenue which is derived from license fees, and to increase that which comes from duty. That this has been achieved can be substantiated by the figures, this time on a nine months' basis, which show that in 1914-15 out of our country-spirit revenue of Rs. 49 lakhs, Rs. 20 lakhs was derived from license fees and Rs. 29 lakhs from duty. But in 1918-19 out of a total revenue of Rs. 56 lakhs, we have Rs. 13 lakhs derived from license fees and 43 lakhs from duty. Therefore, in that respect, our policy does answer the test which has been laid down by temperance reformers, and that also we have not been unmindful of the necessity of checking consumption is shown by the fact that in Calcutta we raised the duty after we introduced the fixed-fee system once in August 1917, and again in January 1918; while in Calcutta, along with the other districts affected by this change, the duty was put up again in October 1918, and in February of the current year, while elsewhere there have been increases from the 1st of April. So the department can claim that they have kept a careful watch on consumption, and have raised the duty in a very marked degree; in fact, we have in some areas raised the duty above the tariff rate per L. P. gallon, although, to quote the words of the Excise Committee: 'it has repeatedly been laid down that the maximum rate of duty on country-spirits should be the tariff rate on imported spirits'. That was their pronouncement, but nevertheless, in our desire to check consumption, we have in certain areas disregarded it. To take another test, of the number of shops, we have reduced the number of country-spirit shops in Calcutta from 107 in 1914-15 to 78 in the current year, a very substantial reduction, and from the 1st of April last we have abolished another 15 shops with an average sale of 30,000 L. P. gallons from which we derived a revenue of Rs. 4 lakhs. Therefore, the department can represent that they have not sacrificed the interests of the province to their desire for revenue. Again, although I have admitted that in these four areas there has been an increase in consumption, it should not be overlooked that the consumption is still below that of 1912-13, although our revenue is considerably higher.

Turning to the second main cause, it can be no ground of complaint that we have succeeded in checking illicit practices, although in some districts, noticeably in Bakarganj, it is believed that that has contributed to the growth of licit consumption.

As regards the encouragement given to the production of Indian-made foreign liquor, the following figures for nine months of the duty receipts under this head show a revenue roughly of Rs. 7½ lakhs in the current year, as against Rs. 4½ lakhs approximately last year, while the duty on rectified spirit issued for the compounding of potable foreign liquor has risen from rather over Rs. 3 lakhs in 1917-18 to about Rs. 5 lakhs in 1918-19. I think these figures show that in consequence of the decrease in the supply of foreign liquor the duty under Indian-made foreign liquor and rectified spirits has gone up, and they afford an answer to the doubts which the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has expressed, that really foreign liquor has not had much to do with the matter. In the detailed figures he has given about Mymensingh and Dacca, I think he must have made some mistake. I can show him our figures later on, if he wishes, but merely say now that our statistics are different from those that he has quoted.

Incidentally, a feature of the figures which has also helped to increase the total revenue, is the growth in the revenue derived from the manufacture of tinctures in bonded laboratories, in which the nine months' receipts of Rs. 1,30,000 last year have gone up to Rs. 2,52,000 this year. That, of course, is satisfactory, in so far as this manufacture of tinctures has replaced in a swadeshi way what was previously, presumably, imported from abroad.

As regards possible remedies, the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has made various suggestions, and I will briefly refer to them. He would like to see liquor of weaker strength substituted for more potent varieties, but this is a point which has already attracted attention, and I can give him details showing specific reductions made from time to time in different areas. We have also taken steps in some districts to put a preferential rate of duty on the weaker strengths so as to give them an advantage over the stronger. As a second suggestion he advocates a restriction of supply on the lines of the action taken in the case of opium, that is, not to permit the sale of more than a certain quantity from one shop. But I may point out that that system has never been entirely satisfactory even as regards opium, and in the neighbouring province of Bihar and Orissa it has been given up. We maintain it here largely on account of the facilities which exist for smuggling opium to Burma over which some check can be exercised in this way. But it is not a method that is free from complications, and the departmental view is that in respect of liquor it would be almost impossible to estimate what a standard monthly issue should be. A third suggestion is that we should try and separate off and on licenses. I am advised that as regards the mufassal this would probably merely increase the total number of licensed shops; in Calcutta, I am told, there may be greater possibilities, and the Excise Commissioner will look into the matter, as soon as we see the effect of the reduction in the number of shops which we have just brought about. As a fourth point, the same Hon'ble Member has put forward the desirability of offering counter-attractions to the consumption of liquor, but I am afraid the evidence against him is rather more definite than perhaps one would infer from his speech. In the first place, there are already counter-attractions in the shape of tea-shops which are run on a commercial basis, and I think it was only a few days ago that there was some reference in the newspapers to the report of the Tea Cess Committee that a considerable measure of success has been achieved in that direction. These shops are being run from motives of commercial self-interest, and commercial self-interest will probably do more to give an impetus to the movement than official encouragement. The attention of the local Government was, however, drawn to the matter in 1916, and we promised assistance in pushing through the licenses which are required for tea-shops in Calcutta. Apart from this, and in connection with counter-attractions in general, we have the very definite findings of three provinces—Madras, Bihar and Orissa and the Punjab. I will read an extract from a Madras report of 1918 bearing on this system :—

'The net conclusion derived from a perusal of the Collector's reports is that in the majority of cases in which the experiments are complete, they have failed to create a demand for the alternatives offered to intoxicating drinks, and that even where the experiment was a financial success, there is nothing to indicate that it has done anything to decrease drunkenness. It seems unlikely that this would be the case for three reasons :—

- (a) that tea and coffee appeal to a different class from those who drink toddy and arrack ;
- (b) that they are generally dearer ; and
- (c) that they were offered as alternatives and not as substitutes.

On the other hand, the experiments seem likely to have an effect that was not expected by those who suggested them. The evil of the drink habit shows itself in two ways, in the mental and physical deterioration of the drinker and in the limitation of the proportion of his wage that is available to pay for the food of himself and his family.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The 'coffee club' habit, if it is free of the former objection, is open to the latter in an equal, if not greater, degree, especially in the case of the daily labourer. It offers a temptation to many of those who do not drink alcohol and whose ordinary drink is water. Many educated Indians, therefore, regard it as a danger in itself.

The whole experiment illustrates the danger of transplanting wholesale a social arrangement that is suitable in one country into another of a different climate and customs.

That was the experience of Madras. In Bihar and Orissa, the report of 1918 merely says: 'the opening of tea and coffee shops has not so far provided an effective counter-attraction to those who want intoxicating drinks.'

In the Punjab we have a very definite finding which has been reproduced in a publication—Abkari—with which the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari is doubtless acquainted. It says 'In connection with certain suggestions made by the Temperance Societies' deputation to His Excellency the Viceroy in 1913, advocating provision by the Government of counter-attractions to drink the Punjab Government recently consulted a large number of officials and leading non-officials. The inquiry has resulted in the accumulation of a large weight of official and non-official opinion, which is almost unanimously condemnatory of the proposals as being either trivial or impracticable, or even prejudicial to the cause it is intended to promote.' I am afraid, therefore, that this solution does not offer a very hopeful prospect.

Lastly, the Hon'ble Member has suggested certain improvements in the conditions of service in the Excise Department. As will appear from a resolution which we issued the other day, there are a few details about the department which we shall shortly have under examination, but as a general statement, I do not admit that the conditions of service in the Excise Department are markedly defective. The service was reorganized only a few years ago, and in comparison with other branches of Government employ it offers prospects which are not unreasonable. There may be points of detail in which improvements can be made, but as a whole, I do not think there is anything radically wrong.

So much for Excise, in connection with which I have attempted to show that we are perfectly aware of this large increase in revenue, but that we have in the matter of country-spirit taken action to counteract it and, while discouraging undue consumption, to increase the price which those who drink have to pay.

Apart from Excise, I will now pass on to a group of suggestions which are of a common type, advocating the improvement of the conditions of service in various departments. Among the first of these we have our old friend the Provincial Judicial Service, regarding which we have just addressed the Government of India, and we hope that orders will be received very shortly. With reference to the Provincial Executive Service, of which mention has also been made, it will be seen that we published a resolution the other day in connection with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, and on receipt of opinions on that we shall similarly make recommendations to the Imperial Government. Another Service which has been brought to notice by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is that of Assistant Surgeons, with the complaint that the initial pay is still only Rs. 100 : that is true, but on the other hand, it is a Service which twice during recent years has come under reorganization, and although the initial pay of Rs. 100 has been maintained, we have replaced the old grades, which led to a certain slowness of promotion, by an incremental system rising up to Rs. 300, and have raised the higher grades, which at one time were only Rs. 200 and Rs. 300, to Rs. 325 and Rs. 350. Therefore, as a whole, the conditions of that Service have been materially improved, and so far we have not experienced any undue difficulty in getting candidates. Thirdly, we come to the various clerical establishments, whose grievances are always with us, and I will not repeat what I said at a recent meeting, except to mention that in fulfilment of the expectation which I then held out, we have addressed the Government of India, not quite on the lines I then suggested of extending grain compensation allowance, but proposing a war bonus of 5 per cent. to those in receipt of Rs. 30 and less. That will help the most lowly paid clerical establishments, and it should be taken in conjunction with the other improvements in prospects which we have given to menial servants and the individual establishments as they came before us from time to time.

Lastly, we have the Police, in connection with which we have the usual complaint that our expenditure is excessive, apparently, at the moment, thanks largely to my malign influence. But I think if the Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Haq will make enquiries from the department, he will find that it is far from the case that the combination in myself of a certain amount of financial experience with knowledge of the Police Department is always to the advantage of the latter. The traditions of the Financial Department, in which I have spent a good deal of my time in this country, are in the direction of cutting down expenditure, and being imbued with those traditions I have cut down various police proposals which probably would have been favoured by anybody looking at them solely from the departmental standpoint. It is true, however, that our Police expenditure is heavy and last year we heard more to that effect than we have this year. After the debates of last year, I had enquiries made, applying various tests to the Police expenditure in Bengal in comparison with other provinces. They were not very satisfactory tests because it is difficult to reduce provinces of the large size and varying conditions of Indian provinces to one common denominator, but taking a few rough tests, such as the expenditure on the police per head of population, and the numerical proportion of the police to population and area, the comparison in no way showed that the expenditure on police in Bengal was extravagant in comparison with that which was found necessary elsewhere. On the contrary it pointed to the conclusion that, with the possible exception of the province of Bihar and Orissa, which, of course, in past years has been administered on very similar lines to Bengal, other provinces are more highly policed than we are. One of the reasons for our present heavy expenditure, as I have had occasion to point out before, is that we have leeway to make up—leeway especially in the matter of buildings and in the rates of pay, while owing to unfortunate political conditions we have had to spend regrettably large sums of money on our Intelligence Branch.

So much for the customary complaint that Police expenditure is excessive, although from the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem we have had the somewhat unusual grievance that we do not pay some members of the police enough, and he has particularly mentioned the cases of inspectors, sub-inspectors and constables. I think, however, he has under-estimated what we have done. Taking the case of inspectors, before the days of the Police Commission their lowest grade was Rs. 100, but now it is Rs. 150, although the maximum remain the same. Taking the case of sub-inspectors, before the days of the Police Commission their lowest grade was Rs. 30, and their maximum Rs. 80; but now their lowest grade is Rs. 50, and the maximum Rs. 100. Taking the case of head-constables, before the days of the Police Commission, the three lowest grades received pay of Rs. 15, 12, and 10, but now no head-constable receives less than Rs. 17-8, and our recent proposals, which are under the consideration of the Government of India, will further better their prospects. In the old days, before the Police Commission, constables got Rs. 6, 7, 8, and 9, but now, in the armed branch, they get from Rs. 11 to Rs. 14, and in the unarmed branch, from Rs. 10 to Rs. 13. Therefore, prospects, on the whole, have been materially improved.

The next department in my charge is that of Medical. Reference has been made to the subject of medical education, but I dealt with that fully at a recent meeting and will not repeat what I then said. Another suggestion has been made by Maulvi Abul Kasem that we should foster the system of itinerant doctors. That is a plan of which I was in favour when I was a member of the Drainage Committee, which advocated it, but on looking into the papers, I find that the experiment has been tried and has never been a great success, owing largely to the difficulty of supervising the men who are sent into the districts, and especially, since 1916, owing to the difficulty of getting sub-assistant surgeons on account of the war. Its place has latterly been taken by devoting the funds which were previously so applied to the free distribution of quinine.

The only other point which I would like to notice is one on which I think a certain amount of misunderstanding exists. It, too, refers to the Police, and it was raised by the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha in the form of a suggestion that we should attempt further to recruit Bengalis in the place of up-country constables. We often read in the papers remarks which would imply that people think that the police force in Bengal is even now almost entirely manned from up-country. That, Sir, is not the case. During the last 7 years out of 22,596 recruited constables, approximately 9,057 or 40 per cent. were Bengalis, and in 1918, 61 per cent. of the total number recruited were Bengalis. In 1917 it was 53 per cent. We have been steadily pursuing this policy of trying to recruit local men as far as possible, and it is a policy which the Inspector-General of Police, Mr. Plowden, has encouraged actively, while, as will be noticed from the figures, it has met with appreciable success.

I doubt, Sir, if there is any other point of detail with which I need now worry the Council. Our immediate financial difficulties are, of course, the unfavourable economic conditions, the crop failure in Upper India and Bombay and the scarcity in two of our own districts, while we have the prevailing high prices to which attention has been drawn and which are pressing hardly upon us. We can only hope that with the restoration of more normal conditions after the war, and with the aid of a good harvest during the current year, the circumstances of the province in these two respects may speedily improve. No one will welcome that result more than the Financial Department.

Finally, I would refer to the fact that this will be the last budget with which Mr. Donald will be connected, and I would like to bring to the notice of the Council the excellent work which he has done in connection with the Finance Department during the last four years. I have often told him that his fault lay in over-estimating his expenditure and under-estimating his revenue, but from the point of view of the financial resources of the province, these qualities have been instrumental in building up the large balances which we now possess, and which we hope will be spent with usefulness in the approaching years. He has always been a strict custodian of provincial funds, and I think the Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Haq can rest assured that even my influence has not been able to overcome his economical tendencies. In thanking him for the work which he has done in the past, we wish him all success in the important office upon which he is about to enter."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 1.

The following questions which had been starred were put and answered :—

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

I.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) when the Calcutta hackney-carriage department will be taken over by the Commissioner of Police from the Corporation ; and

(ii) whether the entire staff of the present hackney-carriage department will be taken over by the Commissioner of Police?

Transfer of the
from the Calcutta Corporation to the Commissioner
of Police

(b) If it is not proposed to take over the entire staff, will the Government be pleased to state what provision will be made for those of the staff who will be thrown out of employment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) (i) It is proposed that the Commissioner of Police should take over charge of the department when the sanction of the Government of India to the entertainment of the necessary staff has been obtained.

(ii) The answer is in the negative.

(b) The matter is under consideration.”

II.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a memorandum by Mr. Nilambara Mukherjee, C.I.E., retired vice-chairman of the Corporation of Calcutta and formerly Finance Minister, Kashmir, elaborating a new “ scientific scheme of public finance ”?

New scientific
finance.

(b) Is it a fact that Sir Daniel Hamilton recorded a testimony in relation to its introduction to the effect that the proposal of Mr. Nilambara Mukherjee is the only scientific system?

(c) Is it also a fact that the author of the scheme alleges that benefit would accrue both to the Imperial and Provincial Government?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are considering the matter and whether they propose to take any steps in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

“(a) Government have seen a copy of the memorandum referred to.

• (b) Sir D. Hamilton's views are contained in the following extract from a letter written by him to Mr. Mukherjee :—

‘ I understand your proposal to be that Government should withdraw all silver money from circulation, and print and issue in its stead, whatever paper money may be required to keep every able-bodied man and woman fully employed on productive work, leaving the small metallic money to help out the paper.

What you propose is, in my opinion, the only scientific form of currency, but whether it would be wise to withdraw all silver money immediately is a point on which there is room for difference of opinion.’

(c) The intention of the scheme is the creation of money exclusively in inconvertible paper currency notes to an extent not exceeding the sum total of the rupee values of the natural assets of the country. It is claimed that benefit would thus accrue to the whole Empire.

(d) The scheme has been prepared for the consideration of the Government of India, and as currency problems are a matter for that Government this Government do not propose to take any action."

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

III.

(a) Is it a fact that the reorganisation scheme of 1910 has adversely affected the pay and prospects of the lower grade assistants of the Bengal Secretariat who entered that office long before the reorganization scheme and of those assistants who were transferred from the Eastern Bengal and Assam Secretariat in April, 1912?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to remove the hardship in the case of the lower grade assistants who entered the Secretariat before the reorganization scheme of 1910 or were transferred from the Eastern Bengal and Assam Secretariat in April, 1912?

(c) What is the pay of a typist and of a lower grade assistant in the Secretariat?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"(a) and (b) In 1910 the clerical staff of the Bengal Secretariat was reorganised and a lower division and an upper division were constituted. It was then laid down that up to 1915 half the appointments to the upper division should be made by promotion from the lower division, and thereafter the lower division should ordinarily have no claim to promotion to the upper division. The position was that the lower division was intended for clerks doing routine work only, and the orders of 1910 contemplated the promotion to the upper division only of clerks fit to undertake the more important work of the upper division. In December 1913 assistants in the lower division submitted a memorial to Government complaining of their prospects and position. The memorial was duly considered; it was found that the memorialists had a genuine grievance, as between 1910 and 1913 promotion from the lower to the upper division had not been in accordance with the orders of 1910, and instructions were issued with a view to the removal of this grievance. The assistants again memorialised Government in 1917, and it was held that the lower division clerks had no case for complaint except that in the case of two departments orders passed in 1910 and 1913 regarding the promotion of such clerks to the upper division had not been fully adhered to. Steps have been taken to remedy this grievance and promotion is now being made in these cases.

(c) The pay of a typist is Rs. 40—2—80 per mensem and that of a lower division clerk varies from Rs. 40 to Rs. 100."

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

IV.

(a) Is it a fact that a member of the Indian Civil Service has been appointed to the post of Collector of Calcutta?

(b) Was not the post hitherto reserved for a member of the provincial executive service, who was also in charge of the treasury?

(c) If the answers to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state why a departure has been made in the present case?

(d) Will the Government be also pleased to state who will do the work of the treasury officer under the new arrangement?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) No. The appointment of Collector of land revenue, Calcutta, is reserved by statute for a member of the Indian Civil Service. Until recently the post was held by the Collector of the 24-Parganas ex officio and the functions of deputy collector of land revenue, Collector of Stamp revenue and Collector of Excise in Calcutta were exercised by an officer selected from the provincial executive service. Another deputy collector was ordinarily employed as treasury officer and on other miscellaneous work, but in 1916 the deputy collector of land revenue was relieved of most of his duties in connection with excise and no second deputy collector has since been employed.

(c) The arrangement has been found unsatisfactory, and in view of the increasing complexity of the work, particularly in the matter of excise administration, and the magnitude of the financial interests involved, it has been considered necessary to appoint a member of the Indian Civil Service as whole-time Collector of Calcutta. This officer will also be able to discharge a number of other functions which in an ordinary district are performed by the District Officer, but which in Calcutta have hitherto devolved upon the Commissioner of Police.

(d) A deputy collector has been selected to hold charge of the treasury and to perform routine duties in the Calcutta Collectorate.”

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

V.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is in contemplation to sanction grain compensation allowance to all classes of employes under Government drawing pay up to Rs. 30 per mensem? Grain compensation allowance.

(b) If so, what amount will an individual employé get per mensem as grain compensation allowance under the scheme?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

“(a) and (b) No, but a proposal has been made to the Government of India for the grant of a war bonus to such employes.”

By the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray:—

VI.

Newspapers, periodicals, etc., started with political aims during the last three years.

(b) Is it a fact that no security has been taken from newspapers published under European management?

Deputy
of Police.

Are the officiating Deputy Superintendents of Police gazetted officers? If so, are their appointments, postings, transfers, etc., made by Government and published in the Calcutta Gazette, like those of gazetted officers of other Departments and of permanent Deputy Superintendents of Police? If not, what are the reasons?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“Officiating deputy superintendents of police are gazetted officers. Their appointments, postings, and transfers are made by the Inspector-General of Police, to whom the power was delegated in 1911.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

of officiating
Deputy
Superintendents.

(a) Is it a fact that the Inspector-General of Police has been vested with special powers to make the appointments of officiating Deputy Superintendents?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reason for this innovation in the case of the Police Department, while in other services Government retain the power in their own hands regarding gazetted officers?

“(a) Yes.

(b) The Police Department is not the only department in which the powers of making such appointments has been delegated to the head of the department. In the Education Department the Director of Public Instruction has been empowered to make appointments to the two lowest grades of the Provincial Educational Service. Such delegations are made for greater convenience in the transaction of business.”

Rule as to
officiating as Deputy
of Police.

(a) Is there any definite rule regarding the selection of inspectors to officiate as Deputy Superintendents of Police?

(b) Is efficiency or seniority the test of selection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Yes. A copy of the rules is laid on the table.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the rules.”

Rules referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR to question No. 10 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA, at the Council Meeting of the 7th April, 1919, regarding the system of selection of Inspectors for promotion to the rank of Deputy Superintendent.

The attention of Deputy Inspectors-General and Superintendents of Police is drawn to rule 18, Part I of the Police Regulations regarding the appointment of Deputy Superintendents. Clause (h) of the rule deals with the promotion of Inspectors to the rank of Deputy Superintendent, but it does not lay down definite instructions as to the manner of selection, with the result that there is no uniformity of procedure. The Inspector-General has given the matter his careful consideration and, with the approval of Government, the following provisional rules are issued for the guidance of all officers concerned :—

(1) No Inspector shall be appointed to act as Deputy Superintendent unless all the local officers concerned (the Superintendent, District Magistrate and Deputy Inspector-General) are unanimous in their opinion that he has the necessary qualifications for the post of permanent Deputy Superintendent and is likely to prove a success as such. In submitting their nominations, the local officers and the Deputy Inspector-General must clearly understand that no officer should be nominated for promotion who does not possess a thoroughly clean record as regards honesty and who is not of marked ability. The name of an officer is not to be submitted solely on the ground of seniority, but what is required is seniority combined with merit and it is rather the latter than the former that should be the determining factor. If seniority is strictly observed it will not be possible to promote especially smart junior officers, and this will practically mean that the cadre of promoted Inspectors will consist of officers of only ordinary intelligence and capability. It is, therefore, essential that in selecting officers for this important post it should not be sufficient for a possible candidate to be able to point to a clean sheet. Most Inspectors can do this. Apart from the question of conduct an officer must possess qualifications and ability such as will enable him to perform the duties required of a superior officer of the rank of Deputy Superintendent. If regard is had only to good conduct as the sole qualification, the principle of selection ceases to exist.

(2) The Inspector-General will interview all the officers who are nominated, and if he is satisfied that they are suitable, their names will be entered in a provisional list and they will be appointed to act as vacancies occur.

(3) After an officer has acted for a year the local officers and the Deputy Inspector-General will be required to submit a full report on his work and conduct with a definite opinion whether his outturn of work is of the standard required of a Deputy Superintendent. If the report is favourable his name will be entered in an "approved list" and he will be allowed to continue for another year provided there is a vacancy for him. After an officer has acted for two years the local officers and the Deputy Inspector-General will be required to submit a further report regarding his work and if it is found that he has maintained his efficiency throughout, the fact that he is fit for permanent promotion shall be noted against his name in the "approved list" from which all sub. pro tem and permanent promotions shall ordinarily be made in order of seniority. Ordinarily a Superintendent or Deputy Inspector-General should be in position to report after a year on the fitness or otherwise of an Inspector to be placed on the "approved list" and it is only in very exceptional cases, which will have to be clearly explained, that a second year's trial will be permitted. If the Superintendent watches the work of an Officiating Deputy Superintendent as he should, there ought to be no difficulty in arriving at a conclusion at the end of a year. The Deputy Inspector-General should have a list of the officiating men in his charge with a column showing the date on which the year's trial will expire and he should make a point of examining their work within the year so as to be in a position to give a decided opinion. It should be understood that transfers of officers under trial should be avoided as far as possible. If an officer serves under two or three Superintendents in the course of a year, difficulties will arise and if his transfer is essential in the interests of the public service, the Superintendent under whom he is employed shall at once submit a report to the Deputy Inspector-General for the period he served under him.

(4) If after a year's work as an acting Deputy Superintendent an officer is found to be unfit or unsuitable, he will revert to his substantive rank and will ordinarily not be allowed to act again. If, however, his case is found to be doubtful and the local officers and the Deputy Inspector-General are unable to express a definite opinion regarding his fitness or otherwise for promotion to gazetted rank, he will be allowed to act for a further period, but in no case shall the name of an officer be ordinarily retained in the "approved list" for more than two years unless he can show within that period that he is fit for promotion.

(5) All acting Deputy Superintendents shall be required to pass the prescribed departmental examinations within two years unless exempted by Government from passing in any subject or unless they have already passed a corresponding examination in any of the subjects prescribed under the rules for the departmental examination of subordinate police officers.

(6) Clause (j) of the rule lays down that Deputy Superintendents shall be on probation for two years and that at the end of that period, if favourably reported on, if they have passed the prescribed departmental examinations, they will be confirmed. Under the existing system an Inspector who has already acted as Deputy Superintendent for two years or more is required to serve the full period of probation on being promoted to a permanent vacancy. This is unnecessary in the case of an officer who has already shown by his work and conduct that he is fit for permanent promotion. In future, if an officer has acted as Deputy Superintendent for two years and has passed the prescribed departmental examinations he will be promoted permanently if the vacancy is permanent. In the case of an officer who has not acted as Deputy Superintendent for full two years his period of probation shall count from the date on which he began to act as such.

2. The cases of all existing acting Deputy Superintendents will be regulated by the foregoing rules.

permanent deputy

(a) What is the principle of selection of permanent Deputy Superintendents of Police from the ranks of officiating Deputy Superintendents of Police?

(b) When an officer is selected to officiate on the ground of efficiency, is the length of the officiating period taken into consideration for permanent promotion, or is age or seniority in the service held as the criterion for selection?

(c) What principle has of late been followed in making these selections?

(d) Do the Government recognise the principle that efficiency in their work as officiating Deputy Superintendents of Police should be the only test in making these appointments?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to publish the names of officiating Deputy Superintendents of Police, noting how long each has been officiating and in what vacancy each has been provided with the acting appointment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"(a) (b) (c) and (d) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the rules which have been laid on the table in reply to question No. 10 (unstarred).

(e) A list of the officers who were officiating as deputy superintendents on the 1st January, together with the date from which each has been acting, is laid on the table. It is not possible to state in what vacancy each officer has been provided with an acting appointment, as acting arrangements are made in leave vacancies in the cadre and also to fill deficiencies in the rank of assistant superintendents, and the chain of arrangements is constantly fluctuating."

Desecration of an image of Saraswati.

(a) Are the Government aware that there is a wide and acute feeling of resentment amongst Hindus owing to the action of the Principal of St. Paul's College, Calcutta, in desecrating an image of the Hindu goddess—the Saraswati? If so, are the Government considering the desirability of instituting an inquiry into the circumstances of the case?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking steps to insure that the religious scruples and beliefs of the students are not interfered with or disregarded in the educational institutions under missionary organisations?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to furnish a list of the educational institutions and hostels attached thereto, which are under the control and management of religious bodies and missionary organisations receiving Government grants, noting in each case the amount of such grant?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"(a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. Government do not consider it necessary to make a further enquiry into the matter as it has already formed the subject of judicial proceedings.

(b) The incident at St. Paul's College was exceptional and Government do not consider it necessary to take any steps of the nature suggested in anticipation of attempts to disregard religious feelings and beliefs.

(c) A statement is laid on the table."

(a) What arrangements are there for the teaching of needlework and domestic economy in girls' high and middle schools?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of having specially trained teachers in these subjects, particularly for the Government high schools for girls?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) Needlework is taught in all high and middle schools for girls, and the teachers are well qualified. The position with regard to domestic economy is not so satisfactory. In Eastern Bengal, apart from the Eden High School where lectures are given on hygiene, first aid, home nursing and infant welfare little is done. In West Bengal most high schools and all middle schools uniformly manage to teach cooking and various household duties.

(b) For needlework the present arrangements are adequate. The need for efficient teaching in domestic economy is fully recognised, but the comparatively slow progress is due to the lack of properly qualified teachers. Arrangements for special training are under consideration.”

What will be the nature and scope of the Kala-azar survey for which a non-recurring provision of rupees eleven thousand has been made in the budget for 1919-20?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“A Deputy Sanitary Commissioner possessed of special qualifications in tropical medicine, together with a small staff and travelling laboratory, will be employed on the inquiry. Circulars are being issued to all dispensaries in Eastern Bengal to ensure that special particulars will be recorded of cases showing the typical symptoms of kala-azar, i.e., enlarged and hardened spleen and great emaciation with irregularly recurring chronic attacks of fever resistant to ordinary treatment. There are 217 dispensaries in Eastern Bengal (Dacca and Chittagong Divisions) and the staff will first visit those dispensaries from which cases of kala-azar have already been reported, and after examining such cases as attend, will pay visits to the villages from which the patients come with a view to discovering whether or not other cases exist. After having visited and mapped out the prevalence of the disease in the areas known to be affected, other areas from which reports of suspected cases have been received will be visited in turn and examined in the same way. An opportunity will be taken during the inquiry of demonstrating to the local dispensary medical officers the most recent methods of diagnosis and treatment, and, where necessary, arrangements will be made, as far as possible, to see that measures of prevention are adopted against the spread of the disease. It is estimated that the inquiry will occupy at least a year."

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

With regard to the provision made in the budget for 1919-20 for the appointment of a special officer to scrutinize college and school buildings from a hygienic point of view, will the Government be pleased to state their scheme in this matter and the circumstances and considerations which have prompted them to make the appointment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"The appointment is to be made in accordance with the recommendations of an expert committee appointed in 1913 to inquire into questions connected with school and college hygiene. This committee commented severely upon the insanitary condition of educational buildings and hostels, and pointed out the need for expert supervision. It is considered desirable not only that the condition of existing buildings should receive careful scrutiny, and that any serious defects that may be brought to light should be removed or remedied, but also that closer attention should be paid than the present staff of the Sanitary Commissioner can afford to the planning of all school and hostel buildings in future with strict regard to sanitary requirements. It is accordingly proposed that a Deputy Sanitary Commissioner should be appointed as an experimental measure for 5 years to inspect existing school buildings and hostels from the sanitary and hygienic point of view, to draw up general directions for the lighting, ventilation and sanitation of new school buildings and to scrutinize all plans for new buildings. He will also be in general charge of the medical inspection of school children, make special studies of the diseases to which children are particularly liable and suggest suitable measures for their prevention."

What is the programme of Government in regard to the experiments in connection with hand-loom and other industries, for which a non-recurring grant of rupees three thousand has been provided in the budget for 1919-20?

Hand-loom and other industries.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"The provision has been made for experiments on a small scale in order to ascertain whether textiles such as tapes and doosuties for army tents can actually be woven on hand-loom."

Scheme of cattle census.

With regard to the provision of Rs. 5,500 in the budget for 1919-20 for a temporary establishment in connection with census of cattle, will the Government be pleased to explain the nature of the scheme of work?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"It has been decided, under instructions from the Government of India that a census of livestock, ploughs and carts should be taken in the Presidency during the year 1919-20 and that it should be repeated at quinquennial intervals thereafter. Accordingly a census will be taken in this Presidency in January, 1920. The census in villages will be carried out by the agency of panchayats under the general supervision of the subdivisional officer or the deputy collector who may be deputed by the district officer for census duty in each subdivision. In municipal areas the census will be conducted by the municipalities, while on tea gardens the managers will be requested to undertake the enumeration. The abstract totals will be computed in the office of the Director of Agriculture and the temporary establishment, provided for in the budget and referred to in the question, is required for that work. Copies of the proposed schedules and instructions are laid on the Library table.

For information regarding the last cattle census in 1912, the Hon'ble Member is referred to 'A Survey and Census of the Cattle of Bengal' by Mr. J. R. Blackwood, I.C.S., published by Government in the year 1915."

Alleged high-handedness of the sub-divisional officer regarding appointment of a secretary to the Madaripur Central Bank.

(a) With reference to the answer given to my unstarred question No. 25 at the meeting of the Council held on the 5th March, 1919, will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether it is a fact that Babu Ambika Charan Bose, Inspector of Police, Madaripur, sent constables to Maulvi Abdul Kader Khan and Munshi Kalu Bepari (or Kali Bepari) and called them to his house and coerced them to support the sub-divisional officer who was the Chairman of the Central Bank regarding the appointment of a paid secretary for the said Madaripur Central Bank;

- (ii) whether the views of the subdivisional officer—Chairman of the Bank, were opposed to the views of the Muhammadan members or to the majority of the members of the said Bank;
- (iii) whether the said Inspector Babu Ambika Charan Bose threatened the aforesaid Munshis, Abdul Kader Khan and Kalu Bepari, with trouble if they acted contrary to the wishes of the subdivisional officer;
- (iv) whether another Director, Munshi Mozuffer Ali Khan of Palong, was also threatened by the police officers of Palong police-station in order to coerce him into agreeing with the subdivisional officer;
- (v) whether on the said Munshi Mozuffer Ali Khan's refusal to comply with the request of the police officers, he was prosecuted in a petty case and after harassment, was discharged by Mr. Basu, the successor to the then subdivisional officer; and
- (vi) whether the house of Mozuffer Ali Khan was searched?

(b) If the answer to the above allegations or to any portion thereof be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state in detail what are the actual facts relating to the relations between the subdivisional officer, Mr. Basu and the Muhammadan directors of the Madaripur Central Bank?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) Government have no information regarding the alleged incidents. They do not consider that they are of sufficient interest and sufficiently recent to warrant any inquiry into them.”

(a) Is it a fact that on the occasion of a meeting of the Madaripur Central Bank on the 19th January, 1918; Maulvi Habibuddin Ahmed and other Muhammadan directors asked for permission to offer their Maghbril (evening) prayers and that the Chairman (who was also the subdivisional officer) told them to attend to their business first and then to their prayers?

Withholding of permission to the Muhammadan directors of the Madaripur Central Bank to say their prayers.

(b) If the answer to the above allegation be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to publish a full account of what actually occurred?

(c) Is it a fact that at the last general meeting held on the 7th June, 1918, the subdivisional officer, who was the Chairman of the Central Bank, called a director named Munshi Mozuffer Ali Khan “a fool” and thereafter he issued a general order directing that all meetings of the Central Bank should be held in his court room?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a), (b) and (c) Government have no information regarding the alleged incidents. They do not consider that they are of sufficient interest and sufficiently recent to warrant any inquiry into them.”

Allegations against a sub-inspector of

(a) Is it a fact —

(i) that in connection with the investigation of hat-looting cases in the Rangpur district serious allegations were made against a sub-inspector of police of having committed outrages on women at a place at or near Chilmari;

(ii) that these allegations were published in Bengali newspapers; and

(iii) that these newspapers have been sued by the police-officers for damages?

(b) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of making inquiries in regard to these allegations?

(c) Is it a fact—

(i) that Mr. S. R. Das, Counsel, has been engaged by Government to conduct the case on behalf of the police-officers; and

(ii) that the counsel will be remunerated by the Government?

(d) If so, what is the remuneration fixed?

(e) If the answer to these allegations be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to make a full statement as to the facts?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) and (b) Allegations were published in the Bangabasi newspaper regarding the conduct of inspector Dwijendra Chandra Ghose in connection with the investigation of certain hat-looting cases in the Rangpur district. An inquiry was held into the matter by Mr. J. N. Gupta, then District Magistrate of Rangpur, who reported that the charges were unfounded. The inspector was then permitted to sue the paper for damages.

(c) Yes.

(d) The remuneration has not yet been settled but will be in accordance with the scale fixed in the Standing Counsel's agreement.

(e) As the case is sub judice, Government are unable to make any further statement at present.”

Will the Government be pleased to state why the large amount of irrecoverable temporary loans have been written off in the revised estimates for 1918-19 under the expenditure head “Miscellaneous”?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“Almost the entire portion of this amount is due to the remission of part of a loan in accordance with an agreement which the local Government made with the Government of India in the year 1914.”

26.

Will the Government be pleased to indicate the detailed heads under which unclaimed deposits are credited to the revenue head "Miscellaneous"? Details as to crediting of unclaimed deposits.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"There are no detailed heads. All unclaimed deposits are credited under the major head 'XXV—Miscellaneous,' minor head 'Unclaimed deposits.'"

Are the Government in a position to give an estimate of the amount of probable total capital expenditure under the Public Works Department, for police purposes, by which the assignment for the reorganization of the subordinate police made by the Government of India will be ultimately exceeded and which, as stated in the current financial statement, will no longer be shown under the expenditure head "Police"? Estimated excess of capital expenditure for police purposes over the assignment.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"The special grant given by the Government of India for non-recurring expenditure in connection with the reorganization of the police in the area which now forms the Presidency of Bengal amounted to Rs. 22,52,000. The whole of this sum has now been spent, and any further expenditure on police buildings will have to be met from provincial revenues and provided for in the Civil Works budget. No final estimate of the total cost of putting the police buildings of this Presidency on a satisfactory footing has been drawn up, but the estimated cost of the works administratively approved for execution when funds are available amounts to over Rs. 80 lakhs."

Have the Government any definite and comprehensive scheme for constructing police buildings, beyond what was provided for by the assignment for the reorganization of the subordinate police made by the Government of India? Scheme for constructing police buildings.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to question No. 27."

29.

(a) Have the Government drawn up any comprehensive scheme for the development of Kalimpong, for which a provision has been made in the budget for 1919-20? Development of Kalimpong.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state its main features, and the probable ultimate cost to be entailed thereby?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) It is proposed to give long-term leases of plots for residential purposes on Ringkingpong Ridge; the buildings will be constructed by the lessees. Public works, such as water-supply, drainage and main roads, will be constructed by Government. The ultimate cost is estimated at 15 lakhs. It is expected that the ground rents will furnish a good return on the capital outlay."

30.

Grants to Bengal
Home Industries
Association.

What are the terms and conditions on which grants are made to the Bengal Home Industries Association, and to what use have they been put so far?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"The annual grant—Rs. 18,000—to the Association is unconditional and is absorbed in the general funds of the Association. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the annual reports of the Association for information as to how it has used the funds at its disposal.

A special grant of Rs. 1,000 was made in the year 1917-18 to meet the cost of sending exhibits representative of Bengal home industries to the exhibition of Indian Arts and Industries at Madras in the cold weather of 1917-18."

31.

scheme.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to explain the home girls' scheme, in connection with girls' schools, which is aided by Government?

(b) In what districts has the said scheme been working, and how far has it succeeded?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"(a) In certain villages purdahnashin ladies (Hindus and Muhammdans) gather together a number of pupils and teach them in their own houses. The schools so conducted are known as home girls' schools. The idea is to enable ladies who are fit to teach but are averse to serving in public schools, to teach children of members of the orthodox communities who are unwilling to send their girls to public schools. Each teacher gets a stipend of Rs. 10 a month.

(b) There are four such schools in the Dacca district and five in the Tippera district, and most of them are reported to be doing satisfactory work."

By the Hon'ble Mr. H. R. A. Irwin:—

The Victoria and Dow Hill
Schools.

(a) Is it a fact that the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools are the only purely Government schools for boys and girls, respectively, of the poorer class of European and Anglo-Indian communities in Bengal?

(b) What is the number of the pupils in each school?

(c) (i) What is considered a full staff of teachers for purely scholastic studies, for each school, and

(ii) what is the average number of scholars allotted to each teacher?

(d) How does the proportion of teachers to scholars compare with what is usual in similar Government schools in England?

(e) (i) Is there a full staff of teachers in each school at present?

(ii) If not, what are the respective numbers and are they adequate to perform the duties expected of them?

(f) What is the sanctioned scale of pay of the masters and mistresses employed and how does it compare with the salaries paid in other similar schools in the country?

(g) Are the Government aware that having regard to the present conditions of life in India the salaries now paid are not considered adequate?

(h) Is it a fact that some of the teachers are, at present, after more than 20 years' service, drawing a salary of Rs. 250 per mensem only, and that they will be entitled to a pension of Rs. 125 per mensem only, after serving the full term required to entitle them to a pension.

(i) Is it a fact that there is considerable difficulty in obtaining the services of competent teachers for the staffs of these schools?

(j) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking steps to insure that these schools shall be maintained in condition of efficiency in so far as that depends upon competent and properly paid masters and mistresses?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) The Victoria School has 190 boys on the rolls, including 17 small boys, who are taught at the Dow Hill School. The Dow Hill School has 107 girls.

(c) (i) Victoria School—11 teachers, excluding the headmaster and drill instructor.

Dow Hill School—12 teachers, excluding the headmistress, three music mistresses and a drill mistress.

(ii) The Victoria School has at present 9 teachers, excluding the headmaster and the gymnastic instructor, and there are therefore 19 scholars per teacher, but the ratio is not really so high, as the headmaster does a good deal of teaching work. The Dow Hill School has at present 10 teachers, excluding the headmistress, the three music mistresses and the drill mistress, and there are approximately 12 scholars per teacher.

(d) There are no such Government schools in England.

(e) (i) and (ii) No. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to (c) (i) and (ii) above. The staff in both schools is at present not up to full strength.

(f) Two statements are laid on the table. At the Victoria School the pay of the teachers is lower than in schools like St. Paul's, Darjeeling, but the average pay of the teachers of the Dow Hill School is about the same as the average in similar girls' schools in the Presidency. No information is available regarding schools outside Bengal.

(g), (h), (i) and (j) The answer is in the affirmative.”

Statement referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY to question No. 32 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble MR. H. R. A. IRWIN at the Council Meeting of the 7th April, 1919, showing the teaching staff of the Dow Hill School.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 2 and 3.

THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved that the further report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919, be taken into consideration.

He said :

"There is a long list of amendments before the Council, but I hope that it will be found that it is somewhat shorter than it looks, as various amendments are more or less identical and others are merely consequential. However, in view of the fact that there is a lengthy agenda paper before us I do not propose to make any further remarks on the Bill at this stage."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler also moved that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 1 (APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS).

In the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following amendment :—

that in sub-clause (1) of clause 1 for the word "village" the word "rural" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has not given any arguments in support of the change suggested, which, in effect, is one of drafting, and as a general principle, I think that matters of drafting are best left to the Legislative Department and the Select Committee. The facts are that in the Bill originally introduced the title and preamble were as follows :—

'A Bill to extend Village Self-Government in Bengal.—WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the system of Village Self-Government in Bengal, etc.'

When we were considering the point in Select Committee we thought that in place of the general phrase 'to extend the system of Village Self-Government in Bengal', it was more correct to say that it was intended to develop the system of Self-Government in the rural areas of Bengal ; and we accordingly changed the title and preamble to that effect, viz.,—

'A Bill to develop Self-Government in the rural areas of Bengal.—WHEREAS it is expedient to develop the system of Self-Government in the rural areas of Bengal, etc.'

We did not alter clause 1(1) which runs : 'This Act may be called the Village Self-Government Act, 1919 ; as we thought that this was clear and concise, identifying the object of the Bill with the unit of the village. We, therefore, left it as it was.

As I understand the amendment, the idea underlying it is that we should adjust clause 1 (1) in the terms of the amended preamble. It is not necessary that we should do so, and the Select Committee after again examining the point when the Bill was re-committed to it, decided to adhere to the present wording."

Another objection to altering the drafting is that it involves various consequential amendments in such places as the schedule, where the Bill is referred to by its title, and these amendments have not been worked out by the Hon'ble Member. I would, therefore, oppose the amendment, as purely one of drafting, the acceptance of which might lead to complications in other parts of the Bill.

Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, in the absence of my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul Haq, I moved it at his request. I do not see much difference in the wording and do not press this amendment.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for sub-clause (3) of clause 1 the following be substituted, namely :—

“(3) It shall come into force in the whole of Bengal and on such dates as the Local Government may, by notification, fix within a period not exceeding three years from the date on which this Act is passed, and the Local Government may, by notification, withdraw this Act from any district or part of a district provided that the reasons for such withdrawal shall be stated in the notification.”

He said :

“My Lord, as the clause stands now, it will come into force in such districts or such parts of districts and on such dates as the Local Government may, by notification, direct. The two things that I want to draw your Excellency's attention to are that it is proposed that it shall come into force in such districts to which it may be made applicable, and on such dates as may be fixed by notification. In place of this, I want to submit that it should come into force in the whole of Bengal, and in the second place it should be introduced within such period as may be fixed by the Local Government, that period not exceeding three years from the date of the commencement of the Act.

In connection with this amendment, I crave your Excellency's indulgence just to say a word or two about the general applicability. My Lord, we have been taken to task for sending in notice of many amendments. As I entered the Council Chamber this morning, the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps drew my attention to the impropriety of such a large number of amendments and suggested in fact that it would be playing the part of an obstructionist to press for so many amendments. I have, of course, accepted the suggestion in the spirit in which it was offered. My only answer to this charge is to be found in the amendments themselves. This amendment goes to show that we do not want to be obstructionists ; in fact, we rather welcome this Bill. All my complaint is that it should not be delayed, but brought into operation at once ; and on the other hand it should not be withheld from any particular district or districts, but should be made applicable to the whole of the province. That goes conclusively to show what is my real attitude with regard to this important measure. In fact, my Lord, I can claim this that of all the 50 Hon'ble Members of this Council, I am the one who wants that the whole of this important measure should be introduced at once, and in all districts, so that it goes to show that although we want amendments and changes here and there, in some cases in matters of principle and in the others in regard to details, on the whole we welcome this measure and we are anxious that it should be given effect to at once.

The object of this amendment is that we know from our past experience that however statesmanlike and wise a measure may be, its operation is sometimes delayed owing to the report of some local officers, as there may be some officers who may not like the measure. I, therefore, suggest that this measure should be introduced all at once, as such reports may be submitted by local officers as may lead to delay. For that reason I have suggested the period of three years. Three years being a sufficiently long period, the Local Government should be able to know when the people want this measure and when the Government want it. This period is sufficiently long in which the Government ought to be able to introduce it in the whole of this province.

Then, my Lord, with regard to the last portion of this amendment, what I want to submit is that the local Government may, by notification withdraw the Act from any district or part of a district. I want to add to it a proviso, namely, 'provided the reasons for such withdrawal shall be stated in the notification'. This is, I submit, not an unreasonable proposal. If a district is given the privilege of the extension of the Act and if later on it is to be deprived of it, it is only proper that the reasons should be stated for such withdrawal. That it is all I have got to say."

"My Lord, I do not propose to follow the Hon'ble Member in his general explanations of his attitude towards this Bill. Whatever may be the number of the amendments, I do not know that, personally, I have commented on them in particular, and their value can best be judged by the Council when we conclude our labours.

This particular amendment raises two points which are distinct from each other. The Bill, as framed, contemplates elasticity in its extension to various parts of the province. It only comes into operation in various areas on notified dates, and such areas may be either districts or parts of districts. The Hon'ble Member says : 'No, the Bill must rigidly come into operation throughout the whole province in three years'. I think, Sir, that the reasons in favour of elasticity are overwhelming, and they are both theoretical and practical.

In the first place, the conditions of this province are not homogeneous. It is often overlooked that the conditions of India are not homogeneous, and it is equally true that the conditions of any particular province within India are not homogeneous. Merely to give a few instances, we have tracts like Darjeeling, portions of the Chittagong Hill Tracts and the Duars, which are mainly inhabited by aborigines; also there are parts of Midnapur and Bankura which are inhabited by Sonthals and the like. These tracts are absolutely different from more advanced portions, such as the Munshiganj subdivision of the Dacca district, for example, or the subdivisions of Mymensingh. It is not wise in that view to say that the whole province in respect of village self-government must be treated on the same lines. It is merely to court failure, not to recognize that an advance may be possible in some areas, but impossible in the less advanced ones; and it is in recognition of that fundamental fact that the Bill has provided for elasticity. The extension or the development of self-government will first be tried in the advanced areas where it has most chance of success, and in the light of the experience so gained we shall go on extending it to others. It is impossible to believe that within the short space of three years the differences between the different parts of the province will have disappeared.

That is the theoretical argument, and there is also a practical argument. To introduce this system without careful supervision and encouragement from the outset will also be to invite failure. To exercise supervision we must have a staff; and it will be difficult to recruit that staff within so short a space as three years, much less to train them. The opinion of the District Administration Committee, on whose report this measure is largely based, was that three or four districts might be taken up every year, but I would deprecate any rigid programme. What we want is elasticity, so that we can be guided by what seems best in the light of the actual work done. So, both on theoretical and practical grounds, I would press for the less rigid provision in the Bill. The clause hurts nobody, and it is the wish of the Local Government to extend the system as much as possible ; the only point on which it lays stress is that in so doing it should not be bound absolutely by impossible dates.

The second point raised in the amendment is that in any notification we should give the reasons for our action. My objection to that is that a notification is a statutory declaration, which states a certain fact in concise and clear language in order that the existence of that fact may be easily available on record on whatever occasions reference has to be made to it, whether in the Courts or elsewhere. A notification is not meant to be argumentative ; it is merely meant to declare that such and such a thing took place. I would, therefore, deprecate the cumbering of it by arguments. It is not necessary that it should give reasons. The Act could not be withdrawn from any district without full opportunity of the question being raised, say, in this Council either by question or resolution, or by the other various means that are at the disposal of Hon'ble Members. There is, therefore, no hiding of the reasons simply because they are excluded from the notification. On these grounds, Sir, I would deprecate the acceptance of this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, the two points that have been raised by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler in reply are that in the first place the system should be first tried in some of the advanced districts ; and that in the second place, necessary arrangements have got to be made. Now, with regard to the first objection, I would submit that the system has already been tried for some years past. It was introduced first, if I remember rightly, in 1904—I speak subject to correction—at all events about the time when it was first introduced. It has been tried in several districts and the result of that experiment is the report of the District Administration Committee recommending the legislation which is now before us. Therefore, it is not a matter of first impression ; the system has already been a trial and it has been found to be successful.

As regards the arrangements to be made, I admit that arrangements have, of course, to be made, but at the same time the period of three years is tolerably long, and if it is supposed that that period is not sufficiently long for making preliminary arrangements, I think that is a question of detail and that the period may be extended to five years. In any case, all my anxiety is that the whole of this province may be given the benefit of this legislation within a reasonable period of time.

My Lord, I do not like to add anything to the remarks which I have already made with regard to the second point about the inclusion of the reasons in the notification."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, with reference to the last remarks of the Hon'ble Member, may I ask him three questions ? Will he name a single area in this province in which the system of the combined functions of the chaukidari panchayat and the local self-government union are in force ? Will he name a single area in this province in which the enlarged powers of the union board proposed in this Bill are in force ? Will he name a single area in which the system of village courts or benches is in force."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I admit, of course, that there are two bodies now, namely, the Panchayat Unions under the Chaukidari Act of 1870 and the Union Committees under the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885 (Bengal Act III of 1885). Certainly, these are two separate bodies working separately and not in combination as it is now proposed to make under this Bill; but all the same, there are the Panchayati Unions working side by side with the Union Committees, which have worked under the President system. They have been tried, for instance, in Tippera, in Burdwan, and also I believe in Bakarganj. I admit, however, that they have not been tried exactly in the manner in which it is now proposed, namely, combining the two functions in one body; in substance it is the same, as by the change that is proposed to be introduced under this Bill, we are going to have one body, instead of two bodies, doing the duties of the Chaukidari Unions as well as of the Union Committees."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 3.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that the words "and the Local Government may, by notification, withdraw this Act from any district or part of a district" in lines 3 to 5 of sub-clause (3) of clause 1 be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, my point is this. This seems to be a new provision in this Bill; in the Local Self-Government Act and the Municipal Act there is no parallel to this provision. Of course, Government will be cautious enough to introduce this measure wherever they consider these privileges should be granted. My point is this: that once this is done, the privilege should not be withdrawn. If the new bodies are found wanting in any respect, then the remedial measure of suspension may be introduced, but as these privileges are being introduced for the first time, there may be failures here and there, in that case I submit that all the privileges may not be withdrawn. That is my contention. I suggest in those cases remedial measures should be taken. Three bodies are mentioned here; the village panchayet, the Union Committee, and the chaukidari panchayet. As regards the last two they are working tolerably well, and as regards the first, option is given to the local people if it is not working well, not to go to them, but to go to the district tribunal. My suggestion is that suspension or some such measure may be resorted to in case of failure, and the people may be given an opportunity of gaining experience in local self-government with the help of the district officers and the district board, and I pray that they may not be deprived of the privileges once granted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the justification for this provision is somewhat similar to that which I have just been arguing in connection with another amendment, viz., that we should have elasticity in introducing these changes—the power to go forward when we find it desirable to go forward, and the power to go back when we find it necessary to go back. The Hon'ble Member speaks of the inexpediency of withdrawing a concession when once it has been given, but it is really in the interests of village self-government that we should have this power, because, if we feel that the position is easily retrievable, and if we know that if an experiment is not succeeding we can abandon it, then we need have less hesitation in giving the new system a trial. Therefore the clause, as it stands, really helps the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view, which is, apparently, that the Bill should be extended as rapidly as possible throughout the province and should be a success in working. There is much about the Bill which is experimental. I maintain that the Hon'ble Babu Abhil Chandra Datta was entirely in error in representing that it is merely a continuance under another name of what has been working in this province for some time. It is true that we have chaukidari punchayets; it is true we have local self-government unions; but the bodies which this Bill will create will be bodies with largely increased powers and responsibilities and rights of taxation. They will be bodies which will work under a different degree of supervision to those which now exist, and they will be bodies which will exercise judicial powers for which at present there is no counterpart whatever. Therefore, the Bill is in the nature of an experiment, and I submit that we are justified in being guided in this experiment by the light of the experience which we gain. The only valid argument for the amendment is one which the Hon'ble Member has not mentioned, and that is, that the words in the clause are unnecessary. They are unnecessary since section 22 of the General Clauses Act provides that—

‘Where, by any Bengal Act, a power to make orders, rules, by-laws or notifications is conferred, then that power includes a power, exerciseable in the like manner and subject to the like sanction and conditions (if any), to add, to amend, vary or rescind any orders, rules, by-laws or notifications so made.’

So the power which the Bill mentions is a power which already exists in the Bengal statutes. It may be said why then include it in the Bill? We did so for the sake of completeness; the Bill will be read by men who are not acquainted with the General Clauses Act or with the Bengal statutes, and there are one or two other small points which we have mentioned in this Bill, although they are also covered by Acts elsewhere. Therefore, Sir, I think the wording of the clause should be retained.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“My Lord, in reply I have to say that I do not want that the provision should be introduced at once into the whole of Bengal, within a certain time. Wherever necessary and where circumstances admit it may be introduced, but my suggestion is that once introduced it may not be taken away at a moment's notice. Of course, there is the power under the General Clauses Act. My point is that wherever anything is found wanting, some remedial measures may be taken.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 4.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri :—

If motion No. 3 be not carried, also to move that after the words “or part of a district” in line 5 of sub-clause (3) of clause 1 the following be inserted, namely :—

“and shall in the notification state in detail the reasons for such withdrawal.”

He said :

“My Lord, I want to know whether this has been already disposed of. In that case I will withdraw it.”

The President said :—

“Yes, it is not in order now.”

The amendment was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

AMENDMENT No. 5.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that the definition of "circle officer" in sub-clause (2) of clause 2 (now clause 4) be omitted.

He said :

"This is not a very important amendment. In fact, it is not one of those amendments which in the words of my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, would break the heart of anybody on this side of the House, nor the backbone of anybody on the other side, if it is or is not carried. It is simply intended to remove an incongruity. There were certain clauses in the original Bill relating to circle officers and circle boards. Those provisions have been altogether eliminated from the present Bill so that the words 'circle boards' or 'circle officers' find no place here. We do not define a word which does not find a place in the body of the Bill itself, so I consider this definition to be inappropriate in the present shape of the Bill. It might be argued that Government may appoint certain officers to be called circle officers. In that case this definition may well come in under the rules, but I do think that the definition of a word which does not find a place in the Bill itself is unnecessary."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I imagined that the Hon'ble Member was going to base his amendment upon the ground that he saw no necessity for having circle officers at all ; if he had done so, I would have had a good deal to say, from which I can now fortunately spare the Council. But as he has not used that argument, I oppose the amendment on the ground that it is not necessary. I think he is under a misapprehension. If he will look at clause 56 (now clause 51) he will find that a statutory duty is laid on circle officers to see that the proceedings of union committees are in conformity with the law and with the rules in force thereunder, while in schedule III, items 4 and 5, the circle officer is mentioned as a person to whom certain functions may be delegated, namely, the appointment, dismissal and fining of dafadars and chaukidars. In the light of these facts, there is perhaps some misapprehension on the Hon'ble Mover's part, and I cannot therefore accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry my attention was not drawn to clause 56 (now clause 51) as now modified and I beg to withdraw this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 6.

The following motion which was covered by the decision on the previous motion was then held to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that the definition of "circle officer" in sub-clause (2) of clause 2 (now clause 4) be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 7.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, withdrew the following motion with the permission of the President, viz.—

that after the words "district board" in line 3 of clause 3 (now clause 5) the words "and of the inhabitants" be inserted.

*Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Mr. O'Malley ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ;
Sir Henry Wheeler.*

AMENDMENT No. 8.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that after the words "district board" in line 3 of clause 3 (now clause 5), the words "and the local boards" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, my reasons for this amendment are that whenever the Government are to consider the question of the formation of unions, the Select Committee have thought it desirable to have the opinions and views of the district board, and I submit that in the case of village unions, the local board's opinion should also be consulted, because there are people there from different parts of the subdivision and different parts within the jurisdiction of the local boards, and therefore they are the proper persons to advise the authorities as to the formation of village unions. As regards district boards, while they are quite competent to advise the creation of unions, the members of the board have not that intimate knowledge of rural areas as is possessed by the members of the local boards. I think their opinion should also be considered before passing orders for the formation of union boards."

the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, Government recognize that it is a reasonable proposition that local boards as well as district boards should have the opportunity of expressing their views about the formation of unions, because they have an intimate knowledge of the areas under their jurisdiction, and also because they will be the controlling authorities over union boards. It is natural, therefore, that they should claim the right to have a right to be consulted when the formation of unions is proposed, and on this account I accept the amendment on behalf of Government."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 9.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi azl-ul-Haq, withdrew the following amendment with the permission of the President, viz. :—

that the words "and for the reasons stated in such notification" be added at the end of clause 3 (now clause 5).

AMENDMENT No. 10.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, in sub-clause (2), clause 4 (now clause 6), it is provided that the members shall be elected within such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by rules under clause 111 (now clause 101), so I do not see why there should be any provision for one-third of the members to be nominated by Government when there is a clear provision that all the members shall be elected. Practically it nullifies the provision made in sub-clause (2), therefore, I move that sub-clause (3) may be omitted."

the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, this provision of the Bill is justified by the variations in the existing conditions in different parts of the province to which I have already made reference. Under clause 4(2) members of union boards will ordinarily be elected, but the system of full election to bodies of this kind is by no means at present in force throughout the province. Members of the chaukidari panchayet are appointed by the district magistrate, while the number of union committees is comparatively few, and certainly, up to recently, some members of them were almost invariably appointed and not elected. Therefore, Sir, we have no precedent for imagining that successful elections can be conducted everywhere, and we know with fair certainty that whereas there may be places in which we can get a suitable board by election, there may be places in which it will be best to appoint a small proportion of the board. There is nothing particularly reactionary in a provision of this kind. It will be observed that we merely take power to appoint up to a third, whereas under section 41 of the Local Self-Government Act the Executive Government can, if necessary, appoint the whole body, so we are being more liberal than that existing provision of the Act. We are also being more liberal than the recommendation of the District Administration Committee which was to this effect :

'The members of the union panchayets should be partly elected and partly nominated, in the proportion of two-thirds elected and one-third nominated. This departure from the provisions of sections 39 to 41 of the Local Self-Government Act and the rules for the election of members of union committees framed under section 138 (a), is, in our opinion, necessary, as in addition to their municipal functions the panchayets will perform certain judicial and executive duties, with which the District Boards will have no concern.'

Their proposal, therefore, was that in all cases there should be a third of nominated members. The Bill merely takes power to add such a third wherever it may be deemed necessary, and in the light of these facts, I submit that it cannot be regarded as either conservative or retrograde."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, the only thing that I should like to draw your Excellency's attention to is that in sub-clause (2) it is provided that the members shall be elected, it is not stated that it is ordinarily to be done in that way. If there is any failure, that failure may be covered by rules made under clause 111. (now clause 101) but the provision of one sub-clause practically nullifies that of another, which is not very desirable, so I think there will be no serious difficulty in omitting sub-clause (3)."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 11.

The following motion which was identical with the previous amendment was then held to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 12.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that in line 6 of sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) for the word "magistrate" the word "board" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, no reasons have been given in support of the amendment. However, I would explain that there are two main reasons why it is proposed that the appointments should be made by the district magistrate. The first is that the district magistrate will be able to remedy inequalities produced by election, and to protect the interest of minorities. The second reason is that a district board is not a suitable agency for appointment. It meets only once a month and there is therefore risk of delay in appointment. Delays are dangerous ; they may give opportunities for unhealthy rivalry and canvassing for appointments. If this amendment were accepted, the union board could not be constituted until the district had held one of its monthly meetings. The district magistrate, however, can ascertain quickly and promptly, who will be acceptable to the villagers, and who will be worthy representatives of minorities. Therefore, Government cannot accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, in view of the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, I beg to withdraw this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 13.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq :—

If motion No. 12 be not carried, also to move that after the words 'district magistrate' in line 6 of sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the words "on the recommendation of the district board" be added.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, said :—

"My Lord, this amendment follows the same line as the previous one which has just been disposed of, therefore I do not wish to move it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 14.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the following be added, namely :—

"from among persons, other than police-officers, who may be for the time being resident within the limits of the union."

He said :

"My Lord, this amendment refers to sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6). One of the chief recommendations of the present measure is the distinct tendency which it exhibits towards developing the principle of election, and thereby laying a solid foundation for the growth and development of local self-government in its truest sense. Now, the Bill contemplates certain chances in which it may be necessary for the magistrate acting on behalf of Government to nominate not more than one-third of the total number of members. I beg to propose that at the end of this clause should be added the following words : 'from among persons other than police officers who may be for the time being residents within the limits of the union'. That is, I consider, Sir, to be very important. If police officers are to be appointed, then the very essence of the Bill will be minimized. On the other hand, if police officers are to be appointed the union boards will become unpopular bodies, and if unpopular they will also become unsuccessful. It goes without saying that if a police officer becomes a member of a union board, in that case whether he be or be not the chairman or vice-chairman, he will carry considerable influence, and the other members will always stand in some fear of either disoblighing him or going against him, and as the Government intend really to make it an effective measure of local self-Government, I think the police officers ought to be excluded and the magistrate's discretion of not appointing not more than one-third should be confined to persons other than police officers, and that those persons should be for the time being residents within the union. With this in view I submit that this additional phrase ought to be added at the end of sub-clause (3)."

Mr. Kerr; Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"My Lord, I am afraid it is not possible to accept this amendment. It seems to assume in the first place that no police officers would be fit to have the honour of being members of these union boards, and in the second place, that the district magistrate is going to pick out unfit police officers and put them on to the boards. I do not say that it will often happen that a police officer will be appointed a member of a union board. Police officers as a rule are too much occupied with their ordinary work, they often have to spend a large portion of their time in investigating cases and touring about in their jurisdiction, and people of that kind would not be suitable as members of the board. But there are some stationary police officers, like court sub-inspectors or head constables in charge of the thana records, who are often very worthy men, and if you come across men like that who take a real interest in village improvements, it might be desirable to put them on the board. I think it would be a great mistake to have a statutory provision preventing us from utilizing the services of such men. It is, however, not mainly on practical grounds that I oppose this amendment. I oppose it because it casts a stigma on the police officers of the province. I do not know whether the Council are aware that we are now recruiting as sub-inspectors men of good family and good education. Only the other day a man came to the Inspector-General of Police, an M.A., and asked to be enrolled as a head constable. His idea was to work his way up from the rank to the top of the force. That is the spirit that we want to encourage if the country is to have the sort of police force it ought to have. I put it to the Council, are you going to encourage a proper spirit in the police force, if you put into a Bill of this kind a declaration that members of the police force are unfit to undertake the most elementary duties of citizenship? Government are not prepared to accept this, or to cast a stigma of this kind on the police force, and I would ask the Council as a responsible body to decline likewise to pass such a stigma on a body of public servants who, I may remind the Council, are mainly Indians."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, from the point of view of some of us on this side of the House I would like to associate myself with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr. I do not think we shall be encouraging men of the police force if we are going to have a statutory bar and disqualification like this. I do not know how a force, manned mostly by our own countrymen, have done to deserve this slur as a body. My Hon'ble friend must be acquainted with a great many police officers who are worthy, honest and reliable and the tendency towards improvement is steady. I quite agree that there may be police officers quite unfit to be as members of the board, but I do not think that the district magistrate would go out of his way to appoint undesirable police officers. It would be a great wrong to a deserving body of men if we exclude them by a statutory provision, thus casting an undeserved reflection on the force."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government it is first contended that it is not likely that the magistrate will appoint undesirable police officers. Well, I quite accept that, but I don't see any reason why some limit should not be placed upon him in the appointment of police officers. Then it is said that very efficient and very intelligent police officers are now being appointed. Well, as I have already said, by introducing police officers in these union boards we run the risk of wrecking this very important measure, and I have nothing more to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 15.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that after sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6), the following be inserted, namely :—

"Provided that the member or members so appointed shall be entitled to be elected as members of the union board under section 5 (now section 7)."

He said :

"What I mean by this amendment is, my Lord, that the choice of the district magistrate or the authorities appointing the members of the union boards should be limited to those who are qualified to be elected as members of the board."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, in the sense that the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has explained the amendment, I have no objection to accepting it. His object is that we should not appoint a person to the union board who has not the qualification which is required of an elected member, and that is a reasonable suggestion. The amendment, however, is not very happily worded when it talks of the 'members so appointed shall be entitled to be elected'. I think we can put it in a better form, which, I gather, the Hon'ble Member will accept.

I would suggest that it be moved in the following way :—

"Provided that no member shall be so appointed unless he is entitled to be elected as a member of the union board under section 5 (now section 7)."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I accept the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler and I hope that it will be accepted by the Council."

The motion was put in the following form and agreed to :—

After sub-clause (3) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the following be inserted, namely :—

"Provided that no member shall be so appointed unless he is entitled to be elected as a member of the union board under section 5 (now section 7)."

AMENDMENT No. 16.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the word "may" in line 3 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6), the word "shall" be substituted.

He said :

"My Lord, I hope this amendment will be accepted and so without putting forward any arguments I submit it for the consideration of the Council."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I have no objection to accepting this amendment. The clause, as worded, says that vacancies may be filled by another election or by appointment by the district magistrate : the word ‘may’ is used as there are two possible ways of filling vacancies ; but in a sense ‘may’ does mean ‘shall’, as the vacancies could not be left unfilled. Therefore, Sir, as ‘may’ practically means ‘shall’, I am quite willing to accept the amendment.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 17.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “the vacancies may be filled by another election or by appointment by the district magistrate” in lines 3, 4 and 5 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the following be substituted, namely :—

“the vacancies may be filled up by another election : but, if on the date fixed for such election, the electors of any union also fail to elect the full number of members prescribed, the vacancies may be filled by appointment by the district board”.

He said :

“My Lord, my reason is that as the sub-clause stands the vacancies may be filled by another election or by appointment by the district magistrate. One of two things may happen—either there may be simultaneously an election and also an appointment by the district magistrate, or the opposite thing may happen, namely, that the members may think that the appointment will be made by the district magistrate and they need not make an election, while, on the other hand, the district magistrate may not take any steps thinking that the vacancy will be filled by election. This, I submit, will not be satisfactory in practice, and, therefore, I propose that the vacancies may be filled up by another election ; but if, on the date fixed for such election, the electors of any union also fail to elect the full number of members prescribed, then the vacancies may be filled by appointment by the district board. That is my first point. My second point is that in the case of an appointment the appointment should be made by the district board and not by the district magistrate.”

“My Lord, as the Hon'ble Mover has stated, there are two points involved in this amendment, and I will take them separately.

Let me first explain briefly how the clause came to take its present shape. As I have said before, this electoral system in these small village bodies, will, to a certain extent, be experimental, and we know by experience that even in larger bodies, such as municipalities, elections do fail, possibly because the people concerned are not sufficiently interested to come to the poll or it may be, by reason of technical difficulties. In these village elections there will be a greater likelihood of that kind of failure occurring. Therefore, in the Bill as originally introduced, it was provided that if within a period fixed in this behalf the electors of any village committee failed to elect the full number of members prescribed for the committee, the district magistrate should appoint the remainder ; that is to say, if the village committee did not take advantage of the right of election, they lost it once for all. When we were considering the matter in Select Committee, it was represented to us that this might be a little hard, as there might be valid reasons why the election had failed, for which it would be reasonable to give the villagers a kind of locus penitentiae and another opportunity of electing their representatives. We considered the suggestion to be reasonable, and we therefore drafted the clause in its present elastic form, which says, that if one election fails then there may be another election or resort may be had to appointment. We left it elastic, because it is impossible to define under what circumstances precisely elections would fail ; such a result might be due to a temporary cause or a permanent cause. The district magistrate would have to judge whether it was caused by an accident which was likely to be rectified by another election, or whether there were permanent influences at work which rendered appointment desirable. We have also in clause 111 (now clause 101) taken power to prescribe rules which would govern the exercise of this discretion. There is not the slightest wish of the Local Government to take away the right of election whenever it can be advantageously exercised. If the right of election is given at all, we would much prefer to see the union boards chosen in that way ; but contingencies may arise which may render election impossible, and we have accordingly provided for them in a more elastic form than that originally inserted in the Bill.

As regards the second proposal of the Hon'ble Mover, that appointment should be by the district board in place of the district magistrate, the hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has argued that point in connection with another amendment, and the same arguments are applicable here, rendering it desirable to make such a change."

the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, there is not much dispute about the principle underlying this provision. The question is not whether electors will be deprived of a right of election or they might not have any control. Quite apart from that my difficulty is this: The provision being alternative, the members might think that the appointment would be filled up by the district magistrate and the district magistrate in the same way might think that the appointment would be filled up by election; so that the result may be inaction on the part of both the bodies. On the other hand, both might take necessary steps for filling up the vacancy simultaneously. Supposing the members elect and also the district magistrate appoints a man for the vacancy, what would be the result in that case? To avoid that, my Lord, I submit that vacancies may be filled up by another election. That will make it very clear as appears from the line of argument advanced by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, because an election may fail on account of technical grounds. That is a case in which it is only fair that they should be given another election. So, both on the ground of expediency as well as on the ground of principle, I think that the amendment I have suggested is a better one than the provision as it stands."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 18.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the words "election or" in line 4 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the words "the event of the failure of such second election" be inserted.

Sir Henry Wheeler; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

He said :

“My Lord, my amendment follows the same lines as the previous amendment, with this difference, that in the event of the failure of such second election, the appointment will be made by the district magistrate, and in the previous amendment which was moved by my hon'ble friend, Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, the appointment was to be made by the district board. That is the difference. My Lord, I have heard the reply of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler to the first part of the amendment. That is, to ensure a second election which is common to both the amendments. He says there may be temporary or permanent cause, and if it is temporary the district magistrate will grant second election, and if it is permanent the district magistrate will make the appointment, and it is not the intention of Government to avoid a second election which he says will be regulated by the rules to be framed under clause 111 (now clause 101). The intention being clear, I think the Hon'ble Member would kindly consider whether the discretion would be left to the unaided judgment of the district magistrate. Well, there may be temporary or permanent causes, and the district magistrate may make a mistake, but nothing will be lost if a provision for a second election is made. Government will not lose anything by this. It will also emphasize very clearly the intention of Government. Further, if any mistake is made by the district magistrate, and if the district magistrate does not grant an election then the chance of the second election will be gone, and perhaps it may lead to unpleasant feelings between the district magistrate and the people of the area concerned. Therefore, I hope my Lord, that my amendment will receive favourable consideration at the hands of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, it is true that the present amendment does not contain the second point to which I took exception in connection with the amendment which has just been moved, but the first point still remains, and the arguments which I have urged against it remain valid in objection to it. Briefly it is preferable to retain the elasticity of the clause as it stands to the rigid prescription that there must be two elections. It may be reasonable to hold a second election or it may be entirely unnecessary; it is therefore best to leave a discretion to the district magistrate, and far from the exercise of the discretion being unfettered, it will be regulated by rules for the making of which we take power in clause 111 (now clause 101).”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, if it is the intention, as I have said, of Government to frame rules under clause 111 (now clause 101), is it not much more satisfactory to have that intention made clear in the specific clause of the Bill? The Hon'ble Member says that we do not want to make a rigid prescription that a second election will be allowed. I do not understand how a rigid rule can be framed under clause 111 (now clause 101), which will allow a second election in all cases where the first election fails. My Lord, I think, having regard to the pros and cons of the case, Government will do well to accept this amendment, because, after all, neither will Government lose anything nor will the administration suffer in any way, but on the contrary, the people will be highly gratified if this clause is accepted. As this will be practically left in the hands of the district magistrate, I fail to understand what is the objection to this clause being inserted here. I would, therefore, as the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill if he can yet see his way to accept

AMENDMENTS Nos. 19 and 20.

10 President said :—

"Items Nos. 19 and 20 are covered by the decision already arrived at by the Council."

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The following motions were then held to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that after the words "election or" in line 4 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the words "in the event of failure of such second election" be inserted.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that after the word "or" in line 4 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the words "and if the electors fail again to elect the full number on the date fixed for the second election" be inserted.

AMENDMENT No. 21.

The Hon'ble Bahu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved—that for the words "district magistrate" in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the following words be substituted, namely :—

"divisional commissioner out of a panel of double the requisite number to be nominated by the chairman of the district board in consultation with their vice-chairman, within a time to be fixed by the district magistrate".

He said :—

"My Lord, in this case my proposal is that instead of the power of nomination being given to the district magistrate it might be exercised by the divisional commissioner on the nomination being submitted by the chairman of the district board. As far as I remember, under the provisions of the Local Self-Government Act the power of nominating the members of the union committee lies with the divisional commissioner and so I have taken the parallel case of the Local Self-Government Act. I hope my amendment will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I put it to the Council that we are in some danger of making a mountain out of a mole-hill. What is provided in this clause? After all this clause merely says that if the right of election is given and the election fails, there may either be a second election or an appointment may be made by the district magistrate. Therefore, it is a contingency which should seldom arise, and it will always be within the power of the electors to prevent it arising by exercising their vote and electing their representatives in that way. Therefore, it is a minor point, and I submit that when the Council has just decided that it is preferable to leave ordinary appointments to the district magistrate in place of the district board, it would be rather illogical that in the case of a subsidiary contingency appointments should have to be made by this amazingly cumbrous procedure of appointment by the divisional commissioner out of a panel of double the requisite number, to be nominated by the chairman of the district board in consultation with their vice-chairman, within a time to be fixed by the district magistrate. Surely that is entirely inconsistent with what the Council has decided in connection with other amendments, and it is entirely inconsistent with the object of this clause itself. I therefore oppose this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"I have already submitted what I had to say and I am not very particular about it."

The motion was then put and lost.

Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 22.

The following amendment was held to be covered by the decision arrived at on amendment No. 17 and was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, to move that for the word "magistrate" in line 5 of sub-clause (4) of clause 4 (now clause 6) the word "board" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 23.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that sub-clause 1 (i), 1 (ii) and 1 (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is an amendment of which notice was given by my hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, and I am extremely sorry that he could not attend the Council to-day. He is very keen on this. The object of this amendment is to give every man, resident within the union, a vote, universal suffrage as it is called. We want that at least in the election for a membership of a union board, every man ought to have a vote, whether he pays any tax or not, and the Bill provides that any one paying Re. 1 as chaukidari tax or cess, should be entitled to vote, but under the Local Self-Government Act, the qualification for a voter on a local board election is the same, and I, therefore, submit that in forming union boards, which are purely rural boards, at least every man ought to have a vote. I do not think there will be any objection on the part of the Hon'ble Member or of the House to accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, my objection to this amendment is, briefly, that in the blessed name of democracy it is going too far. It is, in effect, proposing universal suffrage, as the Hon'ble Member says, since it seeks to eliminate the three clauses in which we define what the franchise for these union boards should be. What is the existing position? We are concerned with two bodies—the village chaukidari panchayet and the local self-government union. At present the village panchayet is practically invariably nominated and not elected at all; therefore we have no experience of how elected members will exercise functions concerning chaukidars. In the case of the local self-government unions, there is a tax-paying franchise which, is not so broad or simple as that which we have in the Bill, which, therefore, is already taking a step in advance, both in respect of the chaukidari panchayets and the self-government unions. I put it to the Council that that progress is sufficiently rapid, and that we should not do wisely now to take a dive into the unexplored sea of one man one vote."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member very confidently urged the motion which he brought on behalf of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, but I am afraid he overlooked his friends on his right, and he perhaps might have considered whether the amendment which has been moved, would be acceptable to this side of the House. To my mind, it appears that it is democracy run riot. I do not know whether my hon'ble friend is in earnest in proposing that every man in the street should have a vote for returning members to the union board, irrespective of any qualifications, and irrespective of any responsibility. We have not yet come to that state of things and I think it is dangerous to accept this motion even if the Government were prepared to accept it which they would not, as they have not yet been so democratized. I think it my duty to express my views on this matter."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that the amendment which I moved has neither been accepted by the Hon'ble Member in charge nor by my hon'ble friend

Maulvi Abdul Kasem.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. On the other hand, there has been some opposition from the right side of the House, but I do not think by moving this amendment anybody might think that I intended to make democracy run riot. What was intended is that in the village union there should be universal suffrage. I did not ask for that suffrage for district boards and municipalities. The day is not very distant when it is proposed to give a broad franchise to a large number of people, electing members to the legislative councils, and I do not see what objection there can be in the case of union boards now. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has said that it is intended to give every man in the street a vote, but those who live in villages and have a stake in villages, quite well understand what is in their own interest and I do not think it will be doing any harm to anybody by giving every man a vote there. I am sorry I have to press this amendment to the vote."

AMENDMENTS Nos. 24, 25 AND 26.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that for the words “one rupee” wherever they occur in clause 5 (now clause 7), the words “eight annas” be substituted.

He said :

“ This amendment refers to clause 5 (now clause 7) which lays down qualifications of voters and members of union boards. It has been laid down in this clause that the pecuniary qualification of a voter shall be the payment of not less than one rupee as road cess. This also applies to a member of a joint family. I propose that for the words ‘one rupee’ wherever they occur the words ‘eight annas’ shall be substituted. I will state certain facts to substantiate my proposition. Hon'ble Members will remember that not long ago a very valuable statement was published by the Government of Bengal with a view to assist the Reforms Committee showing the number of persons who paid one rupee as road cess, two rupees as road cess, and so on. Referring to that statement I find that in a district consisting of 21 lakhs of persons we have barely 50,000 people who pay one rupee as road cess. Now, my Lord, if out of 21 lakhs only 50,000 pay one rupee road cess then we get only a fortieth part of the people registrable for votes. Take, for instance, a union board to be constituted under the present enactment. A union board may consist of a population of 16,000 persons and in that case you have not more than 400 person qualified to vote under this clause. I ask, would that be a sufficient or adequate representation? And from this number too the minors and others are to be excluded. That is a point to be considered. Therefore, I have proposed eight annas instead of one rupee. There is another ground too which I would press for the consideration of the Council and that is this : in local boards you have the one-rupee qualification and I think it stands to reason that the qualification if the union boards voters should be somewhat different from that of the local board members. As a matter of fact I believe that in case of chaukidari tax people are taxed only four annas or six annas. So my suggestion if accepted, would eliminate those persons. And it will not inconveniently swell the number of voters. There is another consideration still under the Road Cess Act—a tenant pays two pice per bigha. And if you insist on the one-rupee qualification then a man must have at least 32 bighas of land in order to qualify himself as a voter under this clause. I think it is too high a figure. There are not many persons who have got 32 bighas of land. In fact, 16 bighas will be quite enough. For all these considerations I suggest that 'eight annas' may be substituted for 'one rupee'."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said:—

"My Lord, I have great pleasure in supporting this motion. The recent figures which were published relating to the franchise for the Council show that little over one million will be the total number of voters on the basis of Re. 1 cess for the whole province. Now, my Lord, only 12 millions is our adult male population, that is to say, only one man in 12 will be entitled to vote for the Council election. Now, if we take a village of 1,000 population, that is, accepting the figure which was published by the Government for the Council election, we find by a simple process of arithmetic, out of 1,000 men, 37 will be voters. That, I submit, my Lord will not be desirable, and I venture to think that eight annas, perhaps a lower sum, should be the proper minimum for voting in village union boards."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said:—

"My Lord, I also gave notice of an amendment which was identical with that of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, but I find from the list of business that Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has given notice of an amendment in which he wants it to be changed to six annas. The general impression seems to be that expressed by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter, that is, that a lower rate should be accepted. I think, my Lord, that these two amendments should be taken together and that Babu Akhil Chandra Datta's amendment should be put first."

The President said:—

"If it would assist to take the two amendments together, I have no objection to the discussion taking place on the amendments now; the amendments, of course, will be put separately."

Amendment No. 26 was then held to be moved and was as follows:—

"That for the words "one rupee", wherever they occur in sub-clause (1) of clause 5 (now clause 7), the words "six annas" be substituted."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said:—

"My Lord, I have only to say this: as I have already explained the number of voters will be very limited if you put it at Re. 1. If you are not prepared to give universal suffrage—one man, one vote—we should at least give the vote to an appreciable number of people; therefore I would personally submit, my Lord, that six annas should be the minimum qualification for a man to empower him to vote at an election of the union board, and I hope that this will be accepted by the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said:—

"My Lord, this amendment does not go so far as Amendment No. 23, which we have just been discussing, but it goes in the same direction, viz., that of placing on the electoral roll more voters than would be the case under the scheme of the Bill. The scheme of the Bill contemplates a Re. 1 cess qualification, not Re. 1 road cess qualification, and the suggestion is that it should be an eight annas cess qualification. In framing the Bill we had regard to the existing state of affairs, which, as I have already mentioned, on the chaukidari side gave us no precedent, or practically no precedent, for election at all, and on the local self-government side gave us the precedent only of a Re. 1 road cess qualification, and we thought that it would be going sufficiently far to take a Re. 1 cess qualification which is less,—in fact half—of the existing local self-government franchise, and therefore meets the point of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar when he argues that it is only reasonable that there should be a lower voting qualification for these village bodies than there is for local boards. The qualification will be lower—it will be a rupee cess in place of a rupee road cess—in other words, half.

Well, as I have said, we thought that that was a sufficient step in advance, and there are practical reasons for not attempting to place the franchise too low, one of which is that the lower it is put, the more the preparation of the electoral roll is complicated, and in these elections (the same is true of the impending change of system of Council electorates) it will be a very serious practical difficulty to get the electoral rolls prepared and brought up to date. Another practical reason for not attempting to go still lower is that clause 5 (I) (i) now clause 7 (I) (i) only defines the preliminary qualification, when a union board has first to be created. Once the union board is in being voters will for the most part be qualified under sub-clause (ii), in other words by the payment of Re. 1 union rate. On that basis it will be easier to maintain the roll as the taxation papers will be in the union, and it will be easy enough to pick out those who pay a rupee. So that will be the working qualification in all elections subsequent to the first, and I put it to the Council that that is a sufficiently low qualification, especially in a country where the electoral system is new and the effect of a democratic franchise has yet to be seen. A one-rupee payment of the union rate means a payment of a little over one anna a month, and can that be said to be limiting the franchise to the well-to-do to the exclusion of the poor? For that reason I would deprecate the alteration of the franchise as inserted in the Bill. It will bring in the substantial raiyat and, in fact, will bring in anybody of responsible standing in the village."

"Sir, there is serious practical difficulty in the way of our making up our minds whether we should vote for the one rupee or the eight annas limit, and I had hoped that Sir Henry Wheeler would be good enough to give us some facts on which we could make up our minds. We have been told that under the one rupee limit there will be only 50,000 voters out of 20 lakhs and I should like to know what the proportionate increase would be in the number of voters if the amount were reduced to eight annas. This would help many members in making up their minds. The great difficulty in our way is that we do not yet know what the Reform Scheme is going to be based upon. This legislation has been undertaken in spite of protest in some quarters before we know exactly how matters stand in that direction. Suppose it turns out that the Reform Scheme proceeds on the one-rupee basis for the Legislative Council; then it would be a serious anomaly if the same amount was to be fixed for union boards. Having regard to these difficulties, perhaps it would be well for the time being to accept the lower rate and see how things go on. On the other hand, one does realize the practical difficulties which Sir Henry Wheeler has referred to. However, when it is a question of more than doubt it would be safer to take the lower limit, particularly as it is not demonstrated that the acceptance of the lower limit would necessarily double the number of voters or make it very formidable. Some Hon'ble Member was comparing the report of the Universities Commission, with that of the Reforms Committee, the latter took 3 months, whereas the Universities Commission took 18 months in the matter of arriving at a quick decision. If the decision was quicker, so far as the Franchise Committee was concerned, we would have known where we stand and might have accepted the higher qualification."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, may I refer to the remarks which have fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. They would rather lead to the inference that if Government have not got figures on an eight-anna basis which can be put before the Council, it has been rather guilty of a dereliction of duty."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"Sir, I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon, I did not make any such imputation."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"In any case it might be inferred. May I explain in this connection that the collection of figures which we published at the time of the visit of Lord Southborough and his committee to Calcutta, took our officers about six months to compile. It is therefore obvious that it would have been impossible, in the time at our disposal, to have taken in hand a second compilation of figures on an eight-anna basis for the purpose of this amendment."

The President said :—

"As we are taking the discussion on items 24, 25 and 26 together, the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta may like to make his speech now."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, the point has been discussed on both sides, and I do not think I can add anything profitable, but at the same time I do press for your Excellency's acceptance of my amendment No. 26, which is for a six-anna basis."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, Sir Henry Wheeler has no doubt pointed out that in the Local Self-Government Act the qualification is payment of one rupee as road cess, and here we have got the payment of cess as one rupee. But it seems to me that even with that distinction, the amendment which I have moved does not lose its force. As was pointed out by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari a lower qualification would not be so harmful as a higher one which might make the representation quite inadequate and Sir Deba Prasad was anxious to know what would be the number of voters if eight annas were substituted. Although we have not got those figures, I think we can deduce it from the figures given in the official statement published some months back.

There I have shown that if a union consists of three or four villages with an aggregate population of 16,000 then under one rupee it would be Rs. 400, but supposing it were half the rate, namely, not one rupee but eight annas, then it would be 800. Would 800 or even 1000 be an adequate representation of 16,000 population—that is my point. So that whatever view you take, I think annas eight ought not to be considered as too low a qualification, and I think if we want to extend the franchise to a reasonable extent among the village population, we should strive to have at least 1,000 people in a union of a population of 15,000 or 16,000 to vote for the election. Under these circumstances I hope that the Government might be induced to accept

The President.

The President said :—

"I might put amendment No. 26 first so that the Hon'ble Members may have a chance of recording their opinion on it if they wish to do so, and then if No. 26 is not carried I will put No. 24 afterwards."

Amendment No. 26 was then put and a division was taken with the following result :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that for the words "one rupee" wherever they occur in clause 5 (now clause 7), the words "eight annas" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 27.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the word "male" in line 1 of sub-clause (1) of clause 5 (now clause 7) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, I shall propose to give my reasons in the words of the District and Sessions Judge of Mymensingh: 'Some well-to-do ladies will otherwise be excluded. Many women of all classes will be tax-payers. Some female voters would be more educated than some male ones, while no female voter would be less educated than some male ones'."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, we have already had one amendment dealing with universal suffrage, and in order to be thoroughly fashionable and up-to-date we now have an amendment dealing with female suffrage. The question of female suffrage has loomed very large recently in the annals of the West. It has led to a good deal of disturbance and to a certain amount of window-breaking and policeman-hitting and various other unfeminine acts, but the vote has recently been conceded to women as one of the changes brought about by the war. Personally, I think that in the circumstances of the West the wisest course has been taken. But as matters stand at present in the East things have not yet arrived at a point—I purposely do not say advanced to a point—at which it would be well to put this change in a Bill of this kind. In fact, another amendment, which stands in the name of the same Hon'ble Member, supplies an effective answer to his proposition, namely, No. 36, which says: 'provided also that all female voters shall be entitled to vote through their agents holding powers of attorney.' If, Sir, circumstances are such that it will be impossible for many ladies, under the social usages governing them, to record their votes in person, there exist practical and valid objections which merit the consideration of this Council before adopting a proposal of this kind."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I must publicly acknowledge my sense of gratitude to my hon'ble friend, Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, and my admiration for his chivalry in moving this amendment. I do not know, my Lord, what arrangement he has in view to suggest to Government to provide for the voting of pardahnashin ladies. I do not know whether he really intends to press the amendment which stands in his name, and if he does, what arrangements he proposes to make for the recording of votes of pardahnashin ladies. I do not know and I should like to be enlightened—whether voting is to be by person or proxy. If it is to be by person, I do not think there will be any advantage in accepting this amendment, because not even one per cent. of the pardahnashin ladies who are entitled to vote would come forward to the polling station to record their votes.

There is another point: I do not know, although we are all crying for reforms in every direction and we are all anxious that reforms should be introduced not only in the legislature but also in the executive and administrative bodies, whether we have yet come to that stage of education even among the male population in this country that franchise should be extended to female population. I believe, my hon'ble friend will pardon me if I say that it will be simply ludicrous."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I had not intended to speak on this amendment, but certain observations of my hon'ble friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, lead me to say something. There are no doubt practical difficulties in the way of pardanashin ladies otherwise qualified, but it ought to be borne in mind that we are legislating not only for the stronger sex but for the weaker sex as well, and it seems to me to put a bar upon the weaker sex—depriving them of the franchise in the formation of these union boards is going rather too far. Some may avail themselves of the permission if you choose to give the permission. If you choose to do away with the bar against the female sex that stands in the Bill, there may be ladies who might be willing to record their votes at the election. Why put a bar against them? I may mention that in the Presidency of Bombay and in the United Provinces there is no distinction of sex as regards voters, and ladies are equally entitled to vote in municipal elections as gentlemen. That being so, I think we might be a little fair to the weaker sex if we take away the present embargo. I may be permitted to mention one thing. In connection with the pending Calcutta Municipal Bill the Corporation has passed a resolution suggesting an improvement in the matter of voting powers. They have recommended that the distinction of sex in voting qualifications should be taken away as regards the City of Calcutta. I am merely mentioning these facts with a view to show that it would do no harm if you take away the distinction in the matter of election to the union boards."

"My Lord, this is a point upon which arguments can reasonably be advanced on both sides. Although female education in this country has not advanced so far as to justify us in giving this franchise to the female, but in all fairness it may be pointed out that there are some lady zamindars who are more educated and otherwise more capable than, possibly in some cases, the rest of the villagers. They can reasonably complain and say why should not they have any right of franchise, especially when they are the proprietress of their estates and property in the absence of male proprietors. There are widow zamindars, for instance. So in these cases there may be some hardship. As regards the arrangement for the recording of votes of pardanashin ladies who would not come forward to give their votes by person I have suggested an agency in my amendment No. 36 where it is said that all female voters shall be entitled to vote through their agents holding powers of attorney. Besides, from the very fact that we give them the right of franchise, it does not follow that they are bound to vote. It is quite optional to them to vote or not—they may exercise their right or not. I have been asked by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to express my real wish with regard to this motion. My real position is simply this : I am not absolutely keen about this matter, but at the same time I find that there are some people who want that the females should vote and I find that their opinion is held in some responsible quarters, such as the District and Sessions Judge of Mymensingh. I, therefore, thought it only proper that the matter should be brought up for the consideration of the Council. I am not myself extremely keen about it."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 28.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after the word "residence" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the words

Sir Henry Wheeler, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

He said :

Now, my Lord, I need not say much on this point. I had in view the case of those persons who have a place of business in a certain village or within the jurisdiction of a certain union board, at the same time they may not have a place of residence there. This is a class of case in which I think there may be some hardship unless the words 'or business' be inserted after the word 'residence'."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this is a small amendment and in answer to it I may merely explain the motives which actuated the Select Committee. The main principle upon which we proceeded was that the electors for these union boards should be people who are living in the villages and having a real genuine interest in the proper conduct of their affairs. The Council will remember that in the Bill, as we first amended it, we proposed to give the vote to persons resident within the union, and we defined what we meant by saying that 'resident' meant 'ordinarily resident', i.e., people who habitually live in the union and do not merely visit it at intervals. However, when we re-examined the Bill, judging by the amendments of which notice had been given, we found that there was a certain amount of opinion that the clause was too restrictive, since there might be people who might not be residents in the sense defined, but who, having places of residence within the union, might be deeply interested in its affairs. Therefore, recognizing that feeling, we altered the phrase to what it now is, i. e., having a place of residence. We enlarged it, therefore, in the sense of what seemed to be the feeling of the Council. Now, the Hon'ble Member asks that we should insert the words 'or business'. I would deprecate the change, although it is a small one, as ordinarily a man who possesses a place of business of any moment will have residing at it a gomastha or a servant who will be able to exercise the vote. There may again be cases of temporary businesses which might give rise to complications, such as the shop-keeper who comes once a week to the hât and puts up his shop or stall under a tree. It might be said that as he had a place of business he was entitled to vote, as presumably he would be if he also paid the minimum taxation laid down. But I do not think it would be very desirable to give him a vote. Therefore, for these reasons, and also on the ground that it is wider than the existing rule governing elections to the local self-government unions, which requires a voter to be 'resident' in the sense of our original Bill, I would prefer not to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I support this amendment which has been moved by my hon'ble friend, Babu Akhil Chandra Datta. I do not know why a simple amendment like this is not accepted by Government. It is only the addition of the words 'or business' after the word 'residence'. A man who has got a place of business and who also pays one rupee cess, I think, may very fairly claim the right of voting in that area because he has at least some interest in the area as regards conservancy, water supply and other matters for which the union board will be responsible. I think in this matter at least we will have the support of the non-official European members. In the Calcutta Municipality as well as in the mufassal municipalities the legislature makes provision for a place of business in certain areas, and why should the right of voting be now denied to those who have places of business within the union area. They are equally interested in the sanitation and improvement of that area, and I think it is reasonable and fair that they should have the right and voice in selecting a representative on the board. Further, it has been stated, and which has not been controverted by facts and figures, that the number of voters is very limited even if you prescribe 8 annas which has been rejected as the minimum rate. I think the people who have a place of business will not add very greatly to the list of voters, and I think in these days of enlarged franchise we ought to extend the power of voting to persons who have a place of business, and it is to be remembered, not merely to persons who have a place of business but who pay cess not less than one rupee."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, there is one class of people in this country whose interest was really intended to be safeguarded by this amendment. In most parts of the country there are people who come and do their business in boats. For instance, there is a big bazar in the district of Mymensingh, namely, Bhairab, where a large number of men carry on business and they are interested in the regulation of traffic and many other questions which will have to be decided by the union boards. They are very wealthy people doing business who have a place of business there but who have not a place of residence. It is only fair to these people that they should have the right to vote."

AFTER LUNCH.

AMENDMENT No. 29.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after sub-clause (I) (ii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

“(iii) who is a teacher in any high English, middle English or middle vernacular school within the union, or”.

He said :

“My Lord, clause 5 (now clause 7) lays down the qualification of voters, but this clause does not include a very important class of people who play a very significant part in village life ; I mean the school-masters. They are the most intelligent and public spirited people in the village, and they may not even come under clause 5 (now clause 7) unless in their own capacity as teachers they are allowed to come in as voters, and I therefore propose this amendment. These people are very useful and in fact even on union boards they will play a very important part. I think they ought to be included in the list of voters. It may be that they may reside in another gentleman's house, as most of them do, and may not pay any chaukidari tax or road cess because they come from distant places, but they may reside in a village for more than ten months, and I think that they ought to be admitted to these union boards if these boards are to be successful in their operation.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“This amendment, Sir, is the first of six which follow, and which are all framed on somewhat similar lines, that is to say, they are all designed to add to the simple property qualification which is at present in the Bill, what I may call fancy qualifications, derived from miscellaneous tests of sorts other than the simple taxation qualification which is covered by clause 5 as it now stands. In reference to all these six amendments there are certain general considerations which I may now briefly state and which apply to all, and if I mention them now, it will avoid repetition later. In principle, all these kinds of special electorates are in a sense non-democratic, and they date, rather, from a time when a low property qualification was not in force. Even in those Acts which may be cited as authority, the precedents do not go so far as some of the amendments that have been filed in connection with this Bill, but it is true that in the franchise for local boards, one qualification is that of being a graduate or a licentiate of a University, or a holder of a certificate as a medical practitioner, or a pleader or a mukhtear. But the Local Self-Government Act was originally an Act of

Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

1885, and the Municipal Act, in which there is a somewhat similar qualification, was an Act of 1884. So both these precedents are old, and I do not think they are altogether appropriate to modern conditions as effecting the present Bill. There is a great advantage in having a simple qualification. We must remember that these elections will, after all, be small affairs. The union board is not a very big body, and its functions cannot be viewed as very world-wide; they are essentially local, and the whole thing will be in the hands of simple people who are to be given a certain amount of control over their own affairs. Therefore the simpler the elections can be kept the better, and a simple qualification of low taxation, such as the Bill contains, is clear and definite, and is in conformity with what is the usual franchise practice in other countries where elections prevail. The usual scheme of suffrage is that of a property qualification, which is usually higher to begin with and lowered gradually in the course of successive reforms. That is what we have done here. We had a higher property qualification in the Act of 1885, and we have made it lower here, and I think we would be ill-advised to complicate it by going back to the old system of special electorates. Neither do the precedents bear the Hon'ble Member out in his present amendment. In neither of these two Acts can I find any precedent for inserting teachers of high English or middle vernacular schools among qualified voters. Therefore the amendment is a new embroidery on the two precedents which I have cited, and after all, is it unreasonable to expect from a voter the low cess qualification which will be in force at the first election, while as I have already said, after the first election, anybody will be able to vote who pays Re. 1 a year to the union board. Again, even at the first election this cess qualification, about which we have had some discussion to-day, will not be the only one in force, as equally at the first election a Re. 1 chaukidari tax qualification will be valid, and if a teacher of one of the schools of the kind enumerated has not paid the small sum of Re. 1 as chaukidari tax in a year, I really do not think he is particularly deserving of the franchise. As a matter of fact, he is almost certain to be able to put in a claim to vote under the existing provisions, and I would deprecate, either in this case or in those that follow it, adding special qualifications which are now somewhat out of date, and which will merely complicate the franchise as designed in the Bill."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, let us not forget the actual conditions under which the villages are situated and in which we are going to give effect to this matter. In the first place, a person having an ordinary place of residence in the union will be entitled to be a member. In most villages, educated, public spirited, and competent men live away from their houses, so they do not come in. Thus, in the villages there are the school-masters of a number of middle English and vernacular schools. If you also exclude them, then who are to form the union board and discharge its functions? Very important duties are imposed under this enactment upon the union board—first, to preserve and maintain the conservancy and sanitation in the villages, secondly, to form the criminal court of the union, and thirdly, they are to administer civil law in certain classes of suits. All these require some sort of intelligence, some sort of public spirit, and some amount of sacrifice. If you exclude the teachers who ordinarily reside in the villages, I shudder to contemplate what will be the ultimate effect of this enactment. Who are to form the boards, who are to discharge these functions? and in this view I think it is the intention of Government to work out successfully this important measure to see that sufficient scope is given for the application of the Act, and for its successful working—in this view I think, whatever may be urged on the other side, the school teachers ought to come in if we at all hope to succeed in working out this measure for the benefit of the people."

The motion was then put and lost.

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 30.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that after sub-clause (1) (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

- “ or
- (iii*a*) who, during the year immediately preceding the election, has paid a license-tax in respect of a trade, calling or industry carried on within the limits of the union, or
 - (iii*b*) who, during the year immediately preceding the election, has paid an income-tax, or
 - (iii*c*) who has passed the middle vernacular or middle English examination, or
 - (iii*d*) who has passed any title examination recognized by Government, such as the tol examination or the final examination of a madrassa, or
 - (iii*e*) who has passed the entrance or matriculation or any higher examination of any University, or
 - (iii*f*) who is a licentiate of any University, or holds a certificate as a pleader or mukhtar or revenue agent or a medical practitioner registered under the Bengal Medical Act, 1914, or an overseer”.

He said :

“ My Lord, my amendment covers a wider field. It can be divided into two parts. First, I think that educational qualifications ought to be considered, and secondly, I think that those who pay income-tax or license-tax or a trade tax ought to be included in the list of voters. My Lord, I am perfectly aware of the provisions of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act. Question after question is asked in the Council regarding the election rules, and the opinion of the Advocate-General was taken on the subject, but, inasmuch as his opinion was that the provisions of section 15 were rather restricted, the view taken by some of the non-official members was not accepted. Now that we are getting a fresh legislation, on the subject, is it not necessary for the Council to consider whether all those defects which appear in the Bengal Municipal Act should be removed by this legislation. The word ‘occupy’ in section 15 of the Bengal Municipal Act was a great obstacle to allowing men possessing educational qualifications to come in, but no such defect will occur here. The question, therefore, can be summed up in this way, viz., whether those who have got educational qualifications are entitled to be included in the list of voters or not. My Lord, those who are aware of village life will agree with me that to ensure success of the provisions of the Bill, it is necessary that some intelligent men who can lead society, who can lead the cultivators, ought to come in in the union boards as well as sit in village courts. Now, the Bill prohibits the legal practitioners from working in village courts; he is not allowed to come in. If the Bill proposes that intelligent men bearing educational qualifications ought not to come in, what will be the condition of things? The Bill requires that from among the members of the union boards, benches are to be established, and consequently it is highly necessary for the interests of the cultivators who reside there that there should be some people who can form the intelligent portion of the court or bench. There should be some provision to this effect. Let us take into consideration the case of a medical practitioner. In villages there are medical practitioners who may not hold any land but practice all the same in that locality. Are we to be told that these medical practitioners are to be excluded from the scope of the Bill? Let us take another instance, the pleader who goes from one place to practise in a neighbouring court. Is he to be told that he cannot sit in the union board or on the bench? Let us take also into consideration the case of a voter who has many sons, all graduates of the Calcutta University; the Bill lays down that only one member of a joint family is to be enlisted as a voter. My Lord, injustice will be done to these persons who are graduates of the University, but who are not entitled to be members of the board or the bench. It is said that this Bill is a simple one, therefore, the cultivator who pays cess and union rates are only to be enlisted as voters. I submit in respect to that, that if the Bill comes into operation by the light of the observations contained in the Bill, the success of the village local self-government is at an end. Unless you put forward men who are capable to sit as judges in the bench and the court, as active members of the union boards, I am almost sure the cultivators, simple as they are, will not be in a position to maintain the dignity of the board or the dignity of the bench. In this view of the matter I thought that it was high time that we should come before your Excellency's Government and explain how matters are, and it is my strong impression that if this view be accepted by Government the result will be a success. Your Excellency will also consider this, that supposing the scope of the Bill is limited, then you allow those who pay cess or union rates to sit as members of the board, or to appear in the list of voters. I suppose, My Lord that your Excellency will have to import men from other quarters in order to make the bench or the court sufficiently strong. I need not reiterate my views, for proposing what have been called fancy qualifications. I do not question the character of the Bill, but I am deeply concerned with the success of the provisions of the Act, and in this view I do strongly submit to your Excellency that Your Excellency should press the Council to consider the amendment."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I have already put before the Council certain general considerations bearing on amendments of this type, and I would like them to be considered as applicable in answer to this amendment also. But, before proceeding to details, I would strongly combat the misapprehension that might be conveyed by the Hon'ble Member's speech that under the franchise in the Bill, as it now stands we are excluding the educated classes. The Hon'ble Member asks us with all seriousness what is to happen to the pleader, the mukhtear, the graduate and the medical practitioner under the franchise as we have framed it in the Bill. My answer is that the graduate, the pleader, or the medical practitioner has merely got to pay a fraction over an anna a month as a contribution to the funds of the union board in order to be a voter for it, and if, with all his high professional qualifications, he is not able to pay that infinitesimal sum, I submit that he has very small claim to our consideration. It is often alleged with reference to chaukidari assessments, that those who ought to pay do not always pay, but I cannot believe that the defects in the Chaukidari assessments are carried to such an extent that the professional classes, on whose behalf the Hon'ble Member has addressed us so eloquently, do not pay even the small sum which qualify them to be voters under the Bill. As regards the details of the proposal in the Hon'ble Member's amendment they are rather a curious mixture; he seems to have made search in various Acts and picked out some analogies for his present purpose, while, for the rest, he has got them out of his own head. Thus, when we come to his first qualification, that of paying license-tax in respect of a trade, etc., he has apparently gone to section 9(2) (b) of the Local Self-Government Act of 1885, but the license-tax there mentioned is now out of date. In his second qualification, he comes to the payment of income-tax, which he has taken apparently from the Municipal election rules. But surely if a man pays income-tax, it follows, almost as a matter of course, that he can pay the small sum per month which will qualify him as a voter for the union board. The third test, that of passing the middle English or vernacular examination, is entirely a new one, and the Council will observe to what a very low educational level it comes. It cannot be seriously contended that the middle English or the middle vernacular is a very high standard for a man exercising this franchise. Even in the Local Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

Self-Government Act the educational franchise does not go below graduates, and the Municipal rules only go down to the Intermediate Arts standard. His fourth qualification is very curiously worded. He says that those who have passed any title examination, such as the tol examination or the final examination of a madrassa, should be entitled to vote. I am not quite clear what he means when he refers to tols and madrassas, for which I cannot find any precedent in other Acts, and the whole thing is vague in the extreme. His fifth test is the passing of the entrance or the matriculation or any higher examination of a University. It, therefore, overlaps in a very curious way his third one, which was the middle vernacular or middle English examination, and surely the entrance examination of the University is not a very high standard. His last qualification is apparently based on the Municipal rules, but he has omitted an important item in that precedent which was that of a property qualification, in addition to the educational qualification, and he has put in a curious reference to an overseer, regarding which I am not quite sure what he means. Therefore, I think that, even as they stand, the amendments are defective; they are not supported by precedent, and they are not justified by the main argument which the Hon'ble Member has used, namely, that unless we insert them in the Bill we eliminate the educated classes from the list of voters. On the contrary, we wish to bring them in, and I submit that they can usually be brought in by the payment of the very low taxation which the Bill proposes."

"My Lord, I do not wish to give a silent vote on this matter, but I wish to say that I have listened with very great attention to the speech of the Hon'ble Mover, whom it has always been my pleasure to support. I have paid a little attention to the other clauses of the Bill, and although I have listened with very great attention to his very eloquent speech I must say that I have gone into many of his points as far as I could, and find on a reference to the several clauses of the Bill that his points will not stand very close examination. My hon'ble friend wants that medical men, lawyers, graduates and under-graduates and teachers should all be voters, but I find that in clause 38 (now clause 37) of the Bill there is a provision that anyone who pays a union rate of Re. 1 will be entitled to vote whatever he may be. If a man does not pay this rate, even if he is a resident, I do not think he has any claim to sit on the union board as a representative. The Hon'ble Member also wants to add another qualification over and above the residential qualification, in one case, i.e., he will give a vote to the man who is paying a license tax, but in such cases the man generally pays an income-tax and, of course, an union rate. If so, he will be entitled to a vote, but if he is not a resident there, it is not desirable to have him even when he pays a cess rate or the union rate. He should be a resident there. I need not enter into the question at all. It will be otherwise spoilt by this amendment. I would like to include business in the category, and unless the clauses are added together, I do not see my way to vote for this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I am not quite clear in regard to one thing. Is it possible that irrespective of property qualification, if a man pays down a rupee for the union rate he will be entitled to vote? If that is so, everything that the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said will hold good. If it is not so, we must stand out for educational qualification which is no new departure. It has already been recognized in the Municipal Acts, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler; and in dealing with this matter we ought not to depart from this principle. If it is quite clear that the payment of one rupee independent of property qualification would entitle a person to vote, I think we ought to enact some of the clauses here. My difficulty in supporting the whole of the amendment is that this amendment is a somewhat curious mixture of the kind pointed out by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

Wheeler. For example, when it talks of licentiates of any University the framers forgets that the Calcutta University gives no licenses in these days. And if you fix the matriculation standard you bring down the qualification lower than that indicated by the other clauses. That is, however, a matter of detail. One advantage or disadvantage of having this legislation now is that we are considering in advance as to what will happen to the Reform Scheme, i.e., whether merely property qualification or educational qualification also should come in. The educational qualification is already in our existing Municipal Act, and I do not see why it should be taken away in connection with the new machinery without any adequate reason. I would partially support the principle of the amendment so far as the educational qualification is concerned."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, the amendments that follow after the one that has been moved by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur are on the same lines. I have given notice of one of them. My idea was not to include in the list of voters all men, University graduates, under-graduates or matriculates and finally passed students of madrassas or tols even if they pay the union rates : but my object was to include in the list of voters those people who will not be entitled to pay the rates as such just as the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has pointed out. There must be some rule that if he does not occupy a separate holding he will not be entitled to vote. The people whom I had in mind were the sons of gentlemen who hold property in their own name. Adult children and grandchildren of gentlemen living in the village would not be entitled to vote neither to pay taxes or rates. As regards independent men living by themselves I do not think the union committee will ever exempt them from paying the taxes and they will be the last persons to be let off without paying the rates. But those who live with their fathers and the property is held in the name of their fathers or mothers, they will not be entitled to vote ; and my object—and it was the object of my friend—to include in the list of voters all qualified persons, i.e., those resident of the union who are graduates or have educational qualifications but live with their parents and have no property of their own. I think that if any means could be found to include them I would be glad to accept them. But I would like to submit that their inclusion would not increase the number of voters very much as their number will be very limited. That is why I insist upon their being included."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, a certain amount of misapprehension may possibly have been caused by my somewhat loose use of the term 'property qualification'. I used the expression in order to differentiate between these educational standards which are mentioned in the amendment and the scheme of the Bill. But perhaps the more accurate term would be tax or rate-paying qualification. Under clause 38 (now clause 37) of the Bill, a union board shall impose yearly a rate on the owners or occupiers of buildings. That is, modelled on section 14 of the Chaukidari Act, which says that all owners or occupiers of houses in any village and any person who has within such village a cutcherry for collecting rents, shall be liable to assessment for the purposes of the Act. I think that it is known to all that many people pay chaukidari tax who are not in any sense propertied men."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, in reply I beg to invite the attention of the Hon'ble Member in charge to clause 39 (now clause 38) of the Bill. The rate to be imposed by union boards under clause 38 (now clause 39) shall be an assessment according to the circumstances and the property within the union of the person liable to pay the same. Supposing a gentleman who has got educational qualifications has no property, then he is not required to pay the rate and he cannot be assessed. I refer to clause 5 (now clause 7) which lays down that the payment of a cess is a qualification of a voter. Suppose a gentleman possessing an educational qualification does not pay cess at all, then he is not and cannot be enlisted as a voter. For this reason I say that independent of the payment of union rates or the cess those persons who have got educational qualifications ought to be enlisted as voters, and the reason is plain. I think it is necessary that the Hon'ble Members should consider that the rate-paying or tax-paying qualification ought not to be the only qualification for being enlisted as voters. Therefore, in this view of the matter I thought it necessary to press my amendment for the consideration of the Hon'ble Members. The same fault appears in the Bengal Municipal Act, although an attempt was made in this Council to have it modified, but the difficulty arose on account of the provisions in section 15 of the Bengal Municipal Act, and although resolutions were put before the Council, Lord Sinha could not find his way on the face of the difficulties which were pointed out to him to modify it. Now that this Bill is going to be law I appeal to the Legislature to consider whether these difficulties can be overcome. In that sense, I have brought it to the notice of your Excellency's Council, or else the same difficulty will be felt hereafter."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, may I add one word with reference to clause 39 (now clause 38), to which the Hon'ble Member has made reference now for the first time? I might explain that the words there used—'an assessment according to the circumstances and the property'—are modelled upon section 15 of the Chaukidari Act, 1870, which refers to an assessment according to the circumstances and the property to be protected of the persons liable to taxation. That, in no sense requires that the people assessed should be owners of property; a cursory glance at any village chaukidari assessment roll will show that the panchayet taxes men in view of their circumstances, whether they are daily labourers, artisans, pleaders, school-masters or what not. In the same way pleaders or professional men of any kind who occupy a building will be assessed under the Bill according to their circumstances. I have already mentioned that a person need only pay the very low assessment of slightly over one anna per month in order to qualify for a vote."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 31.

The following motion stood in the name of the the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, that after sub-clause (I) (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted namely :—

"or

- (iiiia) who has passed the middle English or middle vernacular examination, or
- (iiib) who has passed the sanskrit tol examination or the junior madrassa examination recognized by Government, or
- (iiic) who has passed any University examination, or
- (iiid) who holds a certificate and license as a pleader, mukhtear or revenue agent or as a medical practitioner registered under the Bengal Medical Board."

He said :

"I think that this amendment has been disposed of after the discussion which has taken place on the previous one, and I do not think that I shall be in order in moving this amendment."

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; The President ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

AMENDMENT No. 32.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, to move that after sub-clause (I) (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ or

- (iiib) who, during the year immediately preceding the election, has been possessed of a clear income from any source of not less than Rs. 120, or
- (iiic) who is a graduate, under-graduate or matriculate or is a sanskrit title-holder or has passed the tol final examination or middle English or middle vernacular scholarship examination, or the normal school or madrassah school examinations, or the final examination from a recognized medical school and who ordinarily resides within such union.”

The President said :—

“ I think that this amendment is covered by the discussion of the previous amendment.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, there are three parts of this amendment, the first part of which is covered by the amendment that has already been disposed of, viz., No. 31. Part 2 is, however, new which says :—

‘ who, during the year immediately preceding the election, has been possessed of a clear income from any source of not less than Rs. 120 ’.

I press for this portion. This is really a reproduction of section 9 (I) (c) of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885. As regards the third portion, I think that it is also disposed of. I shall, therefore, confine myself to the second portion.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, I will not repeat the general considerations on which I deprecate the acceptance of this amendment, but will only refer to the clause which the Hon'ble Member still wishes to press, namely, the possession of an income from any source of not less than Rs. 120. The Hon'ble Member claims the precedent of section 9 (2) (c) of the Local Self-Government Act ; but I may point out that in that section the figure is Rs. 240, which, for some reason unexplained, he has halved. But, apart from that, anybody possessing a clear income of Rs. 10 a month would under the customary procedure of village assessment be asked to pay the minimum amount of Re. 1 which would qualify him to be a voter.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, I have seen that in the other Act the figure is Rs. 240, but I have advisedly reduced it in order that we may have more men to serve on the union boards. That was the consideration which influenced me in reducing the amount.”

The second part of the motion was then put and lost.

Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray; Balu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Maulvi Abul Kasem; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; Sir Henry Wheeler.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 33 and 34.

The following motions were then deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray to move that after sub-clause (I) (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ or
(iii) who is a matriculate of an Indian University or has passed the final examination of the State Medical Faculty, the Board of Sanskrit examination or the Government madrasahs.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that after sub-clause (I) (iii) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ or
(iv) who has passed the matriculation examination of an Indian University, or any other examination equivalent to the same, or the final examination of any senior madrasah recognized by Government, or any title examination in Sanskrit recognized by Government, or any examination under the State Medical Faculty of Bengal or of any other Provincial Government in British India.”

AMENDMENT No. 35.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, withdrew the following motion with the permission of the President, viz.,—

“that the proviso to sub-clause (I) of clause 5 (now clause 7) be omitted.”

AMENDMENT No. 36.

The following motion was held to be covered by the decision on amendment No. 27 and was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after the proviso to sub-clause (I) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be inserted, namely :—

“Provided also that all female voters shall be entitled to vote through their agents holding powers of attorney.”

AMENDMENT No. 37.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “every person” in line 1 of sub-clause (2) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the words “every literate male person” be substituted.

He said :

“My Lord, the object of this amendment is that the members of union boards should be literate.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, this amendment, as the Hon'ble Member has just said, would make literacy a test of membership of the union board. In so doing, it would follow a precedent which is in the Local Self-Government election rules, though on the other hand, it is not in the Municipal rules. We may therefore say that the precedents are divided. The amendment is unexceptionable in so far as we want the people who are going to be members of the board to be men of capacity, which to some extent, is indicated by literacy, but I would invite the attention of the Council to certain remarks which were made by the District Administration Committee which considered this matter, and was influenced by the opinion of two of its members who were closely connected with Eastern Bengal. They wrote :—

“The objection has been taken that there will not be men in all unions sufficiently qualified to undertake the duties that we are proposing for the panchayets, but we think that in this matter there is a tendency to look too much to education and too little to personal qualifications. Two of our members have spent the greater part of their service in Eastern Bengal, and their work has brought them into direct and constant association with the villagers in the remotest parts of many districts. Their experience is that in every union suitable men can be found to serve on the panchayets who, although not possessing high educational qualifications, can be trusted under sympathetic guidance and control to do a great deal of useful work for their villages. We believe that this is equally true of other parts of Bengal, and that all over the province such men can be found.”

That, Sir, is a pronouncement of some authority, and it would weigh with me in deprecating this amendment, though if the Hon'ble Member cares to press it to a division I would leave it to the Council.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I am not myself very keen about this. There is some feeling amongst the non-official members that this should be urged. At the same time, I hope that similar arguments will be advanced; it is said very often that the people are not sufficiently educated. I for one would be glad to accept the position that has been taken by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, that is, however, my personal opinion. As there is a feeling in the non-official benches that this amendment is necessary, I feel justified in pressing it.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 38.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, withdrew the following motion with the permission of the President :—

That at the end of sub-clause (2) of clause 5 (now clause 7) the following be added, namely :—

“ Provided that only one member of a joint undivided family shall be entitled to be so elected.”

AMENDMENT No. 39.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that the Explanation to clause 5 (now clause 7) be omitted.

He said :

“My Lord, in this explanation the word ‘residence’ is explained as ordinarily residing within its limits. The last portion says: ‘No person may be so resident within the limits of more than one union at the same time’. I think the expression should be rather elastic. Resident may be taken as sufficient without a restriction as to the manner of residence, as in that case very few qualified men will be available for work on these union boards. It may be that for the sake of serving the needs of the community in the matter of medical aid and education many people of the headquarters may be inclined to go actually to the village and serve on these boards, and if it is restricted that such persons should be residing in the union in order to be able to serve there. Moreover, in the case of municipal boards, we see that one person may enjoy the right of voting in more than one municipality or locality ; so, in this case simply because a person is a resident of one union board, he should not therefore be debarred from serving on another union board. In that view of the matter, I hope that the explanation be omitted."

*Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ;

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

" My Lord, I recommend the retention of the explanation. It will be remembered that in the Bill as it passed out of the hands of the Select Committee, this residential qualification applied to the voter as well as to the member. As I have previously explained to-day, we discarded it in the case of the voter, in deference to what we understood to be the sense of the Council ; but we retained it as regards the member, in order to ensure that the people who serve on these union boards should be genuine residents and not outsiders. We want to get the men who actually live in the villages, who are in the confidence of the people there, who know what is going on, and who are competent to supervise the execution of the petty works of improvement which will be within the power of the union boards. We do not think that the affairs of the union boards can be run properly by men who are mere birds of passage, making only casual visits to the union, and importance is to be attached to the Explanation that no person may be resident of more than one union at the same time. If there is any doubt, the person himself can state the place where he most frequently resides and where he wishes to take part in the affairs of that union as a resident, but he will not be allowed to be a member of a union with which he does not have a really close connection. That seems a fair provision and I would press for its retention."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

" My Lord, I have already said what I had to say, I think that if it be restricted to ordinary residence many qualified persons will be unable to serve on these boards. I submit, therefore, that this amendment should be accepted."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 40.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

" My Lord, in view of the decision of the Council on the previous amendment this item (No. 40) also falls through."

The motion was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that after the words " within its limits " in lines 3 and 4 of the Explanation to clause 5 (now clause 7) the words " or has a place of residence within the union ", be inserted.

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 41.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that in line 1 of clause 6A, (now clause 9), for the word " may " the word " shall " be substituted.

He said :—

" My Lord, I wish to make it obligatory on the union board to elect one of its members to be its vice-president, and in that view I move this amendment."

Mr. Hart ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

“ My Lord, I oppose this amendment. The Hon'ble Member has not given any reasons for proposing to make it obligatory that the union board should appoint or elect a vice-president, and I think it is recognized that it is important that the administration of the union board should be conducted as far as possible in the same simple way as the business affairs of a family are managed. Formalities should be avoided and nothing should be done to give an opening to complications. In every joint family there is a karta or headman who conducts its business affairs and it is not the ordinary practice to appoint a vice-headman unless and until it becomes apparent that the vice-headman is necessary. For the same reasons it is expedient that a union board should not appoint a vice-president until the necessity arises. In a municipality where they have a vice-chairman, the case is somewhat different. There the number and complexity of the chairman's duties make it desirable that he should have the assistance of a vice-chairman, but the president of a union board will not have more work than one capable person can ordinarily manage. It would be a mistake to appoint two persons to divide the work and responsibility of one man, and it would be a mistake to impose on the union board a superfluous officer. Clause 6A (now clause 9) as it stands empowers the union board to elect a vice-president when it considers such an appointment necessary. To compel the union board against its will to appoint a vice-president is unnecessary and likely to be prejudicial to the system of village self-government. For these reasons, my Lord, I oppose the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“ My Lord, I cannot understand why it is not thought desirable that there should be a vice-president. These boards should not be a one-man show ; we often hear that the chairman of the district board is the district board, so even in executive union boards it is very desirable that there should be a vice-president to assist the president. The provision in the law is very reasonable, that there may be a vice-president, and to emphasize the necessity of such an officer, I have proposed that it should be made obligatory. I, therefore, hope that this amendment will be accepted.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 42

The following motion which was held to be covered by the decision on amendment No. 41 was then deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that clause 6A (now clause 9) be re-numbered as clause 6A (1) and that after the re-numbered sub-clause (1), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely :—

“(2) If any union board fails to elect a vice-president within the period prescribed by rules under section 111, the district board shall appoint a member of the union board to be the vice-president.”

AMENDMENT No. 43.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “ district magistrate ” in line 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 11A (now clause 11) the words “ district board ” be substituted.

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

He said :

“My Lord, this is based upon the general principle that the duty and function of the supervision of the rural boards should be entrusted to the district board and not to the district magistrate.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“Sir, I do not quite understand why this amendment has been mooted, except on the general principle of looking through the Bill and wherever the words ‘district magistrate’ occur proposing to substitute for them the words ‘district board’. The duty defined in clause 11A (now clause 11) has nothing to do with the working of the boards or with the control over them. It is merely a declaratory function—to declare authoritatively that a board was constituted on such and such a date. That is a formality connected with the calculation of the term of office of members. It was not in the Bill as originally framed, which specified a 3-year term of membership from the date of election or appointment. In the Select Committee we discussed how best to ensure that the term of elected members and appointed members synchronized, and we finally adopted the solution which is now in the Bill, to have an authoritative declaration of the date from which the board was duly constituted, and to let the three years' term run for all from that date. This clause says that the district magistrate is to declare the date ; in so doing he can hurt nobody, even if it wanted to do so, and the proposal is consistent with clause 3 (now clause 5) of the Bill which makes the creation of these union boards, a function of the Executive Government. It is best that a simple function of this kind should be performed similarly by an executive officer, and there will be less likelihood of possible confusion if it is left to him than if it is delegated to the district board.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, in view of the observations made by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I beg permission to withdraw this amendment.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 44.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that after the word ‘may’ in line 1 of sub-clause (1) of clause 12, the following be inserted, namely :—

“Of its own motion, or on an application made in accordance with rules under section 111.”

He said :

“This is a very formal amendment, and the Hon'ble Member may accept it if he thinks fit.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I do not think the amendment is required. The clause deals with the power to remove members, and says that the district board may remove any member under specified conditions. I do not think it is necessary to say that it should do so of its own motion or on an application made in accordance with rules made under clause 111 (now clause 102), because the district board will take action whenever the facts are brought to its notice in any manner.”

*Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray ;Sir Henry Wheeler.The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“ My Lord, I do not wish to press this amendment.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 45.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray, in the absence of the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha, moved that for the words, brackets and figures “ clause (1) or clause (3)” in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 12 the following be substituted, namely :—

“ clauses (1), (3) or (5)”.

He said :

“ My Lord, the reason is obvious. A person guilty of misconduct or of any disgraceful conduct ought not to be re-elected as a member of the union board. I submit that misconduct or disgraceful conduct is no less reprehensible than the disqualifications mentioned under (1) and (3) of sub-clause (1). If a member of a union board finds that, in the event of his being declared guilty of misconduct, he will be permanently disqualified from being again elected a member, he is likely to be more careful and scrupulous than if the only penalty for misconduct is to be his removal from membership for a short time only, and there will be nothing to prevent his being re-elected. The proposal, if accepted, will certainly act as a more powerful deterrent than the nominal punishment of temporary disqualification provided in the Bill.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ Sir, I have no objection in accepting this amendment if it commends itself to the Council. Clause 12 enumerates five circumstances under which persons may be disqualified. The Bill makes two of them permanent disqualifications, that is, conviction of a non-bailable offence and having been declared disqualified for employment in the public service. The fifth, that is, being guilty of misconduct in the discharge of his duties, is not permanent ; we discussed the point in Select Committee, and the view we took was that if the electors thought that a man should be re-elected after what he had done, we should be prepared to allow them to do so. But if the Council wish to make this a permanent disqualification, I am prepared to accept it.”

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

“ I have nothing further to add, my Lord.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 46.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq :—

New clause 14B.

That after clause 14A (now clause 14) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ 14B. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, it shall be competent for the voters of a union board to pass a vote of censure on any member of such board at a meeting attended by at least two-thirds of the total number of voters.

Maulvi Abdul Kasem ; The President ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri .

- (2) On such a vote being passed, the member concerned shall tender his resignation to the union board within two months of the date of the meeting, and in case of his neglect or refusal to do so, he shall be removed from office by the district board.
- (3) Every such meeting shall be convened and conducted in accordance with rules under section 111."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot move this amendment, but if anyone wishes to move it on behalf of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, he is quite welcome to do so.

The President said :—

"Does not the Hon'ble Member wish to move it?"

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"No, I cannot also move Nos. 47, or 48 ; 49 also falls through."

As no Hon'ble member was willing to move it the motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 47—49.

The following motions were also deemed to be withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that sub-clause (1) of clause 15 be omitted.

If motion No. 47 be carried, also to move that before the words "vice-president" in line 1 of sub-clause (3) of clause 15 the word "President" be inserted.

Also to move that after the word "may" in line 1 of sub-clause (1) of clause 16 the following be inserted, namely :—

"of its own motion, or on an application made in accordance with rules under section 111".

AMENDMENTS Nos. 50—52.

The following motions were held to be covered by the decisions on previous motions and were deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the word "may" in line 2 of sub-clause (3) of clause 17 the word "shall" be substituted.

Also to move that after the word "meeting" in line 3 of sub-clause (3) of clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

"within a period prescribed by rules under section 111".

Also to move that after sub-clause (3) of clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

"(4) if any union board fails to elect a new vice-president within the prescribed period, the district board shall appoint a new vice-president."

Maulvi Abdul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 53.

New clause 17A.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that after clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

“ 17A. The union board shall have power to grant leave of absence to its president or vice-president for a period not exceeding six months in a year, either at one time or in the aggregate, and may fill up the vacancy caused by such absence ”.

He said :

“ My Lord, I think in the Municipal Act provision is made for granting leave to the chairman and vice-chairman, and I think the same concession should be shown to union board officers as well.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ This is scarcely a proposal which involves any important principle, but rather a detail of administrative convenience and necessity. As the Hon'ble Mr. Hart has said in connection with another amendment, we want to keep the working of the union boards as simple as possible, and therefore we did not follow the precedents of the Municipal Act or the Local Self-Government Act in certain of the provisions which are required in the case of a more highly organized body like a district board or a municipality. In this matter of granting leave we thought it better that if the president required leave, the union board should see to it in an informal way and arrange for the performance of his functions in his absence. We have a rule making power in clause 111(d) [new clause 101(d)] to prescribe the powers to be exercised by the president or vice-president of a union board, and probably, if a difficulty arose, we could frame rules which would meet it. That is my objection to the amendment ; that it goes rather beyond the limits of simplicity which we sought to maintain in respect of these boards.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, I cannot quite follow the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. As far as I understand, he does not quite oppose this amendment, but at the same time he does not wish to burden the union board with other provisions. What I want to know is, if the president of the union board—I do not say the vice-president—is unable to attend to his duties for six months or more, what are the provisions of the Bill which will enable the union board to elect another president to officiate for him, or to carry on his work in his absence ? There is no provision as far as I know, and I am not sure whether in the absence of any provision of this kind the union board will be able to grant leave to their president or vice-president. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler referred to clause 111(d) [now clause 101(d)] which prescribes the powers to be exercised by the president or vice-president of the union board, but the president must be there in flesh and blood, and must be present at the meeting of the board. Suppose he is ill or laid up or goes away, or is absent from the place, there must be some person to perform his functions. I should like to know whether in such cases the union board will be in a position to appoint a temporary president or vice-president.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ Sir, I gather that the Hon'ble Member asks two questions. He enquires as to my own personal view, which is, that this amendment is unnecessary. Secondly, he asks who is to exercise the statutory functions of the president in his absence ? As regards that I would merely say that for the performance of the statutory functions of a body like the Calcutta Corporation, with all its complicated interests, it is necessary to have provisions of this kind definitely laid down, but when we come to union boards, which are after all merely a few men running the affairs of a village, we do not require to overload the Bill with special provisions, and if we can avoid them, so much the better. The Bill will be worked by fairly simple people and it should be kept simple. As it is, the idea of this Bill has grown considerably since Sir Nicholas Beatson Bell first attempted to frame it. He hoped to put down provisions on little more than a half sheet of notepaper for the guidance of these village committees, but the Bill has already become much larger than was originally intended, and I hesitate to add other provisions unless their necessity can be very clearly proved. Otherwise, there is no question of principle involved."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, the object of moving this amendment was that the union boards should be given power to grant short leave of absence to their presidents in urgent cases. Suppose the president is ill or obliged to leave the village for medical treatment or for any urgent business, what provision is to be made to carry on the duties of the board ? I am afraid the only course open to him is to resign his office, and a fresh election must take place, unless there is a vice-president to act for him. Of course the period of six months in the aggregate is too long a period, but some provision ought to be made in the Bill for temporary grant of leave to the president in order to ensure arrangements for carrying on his work during his absence. I admit, of course, that it has nothing to do with the principle of the Bill."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 54.

Clause 20.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the word "road" in line 1 of clause 20 (now clause 19) the words "bridge and tank" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, this amendment refers to clause 20 (now clause 19) of the Bill, which provides for the property to be vested in the union boards, that is to say, roads, buildings or other works constructed by the union wards. To those I wish to add 'bridge and tank'. It is extremely doubtful if the word 'road' as defined in this Bill would cover a bridge. Certainly it would not cover a tank, and I think if we enumerate any property it is necessary to expressly mention 'bridge' and 'tank' which are very important works of the board. I do not think 'or other work' would be sufficient to cover these two, for in that case the clause ought to have been worded 'other works constructed by the union board'. We need not have mentioned roads, buildings, etc. If it was necessary to mention roads, buildings, etc., I think it is necessary to mention also bridges and tanks.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

"My Lord, I oppose this amendment. Clause 20 (now clause 19) of the Bill applies to 'every road, building or other work' and the words 'other work' obviously cover a bridge or a tank. The Select Committee saw no reason to include in this clause a complete list of the various kinds of work which a union board may construct, and I do not think that the Hon'ble Member has been able to show that there is special need for making specific mention of bridges or tanks. I might explain also that in this case the wording of the clause exactly follows that of section 75 of the Local Self-Government Act of 1885. As these words are unnecessary, my Lord, I beg to recommend that the amendment be not accepted."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, with due deference to the finality of the Select Committee, I beg to submit that I am not at all impressed with the Hon'ble Member's statement that the words 'other work' in place of 'other works constructed by' would do. Why do you mention roads and buildings? If you mention them, you should also mention other important works done by the union board. 'Or other works' might mean according to the interpretation given generally in courts of law, other works like buildings, etc.—the preceding words. I think there can be no bar in introducing the words 'bridge and tank'."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 55.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that the words "from the union fund" in line 2 of clause 20 (now clause 19) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, the next amendment also refers to this very clause which says that every road, building or other works constructed by a union board from union funds shall be vested in the union boards. I do not understand why you should fetter this clause with the restrictive clause, viz., 'from the union fund'. The union board may construct a work either by begging, borrowing or stealing, and why should you say, constructed by the union board from the union fund? It may even happen that a private gentleman may grant a sum of money with the object of constructing a tank; there the work is constructed not from the union fund, but from some specific fund received for the purpose. Why should we fetter the hands of the union board by saying that that tank should be vested in case it is constructed from the union fund? I think the clause 'from the union fund' should be omitted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"I do not think, Sir, that the clause as it stands will give rise to any practical inconvenience, while the adoption of the amendment might possibly have that result. The Hon'ble Member has referred to the case of a work constructed out of a donation made by a private individual, but such a work will vest in the union board. It will do so because under clause 47 (now clause 46) the donation would be a miscellaneous receipt of the union board and part of the union fund, and the work so constructed would come within the meaning of this clause. But the possible inconvenience to which I refer is that if the district board took action under clause 35 (now clause 33) to make over to the union board the execution of any work within its area, it might well happen that, while the district board might want to make over to the union board a particular work and the union board might be perfectly willing to undertake it, yet neither the district board might want to make over the property, nor the union board want the responsibility of keeping it. Therefore, inconvenience might arise if we made the change which the Hon'ble Member suggests."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I am not much impressed with the arguments of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler nor the illustration he has put before the Council. If a man makes a donation for making a road, it may be taken as part of the union fund, but at the same time I think there is something to be said that certain cases would not be covered by the Bill as it now stands. Suppose I happen to be a resident of a union board and there is a road running from my ground to another part of the union and I want to make over this private road of mine to the union board, for it would be a great convenience to the public, then in that case the words of the Bill as they stand would rather go to show that it would not be vested in the union board, because it is not a road made from the union fund. I want to have this made clear, that if I make a gift of my private road to the union board and the union board takes it over because it would be a great boon to the public, it should vest in the union board. Certainly it is not made out of union funds, but it ought to vest in the union fund, therefore, I join with my hon'ble friend the mover in saying that properties made over to the union board should vest in them. I would not restrict it to the words 'made from the union fund'."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I have nothing further to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 56.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after the words "from the union fund" in line 2 of clause 20 (now clause 19) the words "or made over to the union board by the district board or local board" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, the clause as it stands now refers only to buildings and other works constructed by union boards, but we can imagine very well that the existing roads will be made over by the district boards or the local boards to the union boards. The clause as it stands now does not deal with those roads. Therefore it is necessary that these words 'or made over to the union board, etc.' should be inserted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, here again I do not think the amendment is necessary. Under clause 19 (now clause 18), the union board will have power to acquire or hold property, both movable and immovable. If, therefore, the district board or the local board do desire to make over any property to the union board, it will be open to them to do so, and the union board can accept it ; but I have already referred to clause 35 (now clause 33) under which it is quite possible for the district board to make over the execution of a work to the union board without wishing to vest such a work in them. Therefore it seems preferable to maintain the wording of the clause as it stands."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I have nothing further to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 57.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that for clause 22A (now clause 20) the following be substituted, namely :—

"22A. (1) The union board shall appoint such persons as it considers fit to be dafadars and chaukidars under this Act, whenever a vacancy or vacancies exist :

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; The President ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

Provided that if the union board fails within a reasonable time to make such appointments, the district magistrate shall make the requisite appointment or appointments to fill up the vacancy or vacancies.

(2) The union board shall have power to dismiss a dafadar or chaukidar :

Provided that a dismissed dafadar or chaukidar shall have a right of appeal to the district magistrate, whose orders shall be final."

He said :

"My Lord, this amendment is an important one and there is a question of principle involved in it. The principle advocated by this amendment is that the dafadars and chaukidars should be appointed by the board and the board should have power of dismissing its servants. In the Bill as it was first brought before the Council the power of appointing chaukidars and dafadars was vested in the district magistrate, but the Select Committee after reconsideration, considered it fit and proper to suggest that the board should nominate a person for appointment as dafadar or chaukidar and the district magistrate shall, if satisfied with such nomination, appoint such nominee. This amendment aims at giving the full power of appointment to the board itself and the power of dismissal as well. The only provision added is that dismissed dafadars and chaukidars should have a right of appeal to the district magistrate. It is only fair that the union board should have the right of appointing their own servants and they ought to have a good deal of control over dafadars and chaukidars who will be paid out of the funds of the union boards. If the power of their appointment or dismissal does not rest with the union boards they will have very little control over these dafadars and chaukidars. It is said that the district magistrate shall, if satisfied with the nomination of the union board, appoint such nominee : but in this case those people who have some experience of the rural areas and the working of the Chaukidari Act know that the district magistrate in this country practically means the circle officer or one of the police officers, inasmuch as the district magistrate will practically have no knowledge of the matter and will always abide by the decision of these officers. So what we want to do is to transfer the power from the circle officer to the union board. The powers of appointment, dismissal and punishment should vest with the members of the union board itself who will be primarily responsible for the working of the board and they ought to have some control over their own servants and employés."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I would like to have your Excellency's ruling as to whether these amendments Nos. 57 and 58 should be discussed together because they are almost identical."

The President said :—

"I think the two amendments are not quite identical : they are slightly different in form. But it might perhaps be convenient to discuss the two at the same time. I can put the amendments separately after the end of the discussion."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"May I point out that there is an appreciable difference between amendments Nos. 57 and 58, in so far as No. 57 vests the residuary power of the union board in the district magistrate, whereas No. 58 vests the residuary power in the local board, which is a far-reaching change."

The President : Sir Henry Wheeler.

The President said :—

"In these circumstances, I think it will be better to take the discussion on each of the amendments separately."

"My Lord, this amendment, as the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has said, is one of some importance. It raises a very ancient controversy in this province—a controversy in which there have always been two schools of thought, but a controversy which has decided itself on the lines that are now in force as the result of practical experience of the contrary method. The issue is whether the chaukidars and dafadars are to be nominated by the union boards and appointed by the district magistrate, if satisfied with the nomination, which is what the Bill provides, or whether the right of appointment is to vest absolutely in the union board, leaving the magistrate only a right of intervention if they fail to appoint. Similarly, whether the right of dismissal should vest absolutely in the union board, leaving the district magistrate only the right of intervention on appeal. The Bill, as it stands, only enacts the existing position; in respect of dafadars the original Bill did propose a change which would have vested their appointment and punishment absolutely with the district magistrate—a change which could be advocated and justified; but on reconsideration, bearing in mind the fact that this is not primarily an Act to amend the chaukidari law, we thought it preferable to waive any proposals for change, and to adhere to the existing position, and I would like to emphasize the fact that the Bill merely provides for the continuance of the existing state of affairs.

I am afraid I must deal in some detail with this matter, especially as it is one of such long standing in Bengal; and I shall have occasion to read quotations from various past papers, partly because they put the matter clearly and succinctly, and partly because I would like to bring home to the Council that all these arguments that are used now are arguments which have been weighed and considered in the past, and in the light of those discussions the present procedure has been explicitly adopted. I will read first from the report of the District Administration Committee. They say—

"The question of the nature of the control which should be exercised over the village watch is one on which there has always been a great conflict of opinion in Bengal, for, while some would consider the chaukidars essentially village servants, as in Madras, Bombay and the Central Provinces, others would like to see them placed in greater subordination to the regular police, only the assessment and collection of the chaukidari tax being left in the hands of the panchayets. Others, again, would prefer that the chaukidars should be paid from provincial revenues, being made directly subordinate to the regular police and entirely emancipated from village influences. The policy of dual control, which has hitherto been adopted in Bengal, is in the nature of a compromise between the two extreme views, but the extent of the control exercised over the chaukidars by the panchayets and the police, respectively, has varied at different times and in different places. It is unnecessary for us to dwell at any length on the early history of this question. The theory that the village watch is a municipal institution was definitely adopted after much controversy in 1870, and Act VI of that year is based on the assumption that the chaukidar is purely a village servant, employed for the protection of the lives and property of the villagers and looking to the village community for the regular payment of the remuneration to which he is entitled. His chief duties under the Act, as they had been under Regulation XX of 1817, were to give prompt information to the police of all criminal attempts or occurrences in the village, as well as of the movements of bad characters, and to arrest proclaimed offenders or persons taken in the act. He was also bound to assist the panchayet in the collection of the chaukidari tax. Watch and ward occupied a position of secondary importance. At first the appointment, punishment and dismissal of the chaukidars were left in the hands of the panchayets, but the tendency of later legislation was in the direction of strengthening the control of the Magistrate and police over the panchayets and the chaukidars; and, under Act I of 1892, the power of appointing, punishing and dismissing chaukidars, as well as of determining their numbers and fixing their salaries has been vested in the District Magistrate, who, with the sanction of the Commissioner, can delegate this power to any Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class or to the District Superintendent of Police.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

We need not follow the different steps that have since been taken from time to time to restore police influence in the villages and to secure closer control over the work of panchayats and chaukidars. The system of dual control has been accepted by the great majority of the witnesses, both official and non-official, whom we have examined.

• • • • •

‘There are some who contend that the system of dual control over the chaukidars has failed in Bengal, and that it is useless to continue it, but this, to whatever extent it may be true, is due to the weakness and inefficiency of the panchayats and to the absence of any real effort in the past to improve their position and secure their co-operation, which is so essential to effective police work in the villages. Reform should begin with the panchayats, and we think that it would be unwise, now that it is proposed to make a real effort through the circle scheme to introduce an improved system of village administration, to do anything at the outset which would be likely to weaken the tie between the rural police and the community whom they serve. At the same time we recognise that it would be dangerous if anything were done to render police action in the villages less effective, especially in the Eastern Bengal districts, and to deprive the police of the assistance of the chaukidars.’

That extract, Sir, summarises the position and emphasises the point that the situation in Bengal in this matter is a compromise: at one time greater powers were given to the panchayats in the matter of the appointment and dismissal of chaukidars; but in the light of experience, they were withdrawn by the amending Act of 1892. The experience since gained has shown that the dual system works fairly well, and it has not demonstrated the desirability of amending it, while it has also shown—as mentioned by the District Administration Committee in their report—the possible dangers of seeking an alteration.

The same point was also gone into at some length in the debates in the Bengal Council when the Act of 1892 was passed. These discussions too give some interesting facts about the theory of chaukidari administration in Bengal and if I weary the Council with them now, it is partly with reference also to other amendments which are on the agenda paper, and which cannot be appreciated unless the position is fully understood. It is interesting too to note that the discussions of 1892 were largely in the hands of Sir Henry Cotton and it cannot be said that Sir Henry Cotton was a man who was excessively in sympathy with police as opposed to popular administration. In introducing this Act of 1892, Sir Henry Cotton said as follows:—

‘The village watch of Bengal, as of all India, is one of the oldest institutions of the country connected with the village system itself, and the village watchman of ancient Hindu times is substantially the counterpart of the village watchman as he is recognised by existing legislation; that is to say, the village watchman is ordinarily a member of an hereditary thieving caste, and responsible for his behaviour to no one except to the village community by whom he is maintained. That was the constitution of the village watch in ancient Hindu times, and it is practically the constitution of the village watch at the present day. Under the Mogul administration there was some change effected. The character of the Mogul Government was eminently fiscal, and the village watchman, instead of being the village servant, became to a very large extent the servant of the zamindar, and that dual position remained for a very long time under British rule, and still remains in all parts of the country where Act VI of 1870 has not been enforced. The object of Act VI of 1870 was to place the village watch everywhere under the control of the village organization.’

After referring to this doctrine of the village chaukidar as the village servant, he goes on to say:—

‘The Bill, I have now the honour to place before you, introduces a modification of this principle. It is my own view strongly, and it is the view of the present Government, that the police is a branch of the administration which ought to be brought into closer relations with the Government.

• • • • •

The present Bill is a slight step in this direction—not a very decisive step perhaps—for it does not pretend to be more than a very gradual and small measure, but it is a step in the direction of centralizing police administration, and of bringing the village watch much more than it now is under the immediate supervision of the District Magistrate who represents the Government in the mufussal.

In Bengal we do not go so far as to desire that the village watch of this country shall altogether disappear, and we wish to adhere to the only sound element of the chaukidari system, viz., that of retaining the local knowledge of men resident in the village in which they are to be employed; but we do desire to modify it materially, and the direction this modification takes is by placing the village watch more under executive authority than it now is.

At present the panchayat, which is, in other words the representative of the village community, not only appoints the chaukidars, but has authority under the law to decide within specified limits how many chaukidars shall be employed and to fix their salaries. On these three main points the power and authority of the panchayat is curtailed by the present Bill. It is proposed to allow the panchayat to nominate, but the appointment of the village watch will rest in future with the District Magistrate. It is laid down also that the Magistrate and not the panchayat shall determine the number of chaukidars within specified limits. This is a proviso which experience has shown to be very necessary. The law authorises the panchayat now to fix the number of chaukidars, and in practice it has been found that they reduce the number, and the Magistrate has been obliged to interfere to maintain the minimum number of chaukidars prescribed by law. They have done so without any specific legal authority, but it is only in this way that the full number of chaukidars has been maintained. Under the present Bill, the Magistrate is vested with the power he has hitherto informally exercised. Similarly, it is proposed—and this is a point of at least equal importance—that the Magistrate shall fix the salary of the chaukidar. The salary is now fixed by the panchayat, and the tendency is to fix it at a rate so low as to be below the standard of efficiency.

In other words there was a certain position created by the Act of 1870, and after 20 years' experience of that system, during which it was enquired into by two committees—one presided over by Mr. Beames and the other by Mr. Munro—and in the light of the enquiries of these two committees and the failure of the system to which they drew attention, Sir Henry Cotton introduced the Act of 1892, and in connection with it he said:—

‘Is it a fact that in those districts in Bengal in which that Act has been introduced, and in which panchayats have worked, the chaukidari system has been more successful than it has been elsewhere? I am not aware that the experience of any Member of this Council will be able to answer that question in the affirmative. On the contrary, as far as the control of the chaukidar is concerned, as far as all police work is concerned, panchayats practically have no existence. They have done no good whatever, they have been of no use. But they have done one thing. There is no doubt that they have assessed and collected the chaukidari rate, and have paid the chaukidars within the villages where they exist. There is no doubt that the chaukidars where there is a panchayat are better paid than in other parts of Bengal where panchayats have not yet been legalised. That is true. As regards any other aspect, police work proper, executive control, the panchayat has been useless, and that is the opinion of everyone with the one exception of Mr. Westmacott, who has enquired into the matter. In the very section of the Police Committee's report from which my noble friend quoted just now, I find it stated:—“It will thus be seen that, though the law contemplates that the determination of the number of chaukidars shall be left to the panchayat, it has everywhere been found necessary, in the interest of the public, for the Magistrate to interfere to secure the proper performance of this duty by the panchayat.” It is the deliberate verdict of the Police Committee that the panchayats have nowhere done their duty except when compelled to do it by the interference of the Magistrate. Now can any member of this Council say that the institution of the panchayat for such purposes, namely, fixing the number and salary of the chaukidar has been a success? It is because it has been such a flagrant failure that the Committee was appointed by the Government, on whose recommendations radical modifications in the law, which the local Government has more than once attempted to carry, but I regret to say have abandoned owing to a storm of prejudice and ignorance, are now proposed as being thoroughly necessary.’

Therefore, Sir, the point I would emphasise by these quotations is that the old system which this amendment seeks to restore was definitely condemned after 22 years' working and replaced by the existing system which the Bill perpetuates.

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

Sir Henry Cotton's remarks constitute an authoritative pronouncement as to the failure of the system which the amendment would advocate, and they afford sufficient justification for adopting the line which we have done in the Bill, namely, that in this matter of the chaukidari administration we will not make any change in the existing practice. Whether such a change may come hereafter we cannot say. It will have been noticed from the extracts which I have read that constant reference is made to the inefficiency and failure of the old panchayets. We hope with these union boards to secure stronger and more efficient bodies, and it may so happen that if these bodies prove themselves efficient, it may be possible to modify the present practice in the matter of control over chaukidars. But whether this will happen I cannot say. It is a matter for the future, but all I do say is that, as matters stand at present, the considerations which I have adduced justify to my mind our doing what we propose to do, i.e., continuing the present practice without alteration, and I am not prepared to accept an amendment which puts us back to the Act of 1870, which after 22 years' experience was ultimately condemned."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I am afraid that the panchayeti system, even on the high authority of Sir Henry Cotton, which is 22 years old, will not now avail. Things have been moving fast in this country, as all over the world, and in order to have energetic action we are going to have a new body altogether. And if you want them to be efficient and do effective work you must give them real power. If they are merely to send up the names of chaukidars and dafadars and if the District Magistrate is to appoint them, I think that will be taking away much of that which would go to make them useful bodies. There may be some need for supervision; but we must not forget that it is not panchayets that we are dealing with—but altogether a different thing. The change has become necessary as it is felt that the body that was administering that important part of village policing was not quite up to the mark. Therefore, we are bringing in a better body of men in charge of this duty and other duties. It would be hardly proper and right to take away from them the most important part of the duty and to expect them to look after the police work up to the required standard. I should think that as the amendment seeks to impose on them the power of appointing their own servants as a beginning, Government should very carefully consider the situation before throwing it out."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have followed with great interest the long and luminous speech of Sir Henry Wheeler and, following the last speaker Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, I should say that notwithstanding the signs of progress that we see on all sides, Government seem to be, at least in this matter, as unprogressive as can be imagined. In 1870 an Act was passed enabling Village Committees to appoint chaukidars: in 1892 owing to certain reports that were made by Sir James Munro, Inspector-General of Police, and Mr. John Beames who was, I believe, subsequently a Commissioner of a Division, Government thought fit to take away that power by the Act of 1892 and vested it in the District Magistrate. That was in 1892, and this is, my Lord, 1919. I do not know, my Lord, what tremendous change has been made in the Government, in the views of the responsible authorities over our affairs and in the administration of the country; well nigh 27 years have passed away since the Act of 1892 was passed. The name of Sir Henry Cotton was conjured up to silence the critics, because Sir Henry Cotton was known to be in favour of progressive government in this country. But it must not be forgotten—and, I believe, the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler will himself admit—that the position of a responsible officer of Government is quite different from the position of the gentleman divested of the position which he officially occupied at the time. Perhaps I may not be mistaken if I say that the views of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler as a Member of the Executive Council of your Government would be greatly different from those of Sir Henry Wheeler in his retirement—whether living amongst us in this country or in his own home. Therefore, I do not think that the views of Sir Henry Cotton as expressed in his official capacity and uttered some 29 years ago need be taken much into consideration. My Lord, I was reading the opinion of Rai Baikuntha Nath Sen Bahadur, a very calm, moderate and experienced gentleman—a gentleman who has even in his old age taken the greatest interest in the local affairs of his country. He said: 'It is a shadowy measure of self-Government: it is far better that such a measure should be withdrawn rather than presented to the people.' My Lord, great changes have been made and the people have now progressed beyond our conception during the last 27 years, and I think that time has come when they should be trusted to appoint chaukidars. I believe the pay of these chaukidars ranges from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 a month and that of dafadars from Rs. 8 to Rs. 10 and if there is any abuse of power, I am sure the various provisions in this Bill would be found to be ample safeguards.

You have got ample power under the clauses of this Bill and therefore do not think there need be any apprehension on this score. You are vesting the people with a modicum of self-Government, but the people cannot appoint a chaukidar on Rs. 4 a month without the sanction of the Circle Officer—a District Deputy Collector—to whom this function will be delegated by the District Magistrate under the schedule of this Act. That will make the union boards merely jo-hukum bodies to the Police Superintendent or the Circle Officer, appeal to your Excellency, in view of the impending constitutional reforms, make these small rural bodies realize that they have some semblance of power. And unless they are allowed to realize this they will always remain jo-hukum bodies to the authorities. These bodies will be composed of timid uffassal people and they will never abuse their power. If this simple power is not given to them, they will not venture to go against the district magistrate, they will tremble in their shoes before him and the police superintendent and the Circle Officer as if their authorities are paramount. Their influence will be demoralizing to the Boards if they are made to realize that under the British Government they cannot appoint half-a-dozen chaukidars on Rs. 4 or Rs. 6 a month."

"My Lord, I have to say a few words in this connection. If the panchayat or the union board comes to know that they cannot appoint a chaukidar and that the chaukidar will be under the supervision of the Police Superintendent or the District Magistrate, the union board will lose its prestige. My Lord, this is an important point and many persons of light and leading want the union board independent of the District Magistrate. It was for this reason that I was advocating that men possessing educational qualifications should come into the board and if they joined the board there would be no necessity of the interference by the District Magistrate. Your Excellency will remember the opening speech of Lord Sinha delivered at the time of the introduction of this Bill, and he brought to the notice of the Council that there would not be any undue interference by the police. If there be any undue influence on the part of the police, then I do not think, my Lord, that the prosperity of the union boards can ever be hoped for. I beg respectfully to submit that although it may be argued that District Magistrates ought to have some influence over the doings of the union boards, at the same time, it must be conceded that the boards should not be unduly interfered with in their work by the District Magistrate. If there be interference, there is no necessity for self-government.

*Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler.The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, I am sorry the amendment as moved was not acceptable to the Hon'ble Member in charge. I am at present not concerned with the progress but the success of the union boards. And in order to make the union boards successful, it is necessary to vest them with a certain semblance of power which will develop in them a certain sense of responsibility. A good deal of literature has been read out and opinions have been quoted—opinions expressed so far back as 1892. But since 1892 much water has flown under the Howrah Bridge and many changes have taken place. The opinions of the late Sir Henry Cotton or the Decentralization Commission about the panchayats can have no bearing on this subject, as those panchayats have no resemblance with the union boards to be formed under this Bill. There will be quite different bodies as has been stated by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler only this morning, in connection with another amendment. The members of the panchayats as also the President are themselves the nominees of the District Magistrate and it matters very little whether the chaukidars or dafadars are nominated by the one or the other. But the union boards will be vested with much more power, and they will have a larger variety of work to perform than the collection of the chaukidari tax and the distribution of the salaries of dafadars and chaukidars. The present panchayati work is very simple—to realize the tax, to send it over for payment to the chaukidars and to submit certain reports and figures when asked upon to do so by the District Officer or the Police Superintendent. But the union boards will have much larger powers and if they are not vested with the power of appointing their own servants—or these chaukidars although they may be quasi-policemen or regular policemen, they will be servants of the union boards all the same, as they will not only be paid by them but also controlled by them—then they will find considerable difficulty in carrying on their work with the aid of men whom they have no power to appoint. It has been said that the panchayats were vested with this power, but the arrangement has proved a failure. If the panchayats who were appointed by nomination and the panchayats formed under a system introduced 30 or 40 years back were a failure that is no reason why their successors, the members of the union boards who are to be elected under this Bill, should not be vested with this small power. Failure and success are not the only tests by which we should be governed in the matter of administration. It must be admitted that in the matter of industrial development of the country or in the matter of sanitary improvement the Government of India and the Local Governments have not proved so successful, but nobody suggests that these departments should be taken charge of by the Secretary of State and that the Imperial and Local Governments should not be allowed to be in charge of them. I submit that in order to develop a sense of responsibility in them these union boards should be vested with some power which is absolutely necessary in order to make them responsible bodies. Otherwise, there will be only village self-Government in name without any responsibility. I hope and trust that your Excellency's Government will accept the amendment. Of course, there must be general supervision by the authorities, but that must be from outside and must be consistent with the principle of self-government.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“May I add a word, in the hope that it will help to bring us down from the realms of fancy to those of fact. We have heard from the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem a good deal about the desirability of giving these union boards even a semblance of power. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has abjured us not to take all power from the union boards so that they will stand trembling before the circle officer or the sub-divisional officer. But what are the facts in regard to this particular matter of appointing chaukidars? At present, and under the law as we propose it, the nomination of chaukidars rests with the union board. They submit their nomination to the District Magistrate, and if the District Magistrate is satisfied that the nominee is suitable, he appoints him; it is only on the failure to nominate that the District Magistrate takes the place of the union board. Surely that allows a considerable power of appointment to the union board, and it can scarcely be said that they have no hand in the appointment of chaukidars. They have the nomination of the chaukidar in their hands. The only control that the Bill mentions is that the District Magistrate is allowed to satisfy himself that the union board nominee is a suitable nominee, and I have endeavoured to point out that it is in the light of past experience that this curious dual position which we have in Bengal has resulted, under which a modicum of control is retained. The Bill now before us, in its main aspects, is a Municipal Bill, and the more important functions of the union board will be those connected with the improvement of the villages. It so happens that this chaukidari side has been grafted on to the Bill because it was thought desirable to create one single authoritative village body in place of the old chaukidari panchayats and the local self-Government union committees. In that way the chaukidari administration has been brought in, but it is not the primary object of the Bill, and I venture to say that it will prejudice the success of local self-Government if we embroil these village bodies in this controversial matter of the control over chaukidars.

The only other point to which I would refer is in answer both to the Hon'ble Sir Teba Prasad Sarbadhikari and the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem in the criticism that they have made against my remarks, namely, that I am seeking to support the position of the present day by arguments of 20 years ago, since when the position has changed materially. In answer to that, may I read another extract from the report of the District Administration Committee which made its enquiries in 1913-14? It is not the case that Government have sat still in this matter; there have always been two schools of thought with regard to chaukidars, and in the report of the Police Commission, the village side of the chaukidar's functions was brought into prominence, following which special inquiries were conducted by Mr. Savage who was a strong advocate on that side. His main idea was to secure a better class of men for the village panchayat—men better fitted to be entrusted with more supervision over the chaukidars. I happened to take on the inquiry after him, and during the cold weather of 1905-06 I toured throughout the entire province, looking into the administration. Therefore, in a small way, I also have seen something of the true facts. As a result of Mr. Savage's inquiries more powers were given in certain villages to the panchayats over the chaukidars, and I had better read the report of the District Administration Committee as to the results. They said :—

'The Indian Police Commission of 1902-03 deplored the increasing tendency to departmentalise the rural police; and the president system, introduced by Mr. Savage two years later, was designed with the object of freeing the panchayats from police influence and of emphasising the essential character of the chaukidar as a village servant, while leaving him subject to the control of the Magistrate and the police in regard to his police duties. The success of the system depended on the willing co-operation of the panchayats and it failed because the necessary supervision was never forthcoming. For the next few years the annual reports on the working of the police in Bengal and in Eastern Bengal and Assam contain references to the injurious effects of the system on police administration, especially in the eastern districts; and many officers complained that it had merely transferred the control over the chaukidars from one authority to another less capable of exercising it, with a very distinct loss of knowledge and efficiency on the part of the police.'

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

That, Sir, is an up-to-date argument in favour of my contention that we should maintain the law as it is, and not seek at this moment to make a change the consequences of which might be serious and undesirable."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT No. 58.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for clause 22A (now clause 20) the following be substituted, namely :—

" 22A (1) The union board shall appoint such person as it considers fit to be a dafadar under this Act, and shall, when a vacancy exists, appoint a person to be a chaukidar under this Act :

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

Provided that, if the union board fails within a reasonable time to appoint a dafadar or a chaukidar, the local board shall make the appointment.

(2) The union board may dismiss any dafadar or chaukidar :

Provided that a dismissed dafadar or chaukidar shall have the right to appeal against the order of dismissal to the local board."

He said :—

"My Lord, as has been very justly remarked by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler with reference to the previous amendment, this is a very important matter, and I propose to give my reason in respect of this amendment at some length. The Indian Police Commission of 1902-03, very truly observed that the great defects in the efforts made in all the provinces of India to establish a sound system of village police have been their want of clearly defined principle and their spasmodic nature. Before, therefore, discussing the several provisions of the Bill regarding the dafadars and chaukidars, it is essentially necessary to formulate clearly the policy and principle upon which the village police system should be based. The different sections deal with matters of detail. Once the fundamental principle is decided, there will be no difficulty about the details. Much misconception and controversy will disappear if we hold steadfastly to that principle. The initial question is—what is the object of this institution? What is their real function? Whose servants are they? Are they the servants of the villagers or of the regular police? What is their position with respect to the villagers on one side and the regular police on the other?

These questions, though very important, are not of first impression. In fact, they are almost as old as the British Empire in India. I, therefore, propose to review the history of the village police system in this country, for I believe that this study will help us in all the controversies which have now clustered round the important question of village police. Originally, the village police were subject to the control of the zemindars. But in 1793, the village watchmen were (by section 13 of Regulation XXII of that year) declared subject to the orders of the newly appointed darogas and became practically the servants of the regular police. But the system did not work well, and a committee was appointed to consider the question of the reform of the village police. The very important and interesting question arose whether the village police was a municipal institution or the lowest rung of the ladder of the regular police. The principle that the village watch is a municipal institution was definitely adopted after much controversy and the result was the Chaukidari Act, 1870. This Act was based on the principle that the chaukidar was purely a village servant. The appointment, punishment and dismissal of the chaukidars were placed in the hands of the panchayats. In fact, this Act was framed in a spirit of entire trust in the village community. But although the municipal character of the rural police was recognised as a matter of theory, the attempt to develop a sound system of village police was marred by certain unsuitable provisions of the law—provisions which were not in keeping with the underlying principle of the Act. But what is more regrettable, a fair trial was not given to the system inaugurated by Bengal Act VI of 1870. It was not worked with anything like enthusiasm by the district officers. The Police Commission of 1902-03 attributed the failure of the panchayat system to this lack of interest. There was not only indifference and apathy but positive antipathy. In 1881, Mr. Munro, C.B. (then Inspector-General of Police) suggested the appointment of a commission to reconsider the whole question of village police. The recommendation of this commission, submitted in 1883, led to certain amendments of the law and finally to the passing of Bengal Act I of 1892. This Act reversed the principle underlying its predecessor that the control of the village police was to rest with the villagers. The keynote of this retrograde legislation is to be found in the words of the member in charge who remarked 'the inhabitants of a village have no claim to a municipal administration in any respect, still less have they any claim to control the police.'

The power of appointing the chaukidars, punishing them, determining their number and fixing their salary was transferred from the panchayat to the District Magistrate who invariably delegated these powers to the Superintendent of Police. This was reaction with vengeance and the result was that the chaukidar again became a servant of the police. Ten years after, the question came up again before the Police Commission who strongly condemned the tendency to departmentalize the rural police. They reaffirmed the old municipal theory that the village watchman ought to be a village servant, subordinate to the members of the village council and not to the regular police. The Commission observed :—

'The Commission desire to emphasise their conviction that the village police ought not to be separated from the village organisation and placed under the regular police. They desire to see, not a body of low-paid stipendiaries or subordinate police scattered over the country, but the utilisation of the village agency itself. The village is the unit of administration. Improved administration lies in teaching the village communities to take an active interest in their own affairs. * * * * The Commission consider it to be of vital importance to emphasise the responsibility of the village headmen, and to hold the village officer responsible rather as the subordinate of the village headman and his servant for the performance of public functions. To place the village police officer under the control of the station-house officer would be to subvert the system in its essential principle and often to place the drags of the people over the respectable classes. The village watchman would become the menial servant of the police and probably become unscrupulous in his methods. He would work apart from, and often against, the village head man. The Commission also remarked that the system introduced by Bengal Act I of 1892 was certainly not a system of village police as generally understood. It is more of the nature of a low-paid regular constabulary.'

They condemned the transfer of control over the chaukidars from the panchayats to the District Magistrate as a most serious defect of the system. These principles were accepted by the Government of India without any reservation in paragraph 9 of Resolutions No. 248-259, dated 21st March, 1905 on the Commissioners' Report. The Government of Bengal as well as the late Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam also expressed their entire concurrence with the views of the Commission. They were adopted by the other provinces also.

The recommendations of the Police Commission were not absolutely fruitless. For in 1904 Mr. Savage was placed on special duty and introduced the president system which sought to free the panchayats from police influence and emphasised the essential character of the chaukidar as a village servant. But the advance really made was more illusory than real ; for we find that although the chaukidars were required to parade before the president at stated intervals, the regular parades at the thana were not dispensed with. Even this slight advance was resented by the police. What is more regrettable is that a hue and cry was raised against this modicum of reform in more responsible quarters. For the next few years the annual reports on the working of the police in Bengal emphasised the injurious effects of the president system on police administration and we are told that the influence of police in the villages was seriously weakened. To us it comes like a startling, re-startling revelation that the influence and power of police should have ever weakened at any time after 1904. The agitation of the police and their supporters was, however, too powerful for the Government to resist. It will not serve any useful purpose to discuss the different steps that have since been taken from time to time to restore police influence in the villages and secure closer control over the work of the panchayats and the chaukidars. Suffice it to say that the hand of the clock was given a set-back and some of the functions, including the holding of parades of chaukidars, had to be transferred from the president to the thana police. Thus, the considered verdict of the Police Commission and the Government of India strongly condemning the old plea for departmentalizing the rural police was quietly brushed aside with the result that the chaukidars to-day are essentially police servants. This is a typical case illustrating our old complaint that the wise and statesman-like decisions of the Government are not infrequently rendered nugatory by people whose narrow and personal interests and love of power make them blind to the interests of the people and the State. This and this alone can explain why the police have now a voice in the appointment of chaukidars, why ordinary and pay parades of the chaukidars are held at the thana and why the dafadar has been made a police officer and placed entirely under the superintendence of the police, the verdict of the Police Commission notwithstanding. The system of dual-control is based on a vicious principle. It is an elementary and immutable truth that one cannot serve two masters. The salaries and cost of equipments of chaukidars and dafadars will be paid by the villagers by local and compulsory taxation and shall be the first charge upon the union fund. It is, therefore, only just and proper that they should be essentially and completely village servants appointed, dismissed and punished by the union board. There is something very incongruous and fantastic in the idea that the villagers shall pay the salaries but will not have the power to appoint, dismiss or punish. Very important municipal, judicial and executive powers are now proposed to be conferred upon the union board. These are duties which they cannot perform without the loyal assistance of the dafadars and chaukidars. Clause 28A (now clause 26), therefore, has had to provide that the union board shall exercise a general control over the dafadars and chaukidars. But it passes our comprehension how the union board can exercise an effectual control over the dafadar and chaukidar unless the board is invested with the powers of appointment, dismissal and punishment. The remarks of the District Magistrate of Hooghly in this connection are very pertinent. He says 'practical experience has shown that the dafadars do not very often obey the chaukidari panchayats properly, as the latter have no power of punishment'. The expression 'general control' in clause 28A (now clause 26), may mean anything or nothing. We have got the said provision in section 41 of the Chaukidari Act, giving a general control over the chaukidars to the panchayat. But it is an admitted fact that they exercise no control over them. The system of dual-control was condemned even when the activities of the panchayat were of a very limited and restricted character. The objections to departmentalizing the rural police must, therefore, be very much stronger now, in view of the enlarged powers and extended activities of the village community.

The chaukidars are essentially village servants in Madras, Bombay and the Central Provinces. It is only in Bengal that there is a keen feeling that the dafadar and chaukidar should be placed in subordination to the police. Now the system of dual-control as it obtains in Bengal is only an ill-assorted compromise between the two conflicting schools of thought.

There is a consensus of opinion both official and non-official that the system of dual-control has been given a trial for a long time and that it has failed. Why then perpetuate the old blunder? What should be the position of the village watch in their relations to the village community on the one hand and to the regular police on the other? Let us face the problem manfully, let us make up our minds once and for all on this troublesome question, let us decide this question this way or that way, let us not fight shy of this problem,

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta :

let us give our verdict either in favour of the union board or in favour of the police, let us by all means avoid legislation of an indecisive and half-hearted character. Allow me to quote the opinion of the District Magistrate of Malda, * * * 'clause 24 seems to me positively a retrograde step. Under section 35 of the Chaukidari Act, both dafadar and chaukidar are to be nominated by the panchayat and, if satisfied with such nomination, the District Magistrate may appoint them. According to the recent Chaukidari Manual, the chaukidars are almost entirely controlled by the police. The new Bill appears to continue this complete police control of the chaukidars * * *'. In order to ascertain whether the nominee for chaukidar is satisfactory, the Magistrate will naturally turn to the report of the local Sub-Inspector. Similarly, the power of dismissal and punishment rests with the District Magistrate who will naturally base his order on police reports. Yet clause 22 (I)(a) states that the 'village committee shall exercise a general control over dafadars and chaukidars of the village'. How they will be able to exercise any control is hardly apparent. The proposal is to have a double control, but it is certain if these provisions become law, there will be only one control, and that by the police. From the police point of view it is excellent, but it is doubtful whether it will help to evolve the idea of village self-government for which the Bill is intended."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this amendment, in one aspect, is precisely the same as that which has just been moved and negatived and, on that aspect, I propose to say little. Like the last amendment it is now proposed that, in place of the right of nomination which they now possess, the union boards should be given the absolute right of appointment of dafadars and chaukidars ; and in place of the right of dismissal which, subject to the approval of the District Magistrate, they now possess, they should be given an absolute right of dismissal. In the course of my reply to the previous amendment, I pointed out my objections to such a change, and those objections hold good in this case also. I do not, therefore, repeat them. But in one respect this amendment differs substantially from its predecessor, inasmuch as the latter proposed that, apart from these changes, the residuary powers of the union boards should remain, as now, with the District Magistrate. But this amendment goes further and says that the residuary powers should vest in the local boards, while the chaukidars should have a right of appeal against dismissal not to the District Magistrate but to the local board.

The question of chaukidari administration in Bengal, as I have said, is an ancient controversy about which there have been always two opinions, namely, as to what extent the chaukidar should be regarded as a village servant, and to what extent, in the interests of efficient administration, the District Magistrate and the police should be given control over him. On these two lines, the controversy has swayed from side to side during many years ; but it has never been alleged in the course of that controversy, nor is it arguable on any historical basis, that the local board should come into the system. The local board is a municipal body which is appointed in connection with local self-government to perform certain municipal functions. It was not created for the purpose of supervision over chaukidars ; it has no knowledge of the conditions under which chaukidars work, and, to my mind, it is in all respects unfitted to exercise these functions which the amendment seeks to thrust upon it. Therefore, this amendment is even less acceptable than its predecessor."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, so far as the questions of appointment, dismissal and punishment are concerned, there has been nothing said by Sir Henry Wheeler. Of course, he has given his view of the matter in replying to the preceding amendment. I shall only draw your Excellency's attention and of the Members of the Council to the fact that throughout my speech I did not rely upon my own views in the matter. I tried to shew that from 1870 there was a lapse till 1892. Then again the Police Commission sat ; and then we come to the District Administration Committee. I have already stated the opinions of the Government of India and the Government of Bengal, and it has been universally held that full control ought to rest with the union board. Now there has been nothing said with regard to that portion of my speech. As regards this proviso that if the union board fails to appoint, the local board shall make the appointment, historically there is no precedent for it and I confess that. But the whole question is who should appoint in the first instance—whether the board or the police or the Magistrate—that is the initial question. Then the further question arises if the union board fails to make the appointment within a reasonable time, whether it is the local board, or the Superintendent of Police or the Circle Officer who should appoint. There my contention is this that in view of the provisions of the Bill and the underlying principle of this enactment, the supervision of the union board should be entrusted to the district board and not to the local board. That being a reasonable view about that side of the question as to who should supervise, it follows as a matter of course that it is the local board who should make the appointment. I have already submitted that various duties have now been given to the union boards and these are duties which the union boards cannot possibly perform without the aid of chaukidars and dafadars. The duties are not merely police duties, but also municipal duties and so on. Therefore, under the new law the power should be given to the local board to appoint when the union board fails to make the appointment within a reasonable time."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 59.

The President said :—

"Motion No. 59 is substantially the same as No. 57 which has already been decided by the Council."

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that in clause 22A (now clause 20)—

- (a) for the word "nominate" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 22A the word "appoint" be substituted, and the words "and the District Magistrate shall, if satisfied with such nomination, appoint such nominee" in lines 3, 4 and 5 of the same sub-clause be omitted ; and
- (b) for the word "nominate" in line 2 of the proviso to that sub-clause the word "appoint" be substituted, and the words "or, if the District Magistrate is not satisfied with such nomination" in lines 3 and 4 of the same proviso be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 60.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem had the following motion in his name—That the words "the District Magistrate or" in line 1 of sub-clause (2) of clause 22A (now clause 20) be omitted, and for the word "with" in line 2 of the same sub-clause the words "subject to" be substituted.

Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

He said :—

“My Lord, it is only a small change which simply gives the power of dismissal to the union board subject to the sanction of the District Magistrate and makes the chaukidar directly subordinate to the union board. But this amendment will have absolutely no force when the others have been rejected. I, therefore, ask your Excellency's permission to withdraw it.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 61.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, I do not wish to move the next amendment which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq. The motion was as follows :—

Clause 23.

If motion No. 57 be not carried, the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that the words ‘District Magistrate after consideration of the views of the’ in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 23 (now clause 21) be omitted.

No other member being willing to move the motion, it was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 62.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “District Magistrate” in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 23 (now clause 21) the words “district board” be substituted.

He said :—

“My Lord, I do not wish to make any remarks. It is just another aspect of the old question as to supervision and control by the district board over the establishment of dafadars and chaukidars.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I cannot commend the acceptance of this amendment to the Council, as it seeks to make a still more revolutionary and objectionable change. Clause 23 (now clause 21) of the Bill deals with the determination of the numbers and salaries of dafadars and chaukidars, together with the nature and cost of their equipment, and it vests the decision of these questions in the District Magistrate after consideration of the views of the union board. I have briefly indicated how these powers came to be placed in the hands of the District Magistrate after they had been exercised by the old panchayats, and it was found that that system had proved unsatisfactory. But the district board has never exercised these powers, and, as I have pointed out with reference to an analogous amendment in connection with the local board, the district board is unfitted to exercise these chaukidari powers, as it does not know anything about the conditions regulating the duties of dafadars and chaukidars, and no arguments can be adduced from history justifying the grant to it of powers over them.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing further to add.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 63.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"I do not think it is any good moving this amendment. I, therefore, ask your Excellency's permission to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The motion was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that for the words "union board" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (2) of clause 23 (now clause 21) the words "local Government" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 64.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after sub-clause (2) of clause 23 (now clause 21) the following be added, namely :—

"(3) The dafadar and chaukidar shall be the servants of, and entirely subordinate to, the union board, and shall exercise such powers and perform such duties as may be prescribed by this Act, under the direct control of the union board."

He said :—

"My Lord, the reason why I move this amendment is to be found in the following extract from paragraph 109 of the Report of the District Administration Committee :—

'In Bengal the Legislature had deliberately decided that in matters of watch and ward the chaukidars are to be subject to the orders of the panchayats, a provision which, we fear, is frequently overlooked, and we think that it is time for the position to be more clearly defined in this respect, for it is interpreted in different ways in different places.'

So, my Lord, this amendment has got the support of the recommendations of the District Administration Committee."

"My Lord, after what Sir Henry Wheeler has said in regard to previous amendments regarding the power of appointment of dafadars and chaukidars, I do not think it is necessary for me to explain at length why Government are unable to accept this amendment. It is perfectly true, as the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has said, that the District Administration Committee expressed or endorsed the view that in matters of watch and ward the chaukidars should be subject to the orders of panchayats, but this amendment goes very much further than that. It says that dafadars and chaukidars shall be the servants of, and entirely subordinate to, the union board, and shall exercise such powers and perform such duties as may be prescribed by this Act, under the direct control of the union board. The effect of this amendment would be to withdraw the dafadars and chaukidars entirely from the control of the district authorities. I would remind the Council that we have in this Presidency outside Calcutta a regular police force of only 20,000 men to a population of 45 millions. The proportion of police to population is very much less than in other provinces, and this may be one of the reasons for the fact that in other provinces the village police are village servants and have little to do with the regular police. In Bengal we can only carry on with our small police force by linking the village police closely to the regular police. If the control of the executive authorities in the district over the rural police were removed it would be necessary to add very largely to end of clause 23 (now clause 21), the proviso which I have suggested may be added. Under clause 38 (now clause 37) it is discretionary, but here an additional charge is going to be imposed and it is natural that Government should contribute a definite sum and we should not depend upon the discretionary power of Government, but that they should undertake to pay a certain proportion. In that view I have suggested this proviso, and I hope it will be accepted."

"My Lord, at present, as is known to the Council, the cost of chaukidars and their equipment is borne by the chaukidari panchayets, and in future it will continue to be so borne by the union boards, under the scheme of the Bill. The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq had an amendment—No. 63—which would have thrown the whole of this cost upon the local Government, but the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has just told us that he was not prepared to support such a proposal. The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, however, is bolder, and he is willing to put forward that proposal to the extent of one-half, which, he says, the local Government should pay. It is not a new idea that Government should thus intervene. May I, therefore, read one or two objections that have been taken to it? We will go back to the District Administration Committee which made the following remarks :—

'Some witnesses have advocated the payment of the chaukidars from provincial revenues, the proceeds of the present chaukidari tax being diverted to purely village purposes, such as sanitation and the improvement of communications and water-supply. The proposal is an attractive one, but, in the present state of provincial finances it is unlikely that it would be seriously entertained. The cost of the rural police force in Bengal amounts to approximately 60 lakhs of rupees annually, or nearly as much as the total of the road and public works cess combined; and it is certain that, if the tax were abolished and the responsibility for the payment of the chaukidars assumed by Government, there would be an immediate agitation for an all-round enhancement of the rates of pay, which are admittedly low everywhere and in some places inadequate. It would be unwise to abolish the only existing form of local rating, especially as it has been accepted by the people and there is no agitation for its abolition, and any attempt to replace it by any other corresponding impost for a different purpose would, it is certain, be very difficult to carry through. * * * * * The chaukidari tax has the great advantage of being assessed and collected by the people themselves without any intervention on the part of Government, while its elasticity renders it easily adaptable to self-taxation in order to meet the requirements of the village in other directions, such as the improvement of sanitation, communications and water-supply.'

So the District Administration Committee recognized certain obvious objections owing to the large sum of money involved, and even if the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri's proposal is accepted, it would run to about 30 lakhs of rupees, although that sum would at once increase, because as soon as Government took over the responsibility, they would be asked to pay the chaukidars more. But if Government were to assume this liability, they must obviously find the money somewhere. Now, what does Mr. Cotton say as to where that money is to come from if we are to accept this charge, and his remarks are of particular interest to my zamindar friends on this Council. He said in the course of a debate on the Act of 1892 on the occasion of a similar proposal—

'If this Act were introduced into all villages in Bengal, the total of the chaukidari rate to be collected would amount to a sum of not less than 60 lakhs of rupees. * * * * * This is a large sum of money which must be realized by some means, and the Government has considered how it can best be realized. Shall we continue the practice existing of collecting the rate, or shall we devise any other means? We considered what is done in other provinces. Now, what is done in the North-West Provinces? There the chaukidars are paid out of a rate which is levied on the zamindars for the purpose of paying for local objects—for communications, for dispensaries and many other purposes--and the law expressly says the village police are to be paid from it. A sum equivalent to 10 per cent. on the land revenue paid by the zamindar is the rate levied for such purposes in temporarily-settled districts, and that constitutes the source from which the

To that extent I ask permission to amend my proposal.”

AMENDMENT No. 66.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“ My Lord, this amendment is identical with the one of which the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has given notice, and I think it will be better if he moves it.”

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that for the words “ District Magistrate ”, in the two places in which they occur in clause 25 (now clause 22), the words “ union board ” be substituted.

The motion was, by leave of the President, withdrawn in favour of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta's motion.

AMENDMENT No. 67.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “ District Magistrate ”, in the two places in which they occur in clause 25, (now clause 22), the words “ union board ” be substituted.

He said :—

“ My Lord, since I gave notice of this amendment, there has been some amendment made in the Select Committee sitting for the second time. It has been added, that ‘ the District Magistrate or the union board ’ as the case may be, so that it is now in a much better form than it was originally, and, speaking for myself, I have not the least objection that the District Magistrate should have the power to punish the chaukidar or dafadar, but what we apprehend, my Lord, is this, that the District Magistrate as a matter of fact will never, and can never, do it himself. The District Magistrate will have to delegate the power necessarily to the Superintendent of Police or to the Circle Officer ; it is the thin end of the wedge. It is on that account, my Lord, that I press my amendment.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, the effect of this amendment would be to deprive the District Magistrate of all power to fine chaukidars and dafadars, while the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

Member has himself said that he has no objection to the District Magistrate exercising that power. If so, I cannot see that any views he may hold on the subject of delegation can justify the acceptance of the amendment. He says that he recognizes that the District Magistrate must have the power, but the amendment would take it away from him. The District Magistrate has exercised this power in the past, and if any control by the District Magistrate is to be maintained, it is necessary that he should retain it. I, therefore, oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I think, my Lord, I have been a little misunderstood. When I said that I had not the least objection to the District Magistrate exercising that power, I mean that he should exercise it himself. I have no objection to that, and if it is expressly provided that that power cannot be delegated to anybody else, I am prepared to withdraw my amendment. The District Magistrate will act upon the report of his subordinates, but he must not delegate the actual power of punishing to anybody else. In that case I have not the least objection. My objection is based upon that apprehension of the delegation."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"I may explain that the Hon'ble Member is really dealing with a subsequent amendment to the effect that the District Magistrate should not delegate the power of fine, and I think that his remarks would be more apposite when that amendment is moved."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"The difficulty is that if that amendment is to be moved at this stage, we do not know what is to be its fate, and in the light of our past experience, the probability is that that amendment would be lost. That is the reason why I press this amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 68.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that after the word "Magistrate" in line 7 of clause 25 (now clause 22) the words "or by the union board" be inserted, and the words "or by the union board with fine not exceeding one-quarter of a month's salary" in lines 8, 9 and 10 of the same clause be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, my amendment is on the same lines as that of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, but it is a more modest one. The Bill provides that the District Magistrate has the power of fining the chaukidar or the dafadar up to a limit of a month's salary, and the union board has been given power not exceeding a quarter of a month's salary. I want to make both these powers of the union board and that of the District Magistrate equal. My reason is that one-quarter of a month's salary of a chaukidar drawing Rs. 5 or Rs. 6 would be a very small fine for the union board to deal with, as they will have full control over the chaukidars. I think it is unfair not to trust them with this small power which will be exercised by circle officers and other subordinate officers. I think they should be treated at least on the same level with the circle officers and that the board should have the same power. I hope this amendment will be accepted."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"The Council will remember that in the Bill as first revised by the Select Committee the union board was given no power of fining the chaukidar. Amendments in the direction of conferring that authority were filed, and when we re-examined the Bill we thought we might meet that wish by giving some right of fine to the union board, but at the same time we doubted whether their powers should be co-extensive with those of the District Magistrate. In the first place it is probable that the more serious offences and breaches of public duty committed by the chaukidar will come to the knowledge of the District Magistrate and be dealt with by him. The minor delinquencies which would come before the union board would not ordinarily merit severe punishment, and, therefore, it is not unreasonable to say that whereas the District Magistrate might fine up to a month's pay, the union board should only fine up to a week's pay. In the second place, it is the union board which pays the chaukidar, and if by a judicious system of fining they left the chaukidar minus any pay at all, the burden of assessment on the union would be to that extent lightened. That is a temptation to which the union board might conceivably yield if it was very hard up. Lastly, the chaukidar is not a very highly paid officer; he only gets about Rs. 6 a month, and if that pittance is to be constantly reduced by heavy fines, his lot will not be a very happy one; therefore, I prefer to leave the clause as it is. It only imposes a slight restriction on the powers of the union board."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I have nothing to add to what I have said, and if the Hon'ble Member does not accept the amendment, I do not wish to press it."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 69.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that the following proviso be added to clause 25 (now clause 22), namely :—

"Provided that an aggrieved dafadar or chaukidar shall have a right of appeal to the District Magistrate, whose orders shall be final."

He said :—

"This is only a second reference on the question of about a quarter month's salary, and I think it will be accepted. That reference to the punishment meted out to the chaukidars by the union board ought to come before the District Magistrate on appeal. It is only a very small matter and I hope it will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, this is rather a curious result of one Member moving another Member's amendment. When the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq filed this amendment, I think it was already intended to be consequential to amendment No. 66. Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq wished the District Magistrate to have no power of fine, but would have given him the power of hearing an appeal from the chaukidar against a fine imposed by the union board. That is, as I imagine, what he meant by the amendment, but the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem's argument is that irrespective of the powers of the District Magistrate, so long as the union board can fine up to a week's pay, the chaukidar should equally have a right of appeal. That is quite arguable, and I have no objection to giving a right of appeal if the Council wish it, though I doubt whether a chaukidar will be troubled to prefer an appeal against a fine of Re. 1 or 8 annas. However, I have no objection to the amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned till the next day, Tuesday, the 8th April, 1919, at 11 A.M., at Government House, Calcutta.

*Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1919.

THE consideration of the amendments on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919, was resumed.

AMENDMENT No. 70.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that sub-clauses (ii) (a), (ii) (b), (ii) (d), (ii) (f), and (ii) (h) of clause 26 (now clause 23) be omitted.

He said :—

"These are clauses, my Lord, which give extensive powers to the village chaukidars ; these are powers which are given to police-officers by section 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and there is a large body of opinion, both official and non-official, that these powers could not be safely given to the village chaukidar. The existing law on the subject is to be found in section 39 of the Chaukidari Act in which these clauses do not occur. There is no reason, my Lord, why a departure should have been made in this direction and such extraordinary powers given to a subordinate in the position of the village chaukidar. For instance, clause (a) runs thus : 'Any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned'. There are very wide and extensive powers which are very likely to be abused by the chaukidar. These powers are in fact so large that they are not safe, even in the hands of a police-officer, but in the case of a police-officer there is no other alternative and we must invest the police-officer with these powers, but in the case of the chaukidars they are much more risky. I have consulted many experienced deputy magistrates who have had enough personal experience in the administration of the Criminal Procedure Code and the Chaukidari Act, and they are of opinion that it will be extremely dangerous to give these powers to the chaukidars and there is no reason why these powers should be given to the chaukidars. Some of those powers have been omitted because it was recognised that the chaukidars should not be expected to possess sufficient knowledge to exercise these powers. For instance, sub-clause (f) runs thus : 'Any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from His Majesty's Army or Navy or of belonging to His Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service'. . . . I do not know, my Lord, if any of the village chaukidars are expected to know what the law is on the subject, and to judge as to who a deserter is from His Majesty's Army or Navy and even as regards sub-clause (a) and sub-clause (b) is it for the chaukidar to decide and understand all these matters, and as regards the burden of proof, how is that burden to be discharged ? That is an additional reason why these people should act under the control of the union boards. As the Bill stands now the members of the union board, have not, nor has the president himself, been given these powers. It seems to me rather unreasonable that the village chaukidar should be given powers which are withheld even from the president of the union board. Now referring to the opinions on the subject, I find that the Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division says : 'I am not in favour of raising the status of the village chaukidar to that of a police-officer'. There are other officials who have expressed the same opinion. For instance, the Subdivisional Officer of Noakhali says : 'Section 39 of the Chaukidari Act gives certain powers to the chaukidars and I find in this clause additional powers are being given to the chaukidars : . . . this is really giving them too much power', and so on. As regards non-official opinion, I find that the District Board of the 24-Parganas has expressed its opinion that this clause should be omitted, as the powers conferred by them on the dafadars and chaukidars may lead to unnecessary harassment and oppression. The British Indian Association says: 'This clause should be omitted; very wide powers have been given to dafadars and chaukidars to arrest people without an order from the Magistrate. It would not at all be safe to entrust them with these powers as they might harass people unnecessarily on the alleged ground of suspicion, and the powers proposed to be given to them might lead to bribery and corruption.' The District Board of Bakarganj says: 'The Board were not prepared to give such an extensive power of arrest to the dafadars and chaukidars as are contemplated in sub-clause (a) of this clause and they accordingly suggested that sub-clause (a) of clause 26 (now clause 23) should be omitted altogether.' The Bengal Landholders' Association is of the same opinion. It says: "This clause gives very wide powers to the chaukidar who is likely to abuse his power". So, my Lord, this is rather an important matter—the question of giving such wide powers to the village chaukidar—and I move that this clause be omitted.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said: —

"My Lord, the object of this amendment is to withdraw from the village police certain powers which it is proposed to give them under this clause of the Bill. It is true, as the Hon'ble Member has pointed out, that these powers are not precisely the same as those which chaukidars at present exercise under section 39 of the Village Chaukidari Act, but I may point out that the Chaukidari Act was passed in 1871. The powers which we now propose to give to the village police are those exercised by ordinary police constables under section 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code which was passed in 1898. We may take it that the Criminal Procedure Code represents a more modern and up-to-date view of the powers which police constables ought to have than the Chaukidari Act which was passed in 1871. The powers, as I say, which we propose to give chaukidars, are those which are exerciseable by ordinary constables. We have omitted one clause, the seventh sub-clause of section 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that deals with extradition, because the Select Committee thought this might be rather a complicated matter for the village chaukidar to deal with, and moreover cases of that kind very seldom occur in a village. If the Council will allow me, I would like to go through the powers which we do propose to give the village chaukidar. In the first place, the chaukidar at present has the power under the Chaukidari Act to arrest a proclaimed offender or any person who in his presence commits any offence under schedule B, that is to say, one of the more serious offences, also any person against whom a hue and cry has been raised of his having been concerned in such an offence in the village or outside of it, and to convey such person to the police-station. Well, now we propose to give the chaukidar power to arrest any person concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom any reasonable complaint has been made or credible information received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned. The Hon'ble Member argues that a chaukidar will not know what a cognizable offence is, but in a village thefts and burglaries are the main cognizable offences, and as a matter of fact, anybody who lives in a village will tell you that the chaukidar does exercise these powers at the present moment, and he must do so if he is going to protect the villagers against the depredations of thieves and burglars. All we are doing is to say that he shall exercise these powers. Then the next point is that at present the chaukidar is required, to the best of his ability, to prevent the commission of any of these offences. We propose to give him, in the language of the Criminal Procedure Code, power to arrest any person having in his possession any implement of house-breaking or in whose possession anything may be found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property. That is simply a definition and in some respects a limitation of his existing powers to prevent the commission of offences against property. The other powers which we propose to give to the chaukidar are not exactly covered by anything in the existing Chaukidari Act, but they amount to this, that the chaukidar should be authorised to arrest any person who obstructs a police-officer in the execution of his duties, or any person who has escaped or attempts to escape from lawful custody, or any person who is reasonably suspected of being a deserter from His Majesty's Army or Navy, and any released convict who breaks the conditions of his release under section 565 of the Criminal Procedure Code. I submit, my Lord, these are all very simple powers. The Hon'ble Member enquires how the chaukidar is to know who is a deserter from the Army or Navy. The answer to that is that the description of a man who deserts from the Army or Navy is published in the Gazette, and at the local police-stations, and there can be no reason to anticipate difficulty on this score. I would suggest therefore that all these powers are powers which may reasonably be granted to the village chaukidar. The Hon'ble Member says that we are not going to grant these powers to the president of the union board and therefore it would be illegal or improper to give them to the village chaukidar. I submit, Sir, that there is nothing in the analogy between the president and the chaukidar. We do not want to make the president into an amateur policeman. Your Excellency has not got these powers. I have not got them, nor has the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, but that is no reason why the chaukidar should not have them. These powers are entrusted already to police constables who may exercise them in a village away from the control of superior authority. The village chaukidar, on the other hand, will be subject to public opinion, he will be subject to the control of the president and the members of the union board, and he is much less likely to abuse his power than an ordinary constable who may be working by himself. I suggest therefore that we do not run any undue risk in entrusting these powers to village chaukidars, and that there is no necessity to alter the clause placed before the Council by the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I wish to make one observation with regard to this amendment. Blood is said to be thicker than water, and I think self-interest and interest of self-preservation will always prevail over any other consideration. We ought to remember that the chaukidar is the tenant of a man in the village and he is more often than not the debtor of a money-lender. Whatever powers we may give to the chaukidar, we ought to remember that he may be made an instrument of their oppressive masters through the instrumentality of his landlord and the unscrupulous money-lender. That is a great danger no doubt. Mr. Kerr has said that the chaukidar would be subject to public opinion. I do not think much of public opinion in the village. Besides where there is a powerful agency like the landlord and the money-lender, I do not think the chaukidar will be very much amenable to public opinion. That is a source of danger which I feel very seriously in the matter of this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, one of the arguments advanced by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr is that although these powers are in excess of the power which are now enjoyed by the village chaukidar, yet it should be remembered that those powers were conferred in 1871, and that we are now in 1919. I do not think that that is an argument which can be appreciated because in that case 20 years after another legislation will be introduced and powers not only of police-officers under clause 54 (now clause 49), but far more extensive and larger powers might be given to the chaukidar on the ground that these powers were given to them in 1919. That is not the point, however; there is a certain limit beyond which powers cannot be granted to officers whether high or low. Regard being had to the education and position of the chaukidars in life, the question is whether these large powers can be conferred on them. What after all, is the village chaukidar? He is nothing but a menial servant of the landlord or of the mahajan as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, or he is the servant of the daroga. To invest him with the powers of arresting without an order from the Magistrate any and everybody in the village; is a power of which we are really afraid. As regards the argument of public opinion I may say that public opinion in the village is divided into two factions. The public opinion in the village means the opinion of different factions, and if he is to follow the opinion of one faction, it cannot be said that he is amenable to public opinion, so that does not mean very much. This is a legislation intended for the benefit of the villagers, and for the people of the country. From information I have collected and from the opinions expressed by non-official gentlemen and public bodies of the province, and regard being had to the opinions also expressed by responsible officials, including the Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division, I would ask for whose benefit this provision is going to be made. Those villagers for whose benefit it is intended to enact this particular provision do not want or appreciate it. On the other hand, they say it is extremely risky and hazardous. In view of that, is it safe to make a departure in this direction from the existing law? And what is the case that has been made out in support of this departure? Who wants it, and for whom is this legislation? Therefore, My Lord, this question of public opinion does not matter very much. Public opinion of the province collected in these two volumes is against this measure; does that public opinion count for very much in this Council? After all the chaukidar is an uneducated man; what does he care for public opinion if he is quite safe, if he could satisfy his landlord, his daroga, his mahajan? My Lord, when I moved this motion, I knew that unless the Government accepted it of their own accord, there was no chance of its acceptance by the Council. It is an extremely important measure, affecting the everyday life of every man in the province, and affecting the province as a whole: it is a measure of very wide application and immense importance. Regard being had to that fact, and to the opposition of the public against this new provision, I say that no case has been made out in favour of this provision, and at least we should be on the safe side, so that I still hope that the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr will be pleased to take into consideration the views, not the views that I have expressed, but the views collected in the two volumes, both of official and non-official gentlemen.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

“ Could these sub-clauses be put separately? Some of us have difficulty in regard to them.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

“ It would create considerable difficulty if they are separately put.”

The President said :—

“ Supposing all the clauses fall out, there is no substitute for them. I do not quite see the force of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr's argument. I have no objection in putting the amendments part by part.”

The motions to omit each sub-clause were then put separately and lost.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; Mr. Kerr.

AMENDMENT No. 71.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta also moved that for sub-clause (ii) (e) of clause 26 (now clause 23), the following be substituted, namely :—

“(ii) (e) any person who, in the view of the chaukidar, obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty or who, in the view of the chaukidar, has escaped or attempts to escape from lawful custody.”

He said :—

“As the clause stands now, any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duties, or who attempts or assists the escape of any person from lawful custody can be arrested. As it stands it is more or less a matter of judgment by the chaukidar whether a particular man has obstructed a police-officer or has escaped or attempts to escape from lawful custody. That is a power which I think is rather too wide, and at the same time to prevent such escapes I propose that when an offence is committed by a man in the presence of a chaukidar and when the chaukidar actually sees a man obstructing a police-officer or escaping from lawful custody, then in that case only he may be given power to arrest.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

“My Lord, under this clause, as it stands in the Bill, the village chaukidar is given power to arrest any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped from lawful custody. The amendment proposes to limit these powers to cases of persons who commit any of these offences, or who attempt to commit any of these offences in view of the chaukidar. This alteration in the clause would be very inconvenient in practice, and I must say that I do not see the necessity for it. Let us see how it would work in practice. In the first place, a police-officer going to a village, would ordinarily be accompanied by one of the village chaukidars; when an obstruction takes place, his natural inclination would be to send for assistance, and he would send for the other chaukidars of the union to come and give him assistance. The chaukidars come up and the obstruction stops. Under the clause as it will stand if amended as proposed by the Hon'ble Member, the chaukidars, not having seen the obstruction, would be unable to render any assistance at all. Similarly, in the case of an escape, there would be a hue and cry raised in the village; the man would be running away across the fields, but the chaukidars who saw him would not be able to arrest him simply because they had not seen him actually escaping from lawful custody. This sort of provision would lead to endless arguments in the Courts as to whether the chaukidars had actually seen the actual obstruction or the actual escape and would make the working of the law extremely uncertain. I submit, therefore, that the amendment would be inconvenient in practice and no practical reason has been shown for its necessity.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, in some cases the chaukidar will not be able to help the police as he would otherwise be able to help if the clause stands in its present form. But at the same time the question is whether that is a power that can safely be given, taking into consideration all the circumstances. For instance, one constable may want something from a man: he may not give that, then he wants to extort the money from him and wants to bring some pressure to bear upon him, and then in order to accomplish his purpose he may send for the chaukidar and tell him that that man was obstructing him and so on.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

So that is a case in which a constable may take advantage of a provision like this. The whole question is not whether in any particular case this provision will work some good, but the question is whether taking all things and all circumstances into consideration what the line of action is which the balance of evidence suggests. As in all cases of legislation, so in this particular case there are two sides and the business of the legislature is to see wherein lies the balance of evidence and advantage. My contention is that weighing all the advantages and disadvantages, the safer course would perhaps be not to legislate like this."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 72.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, in view of the fate of some other amendments that have been moved before, I do not wish to press this amendment and with your Excellency's permission I would like to withdraw it."

The motion was as follows :—

"that sub-clause (1) (x) of clause 26 (now clause 23), be omitted."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 73.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta also moved that the word "and" at the end of sub-clause (1) (x) of clause 26 (now clause 23), be omitted, and after that sub-clause the following be inserted, namely :—

"(ca) he shall serve civil, criminal, and revenue processes and processes issued by officers of the registration department upon persons resident within the union subject to such rules as may be prescribed under section 111; and"

He said :—

"My Lord, on this question instead of giving my own views I would prefer to give the views and recommendations of the District Administration Committee recorded on page 112. It is not a new proposal as the system has been tried and tried with success. This is what the District Administration Committee said :—

"The experiment was abandoned in Rajshahi also. It was continued and is still in force in Hooghly, Dacca and Tippera, in which district special officers have been working under Mr. Gupta. The local officers are anxious that the system should be continued, and from what we have seen and heard we have no doubt that the experiment is proving a success. In their Resolution No. 2487 P. D. of the 22nd November, 1911, the Government of Bengal remarked that the system is infinitely superior to the practice of service through peons, stating as their reasons for this opinion that a certain amount of local publicity is given to the process; the president and dafadars are amenable to local public opinion; they do not need the assistance of the plaintiffs' men, and therefore, on the whole, the probabilities of fraud and suppression are considerably reduced. Mr. Gupta considers that the results so far are extremely hopeful and there is a consensus of opinion that, with the appointment of a secretary or munshi to assist the panchayat and with proper supervision and adequate postal facilities, the goal to be aimed at is the extension of the system not only to a certain class of criminal processes but also eventually to civil processes.'

Apart from the advantages which have been mentioned by the District Administration Committee in their report there is a further advantage that the service of these processes will bring something to the union board. The financial difficulty of the union board will be somewhat relieved although it will not be relieved very appreciably. Therefore, both in the interest of the public directly and also in the interests of the union board this proposal should be accepted. It requires no advocacy from me to induce Government to accept this proposal because I find from the report of the District Administration Committee which I have just placed before the Council that that was precisely the position taken up by Government in 1911. The Government remarked that the system was infinitely superior to the practice of serving processes through peons. Therefore, my Lord, I hope at all events this amendment will be accepted by Government."

"My Lord, this amendment touches upon quite a useful possibility of utilising the services of chaukidars and dafadars, and it is a possibility towards the realisation of which some experimental steps have already been taken. I mentioned yesterday the fact that in 1905 Mr. Savage was placed on special duty with a view to developing the possibilities of village self-government. The service of processes, other than those for distraint and sale and personal arrest, through chaukidars was initiated by him, and it was gradually introduced in the districts of Dacca, Tippera, Rajshahi and Hooghly as also in Balasore and Muzaffarpore which were then within Bengal—though, of course, they are now no longer in this Presidency. As regards Eastern Bengal, it was decided in 1907 to continue the experiment, and a rate of remuneration for dafadars and chaukidars was fixed. In 1907 the scheme was extended to Puri and in 1912 to Cuttack. It failed in Muzaffarpore and was abandoned in 1911, because no one was particularly enthusiastic about it and there was no adequate supervision over the work of dafadars; subsequently it was abandoned in Rajshahi also, but it was continued in Hooghly, Dacca and Tippera. In 1911 this Government expressed an opinion favourable to the system, generally on the grounds that have been referred to by the Hon'ble Member, namely, that there was less likelihood of malpractices on the part of dafadars and chaukidars, as they had local knowledge and were amenable to local influence; the probability was that they would run straighter than outside peons. At the same time, there had been failures and there were frequent complaints of unpunctuality. The financial aspects of the change, in comparison with the ordinary procedure, also required further elucidation. The question was examined by the Conference of Commissioners in 1912, and practically the system is now working in most of the areas in which there are circle officers, those being the areas in which a supervising agency exists, and it is on proper supervision that it has been found that success very largely depends.

Since we are all at one as to the possibilities of the system, it may be said why did we not provide for it in the Bill? I gather that those who framed the Bill refrained from doing so because they thought the matter was to some extent experimental, and so far as experiments were being conducted, they were in progress under executive orders. There is also another difficulty which we have to bear in mind; under the Court Fees Act the fixing of fees chargeable for the execution of processes, civil and criminal, and the remuneration of peons and of all other persons employed in the service and execution of processes are governed by rules framed by the High Court. Therefore, in anything we do we shall have to be consistent with the powers of the High Court, presumably by obtaining their preliminary consent to any change we desire to make. If the High Court do not approve of the change, then under the Court Fees Act they can effectually debar us from further action. I should mention that when I spoke of processes at present thus served, I meant revenue processes, not criminal and civil processes. Of course, in revenue processes we have a freer hand, but in civil and criminal processes we have to be guided by the High Court.

There is the further question of uncertainty as to the cost, namely, whether service of this description may not turn out to be more expensive than our present system. However, I think it is worth while making mention of this matter in the Bill, and I am willing, therefore, to accept the amendment, but I think its form could be improved. I do not much care about enumerating different kinds of processes, especially when, as I have said, we have to remember the High Court's rules in respect of civil and criminal processes, and I should prefer to put the amendment more generally in this form :—

‘ He shall serve such processes upon persons resident within the union as may be prescribed by rules under section 111,’

I think this will meet the Hon'ble Mover's object. We avoid specifically mentioning the kind of processes ; and I take it that in the matter of civil and criminal processes we shall have to get the High Court to make rules to permit of the new procedure. In the above form, I shall be glad to accept the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, the form recommended by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill is acceptable to me.”

The motion was put in the following amended form and agreed to :—

“ That the word ‘ and ’ at the end of sub-clause (1) (x) of clause 26 (now clause 23) be omitted, and that after that sub-clause the following be inserted, namely ‘ (ca) he shall serve such processes upon persons resident within the union as may be prescribed by rules under section 111 ; and ’ ”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, when we come to clause 111 (now clause 101), I shall ask your Excellency's permission to introduce a consequential amendment.”

AMENDMENT No. 74.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for sub-clause (2) of clause 26 (now clause 23) the following be substituted, namely :—

“(2) Every dafadar shall exercise all the powers conferred on a chaukidar under sub-section (1) and such other powers as may be prescribed by rules made by the district board, and shall perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by rules made by the district board.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, so far as the first sentence is concerned it is exactly the reproduction of the original clause and then the divergence begins from the second sentence ‘ and such other powers as may be prescribed by rules made by the District Board.’ My object of bringing in this portion is this : that the duties of the chaukidars have been defined, in this Bill at length, but the duties of the dafadar have not been so clearly defined. Of course under this clause every dafadar shall exercise all the powers conferred on a chaukidar under sub-clause (1), but there is after all some difference between the position of a dafadar and that of a chaukidar. I think that is the fundamental point, otherwise there is no reason why a dafadar should have been brought into existence. It is well known that although there are dafadars in existence even at present but as a matter of fact there was no legislation on the subject. They have been brought into existence under circumstances the validity of which has sometimes been questioned, but, in any case, there is no law codified on the subject as regards dafadars. But this point is very clear that it is intended that there should be some difference between the position of a chaukidar and that of a dafadar; otherwise there is no reason why a dafadar was originally introduced and why a dafadar has now been given a statutory function in this Bill. And the general proposition is, and that has been accepted by the Bill, that the dafadar holds a position over the chaukidars and therefore in actual practice there may be occasions when the powers exercised by the chaukidars may not be sufficient for the dafadars. In order to remedy that defect I have proposed that they shall exercise such other powers as may be prescribed by rules made by the district board.

Then there remains the other portion as regards the duties of the dafadars. As it stands it is this 'and shall perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by rules made by the district board.' Now, my Lord, it is rather difficult to understand why the powers have been defined by the Bill itself but not the duties. As regards the duties of the dafadars they have been delegated to the rules to be made under section 111 (now section 101). Powers are necessary to be defined in the Bill itself as the duties. My amendment does not meet that difficulty as I have not been able to suggest what the definite duties should be but I must confess that my difficulty was that I had to send notice of my amendment without sufficient time, and besides I must also confess that it is not very easy for me to sit down and prescribe the duties as it is so easy for the framers of the Bill and others whose duty it was to do that. I labour under various disadvantages which they do not, and I must confess that I was not equal to that task. I have simply proposed that the dafadar shall perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by rules made by the district board. The only difference is that the rules should be made by the district board and not made under clause 111 (now clause 101).

With those words, My Lord, I beg to commend the amendment for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"My Lord, perhaps it will assist matters if I explain briefly and in general terms what the duties and position of the dafadars are. The dafadar is a creation of the last 15 or 20 years. Before that each individual chaukidar worked individually with the police at the police-station and with the panchayats in the village. This arrangement was found unsatisfactory as it was difficult for the police and the panchayats to deal with a large number of individual chaukidars, and so the dafadar came to be evolved. The dafadar is simply a head chaukidar; he is a non-commissioned officer in charge of a squad of 10 or 12 chaukidars; his business is to act as a link between the chaukidars and the police and between the chaukidars and the panchayats. He conveys orders to the chaukidars, arranges for their duties, goes round and collects information and reports from them and passes them on to the proper authorities. That, my Lord, is a general description of the functions of a dafadar, and that being so, I think the Council will see that it would be very difficult to embody it in any legal enactment. That is the reason why we have said in this Bill that the dafadar shall have all the powers of a chaukidar and that his other duties shall be regulated by rules. So far I think the Hon'ble Member and myself agree. The only difference between us is that in the Bill it is proposed that these rules should be framed by Government, while the Hon'ble Member would like to have them framed by the district board. I explained yesterday why it was not possible to hand over the village police generally to the control of union boards and local boards, and precisely the same arguments apply to this proposal that the dafadars should be handed over to the control of district boards. I shall not repeat what I said yesterday, but there are special objections to handing over police duties to district boards. The district boards have never had anything to do with the police, either the regular police or the rural police, and it is not intended in this Bill to make a new departure in this respect. The Bill deals only with union boards, and the proposal to enlarge the functions and duties of district boards in this particular way is not one which Government could accept. District boards are not at present constructed in such a way as to make them fit bodies to exercise duties in connection with the police, and this Bill does not propose to alter their constitution in any way. For these reasons, Sir, I oppose the amendment."

"My Lord, this motion is opposed on the ground that Government are not prepared to make over dafadars to the district board. Now clause 47 (now clause 46) of this Bill lays down—'provided that the salaries and cost of equipment of dafadars and chaukidars shall be the first charge upon the union fund.' It is the union board who will pay the dafadar's salary and so on. Not only they will pay, but the salary of the dafadar will be the first charge upon the union fund. That being the position, certainly it is only fair that dafadars should be the servants of the union board. That is my first point.

Then the next point is if once they are the servants of union boards and if any rules are to be prescribed about their duties, then it is only fair that these rules should be framed by the union board, and if union boards are not at present in a position to frame rules and if they are not considered to be competent, then the next best thing is that these rules should be framed by the district board under whom the union board will act. The whole plan of this measure, if I understood it aright, is this : we shall build from the bottom. The initial stage is the foundation of the union board, next comes the local board and after that comes the district board. That being the evolution—that being the scheme of the Bill—it is only proper that rules should either be first framed by the union board and if for any reason that body is not considered competent then the rules should be framed by the district board. As they will pay it is only proper that they should dictate as to what should be their duties and what should be their powers."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 75.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that after the word "situated" in line 4 of clause 27 (now clause 24) the words "or to the president of the union board" be added.

He said :—

"A little while ago, my Lord, an attempt was made to curtail the powers of the chaukidar on the apprehension that these powers will be abused and that people may be unnecessarily oppressed. By this amendment I suggest to minimise the abuse of power and to minimise the chances of harassment. In the Bill as it is, a chaukidar after arresting a person can take him to the police-station, but the police-station may be situated at a distance of 8 or 10 or even 12 miles from the place where the man was arrested, and it will cause unnecessary harassment to the man if he is proved innocent. On the other hand, I suggest that he should be taken over to the police-station or to the house of the president of the union board, because the latter will be near at hand and in that case if the president of the union board finds that the arrested person should be taken to the thana, then he will direct the chaukidar to do so, and in that case some sort of responsibility will fall upon his shoulders, and as he is a man of responsibility and amenable to public opinion, and it is expected that he will not be a tool in the hands of a particular faction or a particular individual, high or low. Therefore in order to be on the safe side, I suggest that this amendment be accepted, because after all there is another proviso that if arrests are made at night, then the person arrested shall be taken as soon as convenient on the following morning, but where is the arrested person to be kept? If the direction is to take him to the president, he may be kept in the house of the president, as he may have sufficient accommodation for the arrested person, while the chaukidar scarcely has sufficient accommodation for himself and his family. The main object in moving this amendment is to give a chance to the person to be taken to the president of the union board so that the chaukidar may not have any unrestricted discretion in taking a person a long distance to the thana and thus causing him harassment. When the amendment for curtailing the powers of chaukidars was moved, it was stated, and there was a good deal of reason in that statement, that the chaukidar may unnecessarily cause a person to be harassed. In this country an arrest means disgrace, even if the arrested person is proved innocent afterwards. In this case if a man is arrested or taken to the thana or detained for a long period, it will cause great inconvenience to the people and it may even happen that simply to cause a loss to a person or to his interest, a man may be arrested and taken to the thana. For instance, if a person has got a civil case in a court in the headquarters of the district or subdivision, and a man under whose influence the chaukidar is interested in seeing that this man does not present himself before the court on that particular day, it may be easily arranged; that man is arrested and taken to the thana and by the time he is taken to the officer in charge and is proved innocent and released by him, his case might have been lost. The only harm that can come to the chaukidar is that the District Magistrate after he is informed of such a case will dismiss the chaukidar, but the dismissal will not mean much to him. I, therefore, submit that if this amendment is accepted, it will be a safeguard against these abuses of the chaukidars or the men whose instrument he is."

Mr. Kerr.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"I think, my Lord, the Hon'ble Member has read into this amendment a good deal of matter which it really does not contain. In the first place, he assumes that if his amendment was passed, the chaukidar would be bound to take an accused person to the president of the union board. That, as I understand the amendment, would not be the case: it would be optional with the chaukidar to take the accused either to the police-station or to the president, so that the chaukidar could use his discretion in the matter. In the second place, the Hon'ble Member seems to assume that the president would have the power to order the release of an accused person and to tell the chaukidar not to take him to the thana, but there is nothing about that in the clause either. There is nothing giving the president power to examine the merits of the arrest and to decide whether a prima facie case against the accused person had been made out; and very rightly so, because obviously if you give the president a power of that nature you at once convert him into an investigating officer. Thus, these two points which the Hon'ble Member has made much of are not provided for in the amendment at all. All that the amendment says is that the chaukidar can take the accused person to the president on his way to the thana, and I ask the Council to consider whether a provision of that kind would really be in the interests of the accused. The Hon'ble Member says the accused person may have to walk 10 or 12 miles to the thana. Well, the president's house may be situated 6 or 8 miles away from where the arrest is made and in the opposite direction to the thana, so that the chaukidar exercising his discretion under this amendment might cause the unfortunate accused person to walk 12 or 16 miles further than he would otherwise have to do. Then the president might not be found, or he might want to exercise those powers which the Hon'ble Member wants to give him but which the amendment does not give him. He might want to enquire into the case, and all that means more delay and harassment to the unfortunate accused. I submit, my Lord, that it is much better to stick to the simple provision in this clause in the interests of the accused person himself, and to say that when a chaukidar or dafadar does arrest a man he should take him forthwith to the police-station."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, before the motion is put to the vote, I desire to have some information both from the Hon'ble Mover and the Hon'ble Member who replied on behalf of Government. In the first place I must sympathise with the general observations of the Hon'ble Mover, but there are some difficulties. My hon'ble friend has said that when a person is arrested he may not be taken to the police-station because it would be convenient to the chaukidar to take him to the president of the union board. But it is just possible that he may not find it convenient to take him to the president of the panchayat. In the proviso it is added that if the arrest is made at night the person so arrested shall be taken to the thana on the following morning ; so it is quite discretionary with the chaukidar to keep the man in his house and to take him the next morning to the thana. But there is another point. What is to be done with the man in the meantime? Supposing a man is arrested at 9 o'clock at night ; the chaukidar has not sufficient accommodation to keep the accused person with him all night, nor can he afford to feed the man at night, in addition to his own family. What are the contingencies provided for here. The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr says that the president of the panchayat has no power to go into the merits of the case, but what about the arrangements to be made for 8 or 10 hours when the man is to be kept by the chaukidar, how is he to be kept and fed? Quite apart from this amendment, I think the Hon'ble Member might explain these points, for I have not been able to comprehend them."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"I do not know, Sir, whether the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is supporting the amendment or opposing it, or whether he is merely in search of light on mufassal conditions. I think he is needlessly creating difficulties in stating hypothetical cases which in practice solve themselves without difficulty. There is one fairly practical proof of this in that this clause is merely a repetition of section 40 of Act VI of 1870, which has been working all these 19 years without grave practical inconvenience. There is all the difference in the world between an amendment which would definitely encourage the chaukidar to take an accused person to the president of the union board (to which there are the objections which Mr. Kerr has enumerated), and a proviso which, after all, is merely a matter of common sense. The chaukidar is directed to take a man at once to the thana when he arrests him ; it may be, however, that the man was arrested at night and could not be taken to the thana at that time. The proviso then instructs him to take the arrested man to the thana the next morning. What the chaukidar does in practice is to make such arrangements for the detention of the man as are most convenient ; he may keep him in a zemindar's kutchery, or in a house or a hut, whatever is handiest. It is a matter of practical working to be dealt with at the discretion of the man on the spot, as it has been dealt with without trouble for the past 50 years. Therefore, Sir, I cannot appreciate the point that has been raised, for it does not affect in any way the arguments which Mr. Kerr has used, to which I may perhaps add one more. Among the recommendations made by Mr. Savage, to which I have previously alluded, one was rather in the direction of encouraging the president to interfere in the investigation of crime, but when I made my inquiries, I found that nothing but confusion and trouble and friction between the police and the panchayat had resulted from that arrangement. The amendment tends in the same direction, and I propose, therefore, to leave the clause as it is."

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

" My Lord, I admit that the amendment as framed leaves the chaukidar the option of taking the accused person to the thana or to the president of the union board. I suggested it only to avoid the difficulty which was mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr that supposing the thana is the nearer place than the house of the president or if the president is not to be found, whichever may be the convenient place, and where the case of the arrested person can be more quickly and safely disposed of. That is what I meant. As regards the powers of the president of the union board who has got to control the chaukidar, if he finds that the chaukidar has without any justification arrested a man he should see that the mere arrest by the chaukidar does not bring the man under the clutches of the law, so no special powers are necessary. If the president finds that the man has been arrested without any justification in exercise of the powers vested by the chaukidar under this Act, he may just ask the chaukidar to release the person ; that is what I meant, and what I think the amendment means, but I am sorry that this has not been accepted and as there seems to be great opposition to this, I do not think any useful purpose will be served by pressing it, so I beg permission to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 76.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that for the word "district" in line 3 of clause 28 (now clause 25) the word "union" be substituted ; and for the words "district magistrate" in line 4 of the same clause the words "union board" be substituted.

He said :—

"This is a very simple amendment, my Lord. The object is this : the Bill provides that all fines realised from chaukidars under clause 25 shall form the district reward fund and that it will be at the disposal and under the control of the District Magistrate. What I suggest is that these fines realised from chaukidars should be confined to the area and should form the union board reward fund and should be controlled by the union board. The object is that the union board may have an opportunity of granting rewards to their chaukidars whenever they are found to have done some good service, or are found doing their duty a little more devotedly. I am informed, my Lord, that these chaukidari reward funds—there is a chaukidari reward fund now in existence under the control of the District Magistrate—that this reward scheme to chaukidars is extended over the whole district, and each union may not find cases in which to reward their own good chaukidars and dafadars, and I have been also told that the chaukidars who are called upon to do patrol duty on railway lines during the visit of the Viceroy or the Governor, either in their own headquarters or on their way from one place to another, when they are brought from a distance of more than 5 miles from their homes, are paid their duty allowances from this reward fund. I speak subject to correction, but this is my information, and I do not think that this is the object with which these reward funds were started, so I suggest that the fines realised within their unions should be at the disposal of these boards, and should be paid to the chaukidars, so that money may be brought home to the union boards. I do not think there will be any objection to accepting this amendment."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I do not think the Council would be well advised, on the considerations which have been adduced, in accepting this amendment, which, after all, merely upsets an existing system which is working comparatively well.

The clause in the Bill is almost an exact reproduction of section 42 of the Act of 1870, which was inserted by the amending Act of 1892. Sir Henry Cotton, the Member in charge, then gave this explanation of it :—

'There is a section introduced under which fines imposed on chaukidars are credited to a district chaukidari reward fund, the control of which rests with the Magistrate. At present fines, when realised, are credited to the village chaukidari fund; that is to say, they pass to the panchayat. The Magistrate has no control over them, and the effect is that if the panchayat and the chaukidar work together and are friendly one with the other, no fine whatever can be inflicted on the chaukidar. It is thought desirable that the Magistrate of the district should have the power of inflicting some punishment on chaukidars other than dismissal. The fine will then be credited to a reward fund for distribution among deserving chaukidars, a provision which has always been much needed, and is calculated to improve the administration of the village police force.'

That is why the district chaukidari fund was initiated, and it has been working ever since. The petty fines levied on chaukidars are thus brought together, and in the aggregate make a fairly substantial sum from which it is possible to reward good work done by other chaukidars. If the sum was split up into a number of petty little units, as would be the case if the amendment was accepted, it would merely be frittered away without any practical benefit, apart from the objections which Sir Henry Cotton raised, and which I have just read. There is another difficulty, that if the unit is the union board one of two contingencies may result; either the union contains most admirable chaukidars, in which case there will be no fund to give rewards from: or it may have a scoundrelly set of chaukidars, and there may never be occasion to give rewards. In either case it will not be possible to administer the fund to the advantage that is now possible. I doubt if it would make for good feeling in the union, for instance, if chaukidar A is fined Re. 1 which goes as a reward for good work done, into the pocket of chaukidar B; this is only likely to engender friction. As a matter of fact, it has been found, that if the District Magistrate takes an interest in the proper administration of this fund it is useful in encouraging chaukidars to do good work, and sometimes chaukidars do very good work in effecting arrests and giving information. Of the practice to which the Hon'ble Member referred at the end of his speech, viz. of rewarding chaukidars from the fund for what really is part of their work, I have never heard. I am told by Mr. Hart that he thinks he remembers such a case some time ago ; I will have inquiry made, and if it is correct that this has been done, I will certainly have it stopped. The chaukidari reward fund is not meant for such purposes, and if it has been so applied, it must have been done under a misapprehension of the proper position."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"May I just supplement what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said by reference to the rules which govern the administration of the chaukidari reward fund. The rules say—

• Rewards should ordinarily be given for—

- (a) information leading to the prevention or detection of crime ;
- (b) the seizure or recovery of stolen property ;
- (c) the arrest of offenders or absconders ;
- (d) personal courage shown in the arrest of dacoits, thieves or other offenders ;
- (e) meritorious conduct, not included in the above clauses, which the District Magistrate, with the concurrence of the Commissioner, considers deserving of reward.

So that if the District Magistrate wanted to take money out of the reward fund for the purpose which the Hon'ble Member has mentioned, he would have to get the consent of the Commissioner, and I think it is most unlikely that that consent would be given for the reward fund to be utilised for any such purpose."

"This amendment has been opposed by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler on the ground that this goes against the practice which has been in existence for some years. I admit that this goes beyond the practice. But this Bill as it stands is an improvement on many established practices. We have got the local boards and the district boards and we are now going to have our village union boards to decentralize the work and what is more we had our Magistrates in the headquarters of the districts and sub-divisional officers elsewhere, and we are now going to have several village criminal courts. So I thought that the division of the chaukidari fund would be in conformity with all these arrangements. My amendment has also been opposed on the ground that if we limit the fund to the union it will be a very small fund and that it would have no practical good result. But as the fund will be larger now and the chaukidars and people affected will also become larger in number—that will make very little difference. I am, however, glad to learn that my information regarding the allotment of chaukidari fund to other purposes is, so far as the Government are concerned, without foundation and that even if such a practice prevails it will not be allowed to continue. But I am still of opinion that this reward fund should be limited to the union boards who should have control over this fund. It has been suggested that in a union all the chaukidars may be an admirable lot and that in that case no fund would be realized. But that contingency is not likely to arise in a union in this Presidency nor is it likely that all chaukidars would be unworthy people. If that contingency arises it is also possible that another contingency might arise, that all the chaukidars in a district would be either wholly good or wholly bad. Therefore I hope that this amendment will be accepted by the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; Maulvi Abul Kasem; The President.

AMENDMENT No. 77.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "district magistrate" at the end of clause 28 (now clause 25) the words "district board" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, in this connection I want to draw the attention of the Council at the very outset to the alteration that has been made."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem (interrupting) said :—

"My Lord, with reference to this amendment I rise to a point of order. It has been decided by this Council that the district reward fund is not to be made over to the control of the district board. It has also been decided that it should remain under the control of the District Magistrate."

The President said :—

"I do not think the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem is correct in saying that this Council has decided that the reward fund is to be under the control of the District Magistrate. What the Council has so far decided is that a certain alternative proposal to the proposal in the clause of the Bill should not be made. But that does not rule out of order other alternative proposals which the Council might like to adopt."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta (continuing) said :—

"Although the fine is imposed under clause 25 (now clause 22), that clause has undergone some alteration in the Select Committee on the second occasion. Originally the fine was intended to be imposed only by the District Magistrate. Now the union boards have been given the power of inflicting fines upon the dafadar and chaukidar. Therefore the alteration in clause 25 (now clause 22), ought to have some bearing upon clause 28 (now clause 25). The fine was originally imposed by the District Magistrate and it could be said that for some reason that fine ought to be at the disposal of the District Magistrate, but now that the power has been given to the union board also, the question arises whether in these altered conditions the fine ought to go even now in all cases to the District Magistrate. Besides, although reference has been made to the provisions of the Chaukidari Act of 1892, it appears that the original section 42 of the Act of 1870 was this. That section lays down that all fines and penalties levied under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Village Chaukidari Fund. Of course that was altered by section 42 of the Act of 1892. But, my Lord, our contention is that the Act of 1892 was a most reactionary measure and it is not too much to expect that things may be restored to their former condition, namely, that section 42 of the original Act of 1870 might be revived. Of course with this alteration, there it was suggested that it should be carried to the credit of the Village Chaukidari Fund. That amendment was moved by my predecessor and that has been lost, and in fact this is not my amendment either. That having been lost it is all the more proper that I should ask that the fine should go to the credit of the district board. I have got the support of the various representative public bodies in this connection. For instance, the District Board of Faridpur says that the proposed clause resembles the amended section, and the result will be that all fines will go out of the control of the village committee. In view of the fact that before 1892 all fines were credited to the Village Chaukidari Fund, this clause should be modified so as to bring all fines realized from the chaukidars to the Village Committee Fund. I find, my Lord, that even the premier institution of Bengal—the Indian Association—also recommends that the word 'board' should be substituted for the word 'magistrate' in clause 28 (now clause 25). The question is whether that alteration should be made. It appears to me that it is rather funny that when the chaukidar's salary is to be paid by the union board, and when that man is fined by the union board, the fine should go to a fund over which neither the union board nor the district board has any control but over which the District Magistrate alone has the authority. There is something very wrong in the very idea. If A has got a servant and if under some circumstances he is competent to fine the servant, that fine should certainly go to A and not to B. So, my Lord, this alteration should, I think, be accepted."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ;

Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter.

"My Lord, I confess I have some difficulty in following the argument of the Hon'ble Mover, which, if anything, is apposite to the previous amendment which has already been negatived. The contention of the Hon'ble Member seems to be that if we cannot go back to the Act of 1870, we should at least do something different from the change which I have already explained, was made in 1892. But from the historic account I have just given of the genesis of this fund and of the objects to which it is applied, it seems obvious that the matter is not one which concerns the district board at all; to say that the administration of the kind should be directed by the district board is merely to frustrate the whole purpose for which it was created. Mr. Kerr has referred to the kind of work for which these rewards are given. Now what has the district board to do with the arrest of offenders and absconders, and how is it to judge of the personal courage shown by the dafadars in the arrest of dacoits? The amendment is really seeking to introduce an agency which is perfectly alien to the objects of the fund, and from the remarks that have fallen from the Hon'ble Member one would almost imagine that he regards the fund as a source of personal profit to the District Magistrate. I have endeavoured to explain what is done with the money, and I put it to the Council that it is meant for purposes which are absolutely foreign to the district board."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I am surprised to hear the last observation of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. When I said that the fines go to the District Magistrate I never meant that they go to the District Magistrate personally. Of course he will have a control over it in his capacity as District Magistrate. Similarly, when I proposed that the fine should go to the District Board, it was never intended that the fine should go to the private pocket of the Chairman of the District Board. The whole question is who the official is who should have the control over it—that is the whole point. As I have submitted, as the salary is paid by the union board and it has also been conceded by the Select Committee on the second occasion that the union board will have the power to fine also, the authority who has got the power to fine should have some control over that amount. That is all that I have to submit."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 78.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that for sub-clause (1) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the following be substituted, namely :—

"(1) (a) shall take such action as is necessary to secure the due performance by the dafadars and chaukidars of the union of the duties imposed on them under this Act, and shall exercise a general control over them."

Mr. Kerr.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the Council will notice that the words which we have at present in the Bill as amended by the Select Committee are ‘ shall exercise a general control over the dafadars and chaukidars of the union.’ I desire that the words ‘ shall take such action as is necessary to secure the due performance by the dafadars and chaukidars of the union of the duties imposed on them under this Act’ should be added. The reason why I made this suggestion is this. The Council will notice from clause 26 (I) (i) [now clause 23 (I) (i)] that at the present moment the chaukidar shall give immediate information to the officer in charge of the police-station within the limits of which the union is situated and to the president of the union board of every unnatural, suspicious or sudden death which may occur, and of any offence specified in schedule II which may be committed within the union, and he shall keep the police and the president of the union board informed of all disputes which are likely to lead to a riot or serious affray. My Lord, this only leads to giving information both to the officer in charge of the police-station and to the president of the union board. The Bill does not provide as to what is to be done after that. On the other hand, there is another aspect which is important with reference to this amendment except that the chaukidar is obliged to furnish the information required of him, the chaukidar can only give orders on police matters through the union board. The Bill does not provide that the officer in charge of the police-station can give orders to the chaukidar direct. As I understand, my Lord, the scheme of the Bill is to introduce more co-operation between the union board and the officers in charge of police-stations. If that be the object, then there ought to be some person or body of persons who should have the power to improve that co-operation. The officer in charge of the police-station has not any direct power, no doubt by holding out an indirect threat of having the chaukidar dismissed or reporting against him to the District Magistrate he may exercise some authority. But I would prefer that the union board should have a more effective voice in the matter. The chaukidar is required to keep the president informed of any crime committed within his locality, but there is no direction what the president is to do when he receives such information. Therefore for the mutual co-operation which is I think the framework of this Bill, I think the amendment which I suggest will improve the Bill. I understand, my Lord, that in various places there is a growing tendency of the thana police and the president of the panchayat working together and that very good results have accrued therefrom. If that is to be aimed at then the amendment which I have suggested is desirable. I may tell the Council that my amendment bears relation to amendment No. 81 which stands in my name, namely, that after clause 28A (now clause 26) sub-clause (I) (ee), the following words be added ‘ shall co-operate with the police and the magistrate and the circle officer for the control and detection of crime.’ My Lord, the non-official Indian members desire that these union boards should have these powers. The official members pointed out in the course of the discussion that took place yesterday that at the present moment the police powers must ultimately remain in the hands of the District Magistrate, and as the District Magistrate is responsible for the peace of the district such powers should remain with the District Magistrate, but both sides agree that gradually there should be better co-operation between the functions exercised by the union board and the District Magistrate. The amendment, I suggest, will ultimately attain that object.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

“ My Lord, I will not follow the Hon'ble Member in his discussion of the question of granting police powers to the president and members of these boards, because that question arises specifically on later amendments. I may, however, say at once that the Government are prepared to accept this amendment. It will have been evident from the remarks which we made yesterday on previous amendments that the policy of Government is to steer a middle course in the matter of control over the rural police, and to give the union boards a reasonable amount of control over the rural policemen who will work in the villages and to retain at the same time the control of the District Magistrate and the district authorities who are responsible for maintaining law and order. This amendment will allow the union board to take such action as is necessary to secure the due performance by the dafadars and chaukidars of the union of their duties. It will be open to the union board either to reprove or exhort them directly, to punish them in the manner allowed by the Bill or to report them to higher authority if the matter falls outside the purview of the union board. Government regard this amendment as reasonable and as expressing what their intentions in this matter are ; and they are therefore prepared to accept it."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 79.

The following motion was held to be covered by the decision on the previous amendment and was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for sub-clause (1) (a) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the following be substituted, namely :—

"(1) (a) shall exercise control over the dafadars and chaukidars of the union under rules, if any, made by the district board."

AMENDMENT No. 80.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the word "union" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) (d) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the words "either constructed by it or made over to it for maintenance and" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, on comparing the Bill which has now been presented to us after recommitment to the Select Committee and the amendments which were submitted at the meeting of the 18th February last, it appears that some of the amendments made by the non-official members have been accepted : some have been openly acknowledged, others have been tacitly admitted, but I do not suppose it has been decided that the residue of these amendments are to be thrown into the dust-bins or that the acceptance of any one of them would cast any reflection on the Select Committee. We, the non-official members, have, in the light of our judgment, made a number of amendments simply with a view to improving the Bill and making it acceptable to the public. Whatever the result may be, we are bound to press them, not for the object of taking up the time of the members on the side of Government which is no doubt very valuable, but I think our time has also some value and we do it from a sense of duty.

This amendment has reference to clause 28A (1) (d) [now clause 26 (1) (d)] which says that every union board shall have control of all drains and other conservancy works within the union which are not under the control of any other authority. I propose to add after the word 'union' these words 'either constructed by it or made over to it for maintenance and' I do it on purpose, because the clause, as it stands, is not exhaustive or if I am permitted to say is somewhat defective also. As it stands it means that all drains and conservancy works, whether public or private, unless they are under the control of some other authority shall be under the control of the union board. This is not what is probably intended to achieve by this sub-clause because there may be drains or other conservancy works which are entirely private. I do not think the union board would be competent at all to interfere with any private drain executed by a private person for his own convenience or any conservancy work which any private person may construct. Therefore, I suggest that after the word 'union' we should add 'either constructed by it or made over to it for maintenance and.' A private drain may be made over to the union board and they may make over such drains and conservancy works. A district board may make over certain conservancy works executed by them for maintenance to the union board and they should have control over such drains and conservancy works, but we cannot give them a large power of interfering with all drains and conservancy works which, though not made over by the district board, may be the property of private individuals. Therefore we ought to limit the control of the union boards to drains and other conservancy works which are either executed by the board or which may be made over to the union board either by higher authority or by a private person. To cover these I propose that these words should be added: otherwise the clause is open to grave objection as it allows the interference on the part of the union board with private drains or private conservancy works without any formal authority from the owner. As the clause is open to grave objection, I think my amendment should be accepted."

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member appears to think that he has some grievance against the Select Committee. I should find it easier to disabuse his mind of that impression if I understood more clearly what his grievance is. On behalf of the Select Committee, I can only claim that they have done their best to discharge the task entrusted to them, in the course of which they put in many hours work. I most strongly repudiate any suggestion that they have cast a slur on any Hon'ble Member or thrown into the dust-bin amendments which have cost much time and labour. Whenever we have accepted the amendments of any Hon'ble Member, we have frankly acknowledged their suggestions, and I would ask the Hon'ble Member to believe that we have merely tried to evolve a better Bill in the light of the amendments of our Hon'ble Colleagues.

Turning now to the amendment, the clause, as it stands, defines the duties of union boards, and gives them control of all drains and other conservancy works within the union; I gather that the Hon'ble Member thinks that the provision will give them an undue right of interference with private drains. That they should have some right of interference with private drains is contemplated in the Bill; and I would instance clause 29 (b) under which they may cause private drains to be constructed, altered or removed, while under sub-clause (2) (ii) of the same clause they may cause the owner or occupier of any building to construct private drains therefor or to alter or remove private drains thereof. That they should have some powers over private drains is intended, and as the Hon'ble Member has not moved for the excision of these provisions, I take it that he is in agreement with them. But he seems to think that we have in some way vested private drains in the union board by the manner in which we have framed the clause. We have not, however, done so, as I think I can show to his satisfaction by the precedents of other Acts which this Bill has followed. Under section 115 of the Local Self-Government Act a union committee shall have control of all drains and other conservancy works within the union. That is practically similar in wording to our clause, and yet private drains have not been absorbed or vested in the union committee. Similarly, coming to section 190 of the Bengal Municipal Act, we find that all drains and private shall be subject to the inspection and control of the Commissioners. As I read the clause it is merely a declaratory one, saying that the duties of the union board are to do such and such things. The Bill goes on in other sections to define the particular nature of the control to be exercised. I do not think the ill-effects of the clause are such as are imagined by the Hon'ble Member, and I would deprecate the amendment which, if accepted, would in effect declare that the union board must not interfere with private drains at all, and would be inconsistent with those portions of clause 29 (now clause 26) to which I have referred."

*Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter ;
Sir Henry Wheeler.*

"My Lord, I am not convinced as to the weight of the argument advanced by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. It may be very desirable that the union board should have some hand in all drains and conservancy works within the union, but I think if we keep the clause as it is it would be giving very extensive powers to the union board over all drains within a union whether private or public. I believe it may be possible that the union boards will find themselves sometimes in a very hard position when people are not agreeable to give up their civic rights. I do not know whether by enacting this provision we can give them any legal right to interfere with private property whether it be in drains or other conservancy works. So we ought to confine this clause to works which are public property or which may have been made over to the union board by the owners of such works. We may give a very wide scope to this Bill, but that will not take away the rights of private individuals. I do not think we could effectively put into motion the provision which we have here. If we are to make it effective we ought to say that the works which are to be controlled by the union boards should be such as may have been vested in them by the operation of the law, or by being made over to them either by a public body or by a private individual. We cannot give them a large order to interfere with any and every work within the union."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 81.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that the word "and" at the end of sub-clause (1) (ee) of clause 28A (now clause 26) be omitted ; and after the same sub-clause the following be inserted, namely :—

(eee) shall co-operate with the police and the magistrates and the circle officer for the control and detection of crime."

He said :—

"My Lord, this amendment is more or less consequential on the amendment No. 78 which has been accepted by the Council, and I, therefore, simply move it without any speech."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, while I quite appreciate the importance of the object which the Hon'ble Member seeks to achieve by this amendment, I would deprecate its inclusion in the Bill simply for the reason that in all Bills, and particularly in matters having connection with the magistracy and the police, it is desirable that the functions to be specified should be definite and explicit. In the other matters included in clause 28A (now clause 26) as comprising the duties of a union board, it will be seen that each covers a definite act which the union board should do—they should control chaukidars, they should provide sanitation, they should make arrangements for conservancy, they should execute works for the preservation of public health, they should supply information, and so on. But when we come to the Hon'ble Member's amendment, we come to something which is purely hortatory—that they shall co-operate with the police and the magistrate. It is almost like saying that they shall be good and loyal citizens. Of course it is an admirable function to be a good and loyal citizen, but its mention in this form in an Act seems to me rather to depart from the customary features of legal enactments, and it is inconsistent with our usual legislative practice to put an exhortation of this kind in a Bill.”

*Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ;

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

“If the amendment to clause 28A (now clause 26) be accepted, it is not necessary for me to have this clause, but at the same time I do think that these exhortations are unknown to Indian Legislature, but as my purpose is served by the amendment already accepted, I do not want to press it.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 82.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that after sub-clause (1) (ee) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the following be inserted, namely :—

“(eee) shall arrange for the vaccination of persons resident within its jurisdiction for small-pox and chicken-pox.”

He said :—

“My Lord, my amendment is a very simple one. I simply want that vaccination should also be considered as one of the duties of union boards. The reason is that in the mufassil difficulties arise in connection with vaccination especially with the Muhammadans who observe special purdah system. But if it is done locally I do not think any difficulties will arise. Therefore instead of including it in the general term ‘public health’, I want it to be specifically mentioned in the proposed clause.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, there are two reasons why Government are unable to accept this amendment. In the first place vaccination is not compulsory in rural areas. The Bengal Vaccination Act has been extended to all municipalities, to the Asansol Mining Settlement, to Kalimpong and Siliguri in Darjeeling, but it has not been extended to villages elsewhere in the Presidency. The union board will therefore be unable to enforce vaccination; without an extension of the Vaccination Act they would not be in a position to arrange for the vaccination of their neighbour's children, and the provision which the amendment seeks to introduce would be null and void. The Hon'ble Member may say he is not particular as to the wording, but merely wishes to establish the principle that members of the union boards should assist in vaccination. Here, however, we are dealing with positive duties and statutory obligations. The second objection to the proposal is that it provides that people should be vaccinated for chicken-pox. I fear my hon'ble friend has not a very expert knowledge of the etiology of disease or he would have been aware that vaccination is not a preventive against chicken-pox. It would add a new terror to the life of parents with large families if they had to vaccinate their children for chicken-pox, as well as for small-pox, and I should be very sorry to see any provision made in the Bill which might be said to disclose a somewhat scanty acquaintance with medical lore. The proposal rather reminds me of a story I have heard of a question put in another Legislative Council in India. The question is said to have run—'Are Government aware of the number of deaths from lightning in certain parts of the province, if so, what action do they propose to take?' On behalf of Government I must oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I heartily support the motion of my hon'ble friend deleting of course the reference to chicken-pox. I have heard Mr. O'Malley's reply and I am aware that there is no compulsory vaccination in the mafussal. But at the same time it must be admitted that our countrymen are anxious to have all the facilities for vaccination. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley will admit that it is a municipal measure and my hon'ble friend's proposal is only concerned with the municipal convenience of the public. The union boards will be established in areas in which there are no municipalities and although there is no compulsion, I think facilities ought to be provided for those who want to get themselves vaccinated in the areas. The boards ought to provide lymphs and ought to supply them to the local doctors so that people may get themselves vaccinated without any difficulty. I am told that at present no facilities in the mafussal are provided for vaccination. Surely Government cannot stand aside and see people dying there by hundreds and thousands in times of small-pox epidemic. What is the harm in inserting this provision here especially when the cost will be borne by the people themselves? Why should there be opposition on the part of the Government? Surely a thousand or two thousand lymphs in times of epidemic will go a long way in checking the spread of the disease. I yet hope that this amendment will be accepted and Government will reconsider their decision especially when the acceptance of this proposal will not harm anybody and will not diminish the prestige of the local authorities as it is not a question of political power but of municipal convenience."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I wish to speak a few words in connection with this amendment. It is well known that within the mafussal municipalities there are depôts in charge of the Civil Surgeon to provide facilities for vaccination and experience has shown that in times of epidemic, there is always a rush to the depôt for vaccination. It is not right, therefore, that these union boards to whom we are going to give so large powers in other respects, should not also provide facilities for vaccination? It may be arranged that there should be a supply of lymph in the village and the union boards may have power to arrange for its distribution. This, my Lord, is a simple matter and if the arrangement is left to the union board, it will be better for the people of the country."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I included the chicken-pox. It betrays my ignorance no doubt, but I am not ashamed of it as I am not a doctor. However, that may be, I think that facilities should be provided for the protection of the people against small-pox and I suggest that arrangements should be left in the hands of the union boards. I am not convinced by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's arguments in opposing it, and in view of what has been observed by two other Hon'ble Members I still hope that my amendment will be accepted."

Mr. O'Malley; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, as some reference has been made to the arrangement for vaccination in mufassal areas, I may point out that there is a staff of vaccinators who are sent out to vaccinate the children of those who are willing to undergo the operation. A circular has recently issued by which the duties of the Civil Surgeon in regard to vaccination will be placed in the hands of district health officers, who will be servants of district boards. The objection to this amendment is that it will place a statutory duty on the union boards when they have no arrangements for appointing vaccinators. I have no doubt that the assistance and co-operation of the members of union boards will in practice be called into requisition but under present conditions it would not be fair to place this statutory duty on them.

The motion was amended by the omission of the words "and chicken-pox" and a division was then taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT No. 83.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, the next amendment which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, will, I find, be difficult to carry out in practice. I therefore beg permission to withdraw it.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

*Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter;
Sir Henry Wheeler.*

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that after the proposed sub-clause (1) (ee) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the following be inserted, namely :—

“(eee) shall compile and maintain a register of marriages and divorces within the union, and such other registers or public records as the local Government may direct, in accordance with rules under section 111.”

AMENDMENT No. 84.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“My Lord, I have reconsidered the matter, and do not wish to press this amendment. I ask permission to withdraw it.”

The amendment was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that after the proposed sub-clause (1) (eee) of clause 28A (now clause 26) the following be inserted, namely :—

“(eeee) shall take emergency measures and shall provide for medical aid to victims in case any disease breaks out in the form of an epidemic within its jurisdiction.”

AMENDMENT No. 85.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that the word “and” at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 28A (now clause 26) be omitted; and after the same sub-clause the following be inserted, namely :—

“(3*a*) shall cause such processes as may be received for service from any court to be duly served by a dafadar or chaukidar and returned to the court, and.”

He said :—

“My Lord, the principle of this amendment has already been accepted, but I would only ask Government to consider whether it is not desirable to have this clause or a similar provision in clause 28A (now clause 26) as well. The principle of it was accepted, when the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved his amendment No. 73. The only point to be considered now is whether it ought to find a place in clause 28A (now clause 26) as well.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, we have already accepted the principle of the service of processes through chaukidars and dafadars, as the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter has remarked, and I do not think there is any harm in inserting a provision of this kind, though, here again, its form might be improved upon. I do not like the words “received for service from any court”; there may be revenue services, not issued by any court. Similarly, as regards the words “returned to the court.” I think it will meet the case if we put the amendment in this form “that the word ‘and’ at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 28A (now clause 26) be omitted and after the same sub-clause the following be inserted, namely: Shall cause such processes as may be received by the union board for service to be duly served by a dafadar or chaukidar in accordance with rules under section 111; and”

The amendment was then put in the modified form and agreed to.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 86.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after the words "district board" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 29 (now clause 27) the words "or local board" be inserted.

He said :—

"I think this is a most non-controversial proposition. Clause 29 (now clause 27) refers to the powers of the union board as to sanitation, conservancy and drainage and the clause lays down that there are certain steps that can be taken by the union board on their own initiative, and then it lays down, that if the district board order them to do so, that order will be binding upon them, because in that case the union board shall do it. I only want to add that like the district board, it will be competent to the local board also to pass an order like that. That is all that is recommended in this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this amendment deals with a provision which was inserted by the Select Committee on its first examination of the Bill. The clause lays down certain sanitary powers and duties of the union board, and it was suggested to the Select Committee that the union board might be lax in the exercise of these powers, and therefore that it would be useful to authorise the district board, in the case of neglect of duty, to step in and to order the union board to do so and so. On the merits there is much to be said for the idea, and we put it in the Bill as a matter which was worth consideration, though we apprehended that, possibly, objection would be taken to it, as giving rather wide powers to district boards of bringing the union boards into line. Far from objection having been taken to it, however, the only proposal on the point is for the extension of this mandate to the local board. That is carrying the principle which we accepted a little further than we contemplated—carrying it to a body which is not of the standing of the district board, and, which is rather more important, it is carrying it down to a body which has not got the funds of the district board. That is a point which is well worth the consideration of the Council. The local board is the agent of the district board, its resources are restricted, and it will not ordinarily be in a position to make an independent grant to the union board. Therefore its position is materially different from that of the district board, which, if it decides that the union board shall be directed to do so and so, will be bound to consider how they are going to do it, and probably come to their financial aid. The same consideration will not apply to the local board, and there is, therefore, a difference in conferring this power on that body. However, as I say, the principle is one which we accepted, in Select Committee, and I should be prepared to leave it to the Council whether they would like the principle to be extended to the local board also."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I must oppose this motion. The union board is only newly come into existence. Over its head will be the district magistrate, the sub-divisional officer, the circle officer, and again the district board will sit upon it, and if you allow the local board also to sit upon it, there will be no life left in it. I think it is better to let the union board have a little independence of its own. It should not always act as the hookum bardar of so many people. Therefore, I insist that the local boards may not be allowed to sit upon it. If the union board is also to carry out the mandates of all these persons and bodies, there will hardly be any life left in it to carry them all out."

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, as I was listening to the arguments of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I was almost feeling half inclined to withdraw my motion, because although I am not in full agreement with all his arguments, still I feel that in view of the present financial position of the local boards, they may only be in a position to give orders without being able to finance them. I feel there is a good deal of force in that. My first feeling was to withdraw my motion, and that feeling has been strengthened by the attitude of my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, but at the same time, I must draw the attention of the Rai Bahadur to clause 55A (now clause 50) of the Act which lays down that, subject to the control of the district board, a local board shall superintend the administration of the union board, etc., etc. My motion is, therefore, in accordance with the provisions of this Bill. It is the local board which is primarily responsible for superintending and controlling the administration of the union board. This function has been especially entrusted to the local board. There are, of course, the district magistrate, the circle officer and so on. They may be too much for the union board, but at the very outset it is the local board whose orders they will be bound to carry out in all matters, so that even if this particular amendment is rejected the fact remains that the authority of the local board will always be binding upon the union board. However, I appreciate the argument of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler when he says that as the local boards have not got any funds, it is no use giving them that power. I therefore ask permission to withdraw my motion.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

[At this stage the Council adjourned for lunch.]

AFTER LUNCH.

AMENDMENT No. 87.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that before the word “ any ” in line 1 of sub-clause (I)(d)(ii) of clause 29 (now clause 27) the words “ subject to the following proviso in regard to manure pits ” be inserted ; and after the word “ necessary ” at the end of sub-clause (I)(d) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ Provided that this provision shall not affect manure pits, but the union board may direct the owner thereof to make the manure pit sufficiently deep so as not to affect sanitation.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, I have thought it advisable to press this amendment in view of the fact that in an agricultural country like Bengal where every peasant and cultivator has to keep a manure pit for the collection of manures, there should be some provision to see that the union board does not cause it to be closed simply on the ground that it is injurious to health. Certainly the existence of a manure pit in the close vicinity of dwelling houses is injurious to health, but I am afraid it is a necessary evil—which will have to be tolerated because we can ask the whole body of villagers to keep their manures in a separate place outside the village. I think, some provision should be made to see that these manure pits are not interfered with. But the owners of these pits may be directed to make these pits sufficiently deep so as to minimise the bad effects so that they may not affect injuriously the sanitation of the village. With these words, my Lord, I beg to move this amendment.”

*Mr. O'Malley; Maulvi Abul Kasem.The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, the sub-clause to which the Hon'ble Member proposes an amendment is based on the existing provisions of the Local Self-Government Act, under which a union committee may deal with any tank, well, pool, ditch, drain or place containing, or used for the collection of, any drainage, filth, stagnant water or matter likely to be prejudicial to health by draining or cleansing it, or otherwise preventing it from being prejudicial to health. It has not been found necessary in the working of the Self-Government Act to have any saving clause as to manure pits. This is a matter which can surely be left to the good sense and discretion of the members of the union boards who know village conditions and the circumstances of their neighbours. The amendment, as it stands, is in any case open to objection, because if it was accepted, however offensive or even dangerous to health a manure pit might be, the union board could do nothing except order the owner to deepen the pit. Deepening might not remove the nuisance, while it might be actually mischievous. For instance, if the pit were close to a well and it was deepened the filth might percolate through to the well and pollute the water.

I would, therefore, deprecate the addition of an amendment making any special exception in favour of these receptacles of somewhat nauseous matter."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I thought it necessary to bring to the notice of this Council and of your Excellency's Government the necessity of having manure pits. It is no doubt that the union boards will exercise due discretion when passing orders about manure pits, but my apprehension was that sometimes some over-zealous officers of Government when they go into these unions and find these manure pits here and there may direct the board to take steps against them and the board will not be bold enough to resist these orders and instructions. In one or two cases in my district I have seen the Civil Surgeon asking the Chairman of the union committee to see that these manure pits were removed from the neighbourhood of residential houses, but at least in these cases the Civil Surgeon was made to understand the situation which was explained that in an agricultural country these pits were most essential but still he said he would like to have it done but did not insist upon it. Therefore I thought it necessary to bring forward this amendment, but if the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley is of opinion that this provision is unnecessary, I do not wish to press it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 88.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, in the absence of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, moved that the word "reasonable" before the word "period" in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 29 (now clause 27) be omitted, and at the end of the same sub-clause the following be inserted, namely :—

"Provided that the period specified in such notice shall be such as to give a reasonable opportunity to the owner or occupier, as the case may be, to carry out the requisition contained in the notice, and shall, in no case, be less than one month from the date on which the notice is actually served."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray.

He said :—

“My Lord, in the Bill itself it is only suggested that a reasonable period is to be specified therein. This amendment does not want this reasonable period to be left to the discretion of the union board itself, but it says that the period shall, in no case, be less than one month from the date on which the notice is actually served as it may cause a great hardship to the people who may be asked to carry out the instructions within a shorter period. The amendment will remove that disadvantage and hardship and I hope it will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I will be as brief in my remarks as possible in order to speed up the proceedings. This is a matter in which the Select Committee, at the second revision, tried to meet the Hon'ble Member, but apparently has not succeeded in doing so. Previously, the clause merely required a period to be specified. In consideration of the amendments, of which notice was given on the previous occasion, we added the word “reasonable.” Now the Hon'ble Member wants to add that the period of notice shall not be less than a month. We considered this point in Select Committee, and we did not think it desirable to put it as suggested, because if there was an epidemic or anything of that kind raging in a village, circumstances might arise in which it would be desirable to take immediate action. We, therefore, thought it best to leave it to the discretion of the union boards, merely stating that the period of notice should be reasonable. I may point out that an appeal lies against an order, and we may take it that if any action is unreasonable, the appellate authority will set the matter right.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, I do not press this amendment and I ask your Excellency's permission to withdraw it.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 89.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved that the word “tank” in line 2 and the word “pond” in line 3 of sub-clause (2) (iii) of clause 29 (now clause 27) be omitted.

He said :—

“My Lord, the powers with which the union board is going to be vested under clause 29 (now clause 27) are extremely wide and of far-reaching consequences. These powers are not enjoyed by the present union committees, nor even by the district boards. Of course, the municipalities are vested with these powers and there can be no doubt that they are essential to secure improvements in the matter of village sanitation. But we must not forget at the same time that the conditions in the villages are not the same as in the towns. Public opinion is a great check in municipal towns against an abuse of these powers, but the public opinion in the villages cannot be expected to be effective to the same degree. In the villages, the zamindars and the moneyed class will exert a considerable influence on the union boards. We should, therefore, see that we do not leave the bulk of the village population too much at the mercy of these boards. My Lord, I should here make it clear to the House that I am not moving this amendment for the benefit of the land-holding classes. They are too powerful in the villages to be worried by the union boards. On the other hand, my amendment, if accepted, will save the poor and helpless ryots from being harassed by vindictive zamindars for whom it would not be at all difficult to utilise the services of union boards to crush the victims of their anger. Most of the tanks and ponds in the villages are in a filthy condition. But it is beyond the powers of an average villager to re-excavate or fill up a tank. An order to do so will mean his ruin. I know that there is a provision for an appeal against such an order. But even this provision will not save him from being unduly harassed. I would, therefore, request the House to omit the words 'tanks and ponds' from the clause. If it be found necessary to fill up or re-excavate a particular tank, the union board must come forward to take up the work itself and not compel the poor owner to do so, as that, I assert again, would be absolutely impossible for an average villager to do even by selling his entire holding."

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government, I must advise the Council not to accept this amendment. It is one of the first principles of organised social life that no person may, by his acts or neglects, cause danger or offence to other members of the community. He may not treat even his own property in such a way that the safety or health of his neighbours is endangered. Clause 29 (now clause 27) of the Bill has been framed to give the representatives of the inhabitants some power to deal with cases of defiance or neglect of this fundamental principle of civilised life. It is provided under sub-clause (1) (d) that if any well, pool, ditch, tank, pit, pond or any place where drainage, filth or stagnant water is contained or collected is in such an insanitary condition as to be offensive or injurious to the health of the residents, the union board may take suitable action to render such place innocuous. Under sub-clause (2), the union board is empowered in such cases to require the owner or occupier of the land to which such insanitary place pertains to himself take the necessary action. Under sub-clause (3), the union board is empowered, in case the owner or occupier defaults, to have the work done on its own authority and to recover from the defaulter the whole or such portion of the cost as the union board may decide to be reasonable and fair.

These provisions appear to be justifiable and sound and the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray does not impugn the principles on which they are based. He apparently agrees that sub-clause (1) (d) requires no amendment, although that sub-clause expressly covers 'a tank' and 'a pond'. As he does not propose to modify sub-clause (2) except in so far as it refers to a tank or pond, it is also evident that he sees no grave injustice in requiring the owner of a dirty well, pool, ditch or pit to meet the expense necessarily incurred in making it sanitary. His only apprehension is that the interests of the owner of a tank or pond may be injuriously affected. He has, however, not attempted to show and it would be difficult to conceive how he would attempt to prove that it is reasonable to exempt the owner of a pond or tank from the same liability to keep it in a sanitary condition as is imposed on the owner of a well, pool or ditch.

My Lord, the ownership of a large tank implies a certain degree of affluence; and it seems that there is no possible justification for this amendment other than the safeguarding of the interests of the more well-to-do portion of the community. As an adequate safeguard has always been provided by the right of appeal in the Bill, the amendment is unnecessary. Its adoption would be not only a setback to the progress of the course of village sanitation, but would also be unfair to the owners of other kinds of property to whom a similar exemption is not granted."

For these reasons, my Lord, I oppose the amendment."

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur; Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I rise to oppose the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Kumar. I thoroughly agree with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Hart. It must not be presumed that in these days of advancement—advancement not only of political education but also of sanitary education—that we the non-official members, especially the Indians are backward. I am rather sorry that my hon'ble friend Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has suggested the omission of the words ‘tank’ and ‘pond’. He has overlooked, well, pool, ditch, pit, etc., which belong to poor persons. A wealthy person, may poison his neighbour or make the whole area insanitary by keeping a tank or pond. Therefore, I think, this clause ought to be maintained in the interest of the health of the community. It may be said that there are some vindictive people who might satisfy their grudge against somebody. But we should not allow this apprehension to stand in the way of our having a measure of self-government in this country. We have more than one member on the union board and we should certainly trust to the intelligence, common sense and—sense of justice of the members of the board as a whole. Further, there is an appeal provided in clauses 29 and 30 (now clauses 27 and 28). Surely, it cannot be presumed, and I know from my own experience that, however, vindictive and evil-intentioned a person may be,—he cannot have such an overwhelming influence as to carry the whole board with him. So there need be no apprehension and the Hon'ble Kumar will do well to drop the amendment in the interests of sanitation.”

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I wish to submit a few observations. I am sorry to oppose the amendment. The object of the Bill is to secure sanitation in the villages and the gentleman who goes to the villages, the first thing he will notice, is the insanitary condition of the tanks. Consequently, it is the duty of the union board to have this nuisance removed and therefore notices ought to be served either upon the occupier or the owner of these properties. It will not be hard, if the notice is served upon the zamindar. He can take measures to see that the insanitation is removed. If the insanitary condition of tanks or ponds is not improved in the villages, what is the necessity of a Bill like this? The primary object of the Bill is to secure sanitation, and therefore I am very sorry to oppose the amendment. If the amendment is carried out, then I am sure the sanitation will not be secured. The villages are full of jungles which should be removed. If a rational view of the question be taken into consideration, I believe this amendment ought not to be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing further to add to what I have said regarding this amendment. But I am very sorry that my amendment has been opposed by some of the non-official members of this Council. But my only gratification is that they belong to the towns and not to the villages. Had they known the conditions in villages they would have supported my amendment. In view of the another amendment which stands in my name, No. 90, I beg to withdraw this amendment.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray ; Mr. Hart ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur

AMENDMENT No. 90.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved that after sub-clause (2) of clause 29 (now clause 27) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ Provided that in the case of a work referred to in clause (2) (i) where the area exceeds 400 square yards, half the cost of such work shall be paid by the union board.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, my reasons for moving this amendment are the same as those in the case of the previous one. My case is that it is impossible for 99 per cent of the villagers to re-excavate or fill up a tank of a size bigger than 400 square yards in area. If it is really necessary that such a tank should be filled up or re-excavated, my prayer is that, the union board at least should come to the help of the poor owner. This provision will at least save a villager from being wantonly asked to comply with an order of the board in this respect, and in this case, because the board would have to bear a part of the expenses, it would think twice before it passes an unreasonable order. I appeal to the Government and the members of this Council to grant my prayer which, my colleagues would kindly think over it, would seem quite reasonable and fair. I beg to point out that I am leaving the board a free hand in respect of insanitary wells, pools, ditches, pits and smaller tanks. The costs of carrying out an order regarding them would not be so prohibitive as that regarding a big sized tank. My Lord, I therefore hope, that my amendment would be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

“ My Lord, I must ask the Council not to accept this amendment. In opposing the last amendment, I pointed out that provision for an appeal against an order of a union board is made in sub-clause (4) of clause 29 (now clause 27), and that it will be for the union board to determine how much of the cost of putting an objectionable tank into sanitary condition should be paid by the owner or occupier. There is no reason to apprehend that the owner of a large tank will not receive at least as much consideration from the union board or the chairman of the district board, as the owner of a small tank, pond or pool. It will be the duty of the union board to decide each case on its merits and to determine how much of the cost of the work should be paid by the owner or occupier and how much can fairly and reasonably be charged to the union fund. As they will probably be fully acquainted beforehand with all the facts and circumstances of each case, the union board will be qualified to come to a right decision. The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray proposes that in every case when a tank, pond or pool of area exceeding 400 square yards, or a quarter of a bigha, is taken up by a union board and put into sanitary condition, half the cost of the work should be borne by the union board. The effect of this amendment would be to confer a privilege on the owners of the largest tanks, that is, ordinarily on the most affluent residents and landlords, at the expense of the other rate-payers of the union. The conferment of such a privilege would be unreasonable and still more unjust.

For these reasons, My Lord, I oppose the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, my hon'ble friend Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has again appealed to the members of municipalities coming from towns. I wish, therefore, to say a few words. I am afraid if the Hon'ble Mover will kindly read and consider the wording of his amendment he will find that if this amendment is accepted, the board will be compelled to pay the cost of clearing or filling up or cleansing any pond, tank well, ditch, etc., or of improving the same from the funds of the union board irrespective of the circumstances of the party. It may be that my hon'ble friend the Kumar may be the owner of a big tank in that area, and if this amendment is accepted by the Council then he can very well claim that the cost should be defrayed by the union board. Although, I belong to the city, I have got some experience of these things because we have got a similar clause in the Calcutta Municipal Act where we have evidence to show that if the owner of a tank cannot carry out the improvement himself we advance the money from the funds of the Corporation.

*Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari ; Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray ;

After a very careful examination of clause 29(3) [now clause 27(3)] I find that the union board can call upon the owner to pay part or the whole of the cost, and therefore, I think, the contingency of accommodating the very poor people is provided here, but whereas if this amendment is accepted, then the union board will be compelled to spend every farthing of their funds for the improvement of other people's property, whatever the wealth or position of that party may be."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I should like to endorse Sir Henry Wheeler's plea for expediting the proceedings. The way we are getting on, we are not likely to finish our labours in three or four days. From one extreme of supporting amendments some of us have now come to the other extreme opposing the amendments and labouring the opposition as if the joint pressure of Sir Henry Wheeler, Mr. Kerr, Mr. Duval and Mr. O'Malley is not enough to flatten out any Gayasur of an amendment. Where it is necessary to oppose an amendment, it ought to be enough to indicate the opposition. If we are really to get through the Bill as quickly as we would like to a little more self-restraint all round would be useful."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"I have nothing to add to what I have said, my Lord."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 91.

The following motion was deemed to be withdrawn :—

If motion No. 90 be carried, the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray also to move that after the word "thereof" in line 5 of sub-clause (3) of clause 29 (now clause 27), the words "as the case may be," be inserted.

AMENDMENT No. 92.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, a similar amendment to this has already been lost, so I do not wish to press this."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after the words "district board," in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (4) of clause 29 (now clause 27), the words "or local board," be inserted.

*Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler.AMENDMENT No. 93.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that at the end of sub-clause (4) of clause 29 (now clause 27) the following be added, namely :—

“The appeal shall be filed within fifteen days from the date of service of the notice.”

He said :—

“My Lord, as no period has been fixed for appeals, I propose this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“Sir, the Hon'ble Member's amendment does refer to a defect in the Bill in that we have not stated a period within which the appeal should be filed. In a matter of this kind, fifteen days is a fair period, and I accept this amendment with the slight verbal alteration, viz., that instead of ‘the appeal’ we would have ‘such appeal.’”

The motion was then put in the modified form and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 94.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

The next amendment which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq provides also for the period of appeal, but I will not move it, but will move No. 95 which stands in my name and which also provides similarly for the period of appeal.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that the word “reasonable” before the word “period” in line 5 of sub-clause (2) of clause 30 (now clause 28) be omitted and at the end of the same sub-clause the following be inserted, namely :—

“Provided that the period specified in such notice shall be such as to give a reasonable opportunity to the owner or occupier, as the case may be, to carry out the requisition contained in the notice, and shall, in no case, be less than one month from the date on which the notice is actually served.”

AMENDMENT No. 95.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that at the end of sub-clause (4) of clause 30 (now clause 28) the following be added, namely :—

“The appeal shall be filed within fifteen days from the date of service of the notice.”

• He said :—

“My Lord, I only move this amendment. The principle underlying it is similar to No. 93 which has been accepted by Government.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“The principle underlying this is the same as that in 93. and for the same reason I accept it with the same verbal alteration, that is to say, for ‘the appeal’ I would substitute ‘such appeal’.”

Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ; Mr. Hart.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

“I would like to draw Your Excellency's attention to the fact whether in rural areas, fifteen days is enough, or whether more time ought to be granted.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“At the risk of being thought too talkative, I think this is a retrograde proposition. No fixed time should be stated here, but a reasonable time allowed. In Calcutta I find people are not quite aware as to when the time expires for hearing an appeal. I think the Hon'ble Member would do well not to press his motion.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My view is that a period of fifteen days is not unreasonable, and if it is a matter of urgency, we want the persons concerned to file their appeals quickly. Fifteen days gives them fair time to ask to have an order revised, and for my part I am prepared to accept the motion.”

The motion was then put in the modified form and agreed to.

AMENDMENT Nos. 96 & 97.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words “ten rupees” in line 9 of sub-clause (3) of clause 31 (now clause 29) the words “four rupees” be substituted.

He also moved that for the words “two rupees” in line 10 of sub-clause (3) of clause 31 (now clause 29) the words “one rupee” be substituted.

He said :—

“It is a question of daily fine under sub-clause (3) of clause 31 (now clause 29) where it is provided that there should be a daily fine in addition to the fine imposed for the non-performance of certain things. In the case of masonry buildings there should be a daily fine of Rs. 10 and Rs. 2 for non-masonry buildings. It seems that the purpose will be served if the fine is Rs. 4 in the former case and Re. 1 in the latter for daily disobedience. It is a simple matter and I hope it will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

“My Lord, I must advise the Council not to accept this amendment, or rather the two amendments 96 and 97. The penalties provided in the Bill now before the Council are exactly the same as in section 118 of the Local Self-Government Act of 1885, and no protest has ever been raised nor has any opinion been received from any person who has reported on the Bill, that the penalties provided in the Act of 1885 were excessive. The Council will also be interested in learning that no recommendation has been made to the Select Committee for any modification of this clause. The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri has not objected to the substantive fine but proposes that in the case of a masonry building, where a substantive fine up to Rs. 100 may be imposed, the limit of the continuing fine should be Rs. 4 instead of Rs. 10. The Hon'ble Member has tacitly admitted that the substantive fine provided is not excessive and I would submit that when a person who has been fined still continues to disobey the magistrate's order, a further continuing fine not exceeding one-tenth of the maximum substantive fine is not disproportionate. As regards non-masonry buildings, the substantive fine is Rs. 20 and a provision is made for a further daily fine not exceeding Rs. 4 in case the offence is still continued after the magistrate has ordered it to stop. In this case the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri desires that the fine should not exceed Re. 1, although he does not object to the substantive fine, and as the penalties are exactly the same as have been provided in the old Act of 1885, I would submit that no reason for supporting these amendments has been made out."

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"I have nothing further to add, my Lord. I leave the matter in the hands of Government. I thought it excessive and therefore, I suggested a reduction; because the same amount has been provided for in other enactments, that is no reason why it should be so in this case, especially as in this case poor mafussal persons are concerned.

The motions were then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 98.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, for reasons explained by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler in respect of amendment No. 86, reasons which I have also accepted, I should not like to press this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.
It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after the words "district board" in line 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 32 (now clause 30) the words "or local board," be inserted.

AMENDMENT No. 99.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the following be inserted after clause 37 (now clause 36), namely :—

"37A. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the president of a union board shall have powers current with those of the officer in charge of the police-station within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the union is situated, for the arrest of persons enumerated in sections 54 and 55 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and the provisions of the said Code about arrest shall apply mutatis mutandis.

"37B. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the president of a union board shall have concurrent jurisdiction with that of the officer in charge of the police-station within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the union is situated, in exercising all the powers and performing all the duties laid down in Chapter XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, respecting information and investigation of the following offences, namely :—Offences under sections 143, 147, 269, 277, 279, 283, 324, 325, 335, 341, 342, 379, 380, 411, 428, 447, 448, 453, 454, 456 and 457 of the Indian Penal Code.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

(2) All the provisions of Chapter XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, applicable to an officer in charge of a police-station, shall be applicable, mutatis mutandis, to the president of a union board :

Provided that the power conferred under section 170 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall not be exercised by the president of a union board without the concurrence, in writing, of two other members of the union board elected annually in that behalf by the members of the union board.

“37C. The president and other members of the union board shall exercise the powers conferred by sections 37A and 37B subject to the control of the district magistrate and subdivisional magistrate.

“37D. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the president of a union board shall exercise the powers contemplated by sections 64, 127 and 128 of the said Code.”

He said :—

“The proposal for investing the headman of the village with police powers is not a new one. It is an old proposal urged from time to time by many responsible administrators and statesmen. But no step has yet been taken in this behalf. The Police Commission of 1902-03 remarked :—‘The Commission are strongly convinced of the impossibility of carrying on an efficient police administration by means of official policemen only. It is absolutely essential to secure the aid of the village community. This is necessary from the purely Government point of view: It is impossible to support the expense of a force which would be adequate to obtain information regarding crime over the extensive area and among the vast population of India, without securing the co-operation and enforcing the responsibility of the village authorities. It is necessary also from the people’s point of view. Even if the expensive establishment required could be maintained, it would be vexatious and intolerable to the people. Constant interference by the police, constant espionage on village life, constant visit of officials of the lowest grade, constitute an intolerable burden and vexation to the people. It is immeasurably better to utilise and develop the village agency for reporting crime, to leave the people, as far as possible, to dispose of petty matters for themselves, and to limit interference to villages when there has been failure in the discharge of responsibility in respect of reporting, or to cases in which the matter is serious enough to demand interference.’

We read again in paragraph 44 of the said report:—‘The village community is represented “ordinarily” by its headman; and effective police administration must be based on the recognition and enforcement of the responsibility of the headman. He is the man who can really help the police, his position and influence should be strengthened; and it is to him that the police should look for co-operation in their work. * * * * * The Commission consider it to be of vital importance to emphasise the responsibility of the village headman, and to hold the village police-officer, by whatever name he may be locally known, responsible rather as the subordinate of the village headman and his servant for the performance of police functions. The village headman for police purposes ought, as far as possible, to be the man recognised as headman in respect of the revenue and general administration of the village; when that is impossible, he ought to be a man of position and influence in the village; and the district officer ought to maintain and strengthen his position and influence. It is necessary to repose a large discretion in him and firmly to acknowledge his respectability and authority in the village'. Accordingly the Police Commission made the following two most important recommendations :—

- (a) That it is of paramount importance to develop and foster the existing village agencies available for police work.
- (b) That the responsibility of the village headman for the performance of the village police duties should be recognised and enforced in every province.

But no serious and sustained efforts have been made to execute these recommendations. Some half-hearted measures of a spasmodic character have been taken from time to time to give police powers to the village headman. The president of the panchayat system introduced by Mr. Savage in 1904 was invested with powers under sections 64, 127 and 128 of the Criminal Procedure Code. He was authorised to correspond directly with the magistrate; and the chaukidars were required to parade before him. These powers might satisfy his vanity, but after all real power and responsibility cannot be substituted by such illusory make-believe. These reforms were in keeping with the latter, but not with the spirit of the recommendation of the Police Commission. We have the verdict of the District Administration Committee who rightly observed that the scheme was a step in the right direction, but that it did not go far enough towards giving the president any real power or responsibility. Even these so-called and small powers were resented by the police, and we find that even the parade of chaukidars before the president was discontinued later on. It may be said without any exaggeration that the presidents of to-day even in those districts in which the system has survived unaltered do not enjoy or exercise the shadow of any police power. The District Administration Committee recommended that the continued union panchayats which are to be the foundation of the structure of the Local Self-Government should exercise not only municipal, and judicial functions but police function to boot. That report is the basis of the Village Self-Government Bill, and it must have struck the most superficial student of the Bill that though provisions have been made for giving municipal and judicial powers of a very responsible character to the presidents they have not been invested with any police function.

There is an apprehension in certain quarters that substantial police power given to the presidents will have the effect of weakening the influence of the regular police in the villages. There are some extremists amongst the officials who would divest the village Council of all police functions. We know that various steps have been taken from time to time to enhance the influence of the official police in the villages. It is a matter of profound regret that the framers of the Bill before us should have accepted and acted upon this orthodox opinion. The present Bill is the outcome of a policy of trust in the people. It is based upon the doctrine laid down by Sir Rivers Thompson half a century before, while introducing the Chowkidari Bill, 1870, that it is the duty and policy of the Government to leave as much as possible of the business of the country to be done by the people themselves. This Bill proposes to give us powers which were formerly withheld. It is proposed to invest the president with powers of a magistrate and a munsif. These are powers of immense responsibility. How is it then that the framers of the Bill do not venture to give him the powers of a daroga. Babu Dakshina Charan Sen, a retired Deputy Magistrate has, in his illuminating and valuable note, shown, on the basis of figures taken from Police Administration Report the absolute futility of police investigation in certain classes of offences. He has shown that the police may be relieved of these duties with advantage both to the Government and to the people, and he has emphasised the importance of investing the union board with powers enjoyed by police-officers under the Criminal Procedure Code. I do not propose, nor have I the power in a Provincial Council to propose, that these powers should be given exclusively to the village president. I only propose that the president should enjoy these powers concurrently with the thana officers. I concur with Babu Dakshina Charan Sen in recommending that for the present the president be given power to take cognizance of the following offences under the Penal Code, namely, sections 143, 147, 269, 277, 279, 283, 324, 325, 335, 341, 342, 377, 380, 411, 428, 447, 448, 453, 454, 456 and 457.

My Lord, I think it is high time that these police functions should be entrusted to the president of the union boards. That was the recommendation of the District Administration Committee ; there is no reason why, while the other recommendations have been accepted, this particular recommendation should not be accepted. As regards the powers under sections 64, 127 and 128, these are powers which, as a matter of fact, were conferred already upon the presidents by the system introduced by Mr. Savage. With these observations, I move this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Can the Hon'ble Member give the reference to the paragraph in the District Administration Committee's report which endorses his proposal?"

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I shall require one or two minutes to do so."

"This amendment, my Lord, as the Hon'ble Member has observed, is an important one. The Hon'ble Member has given us as his authority, for a provision of this nature, the Police Commission's Report and the District Administration Committee's Report. I think there must be some misapprehension as regards the Police Commission's Report. What the Police Commission said was that we should utilise and develop the village agency for reporting crime and leave the people as far as possible to dispose of petty matters for themselves. These two things we have provided for in this Bill. Clause 26 (now clause 23) of the Bill gives the chaukidar power to report crime, and Part II of the Bill gives power to the union bench to dispose of petty offences. That, I think, is as far as the Police Commission ever meant to go, and as far as I know, there is nothing in the report of the District Administration Committee to indicate that they proposed to go further. What the Hon'ble Member proposes to do is to go a very long way further and to turn presidents of union boards into police-officers. He proposes to give the president power to arrest criminals or suspicious persons or persons without any ostensible means of subsistence, or persons who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves and so on, and not only this, but the president is to have the power of investigating a long list of offences including riots, grievous hurt, unlawful restraint, theft, mischief, criminal trespass and burglary. It is further proposed that in exercise of his power of sending up accused persons for trial, the president shall act only with the concurrence in writing of two other members of the union board to be elected annually for the purpose by members of the union board. I would ask the Council to consider seriously what the practical effect of these two proposals is going to be. In the first place, do we want to invest the presidents of union boards with these extensive police functions?"

We are giving them new functions and heavier responsibilities in the matter of providing for sanitation, public health and the well-being of the villages. We are giving them power to try cases as amateur magistrates and as amateur civil courts. For all this, we have a precedent in the rural parts of England and Scotland, where for many generations, country gentlemen have exercised functions of this kind in an amateur sort of way to the general satisfaction of the community among which they live. We believe that at any rate, in parts of Bengal, a similar experiment has a fair chance of success and we propose to try it here. I do not think however that anybody, except the Hon'ble Member, has ever proposed to go so far as he does in the matter of vesting the members of village committees with the powers of the regular police, and I think it would be very risky to do so at a time when we are enlarging their functions in other and as we consider more suitable directions. I, therefore, object to the proposal contained in this amendment on principle, and I object still more to it as a matter of practical working. The first thing to notice is that this clause 37B gives the president concurrent jurisdiction with the officer in charge of a police-station to investigate the offences which I have mentioned. Now it is an axiom in all police work that it is a fatal mistake to have dual-investigating authorities going into a case at the same time. If you have two men investigating a case, they will start different theories and different methods of investigation and both of them will make a thorough mess of it, not to speak of the worry which would be caused to the parties and witnesses by having to attend on two separate investigating authorities. This difficulty arises in every civilised country at present as between the local police and what we call here the Central Criminal Investigation Department. The local police start on the investigation of a case, and then a Criminal Investigation Department man comes down from headquarters and drops in with a new line of investigation and sometimes spoils the whole thing. That sort of difficulty can be obviated by careful arrangements when both the investigating authorities are under police discipline and subject to the same authority, but the Hon'ble Member proposes to give investigating powers to a non-official agency subject to no discipline or authority whatever. That is the first practical objection to the Hon'ble Member's scheme.

Now suppose the president has got over these difficulties and has managed to catch his thief and has decided to send him up for trial. Do you suppose that his troubles are over then? Under the present amendment, as it stands he has then got to go and get hold of two of his colleagues on the board, to show them all the papers of the case and to get their concurrence before he can send the accused up for trial before a magistrate. These two members would want to send for all the witnesses in the case and to see all the papers relating to it, and would thus cause a great deal of worry and trouble to all concerned, besides, the further risk of the case breaking down at that stage. Let us now make a further assumption and suppose that these difficulties also have been got over and the case is actually sent up for trial. We all know that the line frequently taken by the defence in court is to get hold of the first information and to cross-examine the investigating police-officer and anybody who had anything to do with the investigation of the case and to try to make them contradict themselves. Then the defence counsel argues that the case is false, because the police-officers could not tell a consistent story. If this amendment was carried, the defence would be able to cross-examine the president and the two members of the boards besides the police-officer who had assisted in the investigation, or who might have been carrying out a separate line of investigation of his own. There is every prospect that the case would break down, without the merits having been gone into at all. This is not an exaggerated account of the manner in which this proposal would work. The only person who would benefit would be the thief or the burglar. The chances are that he would never be sent up for trial at all, and if he was sent up, he would almost certainly be acquitted. I submit, therefore, my Lord, that the proposal would be quite unworkable in practice, and that the Council would not be well-advised to accept this amendment."

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, as regards the quotations that have been made, so far as the quotations from the Police Commission's Report are concerned, I have given the references, and have quoted the exact words. As regards the other report—I mean the report of the District Administration Committee—I find the following proposals made by them on page 110 of the report :—

‘ The functions of the union panchayats under the proposed circle scheme will include the following :—

Police Chaukidari,	Executive.
Judicial.	Local Self-Government.’

Now, my Lord, the functions of Judicial, Executive and Local Self-Government have been given to the presidents ; the only question that has been made is in the case of police courts ; that is the general principle that has been laid down. Later on it is said in this report—

‘ It is proposed that each member of the panchayat should be appointed headman under section 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code, not for the entire union but only for the particular ward which he represents. His functions will be those prescribed by the Village Chaukidari Act and by the rules in the Chaukidari Manual, except that, if a Secretary is appointed to receive and collect the tax, it will not be necessary for the panchayat to appoint one of their own number to be a collecting member.

In paragraphs 49 to 57 of their letter of the 7th August, 1911, the Eastern Bengal and Assam Board have dealt very fully with the question of the duties to be entrusted to the panchayats under the heads “ Police and Crime ” and “ Village Police,” and we agree generally with their proposals.’

Now, my Lord, what seems to me to be most remarkable is this : that although there was a Police Commission who inquired into the whole question, although they made their recommendations, although there were several resolutions on the subject issued by the Government and although the principle was recognised by the District Administration Committee, it is very remarkable that even the principle has not been accepted in the Bill. On the question of details I may be wrong—I may have asked for more powers than I should have asked and probably there may be differences in details—but the question arises—has this Bill recognised even the principle that has been laid down by the Police Commission that many police functions should be given to the president of the village ? Their recommendations are very very strong and I have already placed them before the Council. They said that it is necessary not only from the people's point of view but also from the Government's point of view. These were the recommendations made in 1902-03, which were discussed again by the District Administration Committee, who proposed that police functions should be given to them. That report is the basis of the present Bill. Was it not proper that these recommendations should have been accepted ? It has not been done. Of course we can argue on both sides—I can give my own reasons and the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr can give his. But what appears to me is this : are we not more or less bound to accept the recommendations of the Police Commission on a matter like this ? Of course there is no legal bar, but I should think that it is rather too late in the day to refute the principle laid down in the report of the Police Commission. If that principle had been recognised in the Bill there might at least have been some difference of opinion, but what cannot be explained is that here was an occasion on which the recommendations of the Police Commission should have been accepted ; although an attempt has been made to raise the status of the chaukidar to that of a police officer on the ground that these powers were given in 1870,

Sir Henry Wheeler.

but we are now in 1919. That is reason for advance with regard to chaukidars, but what about the president. Of course, if these were the recommendations and not revolutionary proposals made by any untrained man without any knowledge of the subject or by any impatient idealist, then of course I would not have pressed them, but my recommendation is based on the verdict of the Police Commission and there is no reason why that report should be brushed aside like this absolutely. I must confess that I may possibly be wrong in the details I have given, but certainly the principle should have been recognised, and I think Government should consider as to whether the recommendations of the Police Commission should be given effect to or not."

"My Lord, I take strong exception, on the evidence which the hon'ble mover has laid before the Council, to the inference that he has drawn that his extraordinary proposal has the support of the District Administration Committee. I particularly requested him to give his references, and in answer he refers to the word 'Police' in paragraph 126. Apparently he would have us believe that the mention of the word 'Police' covers his proposal, although the Committee devoted pages and pages to explaining in detail what exactly they did mean, and it is incomprehensible that if they had contemplated anything like this inquiry by an elected authority, they would not have said so in specific language. The reference, I take it, in paragraph 126 is to the supervision over the police functions of chaukidars, and it is incredible, if I may say so, that the Committee could have contemplated so great a change in procedure as the amendment suggests without justifying it by detailed reasons. I can give the Hon'ble Member another reason which would almost have rendered it obligatory that they should have justified their action if they had wished to take up a position analogous to the amendment. I have referred previously to Mr. Savage's inquiries and to certain orders that were passed about the time of his investigations which did encourage reports of offences being taken to the president of the panchayat. Because it was found that those rules, which were only meant to cover the reporting of offences, encouraged the presidents to fancy themselves investigating officers, the system was discarded; and in the light of that fact I say again that it is incredible that the District Administration Committee should have recommended the revival of that system without even a word of explanation."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 100 AND 101.

In the absence of the hon'ble mover, the following motions were deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that for clause 38 (now clause 37) the following be substituted, namely :—

- ' 38. (1) By the month of October in each year, the union board shall prepare a budget of expenses for the next financial year and submit the same to the district board by the end of the second week in November. The district board may call for any information or explanation regarding the expenditure which the union board proposes to incur and may make such modifications in the budget as they think fit :— .

Provided that in the case of any difference of opinion with regard to any item of expenditure between the union board and the district board, an appeal shall lie at the instance of either board to the District Magistrate, whose orders shall be final.

(2) The district board shall then decide, by the end of January, how much of the expenses of the union board shall be met by contributions and grants from the district fund, and shall place such sums at the disposal of the union board at least one month before the beginning of the financial year.

(3) The balance of the expenses of the union board shall be met by contributions made by the Local Government."

If motion No. 63 be carried, also to move that sub-clause (a) of clause 38 (now clause 37) be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 102.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after the words "owners or occupiers of buildings" in line 2 of clause 38 (now clause 37) the words "and on the owners of fisheries, carts, carriages, boats and steamers" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is in regard to the difficult question of the financing of the union board. We all know that it is rather difficult to finance the union boards properly in view of the ambiguous programme of work that has been placed before the union boards. Therefore all attempts made to increase the resources of the union boards should be welcomed. Now, all that I propose is this that the owners of fisheries, carts, carriages, boats and steamers be included, because we all know that the owner or occupier of a building is liable to taxation and the owner of a fishery may be in a very much better position to make the payment. I do not know the reason why he should escape the taxation. Then we also know that there are people in the villages who do business in boats and so on, and they are precisely the people who are in a position to contribute to the union fund and who should not escape the taxation. In the villages even those people who are owners or occupiers of kutcha houses or sheds are liable to taxation and therefore it is only fair and proper that these people, who are owners of fisheries, carts, carriages, etc., and derive an income from all that should also contribute towards the union fund.

Now as regards carts and carriages I would draw the attention of the Council to the recommendation of the District Administration Committee on page 100 where they say—

'We think therefore that there is no need to widen the basis of taxation, and that the possession of a house or cutcherry should continue to be the criterion for the imposition of the tax. It might, however, be made clear that a house includes a building, boat or temporary structure in which business of any kind is transacted, and not merely a dwelling house, which is the construction liable to be put upon the section as it stands.'

The section here referred to is the section of the Chaukidari Act. In this connection I can refer to section 118 (c) of the Local Self-Government Act of 1885 (Bengal Act III of 1885), where of course the words are tank, water-course and so on. I have advisedly omitted tanks and water-courses as they are not proper subjects for taxation; and so in their place I have proposed fishery because that is a source of income and that is the reason why I want to include fisheries.

With these words, my Lord, I propose that these words may be included."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, in framing the taxation proposals of the Bill, we adhered as closely as possible to the two precedents of the Chaukidari and Local Self-Government Acts. The people who are assessable under the Chaukidari Act, in accordance with section 14, are the owners or occupiers of houses in any village and any person who has within such a village a cutchery for collecting rents ; the people who are assessable under section 118-C. of the Local Self-Government Act are the owners of buildings, tanks, wells or water-courses, and the Council may remember that, at one time, tanks, wells and water-courses figured in the Bill. The first Select Committee, at the request of one Hon'ble Member, took out wells and the second Select Committee took out tanks and water-courses, after examination of the reasons for which they were put in section 118-C., which we thought were inadequate. That, therefore, left us with the owners and occupiers of buildings, who now stand in the clause, and I would deprecate the fresh departures which this amendment suggests. The scope of taxation, as it now stands, is clear. It covers the people who own or occupy buildings, and assesses them according to circumstances and property ; that is to say, it adopts a personal basis of taxation for those who are the owners or occupiers of property in the village ; but if we bring in these other suggestions advocated in the amendment, we get to rather different considerations.

With reference to fisheries, if, of course, the owner of a fishery, owns or occupies a building in the village, he will be assessable ; if he does not then he rather ranks with the absentee landlord ; and fisheries like lands—I may remind the Council—are assessable to road-cess. It has been a subject of discussion whether the absentee landlord should pay the union rate ; but we have not thought fit to render him liable to taxation, and if we do not render the absentee landlord liable, there is no particular point in rendering the absentee fishery owner liable ; whereas, if he is not an absentee, he will come in as the owner or occupier of a building.

“When we come to carts, carriages, boats and steamers, and the owners thereof, we get back to the idea underlying certain forms of municipal taxation, namely, the idea of a conveyance tax—that the users of the roads and water-channels should pay for their upkeep from which they benefit. That is a different consideration from the basis of taxation in the Bill, which, as I have said, is in accordance with the two precedents which are the foundation of these proposals. As the Hon'ble Member has referred to the opinion of the District Administration Committee, I may point out that they wanted to assess the owners and occupiers of boats, and, in the circumstances of Eastern Bengal, there is something to be said in favour of the idea on which, I believe, Sir Nicholas Beatson-Bell was personally keen. We had some talk about it in Select Committee, but we thought that there were practical difficulties in the way, and we dropped it. The scheme of the Bill is simple, and I would deprecate complicating it further.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing to add, but I wish to point out that this is at least one occasion on which in a question of local taxation by the people themselves the non-officials want to go more than the officials because the charge is always laid at our door that we the non-officials are always averse to taxation. On the merits of the amendment after what I have heard from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, of course I also cannot speak with anything like confidence, and I feel that for the reasons which have been explained by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I am not in a position to say that they are not sound. So owing to this state of uncertainty I would not press this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 103.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"This amendment has become unnecessary, therefore I request permission to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn. It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "the sum" in line 1 of sub-clause (a) of clause 38 the words "half the sum" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 105.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that the words "if any" in line 2 of sub-clause (a) of clause 38 be omitted.

He said :—

"Clause 38 of the Bill prescribes the imposition of the rate, and the work of the union board as far as I can gather from this Bill will be carried out from the proceeds of that rate, called the union rate, which will be levied on the area, and the union rate will be calculated on the basis of the cost of the salaries and equipment of chaukidars and daffadars deducting the contribution, if any, made by the local Government and the estimated cost required for carrying out other works imposed on the board under this Act. My object in moving this amendment is that the words 'if any' may be deleted, that is to say, that the Government contribution should be assured to the board. I do not ask the Council to lay down any hard-and-fast rules. These words 'if any' make it an uncertain factor, but if these words are removed, they are certain to obtain some contribution. As far as I find the payment of salaries of chaukidars and daffadars and their equipment is made a first charge upon the revenues of the union boards under clause 47 (now clause 46), and these daffadars and chaukidars have to be employed by the union boards, not for the purpose of municipal work but for the purpose of ordinary administration. Under schedule 2 it will be seen that they have to do the work of regular police in the area where they will be employed. All cases of murder, dacoity, theft, house-breaking and all possible offences shall be taken cognizance of by this police staff. Strictly speaking it is not municipal work, but work which properly belongs to the State, and State-aid should therefore be guaranteed, whatever that amount may be. My proposition is a very simple one; it does not fetter the hands of the Government to any definite sum, it would be quite at the discretion of the Government to contribute Re. 1 or Rs. 1,000. My amendment is framed with the object that the principle that contributions should be made by Government should be accepted, and it is left to the option of the Government what the amount of that contribution should be, whereas the imposition of the rate will be a statutory obligation on the part of the union. Assuming that a greater part of the rate is consumed by the payment of these chaukidars, and if no Government contribution is forthcoming, then works of other kinds in the union would suffer.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

There are various works to be taken up by the union board in connection with sanitation, drainage, etc., and offences under the Cattle Trespass Act and various other things, and therefore it will be seen that the union board will require a considerable sum of money to do their work. These unions will be established in areas where there are no municipalities, and they will have to do the work of the municipality and if the salaries of chaukidars etc., were made the first charge upon their revenues, I think it is only fair and reasonable that they should get some Government contribution, and that there should not be any ambiguity about it. I am sure Government will contribute a sufficient sum of money, and when Government are really willing to do so, I think there should be no objection to having a provision in the Bill to this effect. It will reassure the public mind, and it would look very graceful."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, the suggestions underlying these amendments are similar to those which we argued yesterday, and I do not propose to repeat the arguments at length. The clause which the Hon'ble Member would have us amend deals solely with the salaries of chaukidars and daffadars and the cost of their equipment, and it says that the union boards shall raise the necessary funds less the contribution, if any, made by Government. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur desires to leave out the words 'if any', in order to make it obligatory on Government to make a contribution to the union board which would be used towards the cost of chaukidars and daffadars. May I first explain why we put in these words 'if any'. They were inserted in view of the practice which is at present in force in one district of this province, under which, as an experimental measure, Government has contributed to the pay of daffadars. The idea of daffadars is that they should be a better class of men than the chaukidars—in fact, what Mr. Kerr has termed this morning, a sort of non-commissioned officer. The status of the daffadar is still to some extent experimental, and in order to see if we could get a better class of men by offering better pay, in one sub-division we offered to contribute a share of their pay in order to be able to give a higher pay than the panchayet could afford. In return for that contribution we asked the panchayet to let us have a much larger voice in the selection of the persons appointed. The panchayets agreed and that experiment is now in force. It is somewhat early to say whether it has proved itself a success or not, but it was largely with that experiment in mind that the original proposal of the Bill was framed which would have vested the appointment of the daffadar in the district magistrate. We dropped that proposal and are maintaining the present system, and to that extent there is the less reason for altering the present system by which the pay of the daffadars and chaukidars is ordinarily met from the village assessment. The case to which I have alluded was an exceptional case entirely. It was justified by special reasons, and it is a different proposition altogether to ask us to accept a change of wording which is going to establish the principle—a very far-reaching principle, although the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur calls it a very simple amendment—that Government is under an obligation to contribute to the pay of chaukidars. Yesterday the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri proposed a definite amendment that Government should contribute half of this cost, and I explained the reasons why we could not do so and why we could not accept so large a financial obligation. If we did, we should only have to raise the money from some other sources. The point has been considered before, and it was held that, all things considered, the assessment of the union rate was probably more acceptable to the people than anything else. The alternative of a land cess had been shown by experience to be highly unacceptable to the zamindars, while the consequences likely to ensue from such a change of principle, viz., the supercession of the village union by Government in the matter of the control of chaukidars, and the tendency to convert the chaukidar into a member of the police force, would be greatly resented in various quarters. For these reasons that amendment was eventually lost, and I maintain that the arguments apply equally to the present proposition, even though the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur says that he does not mind how much Government contributes so long as it accepts the principle that it should contribute. To that my answer would be that if we are obliged to contribute and if we contribute, say, an anna, we are reducing the Act to a farce. Obviously, if we concede the principle, we must contribute substantially, and probably, nothing short of a contribution of a half, which Babu Kisor Mohan Chaudhuri proposed, would be regarded as fair if we undertook the obligation. For these reasons I oppose the amendment."

"My Lord, I wish to say something on this matter. I must confess that I labour under the disadvantage of living in a town where there is no chaukidari system in vogue. But I feel that my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, who is also a cityman, has said something which commends itself to me and that being so and having had the advantage of hearing the discussion which took place in Council yesterday as to the reason for the provision of making the chaukidar or the dafadar not much of a servant of the union board, I feel I have got to say something on the subject. The chaukidars and dafadars are police-officers and, therefore I venture to support the proposition put forward by the Hon'ble Mover that there should be something in the Bill which would lay down the principle that the State should contribute something to the fund out of which its expenditure is to be met. In private life we see that if a person serves you, you serve him too or pay him, and it is but right that Government should contribute something towards the expenditure for keeping men who will be joint servants of the Government and the union board. As my hon'ble friend has suggested the principle may be laid down in the Bill. Of course if the Government are to contribute an anna it could be a farce. But the actual proportion of contribution may be left to the good sense of the Government. If the words 'if any' are allowed to remain in the Bill there will always be the apprehension of Government saying that under the Act it is not obligatory on them to pay anything. And I do not think it is an improper request on the part of my hon'ble friend that these words should be left out."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have tried to follow Sir Henry Wheeler, and as far as I understand him he will not accept the amendment because by doing so he would be accepting the principle of the Government contribution. I shall be content to leave it to the House to consider whether that principle has not been already accepted in the clause as it stands. The clause says that the union board shall impose yearly on the owners and occupiers of buildings a rate amounting to the sum required for their expenditure, less the contribution, if any, by Government. Now, my Lord, if it is not the intention of the Government to contribute anything why should these words be placed here to raise false hopes in the minds of the people. The very fact that these words appear in the clause shows that the Government do intend to contribute something. Hence, the principle of Government contribution is accepted. The union boards are enjoined to do various municipal works by various clauses, chiefly by clauses 28, 28A, 29 and 30 (now clauses 25, et seq.). They are required to maintain roads, see to the water-supply, improve the drainage and conservancy, and generally to do all works calculated to promote the health, convenience and safety of the public. The expenditure is to be met from the union fund. But if the salaries of chaukidars and dafadars are to be made the first charge on their income, and after meeting that charge the balance available is not sufficient to meet the charges for municipal work what are the union boards to do? How are they to carry on their municipal work? You may say that they may increase their rate. But so far as I remember the District Administration Committee themselves said that the imposition of local taxation would make self-government unpopular in these rural areas. I, therefore, suggest that Government should contribute substantially if they wish to make self-government successful in this country. The principle, as I have said, is accepted in the clause. I want to make it obligatory but at the same time I do not want to lay down that Government should contribute a certain percentage. They may contribute one anna or one thousand rupees. Of course I know it would be ridiculous to pay one anna, and I am sure Government will contribute a substantial sum according to the requirements of the union board. All I want is to make it obligatory on the part of the Government to pay something to these self-governing local bodies which will help them in making self-government successful at its initial stage.

The Ayes being 12 and the Noes 27, the motion was lost.

AMENDMENT No. 104.

An identical motion, No. 104, standing in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray was deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 106, 107 and 108.

The following motion was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that the words, "if any, made by the Local Government in this behalf" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (a) of clause 38 (now clause 37) be omitted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I think there is something inappropriate in the arrangement as I find that I cannot move No. 107 without having a decision of the Council on No. 108 and that again I cannot move without a decision on No. 133. But I would like to solve the whole difficulty in this way—No. 133 refers to a compulsory contribution by Government and that point having been just now decided in Council it is no good moving that amendment now. Strictly speaking, I should think that it is out of order, and if I cannot move No. 133 I cannot move No. 108 either and necessarily No. 107 also falls to the ground. That being the real position, my Lord, I think the proper order is that Your Excellency will rule No. 133 as out of order, then all these will fall to the ground.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, in the first place it is correct that Nos. 107 and 108 must be read as one; and it is also correct that No. 133 would make it obligatory on Government to make a contribution of a third of the total expenditure of the union board. Therefore, I think, the Hon'ble Member is correct that No. 133 is covered by the decision of the Council."

The President said :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referring to item 133, i.e., the proposed new clause 46A. Is that so?"

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"Yes, my Lord."

The President said :—

"That is certainly out of order owing to the decision already come to by the Council. That being so, does the Hon'ble Member propose to withdraw Nos. 107 and 108?"

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"Yes, my Lord."

The motions were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Babu A. C. Datta ; Mr. O'Malley.

They were as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that the words "after deduction of the contribution, if any, made by the Local Government in this behalf" in lines 1, 2 and 3 of sub-clause (a) of clause 38 (now clause 37) be omitted.

Also to move that after the words "from defaulters" in the last line of clause 38 (now clause 37) the following be added, namely :—

"after deduction of the contribution made by the district board under section 46 and by the Local Government under section 46A."

AMENDMENT No. 109.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after clause 38 (now clause 37) the following be added, namely :—

"Provided that the owners of the buildings which remain unoccupied throughout the year shall be assessed at half of the amount which they would otherwise have been liable to pay."

He said :—

"My Lord, what I really intended was this : there are many cases in which the people live in the town although they have got a homestead in the village, and that they do not come to the village except for, say, 12 days in the year during the Puja vacation. A very large number of people fall under this category. I think it would be a great hardship upon them if they are to pay the tax as if they are living in the villages all the 12 months in the year and at the same time in the interest of the union board they cannot escape the taxation altogether. Therefore I propose that their liability should be to the extent of 8 annas."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, this amendment follows to some extent the procedure of the Bengal Municipal Act. Section 95 of that Act provides that where a tax on persons is levied the assessment on a holding which becomes vacant in the course of the year shall cease to have effect from the first day of the quarter after that in which it became vacant. Section 110, which applies in cases where there is a rate on holdings, prescribes a different system. That section provides that if a building is vacant for 60 consecutive days or more in the year, half the rate shall be remitted or refunded, as the case may be, in proportion to the number of days unoccupied ; but the owner must give notice of the vacancy and apply for a refund within six months of his notice. Both these sections are different from the present amendment. The former provides for the assessment ceasing in the next quarter, the latter for a proportionate remission or refund of the rate on holdings. We have not got, however, a rate on holdings in this Bill. The rate is a personal tax to be imposed on owners and occupiers of buildings according to circumstances and property just as the personal tax is in the Municipal Act. Moreover, the assessment is to be made in the beginning of the year, and the amendment proposed fails to meet that difficulty. It will be always open to an owner who considers that he is hardly treated to apply for a revision of the assessment under clause 40 (now clause 39). That clause sufficiently provides for the case of unoccupied buildings as the union board should be trusted to take into account the fact that a building is unoccupied and that the owner may lose rent in consequence. It is unnecessary to have an amendment like that proposed, which would only introduce an undesirable complication in procedure ; and on this account I must oppose the amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 110.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "not less than two-thirds" in line 5 of sub-clause (b) of clause 38 (now clause 37) the words "a majority" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, I must admit that this is a point on which there will be a large difference of opinion. It is only a question of expediency. The view that some people take is this : if the majority be a two-thirds majority, in that case it will be very difficult practically to pass a resolution at the meeting of the union board about taxation, and it cannot be said that this is an apprehension which is not founded on facts. If so, then this being a question of local taxation and in the absence of any statutory local contribution by the Government and in view of the limited resources of the District Board and if it is difficult to pass any resolution about taxation at a meeting, then the whole Act will be a dead-letter and inoperative. That is a prospect of things which we cannot contemplate with anything like satisfaction. Therefore, my Lord, I proposed that instead of two-thirds majority it should be a bare majority. Of course, as I have said, there is a difference of opinion, as it can be said by the other side that the matter is of such supreme importance that the resolution should not be passed light-heartedly and unless two-thirds of the members are present that very important step should not be taken. There are two sides of the question, and taking both the sides into consideration I do think that in the interest of the successful operation of this Act for which we are all keen and anxious that steps should be taken which will make the taxation easier. It is from this point of view, my Lord, that I propose that two-thirds may be substituted by a bare majority."

"My Lord, as the Hon'ble Member has said, this amendment raises an arguable point. Under the scheme of the Bill the obligation which is laid upon the union board is that it must pay for its chaukidars and dafadars and their equipment, but it may launch out into other municipal improvements if, by a majority of two-thirds of the total number of the members of the board at a specially convened meeting, it thinks fit to do so. We framed the provision in that way, requiring a majority of two-thirds, on the analogy of section 118C(1) of the Local Self-Government Act, which, in the case of a union committee, requires a two-thirds majority before the optional powers of taxation can be utilised. The Bill as framed, therefore, makes this resort to taxation over and above what is required by the union boards to pay the chaukidars, etc., a step only to be undertaken after careful consideration. They must call a special meeting and carry two-thirds of the villagers with them. The amendment suggests that it should only be necessary to carry a majority, which would render easier the imposition of further taxation : but in framing the Bill we thought that, as the working of these bodies was new, it might be well to adhere to the precedent of the Local Self-Government Act. But if the sense of the Council prefers to take a more liberal view, I, personally, should have no objection."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I beg to oppose the amendment for various reasons. I need not amplify my reasons, but I submit that there is a difference of opinion between the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment and others. I think it will be a retrograde movement if the proposition put forward by the Hon'ble Member is accepted."

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; The President ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, I have already said that this is a very controversial matter and things may be said on both sides. In view of the opposition made not only by Government but also by some of the non-official members I should not press it and with Your Excellency's permission I would withdraw it.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 111.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

That after clause 38 (now clause 37) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ 38A. One-fourth of the total amount raised by taxation under section 38 shall be raised from amongst the zamindars whether resident or not. In Khas nahal areas the Government is to be considered as zamindar.

38B. The income derived from pounds within the union shall be credited to the union fund.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, this is an amendment in which I know I shall be opposed by some of the non-official members, and knowing that there is not the least chance of the amendment being carried and also feeling that this is a very controversial matter and also knowing that the verdict of the District Administration Committee is against it, I think it will not serve any useful purpose to press it. I would, therefore, with Your Excellency's permission, withdraw it.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 112 to 115.

The President said :—

“ The next four amendments deal with assessments of one person but they seek to vary them by different amounts. I am prepared to put each amendment separately, but it would not be in order to have four separate discussions on the four amendments. Hon'ble Members who take interest in this matter will kindly speak on the first motion.”

AMENDMENT No. 112.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that for the words “ eighty-four ” in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 39 (now clause 38) the words “ ninety-six ” be substituted.

He said :—

“ My Lord, on this point there are four amendments of which notice has been given. The Bill provides for Rs. 84 as the maximum amount of tax to be realized from any one individual. I suggest Rs. 96, i.e., an advance of Re. 1 a month on the individual contribution to the fund. My hon'ble friend Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray, the zealous and the most ardent of the territorial magnates in this Council, would like to reduce it by one rupee reducing the maximum to Rs. 72. The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, a distinguished leader of public opinion in this Presidency, would reduce it still more and make it Rs. 60, i.e., a monthly contribution of Rs. 5, and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur wants to make it Rs. 48. In these circumstances, I think the safest course would be to leave the matter as it is in the Bill, and the maximum not reduced.

My Lord, my object in increasing the maximum amount of taxation is that according to the progress of the Bill the union board will have to make a budget of its expenses and make the assessment according to that budget, and if you fix the maximum taxation upon any particular individual at Rs. 84 the result will be that the balance will have to be realized from the poorer members of the community residing in that union. My object is that the burden should fall on the wealthier class who are well able to bear it and the poorer people should be exempted as much as possible. It may be said that there will be a tendency to over-assess the rich men of the union, but there I can assure this House and Your Excellency's Government that there will be absolutely no chance of over-assessment of the rich men. Unlike the municipal towns the rich men of union will be men of very great influence and no union board, whether it is composed of three representatives or more, will ever venture to over-assess the zemindars or the rich money-lenders. So the question is if you fix the maximum at only Rs. 7 a month the result will be that the poorer men in the union will have to pay more than they ought to pay. I know that according to the present Act Rs. 12 is the maximum as the chaukidari tax, but in answer to that I can say that was a very low maximum fixed in the Chaukidari Act. I cannot say why this was fixed at so low a figure. The result is that in chaukidari unions the poorer men have to pay proportionately much higher than the richer people. Rupees 8 a month as the maximum is not very high, and neither will it be the case that the maximum amount of taxation will be realized from each individual, but those who are sufficiently wealthy ought to pay according to their means. The Act as it stands, my Lord, says that the occupiers and owners of the building will have to pay these taxes and as the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said only the owners and occupiers whether they do other business or not will be the only persons to be assessed. It is questionable whether children, adult sons, or nephews living with their parents will be considered occupiers of these buildings or not, because under the Municipal Act occupiers are those who have a legal right to occupation and those who live by sufferance such as widows or children. But in this case the only person who will pay the tax is the owner, that is head of the family, though his other adult sons may be rich and may be doing successful business and getting a large income. Therefore my suggestion is that Rs. 84 should be changed to Rs. 96. It is a surprise to me that some of those who are very keen on self-government have made an attempt to reduce it to Rs. 84 that has been fixed by the Bill. But I hope the better sense of the Council will prevail and they will make wealthier men pay more who are able to pay than the poorer men."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"My Lord, under the present Local Self-Government Act the maximum limit of taxation is Rs. 60, i.e., Rs. 5 a month. Again under the Chaukidari Act the maximum limit is Rs. 12 and that comes up to Rs. 72 per annum. I do not therefore see any reason why the maximum limit of taxation is going to be raised. We all know that though there is a provision of Rs. 60 as the maximum under the Local Self-Government Act the taxation now raised from the union committees is about $\frac{1}{2}$ of the chaukidari tax. My hon'ble friend, Maulvi Abul Kasem, wants to make it Rs. 96. He has not given any definite grounds for raising the amount, while I have something definite to stand upon when I suggest that it should be reduced to Rs. 72."

"My Lord, here we have to deal with taxation which will have to be borne by the rural population. I take the case of municipalities where the people are much better off, more enlightened and more educated and at the same time earning more than the village people. There the maximum is Rs. 84, and I ask this Council—are we going to fix the maximum for the village population at the same rate at which the urban population are taxed? My friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, has gone off at a tangent from us and he wants to go higher up than Rs. 84, and I hope and trust that many people of the generous disposition of my friend will go to the villages and try to relieve their difficulties and pay for the conservancy of the villages. My Lord, taxes are going up in other directions and we must take into account the condition and the position of the people in the villages. It is said that there are rich people in the villages and they ought to pay more. But are we to forget that those rich people who have got a residence in the villages are the people who live in towns, carry on business there, and they pay taxation also with respect to their business in municipalities and other towns? Are we going to say that because they have got the fault of having some little money, they must be ground down by taxation to any amount for merely having a residence in the village? Sir, we have in this Bill provided that a man not merely residing but having a residence in the village will be a voter and will be liable to taxation. But the very same man actually works and earns money in a town where he has to pay municipal taxes and also license fees. I think therefore that it is a very bad policy and mistaken generosity just to say that these people ought to be ground down and the taxes ought to go higher up than Rs. 84. Although I have said that it should be Rs. 60, I am inclined to agree with the gentleman who will be called next after me and will move that it should be reduced to Rs. 48."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, what struck me was this : that as under the Bengal Municipal Act the second clause has the maximum of Rs. 84, I thought that as a matter of corollary the taxation in these miniature municipal areas should be half that amount. I have no desire to give relief to the rich people—I do not know how many people there are in the outlying villages, and as far as my knowledge goes they are within the municipal areas. I think that this taxation will press very heavily on the poorer classes. I have nothing further to say on this matter."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"In the Bill as first introduced there was no maximum taxation limit at all, and to that extent it followed the recommendation of the District Administration Committee, but that Committee anticipated that there would be opposition to the omission, and when we were examining the Bill that anticipation was found to be realized. We discovered that various people advocated the retention of limits. The Select Committee thought that if would be as well to give way to that opinion, and decided to insert a limit. Then the question arose what should be the limit, as all these limits must to some extent be somewhat arbitrary, and we based our figure on the following calculations. Under the Chaukidari Act the maximum limit is Rs. 12 a year ; under the Local Self-Government Act of 1885 the maximum limit for a union committee is Rs. 60 a year, making a total of Rs. 72 a year. But for some time past the fact has been recognized that the 12-rupee limit under the Chaukidari Act is too low, and it was the recommendation of the District Administration Committee that it should be put at Rs. 24. So, substituting Rs. 24 for Rs. 12, and adding Rs. 60 to it, we come to the figure of Rs. 84, which also happened to be the limit of the Municipal Act, and that figure we have accordingly put in the Bill. In my opinion this figure is quite as good as any other, and preferable to those alternatives which have been suggested. Rupees 96 may be too high and Rs. 48 is certainly too low. As between Rs. 60 and Rs. 72 there is not much difference, but I have explained to the Council the calculations we made and why we took the figure Rs. 84, to which I would adhere. Moreover, if we are to be guided by the experience of chaukidari assessments in the past, and for the matter of that of union assessments also, the whole question of a maximum is rather of theoretical interest only as it is difficult to induce the average assessing authority to go up to anywhere near it."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I cannot support this amendment. The clause does not oblige the union boards to levy the maximum rate from any person residing within its area. That being so, I do not see why there should be a complaint about the maximum amount fixed in the Bill as being too high or as likely to be oppressive in its operation. Without going so far as fixing the maximum at Rs. 96 as proposed by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem I think the maximum may remain as it is in the Bill. Considering that the purchasing power of the rupee has gone down considerably since the Bengal Municipal Act was passed, I think the union board might still have sufficient funds at its disposal to defray the cost of the works entrusted to them."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I have not been able to make myself understood by the Hon'ble Members on this side of the House. I have been told that the maximum fixed by the Municipal Act is Rs. 84, but I would draw attention to the fact that in municipalities there are certain rates of assessment and out of the money realized from these rates and taxes they make their budget allotments. But in the case of union boards it is quite otherwise. Here they have got some definite charges to meet, for instance, the salaries of chaukidars, etc., and they require a certain amount for that and then they proceed to levy the union rate on different members of the community. Therefore I thought it was necessary that the maximum should be Rs. 96. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has said that there are not many rich men in villages. That is true, but if there are any, I want them to be assessed at the maximum rate of Rs. 96. The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has said that those who carry on their business in the union or those do not live within the union although they have got residential house there, should not be assessed too heavily. But I think that those persons should be made to contribute towards the improvement of the unions where they carry on their business or where their residential houses are situated. One of the main causes of the deterioration of our villages is that rich men like to congregate in town leaving the villages neglected. This Bill is intended to reinstate the villages to their former prosperous condition and those men who make their money in the villages or rich men having their residential houses in the villages ought to make their contributions towards the improvements of the villages. The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray has pointed out that taking the Chaukidari Act and the Local Self-Government Act together the maximum assessment comes up to 72. That is true, but we are not going upon precedents in this Bill. We intend by this Bill to improve the condition of the villages and not to let things remain as they are. My suggestion is that the maximum should be fixed at Rs. 96. But as the Hon'ble Member in Charge has not thought fit to accept it, I think there is no chance of its being accepted by the Council. Yet I would be failing in my duty as a representative of rural constituencies not to press this amendment, and I therefore press it to a vote."

The motion was about to be put when the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"My Lord, we might take the amendments backwards."

The President said :—

"I do not quite understand what the Hon'ble Member means."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"We might take the last amendment first and so on."

The President said :—

"It does not make any difference. Therefore I propose to take them in the order in which they appear on the agenda paper."

Motions Nos. 112, 113, 114 and 115 were then put one by one and lost.

Motions Nos. 113—115 were as follows :—

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray to move that for the words "eighty-four" in the proviso to sub-clause (I) of clause 39 (now clause 38) the words "seventy-two" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that for the words "eighty-four" in the proviso to sub-clause (I) of clause 39 (now clause 38) the word "sixty" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to move that for the words "eighty-four" in the proviso to sub-clause (I) of clause 39 (now clause 38) the words "forty-eight" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 116.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "district magistrate" in the first line of clause 41 (now clause 40) the words "district board" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the corresponding section in the Chaukidari Act is section 20. That section gives power to the District Magistrate to revise the assessment of the chaukidari union. But the union board stands on quite a different footing. The chaukidari functions of the union board are certainly not as important as its judicial, executive or municipal functions, and so necessarily the chaukidari assessment will be much smaller than the other assessments. And, therefore, it is only proper that the power of revising this assessment should be entrusted to the district board instead of the District Magistrate."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this is another of a series of amendments by which the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has sought to replace the authority of the District Magistrate by that of the district board in matters appertaining to the supervision over the union boards, specially in connection with chaukidars. In view of the fact that his other amendments have been negatived, I scarcely think that he is well advised to press this point again. He admits that the clause follows a precedent of the Chaukidari Act, but apparently argues that we should depart from it now that the amalgamated chaukidari and municipal assessment of taxation may reach a higher figure. But I cannot see how that fact alters the fundamental conditions under which these revisions are conducted. These assessments, even if they are of a higher figure will, as a rule, be individually small. They will affect a large number of small men. We do not wish to encourage a regular revisionary system of appeal against assessment. We had better look to the conditions under which these revisions have been made in the past, and they are briefly these. Various officers of Governments as the Hon'ble Member knows,—the District Magistrate, the sub-divisional officers and others—go round the district visiting and talking to the villagers, who are thus able to bring to their attention cases in which they allege the assessments to be grossly unfair. The officer can then enquire into the matter on the spot and see that justice is done. It is a simple and expeditious procedure, and in the case of the old chaukidari assessments has often been followed by any of us who have had experience of district administration. We have all done this work repeatedly while we were on tour. It meets the requirements of the case, and it is a far better machinery than to ask a man assessed to a few annas a month to bring a revisionary appeal before an authority like the district board, apart from the fact that the latter is not in itself a suitable appellate authority in a matter of this kind."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"It appears that in practice revision will be really made by circle officers. It is precisely that to which we object. If I were satisfied that the revision will be made by the District Magistrate himself, I for one would not object to it. What we are afraid of is the unnecessary interference by the circle officers. That makes my case all the stronger. My attention is drawn to the fact that the provision about the delegation of power to the circle officers in this respect has now been omitted. It is true, but at the same time the District Magistrate must necessarily depend on the report of the circle officers or some such other subordinate officers. Therefore the mere fact that the provision has been omitted does not improve the situation. In any case, as in most matters the union board will work under the supervision of the district and local boards it is only proper that in this particular matter also the revisionary power ought to lie with the district board."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 117.

The following motion was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

If motion No. 116 be carried the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the word "he" in line 5 of clause 41 (now clause 40) the word "they" be substituted.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Sir Henry Wheeler; The President; Rai M. C. Mitter Bahadur; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

AMENDMENT No. 118.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words "may make" in line 1 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the words "shall contribute annually" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, I think that the district board being the recipient of the taxes raised within the locality and charged with the sanitation and other improvements contemplated by this Bill should be bound to contribute to the union fund, and instead of making it discretionary on the district board I want to make it obligatory on them to contribute to the union board grants for carrying out the works entrusted to them. In these local areas the taxation will be very oppressive and it is but fair that the district board should pay something to the union boards before they ask them to cover their deficit by special taxation specially as the district board now get contributions from Government from road-cess and public works-cess. Therefore I propose that instead of leaving it to the discretion of the district boards the grant should be made obligatory on them."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, there are certain other amendments of a like character."

The President said :—

"Yes, items 118 to 122 are identical so that Hon'ble Members who have given notice of these amendments can speak on the motion which is now before the Council if they wish to."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have got a similar motion, and my submission is that it should be made obligatory upon the district boards to contribute a certain amount. As far as the clause goes, the district boards may or may not contribute anything. My submission, on the other hand, is that as the union boards will be in a state of infancy at the start, it is necessary that there should be an obligation on the part of the district board to contribute a substantive amount."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have also got a similar motion. Clause 46 (now clause 45) is a very wholesome provision and if the district boards make a grant they will attach certain conditions to it as to how it should be spent. My object is that the district boards have got under clauses 12, 15, 29 (now clause 27), 40 (now clause 39), 60 (now clause 55), 61 (now clause 56), and 63 (now clause 58) great powers over these union boards—power of supervision, power of removal of member, and so forth, and if the union boards fail to do their work they may be superseded. In many other ways they have been made subordinate to district boards. And if the union board thus becomes the foster child of a district board I think it is but right that a foster father should do something towards the feeding of a foster child. Therefore, I think, that it should be laid down that some contribution should be made by the district boards for carrying out the work imposed by them on the union board. This matter was also considered by the Decentralization Commission and they also recommended in paragraph 764 of their report that there should be liberal grant from the district boards. Otherwise if everything is left to depend upon taxation, the interest of the people in their own affairs would become lax. I do not know but I think from the trend of the discussion on the Bill that this motion will be acceptable to the Council. I think it is reasonable to expect that there should be a contribution by the district board to the union board and I have no objection to certain conditions being attached to such grants.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, there are three possible sources of finance so as far the union boards are concerned—first, the Government contribution, secondly, contributions by district boards, and thirdly, local taxation. As regards the Government contributions this Council has already decided that they will not be compulsory and even if the contribution by district board is not made compulsory then in some cases what may happen is this : in any particular year—a very bad year—the Government may find it inconvenient to make any contributions. Then so far as the district boards are concerned it may so happen that they cannot also part with the money and may direct the union boards to complete their works with their own money. In that case union boards will have to rely entirely on local taxation and we know that local taxation cannot be raised to such an extent as to enable them to meet all the expenses of the various works entrusted to the union boards. We know that the cost for dafadars and chaukidars would amount to about 60 lakhs of rupees a year, this is the amount of road cess and public works cess taken together, so that the two cesses together are just barely enough to meet the cost of dafadars and chaukidars, and it would be remembered that the question of increasing the chaukidars' pay is a pressing one. So that with the road cess and public works cess the union board can get on for about three quarters of the year so far as the cost of chaukidars is concerned. Therefore unless some suitable provision is made for financing the union board the whole Act will be practically a dead letter. The public works cess is now made over by the Government to the district boards and this lays an additional obligation upon the district boards to make a grant to the union board. In fact the District Administration Committee made a positive recommendation that the public works cess should be made over to the district board upon a condition precedent to their making over the bulk of the money to the union boards which were proposed to be instituted at the time. Therefore the district boards cannot complain if that obligation be now made a statutory one. In fact if the district boards do not make any contribution as I have submitted the whole thing would be a dead letter. So it will not be wise to keep things in this unsatisfactory condition and now that the Government contribution will not be an obligatory one it is but right to have a statutory obligation on the part of the district boards. It ought not to be allowed to remain permissive.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, we now have a batch of amendments which are very similar in type, and which involve one common issue of principle and varying issues of detail. Under the Bill, as it stands, we merely say that the district board may make grants-in-aid to the union boards. But the principle which is common to these amendments is that these grants-in-aid should be made obligatory upon the district boards. The details vary as to the amount of the contribution which the district board will have to make ; some would leave it uncertain ; some would leave it to be laid down by rules ; some would merely say a suitable amount ; and some would say a quarter, and others a half, of the road and public works cess collected within the area of the union. But we are now concerned with the question of principle—whether these grants should be made obligatory or not. It is perfectly true that the District

Babu M. N. Ray.

Administration Committee contemplated that the public works cess would be used in order to give financial help to these union boards. But I think it is equally clear, on reading their report, that they did not contemplate laying down any rigid system. In paragraph 139, after discussing a scheme of possible financing of the union boards which Mr. Birley laid before them for the district of Dacca, they concluded that it was impossible to lay down any hard-and-fast rule and that the case of each district would have to be decided on its own merits. So, I take it, that they were opposed to adopting any rigid system, although they hoped that, in fact, district boards would come to the financial help of union boards, and as a matter of practice they do so.

Taking the last report of 1917-18 we find a long column showing the contributions received by union committees from district boards. Mr. O'Malley tells me that the reason of one or two blanks is that the union committee in those cases had not been constituted. In the aggregate, taking the year 1917-18, out of a total income of Rs. 2 lakhs and 36 thousand enjoyed by union committees, Rs. 1,13,000 was given by district boards. So, therefore, district boards do already contribute. But it may be said: 'Well, if they do that at present, what is your objection to making a mandatory provision?' My objection is one of principle. At one time Government used far more frequently than now to issue definite instructions to district boards and municipalities as to how they should spend their money. We used to say that such and such a percentage must be spent on primary education, such and such a percentage on water-supply and so on. When I went round as Secretary to the Decentralization Commission, and we enquired into the working of local self-government, it was the common complaint of Indian witnesses, if it was suggested in any way that local self-government had not so far quite fulfilled the expectations of its creators, that local self-government had never had a fair chance, because from the beginning Government had kept local bodies in leading strings and tied them down by mandatory orders as to what they should do here and what they should do there. These were constant complaints urged before us throughout India. Now, we come to a suggestion to go even beyond an executive order and to impose a statutory obligation. But the mandatory executive order has been very much discarded in recent years, and even when the public works cess was made over to district boards, the instructions issued to them were far more advisory than mandatory; and I maintain that it is preferable in a matter of this kind to trust to the good sense of the district board. We have initiated a policy of deofficialising the district board, and it is a policy which will be continued, and to which, I believe, an extension will be given very shortly. If we are going to deofficialise the district board, is it wise to saddle it at the same time with statutory directions as to how it should apply its funds in this matter of union boards? In the past, district boards have given funds to these committees—and I trust that in future they will continue to do so—and I submit it is preferable that we should rely on their discretion, instead of trying to hamper them by a legislative provision of the kind proposed in the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, these five amendments and ten which follow are intended, as has been pointed out, to impose statutory obligations on district boards to make suitable contributions to the union boards for the costs of works of public utility which the union boards are empowered under the Bill to execute. It will be clear from the provisions embodied in Chapter III of the Bill that amongst the duties and powers of the union boards defined in this part, the union boards are empowered to employ an establishment for the collection of the union rates. They are empowered to carry out works of public utility in respect of sanitation, conservancy and drainage, for example, public drains, burning-ghât and burial-grounds. They are empowered to construct and maintain water-works including the construction of bridges and repairs of tanks, wells, streams and water-courses ; they are empowered to construct, maintain and repair roads, bridges and water-courses and they are empowered to make provision for the lighting of roads ; and lastly, they are empowered to establish primary schools and dispensaries. This is a pretty long catalogue, and one would naturally inquire whether adequate funds are proposed to be placed at the disposal of the union boards to enable them to carry out these multifarious works. We must remember that in connection with some of these works, for instance, public drains, burning-ghâts and burial-grounds and other works of public utility in connection with sanitation, drainage and the construction and maintenance of water-courses the district boards have got the power to direct the union boards to carry out these works. It is not that the union boards of their own motion can undertake these works, but in respect of the particular works to which I have just invited the attention of this Council the district boards are given the power to direct the union boards to carry out these works. As to the funds placed at their disposal we see that clause 38 (now clause 37) of the Bill provides for the imposition of union rates under certain conditions of an amount sufficient to meet the cost of such works as I have just stated. The contribution by Local Government, where such contribution is forthcoming, is not intended, as far as I understand clause 38 (now clause 37) of the Bill, to cover any part of the cost of such works. It is intended for the part payment of the salary of chaukidars and dafadars and of the establishment employed for the purpose. So that with regard to this long array of works of public utility the union boards are left on their sole resources over and above a few items to which I shall presently refer to their income from the union rate. The clause which defines union fund certainly contemplates in addition to the union rates certain items of fees and costs which are recoverable under the Bill and which are placed at the disposal of the union boards. But clause 46 (now clause 45) which relates to any contribution that the district board may make towards the cost of such works of public utility as has been pointed out, merely leaves the discretion with the district boards if they choose to make a provision for the purpose. I am afraid, my Lord, that if no statutory obligation is imposed upon district boards under this head, this long array of useful and important works of public utility will not be accomplished and the provisions made in this Bill will be more or less elusive. Sir Henry Wheeler has asked us to look at the past : there were union committees in existence for a number of years and out of the two lakhs of rupees which the union committees all over the province had spent, I should say a very moderate sum, the district boards have contributed nearly one-half ; the district boards of this province altogether contributed nearly a lakh. We and those of us who have experience of the working of the district boards and union committees in the mufassal all know what sort of work the union committees now do. They do very petty works—they clear jungles and tanks, but I am not aware of any union committee which has so far been established which has undertaken even a decent proportion of the ambitious scheme which this Bill sets forth. Therefore to refer to the past would not be of much importance. The past does not contain a record of what this Bill expects the union boards to do.

Then it has been said that the people in this country do not relish executive orders—orders proceeding from the executive to force the hands of the district boards and other local authorities to spend money on certain purposes. That is perfectly true, and I fully agree that the less executive interference with the works of the district boards the better. But it is one thing to deprecate executive interference with the works of the district boards and the application of their funds and it is another thing to impose a statutory duty upon district boards—a duty which must be imposed if the scheme of this present Bill is to be realised in practice at all. I was for a long time a Vice-Chairman of a District Board and I have been a member for over a quarter of a century. I cannot ignore our unwillingness to place at the disposal of these newly-fledged bodies a decent sum of money over which we lose direct control. It is a weakness which the members of district boards enjoy with other human beings and it is one of the ordinary frailties of human nature. If, therefore, it is proposed by this piece of legislation to confer upon union boards real powers of executing and carrying out works of public utility which will require considerable expenditure, I honestly believe that unless some such statutory obligation is imposed upon district boards, all this scheme for the improvement of the village by the people of the village will prove elusive. It may be known to Sir Henry Wheeler that I am perhaps the only member of the Select Committee who had the misfortune to differ from the rest on this point and practically on this point alone and I therefore feel very strongly on this matter and I support the amendment which has been moved."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, the question has been discussed threadbare, so I shall confine myself only to one observation. The question is whether the district board should be required by statute to contribute something towards the expenses of the union boards. Let us consider for a moment what is the source of income of the district boards. Whence does their income come? It is the road cess and public works cess paid by the villagers which constitute the district fund. Is it not proper for the district board to make over a portion of the money which they receive from the villagers in order to help them in the improvement of the villages? The district board has no other source of income—I mean the main source—and I think it is only just and proper that the district board should contribute a certain sum in order to help the union boards in the matter of rural sanitation and rural improvements. It is their money which the district board receives and they ought to contribute to them. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said that he opposes this on certain principles. The principle which he has enunciated I have not been able fully to grasp, but the only principle which I can find underlying this provision in the Bill is this: that the Government, the supreme head and authority, is unable to commit itself to any grant, and if it is unable to commit itself to a grant, I do not think it would be decent for Government to fixing an obligation upon the district board; that is the only principle which seems to me to be underlying this measure, but however we have passed that stage, namely, the obligation of Government. Here the district board represents the district and here is a small body, namely, the union board which is going to be constituted under it, and my friend to the right has pointed out the onerous character of the duty imposed upon these petty boards, and if Government will grant nothing, and if the district board will grant nothing, then all that I can say is that this measure had better be dropped."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, there is only one point on which I should like to make a few observations. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has observed that the Government are gradually deofficialising the district boards and that people resent interference by executive orders. It is not an executive order but it is a statutory obligation that we seek to impose on district boards. Further, my Lord, what we want to bring out is this: that these union boards are made subordinate to the district boards to carry out their mandate, according to the provisions of the Bill, and they will pass orders upon them and direct them to carry out their orders but won't give them any funds; it will not be obligatory upon them to give any funds except those which they will receive from the residents of the union. Is this equitable and fair, my Lord? I appeal to the sense of justice of Government, as I know it is useless to expect this motion to be carried in this House, but I appeal to the Hon'ble Members here to consider whether it is fair to pass orders on the union boards directing them to do this and that and that if they do not do that they may be superseded and not to place any funds at their disposal."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, I should like to refer to one or two statements which have been made by the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray in connection with referring to the contributions now made by district boards to union committees. I think he has not perhaps caught one of the figures quoted by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. The contribution made by the district boards in 1917-18 was not under a lakh; the actual figure is Rs. 1,13,000. The expenditure by all the union committees during the year was Rs. 1,87,000 and I do not think that it will require any elaborate calculation to deduce the fact that the district boards contributed a sum approaching two-thirds of the total expenditure during the year. That being so, I submit that district boards at present realise their obligations to the union committees.

Another point which I would like to mention is that the more the union committees develop, the more work they do, the greater are their activities and the less they are dependent on the district boards. In this connection I may mention that the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray is somewhat under a misapprehension in thinking that all union committees carry out only petty village works. He is not perhaps aware that several union committees have been established at sub-divisional headquarters and in some cases have at least an income which corresponds to that of smaller municipalities. To quote a few instances, which occur to me, there is the union committee of Ramjur Hat in the district of Birbhum; there is the union committee of Contai, a sub-divisional headquarters in the district of Midnapur; there is the union committee of Bagerhat in the district of Khulna; there is the union committee of Manikganj in the district of Dacca and there is also another at Munshiganj in the same district. Some of them have quite a considerable income of about Rs. 7,000 a year.

Another matter to which I should like to invite the attention of the Council is that clause 46 (now clause 45) should be read with clause 35 (now clause 33) of the Bill, in order that its scope may be understood. Clause 35 (now clause 33) lays down in effect that when a district board makes over to a union board the management of any institution or the execution of any work or duty, it must assign to the union board the money necessary for the purpose, and the union board must consent to the transfer. A district board therefore cannot transfer any institution, work or duty under this clause to a union board unless it provides the necessary funds."

A division was then taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENTS Nos. 119—127.

The following amendments were deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that for the word "may" in line 1 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the word "shall" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur to move that for the word "may" in line 1 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the word "shall" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to move that for the word "may" in line 1 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the word "shall" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the word "may" in line 1 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the word "shall" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray to move that in clause 46 (now clause 45)—

(a) for the words "may" in line 1 the word "shall" be substituted ;

(b) for the words "such grants-in-aid from the district fund, as they may think fit" in lines 2 and 3 the words "as they will be liable to pay under rules made under section 11" be substituted ; and

(c) the words "and may attach to such grants any conditions that may appear to the district board to be desirable" in lines 4, 5 and 6, be omitted.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "such grants-in-aid from the district fund, as they may think fit" in lines 2 and 3 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the words "a sum not less than one-fourth of the road and public works cesses realized within the area under the jurisdiction of the union board" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that for the words "such grants-in-aid from the district fund, as they may think fit" in lines 2 and 3 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the words "a sum approximately one-fourth of the road and public works cesses realised within the area under the jurisdiction of the union board" be substituted.

The President ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekharaswar Ray to move that the following be added to clause 46 (now clause 45), namely :—

“ Provided that the grant-in-aid shall in no case be less than half the amount of road and public works cess payable by the cultivating raiyats for lands comprised within the area of the union board ; and if there be any dispute between the district board and the union board regarding the sum that will approximately represent the amount of such cess, the matter shall be referred to the Collector of the district, whose decision shall be final ; and a decision, once arrived at, regarding this amount shall remain in force till the next revaluation of the aforesaid area under the Cess Act, 1880.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after the words “ think fit ” in line 3 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the words “ the amount of such grants being not less than half of the land cesses levied within the union ” be inserted.

The President said :—

“ The next item is amendment No. 128 which is not being moved. No. 129 is consequential on No. 118 which has fallen through, and No. 130 is also consequential. Therefore the next amendment which is in order is No. 131. I now call upon the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move No. 131.”

Motions Nos. 128 to 130 which were deemed to be withdrawn were as follows :—

AMENDMENTS Nos. 128—130.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that for clause 46 (now clause 45) the following be substituted, namely :—

“ 46. The district board shall make over to the union board the whole of the sums realized as road-cess from the villages in the union, and shall make such further grants from the district fund as may be necessary to enable the union board to carry out the purposes of this Act, and may attach to such grants any conditions that may appear to the district board to be desirable.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the word “ grants ” in line 5 of clause 46 (now clause 45) the word “ contribution ” be substituted.

If motion No. 126 be carried, the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekharaswar Ray to move that after the proviso to clause 46 the following be added, namely :—

“ Provided that the conditions referred to in this section may be attached to such amount only as are in excess of the minimum grant which the district board must make to the union board under this section.”

AMENDMENT No. 131.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that at the end of clause 46 (now clause 45) the following be added, namely :—

“ and the union board may receive any donation or contribution from any private person for any work within the purposes of this Act.”

Sir Henry Wheeler.

He said :—

“This refers to clause 46 (now clause 45) of the Bill. I introduced this amendment with a definite object. The union boards will be co-operative bodies, and not only their rights and privileges but also their income and expenditure should be provided by the statute. They cannot have any source of income which the law would not allow them to have, and it is just possible that the union boards will have some help from generous spirited individuals who may make grants either for excavating tanks or making drains or any other useful work for the benefit of the union population, and it is necessary to authorise these boards to receive these grants. I know reference will be made to clause 47 (now clause 46) which says that ‘all sums realised under section 42 and all sums realised as fines, fees, etc., or cost under this Act, other than fines imposed under section 25 and all other receipts of the union bench or union court, shall be paid into a fund which shall be called the union fund.’ I know that reference will be made to the expression ‘other receipts of the union board.’ Now, my Lord, that would evidently mean, in the view of a lawyer, other receipts derivable under the Act by the union board, and not any receipts outside the Act. It may be, Sir, that the union board may plant trees by the side of the road, they may sell the fruits and with the sale-proceeds of that as well as of the trees that may be cut down and sold, the union board may rear fish in a tank excavated by them and sell them. All these are the receipts which you can bring in under clause 47 (now clause 46). It would mean ‘other receipts of the union board,’ that is to say, receipts which might naturally come to the union board under the circumstances laid down by this Bill. It would not, in my humble opinion, cover any extraneous grant which the union board might receive from any generous spirited person. At all events, if you want to make out that these are also ‘other receipts,’ then it is necessary for us to provide in this clause or to lay down that it would be legitimate for the union board to receive grants from other persons, and I think in that view this addition which I have submitted is necessary. With these observations I commend this motion to the acceptance of the House.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“Sir, so far as I can make out, there is no question of principle involved in this amendment; it is really almost one of drafting. We examined the point once or twice after receipt of the Hon'ble Member's amendment, and we could not persuade ourselves that this change was really required. The Hon'ble Member seeks to make an addition to clause 46 (now clause 45) to the effect that a union board may receive a donation or contribution, but clause 46 (now clause 45) merely says that a district board may make a grant-in-aid. It deals with the maker of the grant not with the recipient. But the amendment of the Hon'ble Member swings round to another point of view entirely, from the maker of the grant to the receiver of the grant. The only reason for making this addition is the apprehension that a union board may be presented with generous donations from private citizens, and find itself unable to accept them—a result which would be most regrettable. But I cannot see that they could be in that position. The union board will be a body corporate, entitled to acquire property, and I am advised that acquisition covers acquisition by gift. If so, when a generous donor comes along and presses Rs. 1,000 into their hands, there will be nothing to debar a union board from taking the money, and it is clearly contemplated in the Bill that they should do so. It will be seen that clause 47 (now clause 46) provides that ‘other receipts’ of the union board shall be paid into the union fund, and the second proviso refers specifically to sums made over to the union board for specific purposes, such as private donations towards the excavation of tanks, planting of trees, and works of that kind. Therefore the amendment seems to me to be practically a matter of drafting, and after re-examination of the point, we do not see that it is required."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I am not convinced by what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said about the uncertainty which swings round clause 47 (now clause 46), as well as clause 19 (now clause 18)."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"Clause 19 (now clause 18) covers it."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"No, it does not ; the uncertainty is not removed either by clause 19 (now clause 18), or by clause 47 (now clause 46). I have already said that 'other receipts of the union board' is an expression which would not ordinarily mean any grant or donation, and clause 19 (now clause 18) which says they may hold property, etc., is rather vague. Besides what harm is there in making it clear and explicit. This is what I do not understand, and that is a point upon which Sir Henry Wheeler has not enlightened us. If it is thought that it will go against the draftsmanship of the Bill, well, I think, any member who may have charge of a Bill may forego any idea of being criticised on the ground of draftsmanship. Here we want to make it clear and distinct, and there is legitimate scope for such criticism of such defects as I have placed before the Council, and in that case, what harm is there in adding the words 'that the union board shall be competent to receive any contribution to the fund'. Certainly we cannot lay down and say that any person may contribute to the funds. We can only legalise the acts of the union board ; here a man comes and says 'Here is Rs. 500;' well we ought to say it is perfectly legitimate for them to receive such grants, and I do not think that even clauses 19 and 47 (now clauses 18 and 46) cover such a grant. It would make the matter more clear as the expression 'other receipts of the union board' seem to me to be wide of the mark. It would not be covered by what clause 19 (now clause 18) says, as I have already said. Therefore I ask the Council to consider whether we ought to make the point clear, so that there may be no doubt about the authority of union board receiving grants and donations."

The President said :—

"I might perhaps make a suggestion here which might meet the views of the Hon'ble Member and at the same time get over the objections which have been raised by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. I think Sir Henry Wheeler's objection that clause 46 (now clause 45) is not a suitable clause on which to draft a proposal of this kind, is a valid one. It seems to me that it would be more appropriate if a proposal of this kind was included in clause 47 (now clause 46). Clause 47 (now clause 46) reads : "All sums realised under section 42 and all sums realised as fines, fees or costs under this Act, other than fines imposed under section 25, and all other receipts of the union board, union bench or union court....." and here you might add the words "including any donation or contribution from a private person." I would suggest that if the Hon'ble Member has no objection to this proposal, it would come better as suggested by me in clause 47 (now clause 46) "

Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; The President ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ I am quite willing to accept Your Excellency's suggestion.”

The President said :—

“ If the Hon'ble Member will withdraw the amendment here, he can propose it again under clause 47 (now clause 46).”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 132.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that at the end of clause 46 (now clause 45) the following be added, namely :—

“ Provided always that in the case of any union board which has imposed a rate under clause (b) of section 38 the district board shall make a suitable grant-in-aid.”

He said :—

“ My desire is that if a union board helps itself and imposes taxes on itself then this self-help may be rewarded by a statutory provision. I do not desire to go over the ground already discussed, but there is only one point which it is necessary for my purpose to discuss, and that is this. It has been said by Sir Henry Wheeler that there is no reason why we should mistrust the district board. I wish I could share in that optimism. About four years ago the income of the district board was raised by a grant of 29 lakhs of rupees under the public works cess which was made over to them. The whole of that sum, my Lord, was intended for improving the rural water-supply and for sanitary measures generally ; at any rate the Government circular made it abundantly clear that that was the intention. But the district board instead of doing that chose to increase their closing balance and out of its total income of one crore of rupees—it had in one particular year a closing balance of 51 lakhs—and that in a year when the whole province was crying for pure drinking water. The next year it had a closing balance of 41 lakhs of rupees. In that year I had the privilege of bringing these facts to the notice of this Council, and subsequently at the instance of Government action was taken, more at the instance of Government and less, I am sorry to say, on the initiative of the district boards themselves, that this undesirable state of things has been remedied. At the same time, my Lord, I feel the force of the observations of Sir Henry Wheeler, that these local self-governing bodies should be left to work out their own salvation, if I may make use of such an expression. That is all the more reason why I want this statutory provision only in respect of those union boards which agree to tax themselves. If we make this statutory provision, the district boards cannot complain that the executive is interfering with them; it will be a statutory provision and the executive will have every right to see that the district boards carry out this provision. But, on the other hand, if we do not have such a statutory provision, there may be if they do not help even those union boards who have taxed themselves. One word more, and I have done. It has been said that in the past the district boards have helped the union committees liberally ; I do not dispute that proposition, but at the present moment we have comparatively few union committees, scattered all over the province. Last year I put a question in the Council and I was told that if progress went on that rate, it would take 104 years to apportion out the whole of the province into union committees. With the few union committees that we have, it is quite possible for the district boards to help them generously, but we are legislating for the future. I look forward to the day and I hope that it is not very far distant, when the whole of Bengal will be parcelled out into a number of union boards, and in a district with an area of 4 to 5,000 square miles there will be a large number of union boards, and if there be a statutory provision of this nature, it will stimulate the union boards to tax themselves."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, on a recent amendment I found myself in disagreement, I am sorry to say, with many of the non-official members of this Council, as to the degree to which it was wise to rely upon the good sense and discretion of the district boards in helping union boards financially, and the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has just sought to adduce evidence justifying the doubt that is in him. But he will perhaps recognise that the instance to which he alluded had reference rather—may I say—to the bad old days, when the official hands lay heavily on district boards. I was looking forward to the happy time when the de-officialised district boards will attain to greater glories of common sense than they ever reached before, and I still think that my view of the previous amendment was justified in the best interests both of the district boards and of union boards. For instance, if we make it obligatory, every time a union board is created, for the district board to give it a grant, the district board, whose views are to be taken before the union board is created at all, might, after a certain point, be almost bound to oppose any suggestion for creating new bodies of this kind. However, I think we can differentiate between that amendment and this. In the first place, this amendment does not actually tie the discretion of the district board as to the amount of the grant, and one of my main grounds for objection to the previous amendment (although we did not come to that point) had reference to the subsequent amendment, by which, as a sequel to the principle of the obligatory grant, it was sought to commandeer anything up to half the road and public works cesses on this account. This amendment does not introduce a rigid system of that kind; it merely says a suitable grant, which will mean that the district board will have to use its discretion as to the amount. If it was determined to act thoroughly mala fide, it could, of course, give a purely nominal sum and yet keep within the four corners of the clause. That is a risk which must be run, but as I believe in a certain amount of common sense in district boards, I am willing to take it. The other feature of this amendment which differentiates it from that preceding it, and which presents some ground for regarding it in a different light, is the linking of the grant with the self-taxation of the union for the municipal duties which will not be obligatory upon it, but which it can take up at its option. We have recognised that there may be a certain amount of reluctance on the part of the union boards to tax themselves for these purposes, and we may willingly do anything reasonable to encourage them to do so. As a matter of fact, this form of encouragement is, as I understand, the policy at present adopted. Most district boards say to union committees 'If you tax yourselves and raise so much, we will add to it to such and such an extent.' Bearing these facts in mind, Sir, and also having in view the considerable volume of opinion which was expressed by non-official members in favour of a statutory recognition of the district board grant in some form, as also the wish of Government as far as possible to pass this Bill with the assent of us all (as it is merely directed towards an advance which we all welcome), I am prepared to accept the amendment which has been moved by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I find, my Lord, that within a few minutes of opposing my amendment, Sir Henry Wheeler has changed his mind to a certain extent and he seems to have now come to the conclusion that it would be better not to oppose such a volume of non-official opinion in connection with this matter, and has taken the opportunity of accepting this amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter but there is one point I want to draw attention to, and that is that in our amendments, at least in my own, there was no provision to the effect that half or one-fourth should be contributed by the district board, or anything of that kind. It was absolutely left to the discretion of the Government."

The President.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 133 and 134.

The President said :—

"No. 133 is no longer in order, and in view of the decision which the Council has just reached, I think 134 is no longer desirable."

The following motions were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

New Clause 46A.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after clause 46 the following be inserted, namely :—

"46A. The Local Government shall make to the union board such grants-in-aid as they may think fit, the amount of such grant being not less than one-third of the total expenditure incurred by the union board in carrying out the purposes of this Act in the year preceding the year in which the grant is made, and may attach to such grants any conditions that may appear to the Local Government to be desirable."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray to move that after clause 46 the following be inserted, namely :—

"46A. The Local Government may direct the district board to make to the union board such grants-in-aid from the district fund as may be thought necessary for the purpose referred to in section 46, and may attach to such grants any conditions that may appear to the Local Government to be desirable."

AMENDMENT No. 135.Clause 47.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that after the words "under section 25" in line 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 47 (now clause 46) the following be inserted, namely :—

"all fees paid on account of processes of any court served through the union board."

He said :—

"After the amendment which has been accepted by the Council, I submit that this amendment is more or less consequential to it. It has been accepted that chaukidars shall serve processes and all fees paid on account of processes of any court served to the union board, and in that view I think this amendment may be accepted. However I leave it to the Government. I think it would be desirable to have these words."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I had not viewed the amendment in the light in which the Hon'ble Member has just explained it. We had interpreted it as a desire on his part to make over to the union boards all process fees that were realised by the courts in respects of the processes which might be served by these union boards."

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

"My Lord, in view of the observation made by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I think it right that I should explain what I have in view. What I have in view is that the chaukidars will have the power to serve process ; and it has already been explained by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler that it will depend upon the negotiations with the High Court. Now, supposing that the High Court allows the chaukidar to serve processes and that it may also be arranged in the course of these negotiations that the whole amount realised from process fees be paid to these union boards. I do not say that necessarily the whole amount should be paid to the union boards, which will employ these chaukidars, but that as the Civil Courts will also have their staff, it is just possible that an equitable arrangement may be made. It is from that point of view, I submit, that it is desirable to have these words included."

"My Lord, as I have said, we thought that the amendment desired to make over to the union boards all the process fees realised by the courts in respect of processes which might be served through the agency of the union boards, and in that sense we could not have accepted the amendment. The process fees realized by the courts belong to them, as they are levied in respect of various actions taken by the courts, and they do not belong to the serving agency through which the processes actually reach the hands of the recipients. Moreover, the financial interests involved are obviously so large that Government could not agree to do anything which might involve the handing over of the revenue derived from process fees to these union boards. However, I understand, that the Hon'ble Member regards the matter as largely one of accounts, and merely seeks to make a statutory provision that if any fees are paid to these union boards for executing processes served through them, the fees may be credited to the union fund. The system, which we have adopted in places where processes are served by chaukidars, is to pay the actual serving chaukidar at a rate of so much per process, which is, I believe, 2 annas per process, and that remuneration goes into the chaukidar's pocket in return for the extra labour involved in delivering the process. Probably, in any system which we might lay down, we should adhere to that procedure. I do not think that it would be right that the union board should be turned into a kind of process-serving machinery which would make a profit out of the labour of the chaukidar. The wages of the labourer ought to go to the actual worker, which, in this case, will be the chaukidar. As a matter of accounts I do not think there is any harm in accepting the amendment, if it is worded in the following way :—

'Any fees paid to the union board in respect of processes served through the board' which, I think, will meet the wishes of the Hon'ble Member. In this form, I am prepared to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I accept the modification suggested by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler."

The motion was then put in the modified form and agreed to.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; The President ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, may I inquire whether Your Excellency is going to adjourn the Council now as it is now half past six.”

The President said :—

“I think we may make a little more progress and we might take advantage of the present cool spell of weather. We might adjourn when we come to clause 56.

I shall now call upon the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that after the word ‘court’ in line 5 of clause 47 (I) the following be inserted :—

‘including any subscription or contribution from any private person’.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved the following motion which was agreed to :—

“That after the word ‘court’ in line 5 of clause 47 (I) the following be inserted, namely :—

“including any subscription or contribution from a private person’.”

AMENDMENT No. 136.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that after clause 47 the following be inserted, namely :—

“47A. The union board shall keep, in accordance with rules prescribed under section 111, a separate account entitled ‘Endowment and Contribution Fund,’ in which all sums received by way of gift or by virtue of any trust created to further any of the objects of this Act shall be entered.”

He said :—

“My Lord, my object is that a separate account will show these receipts. It will show how much donors have contributed in one separate account and it will also have the effect of keeping the account clear, because if any trust be created I suppose the union board will have to keep proper account of that trust. No doubt it will be quite possible for the union board to keep proper accounts under clause 47 (now clause 46). but it would, perhaps, be better if a separate account is kept of gifts and endowments.”

The Hon'ble Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I do not think that a specific clause is necessary to this effect, and it might even be misleading to provide definitely in the law for one individual register and not for others. In clause 111 (m) [now clause 101 (m)], we have taken power to make rules prescribing the method in which the accounts of the union fund should be kept. If it is desirable that a separate account should be kept for these endowments and contributions, it will be perfectly easy to prescribe it by rule.”

Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Babu A. C. Datta ; Mr. Kerr.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

“My Lord, in view of what the Hon'ble Member has said, I beg to withdraw the amendment.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 137.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that clause 52 (now clause 47) and schedule III be omitted.

He said :—

“My Lord, in the course of the discussion of some of the previous amendments I have indicated my reasons objecting to the delegation of powers by the District Magistrate. I do not like to repeat these arguments at this late hour of the day and I place this amendment for Your Excellency's acceptance.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

“My Lord, the object of the Hon'ble Member is apparently to do away with all powers of delegation in this Bill and to make the District Magistrate exercise all the functions which the Bill purports to invest him with. The Hon'ble Member has mercifully refrained from giving any reasons for his proposal, but I think I had better explain as briefly as possible to the Council why it is absolutely necessary to retain some powers of delegation. We estimate that ultimately there will be on an average between 250 and 300 union boards in each district throughout the Presidency. There will be in each of the boards a force of about 10 or 12 chaukidars and dafadars : so that the District Magistrate will have to deal with the appointment, dismissal and discipline of a body of 2,000 to 3,000 men. It will be noticed that the delegations in schedule III are mainly confined to the questions relating to dafadars and chaukidars. The powers of appointment and dismissal of chaukidars and dafadars may be delegated to the Subdivisional Magistrate, the Superintendent of Police or the circle officer. The power of fining dafadars and chaukidars under clause 25 may be delegated to the same authorities, but the power of requiring chaukidars to supply local information under section 26 and of calling for assessment papers and passing of orders thereon under clause 41 can be delegated only to the Subdivisional Magistrate. These are the main points of delegation. Under the present Act, it is open to the District Magistrate with the sanction of the Commissioner to delegate all his powers under the Act to any Magistrate of the 1st class or to any Magistrate in charge of a subdivision or to the District Superintendent of Police. Therefore, we have, in the present Bill, considerably curtailed the existing powers of District Magistrates in the matter of delegation. It cannot be said that the District Magistrate has been given a blank cheque in regard to this matter. We have carefully limited the powers which he may delegate and the persons to whom he may delegate. Having regard to the figures as to the chaukidari force in a district, I do not think that it can be said that the powers of delegation which we have provided are excessive or unreasonable. If the Hon'ble Member's amendment is accepted, the District Magistrate would have to do all the work himself and that would be absolutely impossible. The Hon'ble Member has not suggested any modification in the particular delegations which are provided for in the Bill as it stands, and it would be impossible to take away the power of delegation altogether. I therefore think that the Council will be well advised to reject this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, there is certainly some force in the argument advanced by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr that the work will be stupendous for the Magistrate and he will not be able to cope with the work. That is certainly true, but at the same time on the other side, my real point is that I object to some of these powers being delegated to the Superintendent of Police or to the circle officer. If the delegation is to be made to the Subdivisional Magistrate as in items 4, 5, 6, 8 and 9 of the schedule, I have no complaint against. My point is that the words 'Superintendent of Police or circle officer, be omitted from item 4 and 5 of schedule III."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"The Hon'ble Member is now speaking on amendments Nos. 215 and 216. The point does not arise on the present amendment."

The President said :—

"This point might more suitably be taken on item No. 215 in which the Hon'ble Member specifically raises that point."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, what I really meant to submit is that if the new suggestion is acceptable then I might see my way to withdraw amendment No. 137."

The President said :—

"I am afraid the Hon'ble Member will have to wait till we come to the schedule in order to be satisfied on that point."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 138, and 139.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words "District Magistrate," in the two places in which they occur in lines 3 and 4 of clause 54 (now clause 49), the words "Divisional Commissioner" be substituted.

He also moved that the proviso to clause 54 (now clause 49), be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, may I be permitted to move both the amendments 138 and 139 together because they refer to the same clause, namely, No. 54? The proviso to this clause contemplates that if the District Magistrate is a member of the municipal authority concerned, his functions under this clause shall be discharged by the Commissioner. My point is that the union board is under the control of the District Magistrate; so if a dispute arises between the municipal authority and the union board, the District Magistrate being the head of the union board and the controlling authority, he should not be the final judge. My proposal is that in that case the matter should be referred to the Divisional Commissioner, whose decision shall be final. It is unreasonable that in one capacity he being the head of the union board should be the final judge in the case of a dispute between a municipal authority and the union board, as the municipality may not be represented and thus may become a sufferer. That is all, my Lord, I have to say in this matter."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this amendment has reference to a comparatively unimportant clause of the Bill—a clause which we hope will seldom come into operation. This clause merely provides what is to happen if a dispute occurs between a municipality and a union board. Obviously that contingency may arise, even although it is likely to be rare: and the clause says that, in that event, the quarrel shall be decided by the District Magistrate as long as he is not a member of the municipality. It is modelled on section 136 of the Local Self-Government Act, which says that if a dispute arises between a municipality and a local authority, or authorities, within the same district, the matter shall be referred to the Magistrate of the district. That is an exact precedent. I understand, however, that the Hon'ble Member says that the connection of the District Magistrate with the union board will be such as to disqualify him for the post of arbitrator. In that I think the Hon'ble Member is mistaken. The immediate supervising authority over these union boards will be the local board and the district board: the issues involved are not likely to be serious, and the District Magistrate is not likely in any sense to be biased one way or the other in respect of them. It seems to me to be an unnecessary complication to insist on these petty trifles coming up before the Divisional Commissioner who has far more important duties to attend to."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I beg to submit that the union boards will be practically under the direct supervision of the circle officers and the circle officers will be directly under the district board. In that case I am not convinced of the reasons for saying that it will be proper that the District Magistrate should be the final authority in a dispute like the one contemplated in this clause. If there is any precedent that should not be followed. District Boards in the majority of cases are also presided over by the District Magistrate: so I am not convinced of the reasons of the opposition and I leave the matter to Your Excellency's Council."

The motions were then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 140.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after clause 55A (now clause 50) the following be inserted, namely :—

"55 (41). All matters placed under the control and administration of the district board under the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885 shall be wholly transferred to the control and administration of the local board with adequate funds for the purposes of such control and administration, and the function of the district board shall primarily be that of a controlling authority over the local and union boards."

Babu A. C. Datta.

He said :—

“The Bengal Local Self-Government Act was passed on the 4th April, 1885. There were three classes of bodies brought into existence by the Act, viz., Union Committee, Local Board and District Board. The whole question of local self-government was discussed at length by the District Administration Committee after about 30 years’ working of the Act. That Committee declared that both the Union Committees and the Local Boards have been great failures. Various reasons have been given for this failure. But I accept without reservation the conclusion of the District Administration Committee that one of the chief reasons is to be found in the changes made in the original Local Self-Government Bill of 1883. The terms of the Bill which was introduced into the Council in February 1883 is a most interesting and profitable study. Only two classes of boards were originally proposed, viz., the Union Committee for the management of village affairs, and Local Boards for the general control of the Union Committees and for the management of works and institutions of more general importance. The Local Boards were to be entrusted with the powers and duties now exercised by District Boards, and were to be under the general control of a Central Board sitting in Calcutta. But the Secretary of State opposed the idea of a Central Board, and wanted to substitute it by a District Board so as to place each of the Local Government bodies completely under the eye and hand of the District Officer. The good and sagacious Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Rivers Thompson, unsuccessfully protested against this suggestion, as in his view the efficient and independent working of the Local Boards would be endangered by the establishment of District Committees, and he therefore insisted upon the Local Board being the largest unit of administration. The proposal of Sir Rivers Thompson was accepted by the Government of India. But most unfortunately for the cause of local self-government in this country the Secretary of State adhered to the scheme of District Committee and the result was the creation of the District Board as an administrative body. The Secretary of State had no objection to treating the District Committees as committees of control rather than committees of administration. But to our greatest misfortune further and worse changes were made and the District Board under the chairmanship of the District Officer became the unit of administration and not simply a committee of control, and the Local Boards were the agents of the District Boards with very restricted powers and without any financial independence, while union committees became merely optional appendages of the superior bodies. In fact they came to be the fifth wheel to the coach. Thus the changes made at the instance of the Secretary of State completely transformed the whole scheme for local self-government in Bengal originally elaborated with great care and wisdom by the framers of the Bill. It was certainly a mistake to make the District Board the administrative unit of local self-government, and to leave the smaller bodies dependant on its charity and with no clearly defined position in the general scheme. This, according to the District Administration Committee, was to begin local self-government at the wrong end, for the system ought to start from the bottom and work up, as was originally intended, rather than from the top and work down. The Decentralization Commission was also of opinion that the scant success of the efforts hitherto made to introduce a system of rural self-government is largely due to the fact that we have not built up from the bottom. Even as committees of control the areas of jurisdiction of the District Board is too large and experience has shown that they are composed largely of members who have neither local knowledge or interest in local works. It must be the common experience of many District Boards that members representing one subdivision are ignorant about the local condition of other subdivisions. How can you feel an interest in works of public utility unless you know the locality and the people and their wants and wishes? My own experience is that at present roads, khals, bridges, tanks, schools and dispensaries are now undertaken by a District Board piecemeal and at random without considering the wants of the entire district and without any adjustment of the conflicting claims of the different parts of the district. Nobody knows the whole district and nobody feels and takes any keen interest in the entire district. We sometimes have an unseemly contest between the representative of different subdivisions each trying to screw out as much money as he can for the improvement of his own subdivision. The most important part of the work of the District Board is done in the various committees, e.g., the Education Committee, Public Works Committee, Medical Committee, and so on. For obvious reasons the members living in the interior of the district are unable to serve on those committees with anything like efficiency. Thus it often-times happens that those who have local knowledge do not work on those committees, and those who work on those committees have no local knowledge. Besides the number of members is very restricted, and many parts of the district go absolutely unrepresented. At present each District Board on the average has twenty members with an average population of 17 lakhs. Speaking roughly, therefore, each member represents a population of close upon one lakh. This, to say the least, is very meagre and poor representation. In Assam they have no District Board as in Bengal; they have all Local Boards, one for each subdivisions the status of a Local Board there being similar to that of a District Board here. Each member there represents about 20,000 persons, i.e., the representation there is five-time as much as we have got here. In Bengal the representation in municipalities is immeasurably better than in District Board areas, each Municipal Commissioner representing about 1,400 persons. Then again some members are too influential to be ousted by others. The result inevitably is an unequal and inequitable distribution of the district fund over the different parts of the district. A thorough and intimate knowledge on the part of the members of the entire area of their jurisdiction is the only remedy of this state of things. This intimate knowledge cannot be ensured without reduction of inordinately large charges. If partition of districts is necessary for bringing the executive officers of Government into closer touch with the people, then, my Lord, the partition of local self-government areas is much more necessary for bringing the members of the self-governing bodies into closer touch with those people whose affairs they are invited to manage. The question now arises how this can be accomplished. I venture to think, my Lord, the abolition of the District Boards and transference of all their powers and duties to the Local Boards will solve the whole problem. It is not a revolutionary proposal that I make. I have reviewed the history of the law of local self-government in Bengal only to show that that was precisely the original idea of those responsible statesmen and administrators to whom belongs the glory and pride of making an attempt to introduce local self-government. I do not plead for the acceptance of a new idea, new policy or new scheme. I only urge that the great blunder against which Sir Rivers Thompson fought unsuccessfully should now be rectified. I only plead that the scheme which was approved in 1883 by the Government of India should be adopted. I only say this, that the institution which has now been given a trial for 34 years, and which, according to the District Administration Committee, has failed because its basis was unsound and unpractical—I only say, my Lord, that institution should now be practically abolished. While however holding this strong view, I cannot be insensible to the supreme importance of disturbing the existing system as little as possible. I cannot overlook this stupendous difficulties involved in the dislocation of the present structure. I have therefore proposed not the abolition of the District Board altogether, but only the transference of the administrative duties and powers of the District Boards to the Local Boards. In other words, I propose that the Local Boards should be the largest unit of administration so far as works and institutions of more general importance are concerned, and the District Board should be essentially a board of control—a board for controlling and supervising the Local Boards and Union Committees. This principle has already been accepted by Bengal Act III of 1885, section 101 of which gives power to the Local Government and the District Board to transfer all their powers to Local Boards. But the power is discretionary and has, as a matter of fact, never been exercised except recently in favour of the Asansol Local Board. This is a matter, my Lord, in which Bengal can imitate with advantage the system which now obtains in Assam. Whoever has seen the roads and bridges and other works executed and managed by the Assam Local Boards must admit their superiority to those of most districts of Bengal. The verdict of those who are competent to speak with authority on the subject is that the system of Local Boards in Madras has been an unqualified success, and a reference to the Madras Local Boards Act V of 1884, and the Amending Act of 1900 shews what an important position has been assigned to the Local Boards established in that Presidency. It is these boards that really form the principal units of sanitary administration.

Babu A. C. Datta.

Allow me, my Lord, in conclusion to invite the attention of the Council to the historic resolution which the Government of India issued on the 18th May, 1882 on the subject of local self-government. The view of the Government of India, as then formulated, was that District Boards had failed to secure the attendance of members possessing local knowledge of outlying parts of the district, with the result that undue attention was paid to the areas adjoining the district headquarters, or that the business fell into the hands of the Collector. The Government of India therefore modified the previous suggestion to constitute one committee for each district, and expressed a desire that the smallest administrative units—the subdivisions—should ordinarily form the maximum area to be placed under a Local Board. It was laid down that 'the cardinal principle, which is essential to the success of self-government in any shape, is this, that the jurisdiction of the primary board must be so limited in area as to ensure both local knowledge and local interest on the part of each of the members.'

The recommendation of the Decentralization Commission may also be considered with profit in this connection. Paragraph 736 of their report runs as follows :—

'We are strongly in favour of the principle enunciated by Lord Ripon's Government in 1882 that Subdistrict Boards should form an essential part in the scheme of local self-government, that they should have adequate resources and a large measure of independence, and that their jurisdiction should be so limited in area as to ensure both local knowledge and interest on the part of the members, and be at the same time a unit well-known to the people. We think that the admitted failure of Subdistrict Boards, as a whole, has been largely due to circumscription of their powers and resources. In Madras and Assam, where they have a free scope, they appear to have achieved some measure of success.'

The specific recommendation of the Commission formulated with great precision in paragraph 93, page 307 of their report substantially supports my recommendation.

My motion also receives unstinted support from Dr. Bentley, our Sanitary Commissioner, who, while discussing the Bill from a sanitary point of view, says "If the Circle Boards are not established, it is essential that Local Boards should be developed so as to form intermediate units of local self-government administration. District Boards have been woefully neglectful and inefficient, specially in respect of public health—and this is largely due to the excessive size of the areas they have to administer. The District Board should be the co-ordinating and controlling authority for the public health administration of the district, but the attempt to administer measures for the prevention of the disease over an area of several thousand square miles will prove expensive, wasteful and inefficient and it is absolutely essential that intermediate sanitary districts should be created if systematic work is to be attempted in rural areas with any hope of success.'

Conditions in England are no doubt very different from those in Bengal. But the English system also supports my motion.

Mr. O'Malley; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

In England the largest unit of administration is the county and on the average a County Council administers an area almost $2\frac{1}{2}$ times smaller than that under a District Board in Bengal. This would be the nearest approach to the average area of a Local Board in Bengal. County Councils, moreover, are not really responsible for the details of sanitary administration which is left in the hands of smaller bodies intermediate in size between County Councils on the one hand and Parish Councils on the other.

So, my Lord, reason, authority, precedents and experience—they are all in support of the motion which I hope Your Excellency's Government and the Council will accept."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, the clause which the Hon'ble Mover wishes to add to the Bill is of a revolutionary character, and judged from the fact that only seven elected members are present, it does not appear to have been thought attractive by the other side of the House. Section 101 of the Local Self-Government Act provides that any particular matter which is under the control and administration of the District Board may be transferred either wholly or in part to a Local Board with adequate funds; for instance, all the roads or some of a subdivision may be transferred to a Local Board with an allotment sufficient for their construction and upkeep. This amendment, however, is quite of a different nature as it aims at transferring the whole work of a District Board to Local Boards. It contemplates a drastic change in the system of local self-government which has been in force for over 30 years. If it were accepted, the District Boards would be reduced to a shadow of themselves. The whole organization now existing would be swept away, District Engineers would have to be abolished and the control of roads, schools, dispensaries, public health, etc.,—in fact all the functions of the District Boards—left to the Local Boards. This is not a fair amendment to make in connection with the Village Self-Government Bill, the object of which is to create village authorities. It is nothing less than a sweeping amendment of the Local Self-Government Act cutting at the root of the system which the Act has established. Government cannot possibly consider such an amendment in connection with the Village Self-Government Bill, and on behalf of Government therefore I must give an uncompromising negative to the motion."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, this may not be acceptable to the Council—that is quite another matter. But it passes my comprehension how my amendment can be characterized as a revolutionary proposal. I have placed before the Council the whole history of the matter. I have shown how this was the original idea of the Self-Government Bill of 1883 and how it was accepted by the Government of India. This was also the idea of Sir Rivers Thompson. I have heard nothing said in reply to that portion of my speech. In fact I take my stand upon the history of the matter and I know it is impossible to give any answer to that. Quite apart from that, however, the principle that I am advocating has been expressly and in so many words accepted in section 101 of the Local Self-Government Act of 1885. And my amendment is almost a verbatim reproduction, with some slight alterations, of that section in the Act of 1885. There is absolutely no difference between that section and my amendment, except that in the former it is optional to the Lieutenant-Governor, while in my amendment I have suggested that it 'shall be transferred.' That is all. So far as the principle is concerned it is accepted in the Act of 1885, and I cannot follow the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley when he characterizes my proposal as revolutionary. My real point is this: I am not proposing to do away with the control of the District Board. All I want is that the District Board should be the controlling body and the Local Board should be the administrative body. There is nothing revolutionary in this. And I think in view of the result obtained in other provinces under this system it deserves a careful consideration by the members of this Council."

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 141.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the words "except in matters relating to dafadars and chaukidars" in the last two lines of clause 55A (now clause 50) be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the whole subject has been discussed several times, and I do not think any useful purpose will be served by any new observations on this point."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, a little while ago I thought I had reached the last of these amendments which would place the dafadars and chaukidars under the subordination of Local Boards, but I had apparently missed this one. My objection to such a proposal is the same, namely, that Local Boards have no historical connection with dafadars and chaukidars, and that they are unsuitable authorities to be placed in a supervising position over them."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 142.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after clause 55A (now clause 50) the following be inserted, namely :—

"55B. (1) Every Union Board shall submit annually to the Local Board, on or before such date as the Local Board may appoint an estimate of the probable receipts and expenditure of the Union Board under each head of account for the ensuing year, and an account of its receipts and expenditure for the past year; and shall submit any other reports which the District Board or Local Board may, from time to time, require.

(2) Every estimate submitted under this section shall be subject to the sanction of the Local Board, who may, before sanctioning any estimate, modify it as it may think fit.

55C. No Union Board shall incur expenses or undertake liabilities to any amount exceeding the limit imposed by the Local Board."

He said :—

"My Lord, in support of this amendment I have only to say this: that these provisions are already to be found in the Local Self-Government Act in respect of the union committees. It does occur to me that these provisions are wholesome and there is no reason why they should not be included in the present Bill."

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu A. C. Datta.

Adjournment.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, it is true that these clauses are modelled on sections 105 and 106 of the Local Self-Government Act, and the Hon'ble Member would justify them as a simple prudent measure of accounts procedure. But, in fact, they go beyond that. In the first place, as regards accounts matters, we do not require a special clause. We shall have a rule-making power in respect to accounts, and in so far as it may be desirable to make Union Boards draw up estimates and budgets of the expenditure they seek to incur, we shall have power to direct them to do so. But the objection to inserting clauses of this kind in the Bill is not only that it is not necessary, but also that, as worded, it would result in giving Local Boards a direct authority over chaukidari administration which will be in conflict with the powers vested in the District Magistrate. That is one of the results of combining in one body the chaukidari and petty municipal administrations which were previously entrusted to two different bodies. If we adopt account rules which were previously applicable to one body only, we arrive at the undesirable result that we give a right of interference with a side of the administration with which that body had previously no connection whatever. Under the proposed section the Union Boards cannot incur any expenditure or undertake liabilities of any amount exceeding the limit imposed by Local Boards, and it would, therefore, be in the power of the Local Board to say that there shall or shall not be so many chaukidars, and that their pay, even if approved by the District Magistrate, shall or shall not be paid to them unless it is in accordance with what the Local Board has laid down. There would thus be a direct conflict of authority, and on this second ground also, I would oppose the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing more to say.”

The motion was then put and lost.

Adjournment.

The Council was then adjourned to the next day, Wednesday, the 9th April, 1919, at 11 A.M. in Government House, Calcutta.

BILL, 1919.

Babu A. C. Datta; Mr. Kerr.

The discussion on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919, was resumed.

AMENDMENT No. 143.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the words "sub-divisional magistrates" and "circle officers" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (I) of clause 56 (now clause 51) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, the words 'the sub-divisional magistrates' and 'circle officers' were not in the original clause. They have been introduced by the Select Committee on the second occasion. Whatever may be the position as regards sub-divisional magistrates we have serious objections to this important power being invested upon the circle officers; we are afraid that the result will be the departmentalization of the union board. In the light of our experience of the working of the wholesome provisions of the Chowkidari Act of 1870, we know how the village police were absolutely departmentalized. With regard to this matter, of course, the circle board was the essence of the scheme of the District Administration Committee, but the circle board has been eliminated by the Select Committee and the Council has accepted that position. Now, that being so, the circle board having been eliminated, it is only proper that the circle officers should also go out. Circle officer without a circle board is rather an anomaly. The result will be that the village council will be something like a village school with the members of the union board as peoples and the circle officers as pedagogues, and what we are afraid of, my Lord, that like a veritable pedagogue the circle officer will use the rod too frequently and too indiscriminately and will possibly hinder the spontaneous growth of the self-governing institution. That is our apprehension. In paragraph 720 of their report the Decentralization Commission said that it is most desirable that the union board should be free from interference of lower Government subordinates. I am not quite sure, my Lord, it may be said possibly that this was a remark which was not intended for officers of the class of circle officers, but I should think that this applies to the circle officers, specially in view of the fact that the proposal to appoint deputy magistrates as circle officers has been for all practical purposes rejected and that it is now proposed that circle officers will be young sub-deputy collectors either just appointed or who will be appointed presently. In view of all this we fear that the interference of circle officers is likely to hinder the growth of union boards : and besides, my Lord, it appears to me that this is more retrograde than the corresponding section 120 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885, and especially as these words were not in the original clause there is no special reason why they should be added at this last stage."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"My Lord, I may begin by correcting one misapprehension under which the Hon'ble Member seems to be labouring. He says that these words to which he objects were not in the original Bill; but in the Bill, as it was presented to the Council in February last, it was provided in Schedule III that the district magistrate should be authorized to delegate to a sub-divisional magistrate or a circle officer the power of seeing that the proceedings of union boards were in conformity with the law and the rules made thereunder. In the Select Committee it was objected—and I think quite rightly objected, that this was not a proper matter for delegation. It was argued that if it is the policy of Government to employ these officers in seeing that the proceedings of union boards are conducted in conformity with the law, the policy of Government ought to be provided for in the law itself and should not be left as a matter of delegation for the magistrate's decision. The Select Committee agreed with that view, and they consequently cancelled that item in the schedule and inserted these words in clause 56—the words which the Hon'ble Member wishes to get rid of.

As far as I understand the Hon'ble Member, he does not very much object to sub-divisional magistrates exercising this power and I think it is fairly clear that under the present system of administration, the district magistrate and the sub-divisional magistrate must have the power of inspecting these union boards and of seeing that their proceedings are conducted on the right lines. But the Hon'ble Member does object to this duty being entrusted to circle officers. The Hon'ble Member has quoted a good many extracts from the report of the District Administration Committee; and I gather that he considers that the views of that body are entitled to considerable weight. I am rather surprised therefore that he does not seem to have studied their scheme of circle officers. He says that as the circle boards have been knocked out, we should knock out the circle officers also. Under the District Administration Committee's scheme, circle boards were to meet once a quarter; the circle officer might be its Secretary or he might be a member. It was an obvious defect in the Committee's scheme that there was very little work for the circle board, and therefore the Select Committee abolished the circle board. But, as regards the circle officer, the position is entirely different, and the fact that circle boards have been abolished is no reason for abolishing circle officers also. The circle officer is to be a touring officer. He is to have under his jurisdiction 25 or 30 of these boards, he is to be on tour nearly the whole of the month and he is expected to visit each union at least once a month. It can hardly be expected that a circle officer visiting a union would merely pass the time of day with the president, talking about the weather and the state of crops, and carefully refraining from putting any questions as to how the union boards were working and as to what sort of difficulties they were meeting. It is to be a definite part of the functions of the circle officer to see that the proceedings of union boards are in conformity with the law, and the circle officer is obviously the person who will have the best opportunities of doing so. If the Hon'ble Member's amendment were accepted, the only people who would have power to look into the working of these small bodies would be the commissioner, the district magistrate, the chairman of the district board and the chairman of the local board. I explained yesterday that in each district there will be on the average, when the scheme is extended throughout the province, 250 union boards. Obviously, the district magistrate could not inspect these bodies individually—still less the commissioner. The sub-divisional officer will have 80 or 100 union boards in his jurisdiction, but that number is too many for him to be in touch with. If there is to be any control over these union boards and if they are to be given real guidance and help, we must go lower down the official hierarchy, and I do not think that it will be seriously suggested that these small bodies composed of village people will not require help and guidance at any rate for some years to come. Government, therefore, consider it essential to retain this function of the circle officer. The circle officer is not going to be a raw youth put in to worry these bodies. We have, it is true, increased the cadre in view of the passing of this Bill; but it does not follow that we shall put in men who were only appointed the other day to undertake the duties of circle officers. We shall probably put in more experienced men who have already been trained as circle officers, and in any case sub-deputy collectors will be trained before they are entrusted with these functions. On these grounds, I submit that it is necessary, for the proper working of the Bill, to retain these functions of the circle officer and I must therefore oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, one of the important arguments advanced by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr is this—that the institution of circle officers has been very much recommended by the District Administration Committee. Now, my Lord, I wanted to avoid any reference to the District Administration Committee's report about the origin of this institution. I wanted to avoid advisedly and deliberately because I think there is something very wrong in the case that has been made out in favour of the circle officer by the District Administration Committee. If we analyze the position of the District Administration Committee about these officers, it comes to this: They say that the real problem is how to bring Government officials into touch with the people in order to enlist their co-operation and sympathy in all administrative measures. Then it is said that in Bengal administrative devolution stops at the sub-divisional officers: there is another agency subordinate to sub-divisional officers as a connecting link between Government on the one side and the people on the other. Then they go on to consider as to how an agency between the villagers and Government can be established here in Bengal. And then they consider as to why the tahsildars and other officers below the sub-divisional officers, whose main function is the collection of revenue, should not form this agency; but having regard to the permanent settlement in Bengal it would be quite unreasonable to bring into existence a class of officers for that purpose and therefore they go on to observe that there must be some other justification for bringing into existence some such officers, and then they say that justification will be found in village organization. It is in that way that a case has been made out for circle officers: in other words, according to the view of the District Administration Committee, circle officers are not wanted as a means to the end which is village self-government, but circle officers are the end and that in order to give them some occupation that the village system should be organized. In any case the view that has been taken by the District Administration Committee has nothing to do with village self-government. In this clause 56 (now clause 51) there is first of all the commissioner, then the district magistrate, then the sub-divisional officer, the circle officer, then the chairman of the district board and finally the chairman of the local board who will inspect the working of the local board. That cannot be conducive to the growth of these individual institutions."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 144.

The President said :—

"Item No. 144 is covered by the previous decision."

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that the words "circle officers" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 56 (now clause 51) be omitted.

*Babu A. C. Datta ; Sir H. Wheeler.AMENDMENT No. 145.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the word "commissioner" in line 1 of sub-clause (2) of clause 56 (now clause 51) the words "district board" be substituted.

He said :

"My Lord, in this connection I shall only refer to another clause of a similar subject, namely, clause 63 (now clause 58) where similar power is given to the district magistrate or the district board, and besides my Lord, the supervision will be done better by the district board who will be nearer at home than by the commissioner with all his multifarious duties and living at some distance and not in direct touch with the union boards."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I must oppose this amendment. Clause 56 in its first portion places the duty on certain authorities of seeing that the actions of these union boards are in accordance with law, and in the second portion it gives power to the Commissioner to annul proceedings which are not in accordance with law, this being a sequel to the first part. The placing of this power with the Commissioner is in conformity with the ordinary principle of outside control. It has been said on occasions in the past that local self-government has not had a fair chance of success in this province because control has been too much from within instead of from without. Now when, in this instance, we propose to impose control from without, we are told that that, in its turn, is not necessary, and that it will be quite sufficient to vest the controlling authority in the district board. I submit that the suggestion is inconsistent with the idea of outside control, and that the Commissioner is the proper agency to intervene if the proceedings transgress the law. It is arguable, indeed, that in mentioning the Commissioner we are putting it unnecessarily high, and that we might reasonably have vested this power in the district magistrate: but in so far as the setting aside of the action taken presumably, by a responsible local authority, is an act of some importance, I do not see that there is any cause for complaint in that we have vested it in a higher officer, and in answer to the assertion that the Commissioner will know nothing about what is going on, I may say that he will, inevitably, act on the reports of the supervising functionaries that are mentioned in the first part of the clause."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, there is nothing more to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 146.

The following motion was deemed to be withdrawn :—

If motion No. 145 be carried the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta also to move that for the word "he" in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 56 (now clause 51) the word "they" be substituted.

Babu A. C. Datta; Sir H. Wheeler.

AMENDMENT No. 147.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after the word "commissioner" in line 1 of sub-clause (2) of clause 56 (now clause 51) the words "or the chairman of the district board" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, my justification for this amendment is that in clause 63 (now clause 58) a similar power has been given to the district magistrate as well as to the district board and that may be done in this case also."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I have just explained the intention in introducing the Commissioner in this clause and I cannot see any advantage in instituting a dual-authority which will have the right to set aside an illegal action if taken by the union board. The precedent of clause 63 (now clause 58) is not very appropriate; that has to do with the suspension of action—a kind of emergency power to be applied immediately if it is found that a serious mistake has been committed. There may be justification for giving that power concurrently to the district magistrate and to the district board which will see a good deal of the working of these union boards, but clause 56 (now clause 51) is entirely different. That covers the duty of definitely setting aside a proceeding, and that is best vested in one authority and not in two."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, so far as the arguments of the Hon'ble Member based on dual-authority are concerned, I do not think that, as there are so many instances of dual, treble and quadruple authorities in this Bill that is a sufficient ground for opposing my amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 148.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the words "or any other person authorized by them or by the local Government" in lines 3, 4 and 5 of clause 57 (now clause 52), be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, the corresponding section in the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885 is section 121, but these words do not appear in that section, and I am not aware of any reason why they should be used here."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Clauses 57 and 58 (now clauses 52 and 53) of the Bill are, in a sense, consequential on clause 56 (now clause 51). Clause 56 (now clause 51), as I have just said, makes certain people responsible for seeing that the union boards are working in conformity with the law. Clauses 57 and 58 (now clauses 52 and 53) give certain people the right of inspecting the record of work of these union boards, and seeing whether their work is running in a proper way or not. In clause 57 (now clause 52) it is provided that 'the chairman of the district board or local board or any other person authorized by them or by the local Government' may have access to books, records, etc., (Clause 58 (now clause 53) provides the same as regards works in progress. The Hon'ble Member wishes to omit the reference to "other persons" but to my mind that would be a most regrettable curtailment of the section, and I would instance to him persons to whose intervention, I should imagine, no exception can be taken. I mentioned the other day that we shall have power to make rules regarding accounts and audit. Proper account-keeping will be an important part of the administration as conducted by the union boards, and it will be a part of the administration which it is most undesirable to allow to go wrong. It may happen that it will be found desirable to send persons down to audit and look into the accounts of these union boards, and, if so, they will be authorized under this section, and I cannot see that any reasonable exception can be taken to action on these lines. If so, it is right that this clause should stand as at present."

Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I have nothing more to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 149.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that the words "and other person authorized by them or by the Local Government", in lines 3 and 4 of clause 58 (now clause 53), be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, I feel that there may be cases in which it may be necessary to engage other persons for the purposes of the inspection contemplated by clause 58. Therefore, on second consideration, I do not like to press this amendment. I, therefore, beg permission to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 150.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "district magistrate", in line 1 and in line 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 59A (now clause 54), the words "district board" be substituted.

Sir H. Wheeler; Babu A. C. Datta; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, had other amendments been accepted, it would have brought the district board into closer relation with the chaukidars and dafadars than they ever have been, or than it was ever intended that they should be. In that case, this amendment might be said to be consequential. But those other amendments not having been accepted, I submit that this amendment is entirely unreasonable and inappropriate, and I therefore oppose it.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing to add.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 151.

The following motion was deemed to be withdrawn.

If motion No. 150 be carried the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the word “he”, in line 6 of sub-clause (1) of clause 59A (now clause 54) the word “they” be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 152.

Clause 61.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words “district magistrate”, in the two places in which they occur in clause 61 (now clause 56), the words “divisional commissioner” be substituted.

He said :

“My Lord, my reasons are that in analogous proceedings of these boards, the commissioner has been given the power of interference, and I think that the removal and supersession of these boards should be done by the commissioner independent of the district magistrate. It is a serious matter and it is very desirable that it should not be done locally, but by the divisional commissioner.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“Sir, I would accept the amendment if the Hon'ble Member would agree to mention the district magistrate as one of the persons whose views the Commissioner would consider, that is to say, that the Commissioner, after consideration of the views of the district magistrate and the district board, etc.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“My Lord, I would accept that.”

Sir H. Wheeler. The President; Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

The motion was put in the following form and agreed to :—

- (1) that for the words “district magistrate” in the two places where they occur in sub-clause (1) of clause 61 (now clause 56) the word “commissioner” be substituted,
- (2) that after the words “consideration of the views of” in the same sub-clause the words “the district magistrate and” be inserted, and
- (3) the words “with the sanction of the commissioner” in the same sub-clause be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 153.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, amendment No. 153 falls, I think.”

The President said :—

“As a result of the decision of the Council on the previous amendment this amendment is no longer in order. The Council decided that the word ‘commissioner’ be substituted, and they cannot go back on that decision.”

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn. It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words “if the district magistrate, after consideration of the views of the district board, is”, in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 61 (now clause 56) the following be substituted, namely :—“If the district board are”; and that for the words “district magistrate may, with the sanction of the commissioner” in lines 6, 7 and 8 of sub-clause (1) of the same clause, the words “district board may, with the sanction of the local Government”, be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 154.

The following motion was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that the words “with the sanction of the commissioner”, in lines 7 and 8 of clause 61 (now clause 56) be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 155.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, in the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, moved that at the end of sub-clause (1) (b) of clause 61 (now clause 56), the following be added, namely :—

“either as regards the exercise of its power under part I or part II, or both”.

He said :

“My Lord, in the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray I applied for permission to move the amendment which stands in his name. The

Mr. P. C. Mitter; The President.

Hon'ble Mr. Roy apprehended that in consequence of the supersession of the union board by an order of the magistrate, the result will be that it would affect the status of those members of the board, who might be appointed as members of the union bench and as members of the union court, that is the criminal bench and the civil court, and that it is desirable that it should not have such consequences. But this morning, the Hon'ble Mr. Duval has drawn my attention to the fact that this criminal bench and the civil court will be created by an order of the local Government. That being so, it does not follow that an order of the magistrate will affect such institutions, and therefore I do not think on reconsideration that the amendment proposed is necessary. I therefore ask permission to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 156.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved that after sub-clause (1) of clause 61 (now clause 56), the following be inserted, namely :—

"Provided that in the case of an order under clause (b) it shall be necessary for the district magistrate to obtain the concurrence of the chairman of the district board before recording the order."

He said :

"My Lord, as a result of the amendment which has already been accepted, I would like to make a little alteration in my amendment, leaving the substituted words 'divisional commissioner' for the words 'district magistrate'. I may submit that the change I am asking for is more or less consequential on the amendment already accepted by the Council. In the Bill as it originally stood it was the district magistrate who was to be given this power, but now the Council has decided that that power will be exercised by the divisional commissioner. I will ask your Excellency's permission to make that alteration in my amendment and then I shall make my submission with regard to the main point."

The President said :—

"Yes, you may."

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

"My object in moving this amendment is that with regard to the supersession which is the subject-matter of clause 61 (1) (b) [now clause 56 (1) (b)] and with regard to that alone the concurrence of the chairman of the district board should be obtained. The whole scheme of this Bill is such that the chairman of the district board and the district magistrate should act in mutual co-operation, and it is desirable that when a serious step like that of supersession is taken, there should be concurrence of the chairman of the district board. That will obviate a misunderstanding, and that I submit will lead to a better working of these union boards. My Lord, on another occasion I indicated that if a local self-governing institution needs to be reprimanded or superseded in the interests of self-government, strong action should be taken, and at the same time it is desirable that all the authorities should be unanimous in a matter like this."

Sir H. Wheeler ; Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

“My Lord, I do not think that this was a very good amendment even as it was first filed, and I submit that it has become worse now that we have amended clause 61 (now clause 56) in the manner which has just been approved. The original clause was to the effect that if the district magistrate, after consideration of the views of the district board, was satisfied that a union board is incompetent, he could supersede it with the sanction of the Commissioner. The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri proposed that the order should vest solely in the Divisional Commissioner, although in any case the Divisional Commissioner's sanction would have to be obtained, and we have agreed to that course. I can imagine the Hon'ble Member arguing, though I should not agree with him, that we might require the district magistrate to get the concurrence of the district board, but I cannot see how the Commissioner of the Division can properly be expected to get the concurrence of the district board. Surely now that we have given this power to the Divisional Commissioner and have required him to consider the views of the district magistrate and the district board, we have done all that can be reasonably expected. This power of supersession is the last step in the matter of outside control. It will only be applied as an extreme step, and, we hope, it will not be applied frequently. Let it be remembered that it is to be applied to what, after all, is a small local body ; the union board will be a small body concerned with petty administration over a very small area, and administering funds which may run to Rs. 1,000 or so on an average. Is it unreasonable to give the Divisional Commissioner the ultimate right of superseding them if they fail in the discharge of their duties ?

It would be entirely anomalous to require the head of the division to obtain the concurrence of the chairman of the district board before he can take action of this nature. Moreover, it is conceivable, though I do not think it likely, that the district board might be interested or concerned in the events which led up to the supersession of the union board. I therefore oppose the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :— •

“My Lord, with regard to the first two lines of clause 61 (now clause 56) the Council will notice that all that is laid down there is that the views of the district magistrate will be considered, not necessarily accepted, but will only be considered. My amendment suggests that in case of supersession, the concurrence of the chairman of the district board may be obtained. Therefore, I submit that instead of the amendment which has already been accepted, the necessity remains. I can quite understand the disinclination on the part of the divisional commissioner to obtain the concurrence of the chairman of the district board, but, my Lord, if we are to make local self-government a success, such disinclination should be discouraged. For that reason, my Lord, I venture to think that my amendment ought to be accepted.”

The motion was then put in the amended form and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 157.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved that after sub-clause (2) of clause 61 (now clause 56) the following be inserted, namely :—

“(3) An appeal shall lie to the local Government from an order of supersession of a union board within such period and in such manner as may be prescribed by rules under section 111.”

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul Haq.

He said :

"My Lord, it has been a matter of the deepest regret to me that owing to a sudden indisposition I have not been able to take my share in the discussion on the Bill during its passage through this Council. Perhaps the Council have to be congratulated on what might possibly have been a curse, but to me, my Lord, the disappointment has been very great and I crave your Excellency's pardon for having said something by way of personal explanation before saying anything on the amendment which stands in my name.

The amendment which I propose is that in case of an order of supersession having been passed either by the district magistrate as originally proposed or by the divisional commissioner as has now been accepted, in consequence of the amendment that has been moved by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, the order of supersession shall be subject to an appeal to the local Government. I do not think I need take up the time of the Council by discussing the broad principles on which all rights of appeal are based. Briefly stated all human tribunals are more or less imperfect; and an order against which there is no right of appeal carries with it a sort of finality, which ought to attach to the decisions only of infallible tribunals. We may concede at once that this power of superseding the activities of the union board by an order of the divisional commissioner shall be very sparingly exercised and even if it is exercised at all, it will be exercised with the utmost care and caution. But after all, my Lord, an order of supersession may be found to be on enquiry not justified, and if no power is given to a higher tribunal to revise that order, the effect will be that there will be a wrong without a remedy. The right of appeal does not and cannot cause any reflection on the tribunal against which the right of appeal is given. Instances are not wanting in which the very tribunal against which the right of appeal is provided, itself gives the permission for the aggrieved party to appeal. I can mention, for instance, the case in which the High Court certifies against its own judgment that an appeal to the Privy Council is allowable. Therefore, so far as the divisional commissioner or any other authority who passes an order of supersession is concerned, there can be no reflection on him if the right of appeal is permitted. Secondly, a right of appeal gives to an aggrieved party a chance of taking the matter up to a higher tribunal, and having the facts examined by a second party, and thereby there is some sort of consolation to the aggrieved party that after all the order might perhaps have been justified. If the right of appeal is taken away, the party who is given the power to pass an order which carries with it this amount of finality, is led by the very fact of there being no appeal, to act in an arbitrary manner. My Lord, within the last few months, there have been several cases in which orders of supersession have been passed against certain municipalities. These orders have been passed by no less an authority than the local Government itself, and although we need not discuss whether these orders were justified or not, there can be no question that these orders have provoked an amount of protest from public bodies, and almost all the parts of the country affected by these orders thought that in one case, at any rate, the order of supersession should not have been passed. What will happen if an order of supersession is passed by the divisional commissioner and there is no right of appeal to the local Government? How are the aggrieved parties to vent their grievances and acquaint the local Government of what they have got to say in the matter. Supposing they send in a petition to the local Government, the section does not provide the local Government with any power of cancelling the order of supersession passed by the divisional commissioner. Secondly, I would ask Hon'ble Members to read that sub-section and they will find at once that although in an order of supersession a time-limit can be fixed, there is no limit again to the time-limit. What I mean is this: supposing the commissioner passes an order superseding the union board for a period of 10 years. Who is going to restrict his hands who is going to rectify the wrong? Supposing, so far as that particular matter is concerned, an order has got to be set right, who is going to do that, under what authority is it to be done? Thirdly, I would ask the Hon'ble Members to examine clause (a), as regards which we have not said anything, for my hon'ble friend, Mr. Mitter, who has just moved an amendment in connection with this section, has not said anything as regards sub-clause (a). I have not thought it proper to move any amendment as far as that sub-clause is concerned, because the district magistrate or the divisional commissioner or any other authority may remove, if necessary, the president of the union board. There, only an individual is concerned; it does not raise any question of principle, and I do not think it would be right and proper to take away the power of the commissioner or the district magistrate to remove the chairman through whose neglect of duty the work of the union board might suffer, but when we come to the supersession of the activities of a corporate body, like that of the union board, there the questions that arise are of a far more serious character, and it is only when the rights of the union board as a body are affected, by an adverse order passed by the commissioner, that I recommend that an appeal should be provided for, and to no less an authority than the local Government. Briefly stated, therefore, my reasons are these: In the first place, all orders ought to be, as a matter of principle, subject to appeal, so that they may be set right if there is something wrong; and, secondly, this provision to prefer an appeal does not cause any reflection on the authority over whom a right of appeal is given. Thirdly, the section is so worded that if the commissioner passes an order without fixing a time-limit, there is nothing in the section to set at least that kind of wrong right, and, fourthly, the supersession of the activities of the union board affects very seriously the rights and privileges of a corporate body and should always be subject to revision by a higher authority. I do not think, my Lord, that in moving this amendment I need say anything further."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, we are all glad to see the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq among us to-day, though, possibly for the reason that he was absent for the last two days, he has supported his amendment at greater length than will characterize my reply. I oppose the amendment as being unnecessary, and as being framed with a want of sense of proportion of what the issues at stake really are. It seems to me that a rather unexpected result may have followed from the Select Committee suggesting the adoption of the term 'union board' instead of 'village committee' as in the original Bill. We are accustomed to 'boards' as indicating bodies of some magnitude and importance, and possibly the use of the same term in connection with these unions has conveyed a similar impression in relation to the union board. But it is an erroneous impression. I have already referred to the scope and the functions of these boards; they will, in fact, be glorified panchayets, though we hope that they will be panchayets which will be more useful and satisfactory than were the existing chaukidari panchayets, while they will have greater scope for beneficial activities than the present union committees. But, in essence, these union boards will be small village bodies. In the event of their going entirely off the rails, some power has to be taken to curtail their functions, and I submit that it is not unreasonable to allow that power to be exercised by the Divisional Commissioner, and that it is entirely out of proportion to ask the Governor in Council, sitting here in Calcutta, to intervene in a matter of this kind."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; The President.

the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I desire to say a few words on this motion. I regret that this motion, which has been moved by my hon'ble friend, Mr. Mitter, is not to be accepted, as I hoped that it would be accepted, following the precedent of yesterday when some of his motions were accepted. We had, however, the misfortune of losing all our amendments.”

the President said :—

“We are now discussing the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq's motion No. 157 and not the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter's motion. The Hon'ble Member should therefore confine his remarks to the motion before the House.”

the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (continuing) said :—

“Coming to the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq's motion, I think I have heard with great care and attention the reply of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. I find he says that union boards will be glorified panchayats, having greater scope for increased activities than the union committees and that as they will be small village bodies there ought to be a sense of proportion between district magistrates and sub-divisional magistrates. Subsequently an amendment has been accepted providing that the sanction of the divisional commissioner should be obtained before passing an order and that for such small matters the local Government should not be troubled. I think I may go back to the history of the question because although it may be well known to the official members, it may not be known to the members on this side of the House ; and I may state that before 1908 under the then existing Act the power of superseding these union committees, which are now to be transformed into glorified union boards with larger scope and activities, rested in the district board—and not in the district magistrate, nor in the divisional commissioner, but in the local Government. In 1908 the Act was amended and under a certain section of the Act it was enacted that if a district board or local board or a union committee was not competent to perform the duties or persistently made default in the performance of duties imposed on it by or under this Act, the local Government may by notification specifying the reason for doing so supersede such district board, local board or union committee for a period to be specified in such notification. This is the Act, my Lord, of this legislature which will remain in force until this Act is passed. It will thus be seen that before that a much less glorified body, with smaller powers, used to be superseded not by the district magistrate or by the divisional commissioner but by the local Government ; and the local Government which thereafter in this province was transformed into a residuary Government by a subsequent amendment of the Bengal Act, must be taken to mean the Governor in Council. Therefore, my Lord, the Governor in Council up to the present time is the only authority which could supersede such a small body as the union committee. It will thus be seen that here we have got the existing Act in our favour and this is a year of progressive reform. The result of the legislation is that the district magistrate with the sanction of the divisional commissioner will supersede these union committees although they will be much expanded. I appeal to your excellency to consider whether having regard to the march of intelligence in this country and the genuine efforts made by Government to bestow self-government upon the people, this piece of legislation will be considered as a step towards progress or of retrogression. Then, my Lord, I do not know what is opposed. What I ask for is that an appeal may be allowed to the local Government ; the local Government will no doubt consider the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the order of the district magistrate. The district magistrate is not always an infallible person and the local Government presided over by your Excellency or your Excellency's successor, and assisted by the cream of the service which rules the land, will surely be in a much better position to exercise judgment than a district magistrate however good and able he may be. Therefore, my Lord, I think when we the people of this country, the subjects of the British Empire, seek that we should have the right of appeal to the highest representative of the Crown in our own Presidency, why should we be kept out and said that 'our sub-agent must decide and you must submit to his order.' Are we not subjects of the British Crown ? It is in this view of the matter that I pray that this amendment may be accepted, so that we may be able to approach your Excellency with an appeal whenever necessary."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I wish to add only one word in support of this amendment. The order of supersession is the extreme penalty which can be imposed under an Act of this kind and where the sentence is so very severe I do not see why there should not be an appeal. It does not derogate the authority and the position of the Commissioner or that of the Magistrate. It is an universal proposition that in case of an extreme sentence even the worst offender is entitled to an appeal. If the power of supersession had been reserved in the Government as the power now is there would have been no complaint. In fact by this Bill we are going to delegate that function to an inferior officer of Government. In that case I think it is only just and fair that there should be a right of appeal for the union boards. Our recent experience has shown that the sentence of supersession whether rightly or wrongly passed is strongly resented by the people, and I hope if not for anything else, at all events for the satisfaction of the people Government would act wisely to give this right of appeal. It will not take much of the time of the Governor in Council, as there will be very few cases of this character. Then why create the dissatisfaction of the people by making the order of a magistrate subject to Commissioner's sanction final. My learned friend, Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, only wants that there should be a right of appeal. I think that this is a very reasonable modification of the present clause which I hope the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler will still see his way to accept."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, in the first place, I should like to draw your Excellency's attention to clause 1, sub-clause (3), of the Bill, under which the local Government may, by notification, withdraw this Act from any district or part of a district. So far as sub-clause (b) of clause 61 (1) (now clause 56) is concerned, what does it really amount to ? It really withdraws for the time being the Act from that part of the district, superseding the board for a period to be specified in the order. I doubt very much whether the Act can take away the power from the local Government ; supersession of the board for the time being means nothing short of the withdrawal of the board. That is a matter for the Government to consider before this amendment is further resisted. In the second place, it strikes me that a provision like this made for right of appeal to the Government should automatically be acceptable to Government, if for no other reasons than for reconciling public opinion and making the work of self-government smoother in this country. I do not know whether these sentiments that the authority to be initiated under this Act relates to a very small measure of self-government with regard to what may be called glorified panchayets has found expression before or not. I do not appreciate this sentiment and would rather deprecate it. Well, my Lord, the panchayets in the olden days was a very big institution. It may have degenerated in the immediate past; and if we are really to interest ourselves in glorifying that once 'glorious' institution which was one of the features of previous administrations, we are justified in belittling it. But, my Lord, I think that what we propose to inaugurate is something more than a glorified panchayet. Judging by the great interest displayed by your Excellency in its inception and judging from the speeches of the Hon'ble Members introducing the measure in this Council from time to time, I should think that we are laying absolutely the first stone of the great structure of self-government that is coming. When it was urged by some that it might as well stand over till the Reform Scheme was matured, it was pointed out—with force—that it is right that, pending the Reform Scheme, we should be ready with the concrete foundation for the inauguration of the great measure and take the first steps that would make the success of that measure assured. It was from that point of view that we have so long been approaching this measure; and if what we have so long been maturing it was nothing more than a 'glorified panchayet', as Sir Henry Wheeler has said to-day, I do not think that the time and attention that this Council and the various select committees have been well spent. To my mind, this measure is really and truly a great measure and it ought not to be deprecated in the way it has been this morning.

My Lord, I do not wish to labour this point beyond submitting that having regard to the various diverging interests that will arise from time to time and to the strong appeal that was made, your Excellency's Government should have at least thought that it would be graceful on the part of the Government to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter said :—

"My Lord, there is one aspect of the question to which I should like to draw your Excellency's attention. It is true that a large number of these union boards will concern themselves with the administration of a small force of men but it is equally true that a fair number of them will be concerned with the administration of a considerable force of men. There will be a number of these union boards which will deal with sub-divisional towns which will have bazars and big hâts, and will be in receipt of an income of not less than eight to ten thousand rupees. I understand that it is the policy of Government that with regard to very small towns it is very desirable to have union boards and union committees than to have the application of the Bengal Municipal Act and therefore the suggestion which I venture to throw out is whether or not it is possible to make a distinction between the more important of these union boards—say union boards having an income of Rs. 2,500 and those having a less income."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I desire to speak a few words in this connection. There is a deep impression in the minds of the people that whenever their grievances are not redressed, they would like to submit a memorial to the Lat Sahib for redress. If we look, therefore, to the impression of the people, we can very well understand that everybody desires that there should be a right of appeal to your Excellency's Government and why should this desire of the people be not allowed? This is a matter which demands your Excellency's consideration. Now, so far as the position of affairs goes, we understand that the decisions arrived at by the subordinate officials of Government ought to be controlled by your Excellency's Government, not in all cases but in many cases. If that be the view, then it is a matter which ought to be considered. The union boards are for the first time introduced in our province and if any decision is arrived at by the subordinate officers of your Excellency's Government, is it not fair, just and proper that the Government—the highest official of that Government—should take that into consideration, namely, look into the matter? My Lord, I speak from my personal experience that the people of this country wish that such matters ought to be taken into consideration by the highest official of Government, and in this view of the matter I support the amendment."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul Haq.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I did not know that the joys and sorrows of poor rustics—their homely joys and their destinies obscure—were so very insignificant as not to be worthy of consideration at the hands of the high officials of Government. I had an idea that by this Village Self-Government Act high privileges and rights were going to be conferred on these institutions; but we are told practically that these institutions would be nothing but 'glorified' nonentities—so insignificant in fact that the members of your Excellency's Government cannot condescend to hear an appeal if an order is passed by a subordinate authority suspending their activities for a period, the length of which is to be determined by the authority passing the order without any restrictions as to what that period is going to be. If these bodies are really so very insignificant as that, why not leave the order of supersession to be passed by the district board; why trouble the district magistrate and the divisional commissioner again; why not place the union boards entirely subject to the control of district boards—for the district boards to look into their working, to pass an order and do whatever they like and if necessary without any right of appeal to a higher authority. I submit, my Lord, that in the original draft of the Bill itself, there was something, if not actually a provision for a right of appeal, or at least something of that character. Your Excellency will notice that, in the clause as originally drafted, the order of supersession was to have been passed by the district magistrate and the power of the district magistrate was to have been exercised with the sanction of the commissioner by an order in writing. This means that although it would have been the district magistrate who would have first taken action, the action that was proposed to be taken would have been revised by a higher authority. In this particular case, the initial step is to be taken by the divisional commissioner and there is no higher authority to revise that order. I submit, therefore, that this is going back in principle upon the original draft itself. After all that has been said by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari and Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, I do not think it is necessary for me to take up the time of this Council. I am not also physically fit, and I do not wish to inflict any long speech on a question like this. I will only say a few words before I resume my seat. My Lord, suppose an order of supersession is passed and it is really resented by the people, how are they going to give vent to their grievances? Are they to run to the office of the Amrita Bazar Patrika and kick up an agitation and are they to lead a procession through the streets and to go on selling forbidden leaflets in order to let the Government know what the public feeling is in the matter? I submit that there ought to be some provision to allow the people to let your Excellency know what their grievances are and this can best be done by providing the right of appeal. After all, why should an order be passed and the right of appeal shut out? If the order that the magistrate or the divisional commissioner passes is just and right, why should they shrink from scrutiny? I submit, therefore that it is wrong in principle; it is subversive of all rules and orders and justice to deprive an aggrieved party from the right of appeal. I appeal to your Excellency not to reject this amendment."

Sir H. Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, if I wanted evidence in support of my contention that this amendment betrays a certain amount of lack of proportion in the proposal which it contains, I should produce the evidence of the speeches that have been delivered with reference to it. I still maintain that we are in danger of getting entirely out of proportion in our view of the issues involved in this matter.

As the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has referred to section 131 of the Local Self-Government Act and has quoted it in his favour, I would briefly state that it is perfectly true that the Act groups district and local boards and union committees in one lump, and vests the power of supersession in the local Government. I can only characterize it as one of many sections which were first framed in connection with local self-Government, which are based upon an undesirable degree of centralization, towards the removal of which subsequent legislation has been directed. A section which groups as analogous bodies district boards and union committees seems to me to be defective on the face of it.

The only other point that I would mention is as regards the curious allegation that has been made by various speakers, that we want to belittle the union boards which we are endeavouring to set up. The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari seems somewhat inconsistent in referring to the glorious past of the panchayets in this country, and simultaneously saying that I am belittling union boards by referring to them under that name. The accusation reminds me somewhat of an instance some little time ago when, in a published resolution, we were rash enough to say that certain officers were discharging functions of subordinate responsibility. We were then told that we had insulted these officers by that remark, and I endeavoured to clear up that misapprehension in this Council Chamber. As regards these union boards nothing can get away from the fundamental fact that their concern is with small areas, touching which they discharge minor functions and are concerned with exiguous funds. There is really no insult intended in mentioning that the circumstances of the case are of that description.

As regards the joys and sorrows of the poor villagers, which the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq charges us with disregarding, I may mention that the supersession of a union board, if it occurs at all, will be directed towards the enhancement of those joys by removing a body which has presumably failed entirely to perform the functions allotted to it."

AMENDMENT NO. 158.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that after sub-clause (1)(a) of clause 62 (now clause 57) the following be added, namely :—

"(aa) all powers and duties of the union board under Part I shall, until such board is reconstituted, be exercised and performed by the local board."

He said :

"My Lord, this amendment and amendment No. 161. are related to each other and I propose to speak on them together and it is for your Excellency to decide whether they should be put to the House separately or together. In case of the supersession of an union board the question is which body shall carry on the work of the superseded body. This Bill is divided into two parts—Part I and Part II. Part I deals with the municipal functions and Part II with judicial functions of the union board. So far as the municipal functions are concerned it is only proper that in case of supersession of an union board, they should be carried on by the local boards. But the matter stands on a different footing when we come to the judicial functions. Therefore, I propose that the powers and duties of the union boards under Part I of the Bill should be carried on by local boards and those under Part II should be carried on as under sub-clause (b). That, my Lord, is my submission."

"My Lord, this clause deals with the distribution of the powers and functions of the union board in the event of its supersession, and it provides that these powers and functions shall be exercised and performed by such local authority, person or persons, and in such manner, as the district magistrate, with the sanction of the Commissioner, may direct, and we framed it in that way so as to give a certain amount of elasticity in distributing the different duties with which these boards may have been concerned. My objection to accepting amendment No. 158 is that it would finally vest all powers under Part I in the local board, whereas Part I contains many functions with reference to chaukidari administration, with which, as I have frequently argued during the last two days, local boards are not concerned. It would not therefore be proper that, even on the supersession of the union board, the local board should step into its shoes in regard to chaukidari matters.

"The Hon'ble Member has also referred to his second amendment, No. 161, although it is governed by different considerations, and it may save time if I also state the objections to them now. There seems to be some misapprehension underlying it. What the Hon'ble Member has in his mind is that along with the supersession of the union board, all powers under Part I should vest in the local board, while those under Part II, which deals with judicial functions, should vest in persons to be decided as in the clause as at present drafted. But I may point out that the powers exercisable under Part II are not powers of the union board; they are powers of the union bench and of the union court. If the board is superseded there will be no members of the board, and therefore there can be no bench or court, which is made up of members of the board. Therefore there is a fallacy in the reasoning of the Hon'ble Member as regards the second amendment, and I cannot accept it."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"I think my hon'ble friend is under a misapprehension. The fact of supersession will not certainly affect the criminal bench or the civil court in any way. They will remain as they are and I do not see the necessity of the second amendment proposed by my hon'ble friend. As I said a short time ago in connection with amendment No. 155, the bench and the court will be appointed by an order of the local Government. That being so, no order of supersession by a subordinate authority can touch them. They will, of course, be formed by appointment from among the members of the union board, but if the union board is abolished it does not follow that the court and bench should also be superseded because the appointment of the latter lies with the local Government and, of course, the district magistrate or the divisional commissioner cannot turn them out by saying that we abolish the court and bench."

Babu A. C. Datta ; Sir H. Wheeler ; The President.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"As regards amendment No. 161, I must admit that there was some fallacy underlying it which has been pointed by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, but which did not occur to me before. I now see that it is unnecessary and I am fully convinced by the arguments of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. Therefore, I would not press amendment No. 161. But, as regards the other amendment, I take my stand upon the arguments advanced by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler himself who says that Part I, among other things, also deals with the chaukidari function, and so far as that particular function is concerned it cannot be exercised by the local board in case of the supersession of an union board. So far as that statement goes I am quite prepared to concede that it is quite correct. But at the same time I may point out that Part I includes other functions also—I mean the municipal functions—functions which are more important than chaukidari duties, sanitary improvements, primary education, medical relief, conservancy, drainage, etc. So far as these functions are concerned, according to the line of argument followed by Sir Henry Wheeler, they should be more appropriately exercised by the local board in case of a supersession of the union board. Therefore, if I may be permitted by your Excellency, I would like to slightly modify my amendment on these lines. My proposition is this—that so far as the municipal functions are concerned they will be carried on by the local board leaving out the other function, namely, the chaukidari function mentioned in Part I. I am entitled to do this as I am not asking for more than this amendment involves."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I think I can satisfy the Hon'ble Member without the modification of his amendment. All powers and duties under this clause can be made over either to a local authority or to a person or persons, and we inserted the words 'local authority' in order to render it possible to make over the municipal functions of the union board, it may be, to the local board or to an adjoining union board. These municipal functions will ordinarily be made over to the local board, and under the clause as framed it will be perfectly possible to do so. If, as I understand, the Hon'ble Member wishes to ensure that these municipal functions must be made over to the local board, that can be done under the present Bill, but I strongly deprecate inserting other words as he now suggests, since we have no time to scrutinize the whole Bill with the view of appreciating their precise bearing."

The President said :—

"In view of what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said, I think the Hon'ble Member had better move his amendment in the form in which it appears on the paper."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 159 to 161.

The President said :—

"Nos. 159 and 160 are covered by the decision on the former amendment, and I understand the Hon'ble Member wishes to withdraw No. 161."

The following motions were then deemed to be withdrawn :—

Babu A. C. Datta ; Sir H. Wheeler ; The President.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray to move that after the words "union board", in line 1 of sub-clause (I) (b) of clause 62 (now clause 57), the words "under Part I", be inserted; and for the words "such local authority, person or persons, and in such manner, as the district magistrate, with the sanction of the commissioner, may direct, and", in lines 3 to 7 of the same sub-clause, the following be substituted, namely :—

"the local board within which the union board is situated, and under Part II by a nominee of the district magistrate."

If motion No. 159 be carried, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray also to move that sub-clause (I) (c) of clause 62 (now clause 57) be omitted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that after the words "union board" in line 1 of sub-clause (I) (b) of clause 62 (now clause 57), the words and figures "under Part II" be inserted.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 162 AND 163.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, No. 162 and No. 163 which stand in my name are exactly the same, and therefore I am taking them together."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, when I was examining these amendments, they seemed to me to be consequential, as I thought they followed the Hon'ble Member's desire to replace the district magistrate by the district board. But in any case, whether consequential or not, I do not think they are an improvement, as if the power of supersession rests with the district magistrate, with the sanction of the Commissioner, and we have now vested it in the Divisional Commissioner, it is only reasonable that the distribution of the superseded powers should equally rest with the executive authorities. The district board will not come into the act of supersession, neither should it properly come in under the distribution of the superseded powers, particularly since with chaudiari matters the district board has no concern."

The President said :—

"I was just going to raise that point. I think as a result of the amendment made in clause 61 (now clause 56), we ought strictly speaking to make a similar amendment in 62, and in place of 'the district magistrate, with sanction of the commissioner', to insert the word 'commissioner'. Under these circumstances, we had better come to a decision upon the Hon'ble Member's amendment, and if that amendment is not carried, I will ask Sir Henry Wheeler to move the amendment which I have suggested."

The motions were then put and lost.

They were as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words "district magistrate, with the sanction of the commissioner" in lines 5 and 6 of sub-clause (I) (b) of clause 62 (now clause 57), the words "district board" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta also to move that for the words "district magistrate, with the sanction of the commissioner" in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (I) (c) of clause 62 (now clause 57), the words "district board" be substituted.

Sir H. Wheeler; Babu A. C. Datta; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"With your permission, Sir, I will now move in consequence of the amendment in clause 61 (now clause 56) which has been accepted by the Council, that in clauses 62 (b) and 62 (c) (now clause 57), the words 'district magistrate, with the sanction of the commissioner,' wherever they occur, should be replaced by the word 'commissioner'."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 164.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta also moved that for the words "the district magistrate" in line 1 and in line 7 of clause 63 (now clause 58) and for the words "such magistrate", in line 4 of clause 63 (now clause 58), the words "the local board" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"This is the clause which gives power to suspend the action of a union board in case of emergency, and it vests that power in the district magistrate or the district board. Under section 124 of the Local Self-Government Act the corresponding power is exercised by the magistrate of the district or the commissioner. In the Bill we have introduced the district board, and to that extent we have recognized the desire to emphasize the position of the district board in connection with the supervision of union boards, but this amendment now asks us to go further. It asks us to take out the district magistrate entirely, and to substitute in his place the local board. In other words, it would eliminate all outside right of intervention by the district magistrate, in the event of the doing of an act which in his opinion was likely to cause injury or annoyance to the public, or to any class or body of persons, or to lead to a breach of the peace, and I submit that the intervention of the district magistrate in such a contingency is amply justified by his position in the district and the responsibilities which devolve upon him. He is essentially the man who is concerned with these considerations, and I cannot see the wisdom of eliminating him from the right to see that these considerations are not endangered by any improper action on the part of the union board."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I have nothing further to say."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 165.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words "or the district board", in line 1 of clause 63 (now clause 58), the words "on the recommendation of the district board to that effect" be substituted.

He said :

"By this amendment I rather wish to restrict to a certain extent the power of the district board. Clause 63 (now clause 58) as it stands provides for dual-control either by the district magistrate or by the district board. But I think it would be better if the district magistrate be the final authority, and I would like to leave the initiative to the district board. My object is that there should not be any difference of opinion between the two authorities. In most cases the magistrate is the real authority, but in this case, instead of acting independently, I want him to act on the initiative of the district board, which is more concerned with the working of the union board. That is all I have to submit, my Lord."

Sir H. Wheeler: Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I doubt if the Hon'ble Member has correctly represented the effect of his own amendment. As I understand him, he says he wants to avoid the dual control which now exists in the clause, under which, as framed, the district magistrate or the district board may take action, but if we accept the amendment which he suggests, the clause would run 'the district magistrate on the recommendation of the district board may, etc.,' the practical result being that even if it appeared to the district magistrate that injury or annoyance is likely to be caused to the public, or a breach of the peace is to be apprehended, he would not be able to move without the recommendation of the district board. My objection to this amendment is similar to that which I took in connection with the previous amendment, viz., that this is a matter in which the district magistrate is acutely interested and in which he should have an unfettered hand to intervene if he thinks it necessary."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"I have nothing further to add, my Lord."

The motions was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 166—169.

The following motions which were held to be covered by decisions on previous amendments were deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for clause 65 (now clause 59) the following be substituted, namely :—

- "65. When the local board makes any order under section 63, such board shall forthwith submit to the district board a copy of the order, with a statement of the reasons for making it and with any explanation which the union board concerned may wish to offer, and the district board may thereupon confirm, modify or rescind the order."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "or the district board", in lines 1 and 2 of clause 65 (now clause 59) the words "on the recommendation of the district board to that effect" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri also to move that for the words "the magistrate or board, as the case may be", in lines 2 and 3 of clause 65 (now clause 59), the word "he" be substituted.

Babu A. C. Datta ; Sir H. Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that after clause 65 (now clause 59) the following be inserted, namely :—

“ 65A. Whenever the district magistrate or the divisional commissioner passes any order under this chapter either in the first instance or upon revision, he shall forthwith transmit the whole record of the case to the local Government, who may thereupon confirm, modify or rescind the order.”

AMENDMENT No. 170.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words, “ all or any”, in line 3 of clause 74 (now clause 65), the words “ any three or more ” be substituted.

He said :

“ My Lord, clause 74 (now clause 65) relates to the constitution of the union bench. Under the clause as it stands even a single member can form a bench. In view of the fact that the decisions will be summary and final and not governed by the procedure laid down by the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes, my contention is that it would not be safe to have the bench constituted of a single member only. It is said there is safety in numbers and in that view I propose that the minimum number of members constituting the union bench should be three.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, as two other Hon'ble Members have similar amendments, I may briefly explain the position. It is perfectly true that under clause 74, (now clause 65) as it stands, the local Government may appoint all or any of the members of the board to be members of the bench, and that, therefore, it would be possible to constitute a one-man bench. It is also true that the members of the District Administration Committee seem to have contemplated a bench of several members, as they observed in paragraph 133 of their report as follows :—

‘ The other members of the Bench should ordinarily be appointed from among the members of the panchayat, and three should form a quorum for the disposal of case work.’

It would follow that if three was to be a minimum quorum we could not have a one-man bench. We considered this point in Select Committee, and opinion was not altogether unanimous with regard to it; but we eventually came to the conclusion that the change was a substantial one, which should be left to the consideration of the Council. The arguments in favour of a bench is, of course, that collective opinion is thereby secured; and when we are constituting a judicial tribunal the proceedings of which will be somewhat informal, as compared with those of the regular courts, it may be desirable to retain that collective judgment as a corrective to any possible errors of one member only. That is the argument for the amendment as I understand it. On the other hand, if we require that the bench must consist of three men, it may hamper the extension of the system, in so far as, while in some parts it may be possible to find one, or even two, men fit to exercise these powers, it may not always be the case that we can find the minimum of three; also, in subsequent stages of judicial hearings, it is more difficult and more complicated to get three men together at one time and place than it is to call on one man. These are the considerations which strike me on the other side; and I would adopt the attitude of the Select Committee and say that we are perfectly willing to leave the matter to the decision of the Council."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, as I gather from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, he is not keen about retaining a provision as regards the constitution of the union bench and leaves it to the decision of this Council. As the Hon'ble Member has said there is much to be said in favour of the collective wisdom of a body of men than the judgment of a single individual, and as the members of the union bench are not likely always to be men of judicial experience it is better to put 2 or 3 — 3 would be preferable—on the bench, and as regards the difficulty in securing the requisite number, I think if we find three persons suitable for the union board they might as well serve on the union bench, or if there be any such difficulty we need not have the bench at all. The safest thing is to have three persons on the bench, and I would, therefore, support the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta's amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have a similar motion in which I suggest that the words 'at least three' be substituted for the words 'any of the'. My reason is that such a kind of trial is like a trial by jury, and we therefore ought to have not one member but at least three. If we take two, the decision will be unsatisfactory, in case of difference of opinion. If we take at least three, the decision of the jury will be satisfactory. So my Lord, if a bench is to be formed, as the language of the clause is, then a bench consisting of one gentleman will not be satisfactory. It is, therefore, necessary that due attention should be given, I submit respectfully, to the suggestion which I have put before the Council. My Lord, if it be argued on the other hand that competent men to form the bench are not available, then, I submit respectfully, that the whole scope of the Bill will be frustrated. It is with this view that we put before the Council that men of educational qualification should come to the bench. Being a mufassal man, I am sensible of the fact that there may be places where this difficulty will arise, but in that case it is necessary to see whether such a bench can be formed or not. If such a bench cannot be formed, then, I submit the bench of one man will not be sufficient for the purpose and the whole idea will be imperfect. It is with this view perhaps that the framers of the Bill thought it necessary to put in it the elastic expression 'or any'. But, my Lord, if the object of Government be that in every union a bench is to be formed, it will be necessary to strengthen the body of the members of the board. How can that be done? I submit that if the villagers are to depend upon the decision of one man, it will be far better to go to the munsif and to have a decision from him—a trained lawyer. If we are to depend upon the decision and judgment of a man who is an untrained lawyer and not cognisant of the principles of law, depending solely upon his own common-sense, the judgment of such a man will be unsatisfactory whatever it may be. I, therefore, submit respectfully that the Council will consider the desirability of having such an expression as 'at least three'."

Mr. Hart ; Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

"My Lord, may I rise just to explain why I am unable to vote for this amendment. I did not rise to speak before because I thought that the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohun Chaudhuri would move his amendment (No. 172). I wish to point out to this Council that in the practical working of union benches there would be considerable difficulty in securing a quorum of three. The ordinary practice in the mufassal is for a bench of honorary magistrates to be constituted of two members ; and unfortunately a great deal of delay occurs in the trial of honorary magistrates' cases, owing to the fact that the two members who start a particular case can be very seldom got together on the subsequent days to which the case may be adjourned. In the case of union benches, it is very desirable that the case should be tried and disposed of in one day ; but sometimes that will be impossible. Difficult as it is to reassemble a bench of two, the difficulty with a bench of three will be far greater, and if we are now to insist that at least the same three members of the bench who begin the hearing of the case must hear it right through to the end, it will result in very great delay and trouble to the parties concerned. For this reason, I am unable to vote for anything more than a bench constituted of two members. I may say that in other provinces the same difficulty has been experienced and I may be permitted to quote one instance. In the Report of Civil Justice in the Punjab for 1916, the following occurs :—

'At present, there are no honorary civil benches in the province, the main obstacle to their constitution being the direction in section 28 (2) of the Punjab Civil Courts Act, that such benches must consist of an uneven number of members. In practice, it has been found impossible to get three or five men to meet. There seems to be no reason why two members should not form an efficient and popular tribunal.'

With this opinion, I think that most practical men, who have had experience of village life, will agree. I should like, however, just to allude to the reasons why the Bill contains the provision for a single member constituting a bench. We have, even at the present time, on certain union committees, retired members of the provincial, judicial and executive services, such as retired munsifs and subordinate judges and retired deputy magistrates ; and it was thought by the framers of the Bill that where the services of such men were available, the villagers would be very pleased to take advantage of them by having them invested with single-sitting powers. However, if the Council desires that a bench should never be constituted of one member only, I do not think that there would be very much objection to a second member being always associated with him. This arrangement would have the advantage that the other member would get the experience of legal work which the retired officer would be able to give him ; while on the other hand, the retired officer would gain by being associated with a colleague who would probably have more knowledge of local affairs and a clear understanding of local conditions. For these reasons, I should see no objection to a minimum quorum of two ; but a minimum quorum of three is, I think, a proposal so impracticable that if it were carried we shall not be able to get the union benches to work. In order that this Bill may not be a dead letter, I must vote against the amendment as it stands 'at present'."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I am quite prepared to accept the proposal of the Hon'ble Mr. Hart, about two members forming a bench ; but there may be a difficulty in the event of disagreement of the two members." •

Mr. Hart; Babu A. C. Datta; Sir H. Wheeler; the President.

The Hon'ble Mr. Hart said :—

"My Lord, may I explain that most benches of honorary magistrates consist of two members and I have never heard of any difficulty of that sort being experienced."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"Very well, my Lord, I am quite prepared to accept the suggestion of the Hon'ble Mr. Hart, viz., two members constituting the bench."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"I have no objection."

The motion was then put in the following amended form and agreed to :—

That for the words "all or any" in line 3 of clause 74 (now clause 65), the words "any two or more" be substituted.

The following motions were then deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur to move that for the words "any of the" in line 3 of clause 74 (now clause 65), the words "at least three" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the word "any" in line 3 of clause 74 (now clause 65), the words "at least three" be substituted.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 173 and 174.

The President said :—

"Items No. 173 falls to the ground and I think that No. 174 necessarily fails because the Council have just decided that the bench may be constituted of two members. By this motion (No. 174) the Hon'ble Member wishes to say that it must not be less than three; and that would, I think, be contrary to the decision which the Council have just come to."

Amendment No. 173 was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that for the word "any", in line 3 of clause 74 (now clause 65), the words "as many" be substituted, and after the word "board", in line 4 of the same clause, the words "as may be necessary" be inserted.

Amendment No. 174 was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that the following be added to clause 74 (now clause 65), namely :—

"Provided that not less than three of such members must sit together for the trial of a case, and they shall serve in such rotations and for such periods at a time as may be fixed by rules prescribed under section 111, and in accordance with rosters prepared by the District Magistrate for each union bench."

*Babu A. C. Mazumdar; Sir H. Wheeler.The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I might abide by the decision of the Council on the previous amendment and might move that not less than two of such members must sit together and so on."

The amendment was then amended by the substitution of the word "two" for the word "three".

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar (continuing) said :—

"My object in moving this is simply this: that in all probability Government will take care to appoint more than two persons to be magistrates of a bench, but then the functions of the bench should not be confined to any two for any length of time, or at all events for the term of their office. It may be a very unpleasant information to this Council, but truth must be said in a matter of this description. One of the most important features of this Bill is the constitution of a criminal bench and a civil bench in connection with union boards and it should be the utmost effort of Government to make these courts, whether civil or criminal, to be above suspicion. Now, if any two members are required to form the bench or the court for any length of time, there is the grave danger of their losing the confidence of the public. In the villages there are factions and consequently it is necessary that there should be changes of these benches at intervals. This can only be effected by rules of Government saying that for one quarter there must be two and for the next quarter another two, and there should be rosters prepared by the district magistrate as are prepared by him in the cases of benches of honorary magistrates, so that there may not be any fixity of the persons who are to try these cases: that will be a safeguard against these corruptions. I may tell this for the information of the Hon'ble Members of this Council that something has been said about honorary magistrates, but I should like to say that outside Calcutta honorary magistrates are not above suspicion. In fact, we who practise in the mufassal are fully aware that applications are very frequently made to magistrates to transfer a case from an honorary magistrate to a stipendiary magistrate. These things are being experienced and I do not think I am saying too much that this fact is even known to some of the district officers, and I think we should take steps in the present case not to allow the honorary magistrates, as they may be called bench magistrates in this case, to have any opportunity of being vitiated in their judgment and in their conduct, and I therefore earnestly hope that their service should be by rotation and in accordance with such rosters as may be prepared by the district magistrate. There is considerable danger of having permanent benches of one, two or more persons and that would be a safeguard against corruptions. There is party feeling, party factions, and they ought to be also guarded. I think if the system suggested in my amendment is accepted it will command public faith. As 'two' has been accepted by the Council I need not press for more."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"Sir, there are two points involved in this amendment. In the first place the Hon'ble Mover apparently wishes to ensure that the quorum of the bench should in no case be less than two, but this seems almost to follow from the amendment which has just been accepted to the effect that the local Government may appoint 'any two or more' members to form a bench. It would scarcely seem consistent with that provision to constitute a quorum of one. I doubt, therefore, whether the first part of the amendment is not already covered by the previous decision, and, if so, it is unnecessary. Also it could be rendered unnecessary by rules to be framed under section 111(q), which gives the local Government power to prescribe the method of forming a quorum. The local Government could easily say that the quorum shall not be less than two, and in the light of the discussion of to-day, I have no doubt that the local Government would adopt that line.

The second part of the amendment is, I think, open to objection on the ground that it is seeking an elaboration which will render the working of these village benches impossible. The whole idea of the village bench is that it shall be a small body, called together on a local complaint, to dispose of that complaint by simple methods and without the complications which attend proceedings in the ordinary courts. If that is the intention of the Bill, it will be entirely frustrated if we are to require these small village tribunals to serve by rotation and at such periods of time as may be prescribed by rules and in accordance with rosters to be prepared by the district magistrate. That is a procedure which is entirely inappropriate in the case of union benches, and it is inconsistent with the objects which it is intended that these benches should fulfil. Therefore I would oppose that part of the amendment on these grounds."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, clause 74 (now clause 65) of the Bill seeks to appoint a bench and not a panel of men; a bench can only be a bench. Therefore, the question raised in the amendment does not really arise."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I entirely agree with Sir Henry Wheeler that the elaborate procedure suggested in this amendment will frustrate the very object of the Bill. A union board will usually consist of members of not less than six and not more than nine. The local Government will select some of the members of the union board and appoint a bench, the number may be 2, 3, and I do not think it will be more than 4 generally. It is therefore desirable that when a bench consists of 2, 3, or 4 members they should all meet, and, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Hart, it is difficult to get all the four men together. Therefore no question of the members of the bench working by rotation can possibly arise. It is only in districts where the number of honorary magistrates is very large, say 20 or exceeds 20, that the procedure suggested by this amendment is followed. Surely such an elaborate procedure will be out of place in regard to union benches consisting generally of 2 to 4 members. Another reason has been suggested which I am glad the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has not referred to, but which I am bound to refer to. Opinion has been expressed that if some members of the union bench are allowed to sit together without rotation, the fact that they sit together as members of the union board for a pretty length of time would affect their integrity and honesty. I am very sorry to hear such remarks made by my hon'ble friend who, I believe, represents one party of constitutional reform in this country. If a representative of those parties would come forward and tell us in Council that the representatives of the people in a board like the union board—because they are generally representatives of the people—run the risk of becoming dishonest if only they have got to do their work without adequate interruption or intermission, I am afraid the enemies of constitutional reforms will make a very strong case against all such reforms. I am very sorry to hear such remarks made, especially because, although I do not belong to any strong political party, my own experience as a mufassal man who has to deal with a large number of honorary magistrates belies the very sad experience of my learned friend. I do not desire to discuss these matters which are very painful matters, and I hope the Council will reject this amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, following the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, although I am opposing the motion, I rise to speak—and to speak for one special reason, and that is to dissociate myself, with the utmost emphasis at my command, from the observations made by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. The stalwart champion of reform and of the rights and privileges of his countrymen now comes forward on the eve of constitutional reforms to denounce his countrymen as unfit for the most elementary administration of justice in the most advanced Presidency of India. I must say that the work of the honorary magistrates as a whole in this Presidency has been one which has merited approbation not only from the Government but from the people.

Then, my Lord, coming to the merits of the resolution itself, I fully associate myself with the observations of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler and the Hon'ble Mr. Hart. From what we know of the comparative backwardness of a considerable portion of our countrymen in the far distant and remote villages, I think it would not be advisable to make such an elaborate procedure for benches by routine, etc., as there may be many places in the mufassal where the requisite number of capable men may not be found. For these reasons, I think, that it will be well to reject this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, it has given my friends to the right no more pain to hear me say something about honorary magistrates than their expression has given me. I know abuse is no argument, and I must say that I may belong to one political party in this country from which many of my friends are perfectly free. It may be that I have always in my life strongly advocated for reforms, but I do not belong to that class of advocates of reforms who would not speak the truth when it is necessary to be said in order to rectify an abuse in the administration. That because I have advocated and I still advocate reforms in this country and therefore I am bound to say that there is no corruption and everybody in the country is a saint and no institution can be tainted—that is not my position and that is not a position which I have at any time assumed nor I hope shall I assume till I am removed from this world. On the contrary I will press the defects of any system, the defects in the constitution of our social organism and so forth and try to remedy them as far as practicable. If there is any Reform Scheme coming and at the supreme moment I say that there is corruption in some parts of the country, therefore the Reform Scheme will be thrown out is a proposition which may be advanced by men who are perfectly unconcerned with political agitation, but that is not a position which I can ever assume or think of. The thing is that fact is fact. I have said that I know something about the work of honorary magistrates in the mufassal, but I do not cast any reflection on the honesty or integrity of the honorary magistrates of Calcutta, but I know that the honorary magistrates in the mufassal are not free from suspicion. If that is a truth then I am entitled to speak without any fear of the Reform Scheme being wrecked on that account. Well, it may be that the experience of my hon'ble friend living at Howrah may be different, but if anybody is to give his honest opinion and says that there are corruptions and that a man utters the word corruption is sufficient to abuse him and throw him out of his political creed and political party. Well, that is a position which I cannot appreciate. However, I have said that the procedure will not be at all elaborate. The thing is, as my hon'ble friend, Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, has told us, that the number of magistrates vested with criminal powers will not be many. Of course, in a union there may be six or nine members. My idea is that Government may vest magisterial powers upon all the members of the board and then ask them to serve by rotation or according to the roster prepared by the District Magistrate—in fact by permutation and combination. Different sets of magistrates may serve in different quarters in the year. However, I have placed this amendment, whether it is elaborate or not I don't know. My object is to improve and purify these benches so as to make them such as to command public confidence and respect. Some of the hon'ble members have criticized my amendment and they are, of course, perfectly entitled to their own opinion."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 175.

Clause 78.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the words "or, if in the opinion of the bench, he shows negligence in prosecuting his case", in lines 2, 3 and 4 of clause 78 (now clause 69) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, clause 78 (now clause 69) relates to the dismissal of a case for default before a union bench. Now it appears to me that this provision is very vague and ill-defined. The words are 'if in the opinion of the bench he shows negligence in prosecuting his case'. Now, negligence may be considered differently by different persons and on a flimsy excuse a case may be struck off for default. Not to speak of these union benches, even in munsifs' and sub-judges' courts and, I am sorry to say, even in sessions courts cases are sometimes struck off on flimsy excuses. For instance, if there is a case fixed for a certain day and for some unforeseen reasons the case is adjourned to another day and other cases are called upon the parties to which do not appear, those cases are struck off without giving the parties an opportunity to appear. If this can happen in a responsible court, I am afraid it would be giving a very wide power to the union bench if these words are not omitted from the clause."

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I oppose this amendment. In many cases tried under the Criminal Procedure Code if the complainant neglects to pay court-fees, and similarly if he does not produce his witnesses or takes the proper action to get them summoned, the case can be summarily decided in their absence. Cases tried by these benches cannot be allowed to hang on indefinitely owing to the negligence of the complainant. With reference to the remarks of the Hon'ble Mover, and as to his fears that the benches might dismiss cases without sufficient cause, I would point out that that purpose will be protected by the provision which has been laid down in a subsequent clause as to the revision by the district magistrate or sub-divisional officer against any unfair dismissal of cases. I urge that the clause should remain as it stands."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"If a certain party after being notified does not take the trouble of making an appearance then, of course, it is a fit case for dismissal. But my only objection is that the provision is very vague and ill-defined. Supposing a man has a case before the union court and supposing that for some reasons over which he has no control the case is delayed for ten or fifteen months, will it be considered as negligence in prosecuting the case? If what is to be considered as negligence is specifically mentioned there can be no complaint. What I fear is that this provision is of an extremely vague character."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 176.

Clause 80.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that for the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71) the following be substituted, namely :—

"Provided that the district magistrate or sub-divisional magistrate may, of his own motion, or on the application of the parties concerned, cancel or modify any decision or order of a union bench or direct the re-trial of any case by a court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to him."

He said :

"My Lord, clause 80 (now clause 71) bars an appeal from or a revision of the order of the union bench and only provides for a re-trial. But I think that some sort of revision of jurisdiction should be vested in the district magistrate as a check upon any possible failure of justice or vagaries on the part of the union bench. On an inquiry the district magistrate may modify or cancel the order to meet the requirements of a particular case, but if a re-trial is the only remedy it will lead to hardship. In certain cases the parties should be authorized to bring to the notice of the district magistrate instances of failures of justice and the magistrate should be authorized to make an inquiry and cancel or modify the decision of the bench. This may be the intention of the Bill, but it should be made clear. I have explained my object very briefly and I may state that as far as I understand there may be no objection on the part of Government to accept my suggestion."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, in order to explain the justification of the clause of the Bill as framed, we have to remember the kind of benches which it was sought to set up under the Bill, and the District Administration Committee gave a good summary of the opinion of the Decentralization Commission which, I think, affords a clear description of the purposes of these courts. They said :—

'The (Decentralization) Commission contemplated a system of village courts of equity, which would be freed from the observance of complicated rules of evidence and the technicalities of the ordinary legal procedure and would bring to bear on cases before them their own intimate acquaintance with village sentiment and their local knowledge of the facts. The primary objects of these village courts was not to afford relief to the regular tribunals. They were partly designed to give petty litigants the opportunity, if they wished to avail themselves of it, of settling their disputes by a simple and inexpensive procedure near their homes, but their main purpose was educative, to develop the sense of communal responsibility within the union, and to teach the people to manage the affairs of their own villages. At the same time, it was hoped that the creation of these village courts would enhance the influence of the panchayats and strengthen and encourage them in the performance of their other duties, thus gradually paving the way to the exercise by them of higher powers.'

That was the underlying sentiment when the proposal for these courts was mooted, and it follows that it is desirable to keep all matters relating to the procedure applicable to them as simple as possible. It was in pursuance of that idea that the right of appeal and revision was barred. But, on the other hand, it was thought that cases might be brought to the notice of the district magistrate and the sub-divisional officer in which a serious failure of justice had occurred which would require to be set right. Of course, an ordinary appellate court cannot only set aside an order, but can modify it, but when this Bill was framed it was thought that the procedure of the original union bench having been very simple, and there being no record, it would be difficult for the district magistrate or the sub-divisional officer to do more than say that the case must be heard over again. He could say that he was satisfied that the order passed was wrong, but he might not be in a position to pass a correct order, and would therefore have to direct the case to be sent back and be re-tried. As against that system, the arguments that have been used by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur are not without weight. It does seem rather hard to say that even if the district magistrate or sub-divisional officer is satisfied that a man has been unfairly convicted, he cannot remedy the justice, but that all he can do is to put the man to the trouble of a second trial. That is a defect, and I would accept that line of argument as justifying a modification of the clause on the lines proposed in this amendment. I think, however, its wording can be improved upon because we want to make it clear that the right to cancel or modify a decision would not enable the district magistrate or sub-divisional officer to convict a man who had been acquitted. That is neither desirable nor is it probably intended by the Hon'ble Member. I would also like to keep that portion of the existing clause which the Hon'ble Member has omitted, namely, 'if satisfied that a failure of justice has occurred'. That is to emphasize the point that action should be taken only in the event of a failure of justice, and not on technical irregularities which might justify intervention by an ordinary appellate court. If, therefore, the Hon'ble Member will word his amendment in this form, I would be prepared to accept it :—

'Provided that the district magistrate or sub-divisional magistrate, if satisfied that a failure of justice has occurred, may, of his own motion, or on the application of the parties concerned, cancel or modify any order of conviction or of compensation made by a union bench, or direct the re-trial of any case by a court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to him'."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Mr. Duval; Bibu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I am thankful to the Hon'ble Member for accepting my amendment although in a modified form."

The motion was then put in the amended form and agreed to.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 177—80.

The following motions were covered by the decision on previous motions and were deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words "cancel any decision or order of a union bench and", in lines 3 and 4 of the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71), the words "uphold, reverse or modify any decision or order of a union bench, or" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray to move that after the words "sub-divisional magistrate" in lines 1 and 2 of the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71), the words "court of sessions or the High Court", be inserted : and for the words 'and direct the re-trial of any case by a court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to him', in lines 4 to 6 of the same proviso, the words "or pass such orders as the magistrate or court thinks fit and proper" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words "sub-divisional magistrate" in lines 1 and 2 of the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71), the words "sessions judge" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "district magistrate or sub-divisional magistrate" in lines 1 and 2 of the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71), the words "sessions judge, additional sessions judge or assistant sessions judge" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 181.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. P. Duval, in the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, moved that the words "nor shall any application in revision be entertained by any court in respect of any order passed by such bench" in lines 4 to 6 of clause 80 (now clause 71), be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, now that we have provided by a previous amendment for revisionary powers of district magistrates and sub-divisional officers, these words 'nor shall any application in revision be entertained by any court, in respect of any order passed by such bench' in clause 80 (now clause 71), appear to be superfluous. I, therefore, move that they may be omitted."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 182.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar :—

That before the word "failure" in line 2 of the proviso to clause 80 (now clause 71), the word "grave" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, do I understand that 182 goes out also?"

The President; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The President said :—

“The Council have just decided that a certain form of words is to be substituted for the proviso which appears in the Bill as drafted. That being so, it is not open to the Council to go back and alter the form of the words just adopted. Therefore it is out of order because the Council have just decided to insert the words which were contained in the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. The Council having once decided that these are the words which are to be inserted in the Act, they cannot now proceed to make further alterations.”

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 183.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that after the words “in writing” in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 81 (now clause 72), the words “embodying the substance of the evidence” be inserted.

He said :

“My Lord, as the trial is a small one, and as we notice that there is no appeal, therefore, the Council has to consider whether the substance of the evidence has to be omitted or not. When the District Magistrate is required to consider the decision of the bench, he will not have any material and therefore it is highly necessary that the substance of the evidence should be recorded in the decision, the simple order of dismissal or conviction will not be sufficient. Even if revisionary powers are given to the Magistrate, still in order to see whether there is a failure of justice or not, he must see whether there is evidence in connection with the alleged offence. Therefore, my humble submission is that the decision should embody the substance of the evidence. Referring to the mode of trial in the ordinary criminal court, we have got two sections, 263 and 264. In section 264 there is an appeal, and it is there laid down that the substance of the evidence is to be embodied. In section 263 of the Criminal Procedure Code, there is nothing about it, but the reasons are to be stated therein. We find that if there be simply a decision on the point, it will not be sufficient but the reasons are to be given. Consequently it is necessary that the evidence is to be embodied. I do not find in the Bill whether evidence is to be recorded or not. If the Bill is silent upon that point, it is highly necessary that some indication should be given for recording of evidence against the offender. I find further that there is no definition of the word ‘decision’ in the definition clause. The Hon'ble Members of this Council are aware of the fact that the word ‘judgment’ is not also mentioned in the Bill, consequently reasons ought to be given for decisions, and if reasons are given they must be based upon some evidence. If we refer to clause 94 (now clause 86) of the Bill, we find that when the parties or their agents have been heard, and all the evidence on both sides considered, the union court shall by written order pass such a decree This shows that in simple cases, evidence is to be taken and considered on both sides by the union courts. We do not find anything in clause 81 (now clause 72) to this effect. I presume, therefore, that evidence will be allowed, and if evidence may be allowed then in that case it is necessary that the decision should embody the substance of evidence.”

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur ; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I object to this amendment on the ground that it is contrary to the intention with which these courts were created. They were meant to be, as I have said before, simple courts, and the whole of the idea underlying their constitution could probably be summed up by saying that they were meant to dispose of cases according to justice, equity and good conscience. It is particularly desired that they should be freed from technicalities of procedure and that they should not become merely an inferior edition of existing tribunals. Therefore, Sir, it was outside the intention of their constitution that they should compile records and write judgments. Of course they were meant to hear evidence, but I do not agree with the Hon'ble Member when he argues that clause 94 (now clause 86) means that evidence must be recorded. The idea was that parties should come before the bench, bring their witnesses, and have their say, and that the bench should then give their decision. This amendment goes beyond that, and says that the bench should give reasons, which means a record and all the procedure of an ordinary court. For that reason I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot support the Hon'ble Mover in this matter. Having been trained in a city bar, my hon'ble friend finds it difficult to disassociate himself from the methods of the Criminal Procedure Code and he says that if a trial has to take place in any criminal court, the procedure of the Criminal Procedure Code should apply to such trials. The curse of legal procedure in this country is that it is expensive and dilatory and as it would appear, it is not only a curse but that it brings on all interested, a lot of inconvenience. But the proposed courts are meant to be cheap and expeditious, and to secure a sort of rough justice. You cannot have evidence recorded, and if you are going to do that, there will be no end to these trials, and the question will arise whether the evidence has been properly recorded or not. I think, looking at the matter from both sides, the balance of convenience is that the provisions of the Bill should be maintained as they are."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I am surprised to hear that if a person's liberty be taken away, or if a person be convicted, no evidence should be recorded. If the scope of the Bill be that the evidence is to be taken, is it not necessary that some such note should be taken of the evidence that has been adduced against the offender. Here is a man charged with committing an offence. There must be some proof before a conviction is made, and when there is a decision on the matter under issue is it not fair and just that there should be some evidence. and if there be that evidence, is it not fair for me to contend before the Council, that a note should be recorded of such evidence and the decision? Certainly I am familiar with the procedure of law in criminal courts, but making the present Bill as simple as possible, there ought not to be any difficulty in providing for taking note of the evidence and the decisions. I do not contend that the evidence is to be recorded as in a regular trial, but I contend that a note of the evidence should be taken, otherwise it will be very difficult for the District Magistrate to consider what materials there were for the conviction, or for acquittal. How can the District Magistrate come to a conclusion whether there is a failure of justice or not ; simply the writing down of the decision will not be a satisfactory procedure, and, therefore, I press this amendment to the consideration of the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

Babu A. C. Datta; The President; Sir Henry Wheeler; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 184 and 185.

The following motions were, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words "twenty-five rupees" in lines 3 and 4 of sub-clause (1) of clause 81 (now clause 72), the words "fifty rupees" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that for the words "seven days" in the last line of sub-clause (1) of clause 81 (now clause 72), the words "fifteen days" be substituted.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 186 and 187.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "all or any" in line 3 of clause 82 (now clause 73), the words "any three or more" be substituted

He said :

"My Lord, a similar point in respect to the position of the union bench has already been decided by the Council. May I take the liberty of suggesting that a similar modification be made with respect to this clause also."

The President said :—

"I would suggest that the Hon'ble Member should move his amendment in the form in which a somewhat similar one was accepted before, that is to say, 'any two or more'."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"The arguments are the same as in the case of benches, and I would accept the amendment in its modified form."

The motion was put in its modified form and agreed to.

The following motion was then deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the word "any" in line 3 of clause 82 (now clause 73), the words "at least three" be substituted.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 188—190.

The following motions were, by leave of the President, withdrawn, namely :—

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that for the word "any" in line 3 of clause 82 (now clause 73), the words "as many" be substituted; and after the word "board" in the same line, the words "as may be necessary" be inserted.

Also to move that the following be added to clause 82 (now clause 73), namely :—

"Provided that not less than three of such members must sit together for the trial of a suit, and they shall serve in such rotations and for such periods at a time as may be fixed by rules prescribed under section 111, and in accordance with rosters prepared by the district judge for each union court."

Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; Mr. Duval.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "two hundred" in lines 15 and 16 of clause 83 (now clause 74), the word "fifty" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 191.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that the word "or" at the end of sub-clause (5) of clause 84 (now clause 75), be omitted ; and at the end of sub-clause (6) of the same clause the following be added, namely :—

"or

- (7) for the specific performance of any contract, or for the establishment of any right or title to any land or water, or for any right-of-way or other easement in any land or water".

He said :

"My Lord, in clause 83 (now clause 74) of the Bill the nature of suits that will be entertained by the union courts has been provided. They are suits for money due on contract, suits for the recovery of movable property or the value of such property ; and suits for compensation for wrongful detention or injury to the movable property and then follows something else. Clause 84 (now clause 75) of the Bill provides that no suits shall lie in any union courts and then the nature of the suits is specified. My amendment is that at the end of the clause 84 (now clause 75) of the Bill as it stands the following be inserted, namely :—

'or

If clause 83 (now clause 74) stood as it had been framed and then clause 84 (now clause 75) negating the power of the union board had not been introduced, it would not have been necessary for me to move this amendment. In the first place, we have in clause 83 (now clause 74) stated the nature of the suits which can be brought into the union courts ; and then in clause 83 (now clause 74), we have specified what classes of suits shall not be entertained by the union courts. If we are to specify what classes of cases shall not be cognizable in union courts, I think the list would be exhaustive. I think it was not the intention of the Select Committee to allow suits for specific performance of contract—by which I mean specific performance under the Specific Relief Act, or suits of title or easement to lie in such courts. These are very difficult and complicated matters, and I think it is not the intention of the legislature that they should be entertained in these which will not be held by very experienced lawyers. We have, of course, said that they shall try certain class of cases. If the word 'or' at the end of sub-clause (5) of clause 84 (now clause 75), be omitted and in clause 84 (now clause 75), we mentioned certain class of cases which ought not to be within the cognizance of these courts, I think the clause should be made exhaustive by including title suits and suits for easement and so forth, and also suits for specific performance of the contract under the Specific Relief Act."

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

"My Lord, clause 83 (now clause 74), of the Bill lays down that the village courts shall only try petty suits for money and simple matters of tort such as are of the nature of cases triable by the present mufassal Small Cause Courts. Then in clause 84 (now clause 75), mainly following the precedents of the Small Cause Court procedure in the mufassal we exclude from the cognizance of the village courts certain class of suits for money such as suits arising on bonds of mortgage, suits in connection with partnership, suits of inheritance and suits for legacies. We also exclude certain number of cases on the ground that they are brought either against Government or against certain classes of individuals, such as minors and lunatics. The suits, however, the Hon'ble Member now proposes that we should exclude, are not money suits or simple suits for tort; they are suits for the specific performance of contract and suits of easement. I submit, therefore, my Lord, that as clause 83 (now clause 74) only deals as I say with money suits and simple matter of tort, there is no necessity at all to include the classes of suits which the Hon'ble Member wishes to do, in the exception in clause 84 (now clause 75). For this reason on behalf of the Government I oppose the amendment."

Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur; Babu Mahendra Nath Ray; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I think there is some little force in the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar's statement that the provisions of clause 84 (now clause 75) should not appear inwards as exhaustive of the list of suits which ought not to be brought in the union court. It is difficult to make an exhaustive list of possible suits. If it is intended to show that by the expression 'suits for money due on contracts in clause 83' (now clause 74) suits on contracts of partnership on mortgage, for a share or part of a share under an intestacy or for a legacy should not be instituted in such a court. I think the better course will be to preface the first line of the clause in this way—'no suit amongst others shall lie in any union court on contracts of partnership, etc.' It would remove any contention which might be raised on the ground that this is an exhaustive list of suits which ought not to be brought here, though we are borrowing the words of the Small Cause Court Act in this Bill."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I would not have wasted the time of this Council but for the fact that I find two members of my own profession discovering defects in the Bill as it has been drafted. I suppose it was put very clearly that clause 84 (now clause 75) only specifies some classes of suits for money and some classes of suits for immovable property which it is proposed to be excluded. There is therefore absolutely no defect and to suggest that clause 84 (now clause 75) should be so worded as to run 'no suit shall lie in any union court amongst others' is, I think, quite unnecessary. If exceptions are indicated they must be indicated exhaustively. You cannot say that the list of exceptions should include (a), (b), (c), etc. As I have said, the point is so very clear that it would be better for the Council not to be guided by the legal opinion but by plain common sense."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I beg to submit a few words in this connection. It appears that the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar wishes that suits for the specific purpose of any contract, or for the establishment of any right or title to any land or water, or for any right-of-way or other easement in any land or water to be included in clause 84 (now clause 75). There is some difficulty which I feel just now. In suits for the specific performance of contract, there is always a prayer for damages and my hon'ble friend Babu Mahendra Nath Ray will agree with me. Now, therefore, in order to make matters as clear as day-light it is necessary to state that suits for specific performance of contract will not lie in the union court and so I cannot support my friend the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar in enunciating the whole proposition which he has put forward in his amendment. But as I have submitted, my difficulty lies here—that if simply we include in clause 83 (now clause 74) suits for compensation for wrongfully taking or injuring movable property, that shows that suits for damages of a certain class, but are we to understand that suits for damages will not be instituted with reference to suits for compensation for specific performance of contract, then I submit that my friend, the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, is wrong. But we can understand very well the object of clause 83 (now clause 74) and the object of clause 84 (now clause 75)—one is inclusion and the other is exclusion. So there will be no difficulty about them.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said:—

“My Lord, I have fully understood the arguments of the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, but I am not sure that he has understood my difficulty. In clause 83 (now clause 74) we specify the classes of suits that will be cognizable in these courts. If the Bill had ended there, there would have been no difficulty at all; that is to say that we all know that beyond the classes of suits mentioned in clause 83 (now clause 74) no other suits shall be entertained in these courts. But in clause 84 (now clause 75) we introduce certain cases which we say shall not be tried by them. The main difficulty arises because you say in clause 84 (now clause 75) what suits shall not be entertained by these courts then the only question I would put to the Hon'ble Members of the Council is:—Is it or is it not our intention to invest these courts with power of dealing with title-suits? If the answer is in the negative then is not clause 84 (now clause 75) an element of doubt? But here it is said that the union court shall have a concurrent jurisdiction to try the following classes of suits. Are we or are we not going to exclude the question of assessment from the cognizance of these courts which are very difficult? If that is our intention in one section we say that they shall try these suits and in the subsequent section we say that they shall not try these suits. Then that section should be exhaustive, otherwise doubt may arise whether suits for land will not be cognizable by these courts. Therefore, I have suggested if we leave clause 83 (now clause 74) as it stands without clause 84 (now clause 75) there will be no difficulty at all, but if we introduce clause 84 (now clause 75) and also mention that certain classes of suits shall not be entertained by these courts, in that case we should also include those classes of cases, viz., those of title and assessment, etc., which it is our intention not to include amongst the classes of cases to be tried by these courts.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said:—

“My Lord, this is rather a lawyer's argument, and I feel some diffidence in intervening, but what strikes me as a layman, is this; under clause 83 (now clause 74) these courts can only try suits of a specified description, which we may call class A. The amendment says that they shall not try suits of another specified class B; but class B is already excluded from class A, and, therefore, in so far as the powers of these courts will be confined to class A, it is unnecessary specifically to exclude class B, any more than it is necessary to exclude classes C, D or E, which are equally outside class A. Clause 84 (now clause 75) specifies certain circumstances in which suits that may fall in class A will not lie.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 192.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said:—

“My Lord, in view of the fate of amendment No. 175 which is almost similar to this amendment No. 192, I should think that no useful purpose could be served by pressing this amendment for acceptance. I, therefore, with your Excellency's permission beg to withdraw this amendment."

Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; Mr. Duval.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

It was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that the words "or, if in the opinion of the court, he shows negligence in prosecuting his suit," in lines 2, 3 and 4 of clause 88 (now clause 79), be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 193.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after clause 95 (now clause 87), the following be inserted, namely :—

"95A. If the judgment-debtor pays into court the decretal amount, together with the fee payable under section 99 and the costs, if any, within thirty days from the date of the decree, he shall be allowed a remission of ten per cent. upon the amount decreed and the decree shall be deemed satisfied upon the payment of the balance :

Provided that no such remission shall apply in the case of an order passed for payment by instalments under section 95, or after the issue of the certificate mentioned in section 102 of this Act."

He said :

"My Lord, this is a somewhat novel provision which I wish to introduce as a new clause. This clause which I wish to have introduced in this Bill might be misconstrued as one in favour of judgment-debtors, but in point of fact, as far as I am concerned, I am moving it in the interest of creditors, for everyone knows that the real difficulty of a plaintiff begins when he obtains the decree. In executing a decree various difficulties arise, the property fails and as the last resort the judgment-debtors go to the insolvency court ; so that anyone who has practical experience of the difficulty of decree-holders knows that in many cases and I must say in the majority of cases the creditors fail to get anything from the judgment-debtors. Therefore, it is my intention to place some inducement before the judgment-debtor to pay the money without much harrassment and hence my amendment. It would be I believe some inducement to a judgment-debtor when he sees that he may pay 10 per cent. less of the decretal amount to pay the money into the court without raising much difficulty in the way of the decree-holder, and the decree-holder I believe would be quite satisfied to get Rs. 90 out of Rs. 100 which he has very little chance of recovering through the ordinary process of execution. But I have added two restrictions to this remission, viz., if the judgment-debtor gets a decree by instalments it would be hard to extend such a favour to him, and in the second place if the decree-holder has obtained a certificate of execution through another court such remission ought not to be granted, but before the grant of the decree if the man comes forward to pay the decree-holder the remission of 10 per cent. would be a good inducement to him to do so as it would be as much to the advantage of the decree-holder as it will be to the advantage of the judgment-debtor to pay off something less than what is actually due from him. It is with this view that I move this amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said:—

"My Lord, I quite admit that a plaintiff's troubles begin only after he obtains his decree, but it must be remembered that certain decrees are realised in full. Government cannot accept this amendment ; it would mean that a debtor no doubt might be induced after decree had been passed against him to pay off quickly on the chance of getting a discount of 10 per cent., but it might also be that the debtor might avoid paying a debt and force his creditor to go into the court so as to be able to get a 10 per cent. discount which he could not obtain unless he was sued. On behalf of Government, I would, therefore, oppose this amendment."

*Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ;

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I heartily support this amendment. My hon'ble friend has perhaps got the idea from the procedure which is laid down in execution of decrees. After sale of immovable property indulgence is shown to the debtor to pay the amount with certain penalties. Now if this procedure is accepted by court, I submit that such indulgence ought to be shown to the debtor at the time when the decree is passed. There will be some delay in realising the amount and if this procedure be in the statutory book this would be something like an inducement to the debtor to pay the amount. I therefore submit that it is for the consideration of the Hon'ble Member whether he would accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, although I did not like to speak, but following the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur I am rather tempted to speak in opposition to him and the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. What is the matter, my Lord. An agriculturist lends Rs. 100 to another man; the villager finds that he can at the time of payment of that sum get a remission of 10 per cent. if he pays the amount at the court. If the creditor finds that there are some bad debts which he cannot realise in full he can make some bundabast and can settle his claim for any amount he likes. But I do not understand why this statutory provision is intended to be inserted in the Bill to enable the court to grant a remission to the person who is bound in all conscience and in all equity to pay back the money which he has borrowed. I do not understand the reasons; of course, the trouble begins no doubt in many cases when the decree is passed, but in such cases some mutual bundabast may be made. Here under this amendment he will demand in every case a remission of 10 per cent."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, for the information of the Hon'ble Mr. Duval I may say that I have considered the aspect which he has referred to.

Ordinarily people make more than 10 per cent. remission. There is hardly any case where the judgment-debtor does not get oftentimes more than 15 to 20 per cent. remission, so that it will not make the position of the decree-holder worse, but rather better. The suits to be brought in these courts would be of the utmost value of Rs. 200; now if a creditor gets Rs. 180 altogether with costs he will thank himself and thank the debtor, but the apprehension that they won't pay amicably and would press a man to court is a mistaken one, because if amicable payment is made it is not 10 per cent. but more than that what is oftentimes allowed."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 194.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words "cancel the order of the union court and" in lines 2 and 3 of the proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88), the words "uphold, reverse or modify the order of the union court, or" be substituted.

Sir H. Wheeler; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

He said :

"My Lord, there has been some modification made with respect to the revision of the order of the union bench. The Council has already come to a decision on that point. May I suggest that a similar modification be made with respect to the order of the union court also?"

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the argument is the same both in relation to courts and benches, and as we have accepted the modification in the case of benches, I have no objection to accepting it in this case also. I would only ask that, as there are two amendments on the same point, and as that of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (No. 195) happens to be more in conformity with the change as made in connection with benches and with the existing wording of the Act, the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta might withdraw his amendment, and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur might then move his, which we will accept. The effect will be the same."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I am very glad to withdraw my amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 195.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the word "cancel", in line 2 of the proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88), the words "or modify" be inserted; and for the word "and", in line 3 of the same proviso, the word "or" be substituted.

He said :

"My Lord, I need not make any speech; it has been fully explained, and I believe the amendment will be accepted."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 196.

The following motion was deemed to be withdrawn as the Hon'ble Member was absent :—

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray to move that after the words "district judge", in line 1 of the proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88), the words "or the High Court" be inserted; and for the words "and direct a retrial of the suit by the same or any other union court, or by any other court subordinate to him", in lines 3 to 5 of the same proviso, the words "or pass such order as the judge or court thinks fit and proper" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 197.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the word "suit", in line 2 of the proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88), the words "made within thirty days of the decree of the union court" be inserted.

Mr. Duval; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

He said :

“My Lord, in moving this amendment I would draw attention to proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88). There it is said—‘provided that the district judge, on the application of any party to the suit, cancel the order . . . and so forth. I think there ought to be a limit for such an application, and therefore I propose that after the words ‘any party to the suit’, the words ‘may within thirty days of the decree of the union court’ be inserted. It ought not to be left indeterminate. Here the revision comes in through the application of the party to the suit, but the party should not have indefinite time for making such an application. Therefore, I move that it should be limited to thirty days.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

“On behalf of Government, I accept the amendment.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 198.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that before the word “failure”, in line 6 of the proviso to clause 96 (now clause 88), the words “clear error of law or grave” be inserted.

He said :

“This also, my Lord, refers to the same proviso with regard to which I have just moved an amendment. The ground there is that the district judge may on the application of any party to a suit cancel an order of the union court and direct a retrial of the suit, by the same or any other union court, or any other court subordinate to him, if he is satisfied that there is a failure of justice. I wish to introduce the words ‘clear error of law or grave.’ My reason is this : If substantial justice is done by the union court, there should be no interference, and in the second place, I would add the words ‘clear error of law’. This comes in because in an earlier clause it has been provided that the union court may throw out a suit on the ground of limitation. My Lord, questions of limitation are oftentimes very difficult to decide, so that I think this addition should be allowed—‘clear error of law or grave failure of justice’. If the Judge is satisfied that clear and substantial justice has been done, there ought not to be any interference with the judgment of the court, but if there be a mistake committed by the union court as regards the point of limitation, he should have power of interfering with the judgment. Add:—If the Judge's power of revision be not thus restricted the finality of the decisions of the union courts will be a misnomer.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

“On behalf of Government, I accept the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I was about to rise when the Hon'ble Mr. Duval rose and accepted the amendment. I am afraid I must oppose this amendment. I do not know what the Hon'ble Mover's object is. Here in this provision the framers of the Bill have provided that if the district judge is satisfied that there has been a failure of justice he can take action, but this amendment restricts the discretion of the district judge. The members of the union court are not lawyers, they will deal out simple justice and the suitors themselves will be ordinary simple agriculturists. Then who is to decide whether there has been a clear error of law or grave failure of justice?

Babu Mahendra Nath Ray; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar; Sir H. Wheeler.

How are they to establish it? Therefore, my Lord, I think that the clause should stand as it is and I hope Government will reconsider their decision about the acceptance of this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"I am sorry to have to make a statement now as a member of the Select Committee who had discussed this matter at great length. In clause 80 (now clause 71) and in the other clause 86 (now clause 77), the words originally were 'serious failure of justice'. The Select Committee, as will appear from the report, considered that the word 'serious' was somewhat out of place and therefore should be omitted, so that the wording of clause 80 (now clause 71) was modified deliberately by the Select Committee by the exclusion of the word 'serious' and they went back to the original expression 'failure of justice'. That is why we find in clause 80 (now clause 71) the words 'failure of justice' alone without the word 'serious' preceding them. The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved an amendment in connection with clause 80 (now clause 71) also, that the word 'grave' should be prefixed to the expression 'failure of justice', but that was ruled out of order.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"But that was disallowed by the President."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"But this amendment in this clause would, I am sorry to say, not only differentiate the two clauses unnecessarily, but it would be an instance of bad drafting. I do not know whether Mr. Duval representing Government has carefully considered this matter. In fact, if the Select Committee thought that the words which should occur in both the clauses should be 'failure of justice' without any qualifying word 'serious' or 'grave', that was deliberately done in order to make the two clauses consistent. I am only concerned with the wording of the amendment; I do not mind whether Government accept the expression or not—it will simply amplify the power of the district judge to interfere in any case, although I understand that that was not the object of the Bill. It was intended that the district judge will not interfere except when there has been a serious error of law. For instance, there may be a clear error on the question of limitation, but that question of limitation may not be a serious error of law, but still to give effect to the law of limitation, the district judge may interfere in any particular case. I am bound to make this statement because I do not exactly realise either the position of the members of the Select Committee or the somewhat altered position of the Government as indicated by what the Hon'ble Mr. Duval has just now told us."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"This discussion rather points to the fact that the path of good intentions is not always easy, and it is not always wise to try and please everybody. Much of what the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray has said is perfectly correct. The facts are that in the Bill as originally introduced, we had the word 'serious', and when we were considering the Bill in the light of the amendments sent in, we found that one Hon'ble Member had objected to the use of that word; in our desire to meet the wishes of Hon'ble Members as far as possible without sacrificing any grave matter of principle, we eliminated the word. Now we find that another Hon'ble Member wants to put back words of a somewhat similar purport, and from his amendment I concluded that the impression conveyed to the Select Committee, viz., that the omission was wanted by the Council, was incorrect. In that belief Mr. Duval has expressed our willingness to go back to the wording of the Bill as originally framed. But now we understand that even to this course there are objections, so in these circumstances, it is best to leave the point to the decision of the Council."

Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I would like to say one word. My hon'ble friend to my right says that this was considered by the Select Committee, and he is surprised that the Government should have changed its mind. I thought otherwise. We should always welcome any change of mind on the part of Government, but of course if my hon'ble friend thinks that the Select Committee has got the last word that is another matter. With regard to the expression 'clear error of law' I have already pointed out that there is a clause which says that a union court may throw out a suit on grounds of limitation. I will only give a simple illustration. Suppose a man brings a suit upon a bond. The law provides that limitation may be saved by endorsing an acceptance on the back of the bond, but the union court may not understand this; they may not know that there is a certain difference between certifying on the back of the bond on payment of interest or of principle by the party himself or by a different person. All these niceties may not be understood by the judges of the union court. Therefore, I ask that when there is a clear error of law, the judge may interfere. There may not be injustice but still it would be a serious matter. My hon'ble friend to my right has said that a similar provision has not been adopted in the case of the union bench. I submit that he is experienced enough to know that there is a considerable difference between a criminal court and a civil court, and, although the scope of the serious injustice may not be much in a criminal case, there is a very grave chance of substantial justice not being done in a civil suit, and, therefore, I urge this amendment. If there is substantial justice which we all understand and which we all deal with in civil cases, there ought to be no interference of course. I press this amendment."

AMENDMENTS Nos. 199 and 200.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the words “one anna” in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 99 (now clause 90), the words “half-an-anna” be substituted.

He said :

“My Lord, apparently this is a very simple matter, but really it is a very important one. It affects vitally a large class of people for whose benefit the union courts have been instituted. The rate of court-fee in ordinary civil courts is 6 annas for Rs. 5 ; according to this provision it will be 5 annas for Rs. 5 ; in other words the court-fees in these courts will be almost as high as in the ordinary civil court. The question is, is it proper that in union courts the court-fee should be as high as that? Here, the whole object in the village court is to administer simple and cheap justice without making it complicated and expensive. But that object would be frustrated if the court-fee is raised as high as 1 anna in the rupee. There are several other reasons why the court-fee ought not to be so high. These courts will be presided over by honorary officers, and therefore the expense incurred in administering justice will not be as great as in civil courts. We all know that ordinary civil courts a large profit is made by these court-fees. But there should be no profit expected or made by administering justice in union courts and we could very well afford to have a lower rate. Above all, my Lord, there is another consideration which cannot be lost sight of, and it is this: we want to make these union courts a reality and we want to make them successful. If we are to do so, we must induce people to come to these courts in preference to the ordinary civil courts. These courts have no exclusive but concurrent jurisdiction with the civil courts. If that is so, there must be some inducement to come to these courts. If the suitors find that they have got to pay here more than in the ordinary civil courts, there will be no inducement for them to come to these courts, and the result will be that these courts, which we all wish to be successful, will not be taken advantage of by the people. Therefore, my Lord, in order to make these union courts successful, I want to have the court-fees reduced to half-an-anna."

The President said :—

"The amendment which follows amendment No. 199 deals with the same subject and I think we might discuss both the amendments together."

The amendment No. 200 was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar to move that at the end of sub-clause (1) of clause 99 (now clause 90), the following be added, namely :—

"up to twenty-five rupees, and an additional fee of half-an-anna for every rupee of the claim above twenty-five rupees."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, my amendment is that the fee should be at the rate of one anna up to Rs. 25, and an additional fee of half-an-anna for every rupee of the claim above Rs. 25. I have taken the mean between the two; up to Rs. 25 in an ordinary court under the Court-Fees Act the court-fee would be Re. 1-14, but under this Bill in a union court it would be Re. 1-9, so that it would be something less; but we have to consider also the expenses to be incurred in going on with the suits and various incidental matters and therefore, I have suggested that up to Rs. 25 the rate fixed by this clause may remain but above that it should be half-an-anna for every rupee of the claim; otherwise as my friend has pointed out there would not be sufficient inducement for the litigant to go to the union court. In the case of a claim for Rs. 100 under the Court-Fees Act the court-fee leviable would be Rs. 7-4, but if you make one anna all round then the court-fee for Rs. 100 under this Bill would be Rs. 6-4, there being a difference of only Re. 1-4. This would hardly be an inducement to the poorer people to seek the assistance of the union courts which it is our object to popularize no doubt, and in that view I submit that up to Rs. 25 we might agree to one anna, but for every rupee above Rs. 25 we shall make it half-an-anna."

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

"My Lord, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, the fee for suits in the civil court is Rs. 7-8 for a claim of Rs. 100. The fee rate proposed in the present Bill is at the rate of Rs. 6-4. I would submit that in so far as the small cases up to Rs. 25 which, when brought in the village court, are not liable to be transferred at the wish of defendant this fee is sufficiently low, that is to say, for a claim of Rs. 25 the plaintiff will be able to get judgment at the expense of Re. 1-9. In the case, however, of cases of above Rs. 25 in value, it would probably be an advantage to have as low a fee as possible so as to induce the people to come to these courts and not to apply for a transfer to the munsif's court. In this view opposing the proposal of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to reduce the fee of one anna to half-an-anna for all suits, Government is prepared to accept the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I have submitted my reasons; my only object is to make the union court popular and the administration of justice by them less expensive. The controversy now is whether up to Rs. 25 the court-fee should be half-an-anna or one anna. My submission is this; all the suits that will be tried by the union courts are necessarily suits of small value; the higher the value the less will be the inclination of the litigants to go to these courts, and they would go to the ordinary courts; and therefore so far as the higher amounts are concerned they are not of very much value, and the most important question is what should be the rate of court-fees for lower amounts. In that view of the matter I feel rather strongly on this matter—it is a matter which will affect a very very large class of persons and I am only afraid, my Lord, that unless the fee is reduced the whole object of these provisions will be frustrated and the courts will not be taken advantage of by the litigant. In that view of the matter I would like to press the amendment No. 199 for the acceptance of the Council and I only hope that the Members of Council will give their serious consideration over this important matter."

Motion No. 199 was then put and lost.

Motion No. 200 was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 201.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta :—

(That after clause 99 (now clause 90) the following be inserted, namely :—

"100. If any suit is instituted in the court of small causes or the court of a munsif which, in the opinion of the court which tries the same (whose opinion shall be final), ought to have been instituted in a union court, no costs shall be allowed to a successful plaintiff, and a successful defendant shall be allowed such costs as the court may consider reasonable."

He said :

"There is a question of order."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, we have already accepted in clause 83 (now clause 74) that if the union courts and the munsif's courts will have concurrent jurisdiction, is it open to us to say that the litigants shall be penalised for going to a court which has concurrent jurisdiction over these matters? This would not be governed by this Act but by other Act."

The President ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The President said :—

“I think that is correct. The point raised by the Hon'ble Member is, I think, a good one. We have already decided that these different courts are to have concurrent jurisdiction. That being so, I think it would be out of order to make a suggestion which would have the effect of penalising a litigant, who wants to go to one of these courts in preference to another. But if the Hon'ble Member desires to make any observation on that point, I would be glad to hear him.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, that has reference to the jurisdiction of the court so far as the question of the value of the suit and the nature of the suit is concerned. But I think that has no reference to court-fees. The question of court-fees is absolutely different. Two courts may have jurisdiction over the same matter concurrently, and at the same time the rate of court-fee, if the law prescribes so, may be different in the two different courts.”

The President said :—

“I do not think that that invalidates the point raised by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. If you want to lay down by statute that two or more courts are to have concurrent jurisdiction, that clearly means that the litigant is to have the option of going to either of the courts. If that is so, it is surely out of order to endeavour to insert in the latter part of the Act a provision which would penalise a litigant if he selects one particular court out of those which are provided for him. That seems to me to be unreasonable, and I think it is out of order.”

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 202.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the word “distributed”, in line 4 of clause 102A (now clause 92), the following be inserted, namely :—

“in proportion to the fee payable under section 99 and the amount decreed to the party under section 94.”

He said :

“My Lord, this amendment refers to clause 102A (now clause 92). I think what I am going to move was the very intention of the Select Committee also. I wish to make it clear by adding that the sum shall be rateably distributed in proportion to the fee payable under clause 99 (now clause 90) and the amount decreed to the party under clause 94 (now clause 86). I only want to make it clear what should be the rateable distribution, that is to say, the rateable distribution of fees under clause 99 (now clause 90) and the amount decreed. That will make the matter clear and I think that is also the object of the Select Committee.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, the amendment is really one of drafting. The clause deals with the case in which the sum realized from the debtor is not sufficient to pay the amount of the decree and of the fees due, and it then says that the proceeds that are realized should be distributed rateably ; rateably means in proportion to the fee payable and the amount decreed, and I am advised that as a matter of drafting, the further words proposed in the amendment are not required, since the meaning of the clause is already sufficiently clear. As we are generally guided by our own advisers in the matter of drafting, I deprecate the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, there is no difference between what I have said and what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said. Rateable distribution means according to certain proportion, and by my amendment I wanted to make that more clear; that is to say, the proportion between the fees leviable and the amount realised."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 203.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that after sub-clause (2) of clause 103 (now clause 93) the following be added, namely :—

"(3) Rules referred to in clauses (g) and (s) of sub-section (2) of section 111 (now section 101) shall come into force subject to sanction by the legislature, after previous publication in the Calcutta Gazette.

He said :

"My Lord, under section 111 (now section 101), the local Government are authorised after previous publication to make rules to carry out the purposes of the Act. In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the local Government may make rules. Now rules regarding determining the manner and time of appointment or election of members, rules regarding the election of the president of union board and rules regarding various other matters are to be made by the local Government. My submission is that the Bill as has been framed is not exhaustive. The provisions of the Bill show that rules for regulating the procedure and institution of suits, etc., should be left to the rules which are to be framed by the local Government, that is, the executive Government. My contention is that the legislature or the Legislative Council ought to sanction these rules. I have no objection if the rules are framed by the local Government, but they must be subject to the sanction of the legislature. When the Bill shows in clear terms that provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and the Criminal Procedure Code will not apply to the present Bill, is it not fair and consistent that the procedure which should be substituted in place of the Civil Procedure Code and the Criminal Procedure Code should be sanctioned by the legislature? It is true, my Lord, that if the legislature delegates its authority to the local Government, the legislature may be pleased to do so, but the question is that the mere statutory authority given by the legislature to the local Government will not go so far as to lay down that those rules ought not to be sanctioned by legislature. We are to deal with adjective law; in whatever way the rules may be treated or in whatever way the rules may be explained, it appears to me that the rules must have the force of law and consequently the sanction of the legislature is necessary.

In the first place, my contention is that the legislature ought not to delegate its authority to the local Government to frame rules—call them as rules, call them as laws or call them as generalisation for proceedings in the trial of suits. That is my view of the matter. The legislature ought not to delegate its authority, and if the legislature does delegate its authority to the executive Government, it is necessary that these rules should be sanctioned by the legislature, and in that view of the matter I have placed this amendment for the consideration of the Hon'ble Members of the Council.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

Now, so far as the procedure in courts is concerned, are the litigants to be bound by rules framed by the executive Government? The legislature up to this moment does not know what the rules are. What are the rules of procedure for the trial of suits in the Courts of Justice? It will appear that so far as the jurisdiction of the union courts or union benches is concerned, that they should be guided by rules framed by the executive Government. Of course I am not prepared to say that these rules are to be viewed as ultra vires; but I do contend that when the legislature is enacting the law, this is the time for the legislature to consider whether the rules are to be subjected to the criticisms of the Hon'ble Members of the Legislative Council. In this view, it is a very important question which your Excellency will have to consider—it is a question which was raised several times at the bar and before the bench and they could not say that these rules were ultra vires because statutory power was given by the legislature to the Local Government, but these have reference to minor matters, i.e., election rules and those which are specified in the first part of clause 111 (now clause 101). But when we have to deal with the procedure for the trial of suits, is it to be contended that these rules will have the force of law, because the legislature delegates the authority to the local Government? My Lord, it is a very important question which the Hon'ble Members will have to consider. I do not for one moment wish that the operation of the Bill should be delayed. I had welcomed the Bill at the time when it was introduced by Lord Sinha; but, at the same time, I want to submit to the Hon'ble Members that if the rules are framed by the Local Government, let these be subjected to the criticism of the legislature. Your Excellency has noticed that the Bill was at the first instance put before the Hon'ble Members of the Legislative Council, and recommitted to the Select Committee, and we find that various amendments have been put in. What for?—for the reason of seeing that the Bill is a perfect one. But the rules are framed by the executive Government and they are not subjected to the criticisms which naturally and legitimately will arise. Consequently the rules, if published in the Calcutta Gazette, will have the force of law and the legislature has no voice at all. What I submit, my Lord, is that these rules ought to be subjected to the criticisms of the Legislative Council. That is a point which I submit for the consideration of your Excellency and the Hon'ble Members of this Council. It is a question of great importance, and, therefore, I move this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I am afraid I am not prepared to accept this amendment. It really makes two requests: one is that rules shall only be framed after previous publication in the Calcutta Gazette, and my answer to that point is that that provision is already in the law. Under clause 111 (now clause 101) of the Bill, the local Government may, after previous publication, make rules; so that matter is already provided for.

"The second proposition in the amendment is that rules should not be valid under the Bill, unless they are sanctioned by the Legislative Council. Now, Sir, the insertion in Acts of powers to make statutory rules is a common feature of most of the legislation in this country, and I think the fact that it is so common a feature points to the conclusion that it is recognised as an administrative necessity. It is not practically possible to foresee, at a time when a Bill is framed, every contingency which may arise to be dealt with under it hereafter. These statutory rules are largely framed in the first instance no doubt on general grounds; but they are amended and added to from time to time in the light of experience. When a need arises demonstrating that a rule is required, a rule is framed. Again any attempt to provide for everything in the Bill would overburden it with a most undesirable amount of detail. The amendment, if accepted, would place a statutory rule and a provision of the legislature practically on the same footing; and we should not be able to make any change which might be necessary for administrative reasons without having, practically, to go through the whole procedure of a Bill. I submit that the proper function of the legislature is to lay down the matters which may be dealt with by rules, and then to leave it to the authority which will be entrusted with the administration of the Act. Many of the points covered by clause 111 (now clause 101) are matters which are essentially details of administration. The time and manner of election, registration of voters, the powers of presidents and vice-presidents, the conduct of meetings and the method of forming a quorum, registers and records, details of assessment, and so on—all these are matters that we can scarcely bring before the Legislative Council. I submit therefore that the procedure of rules is justified by experience, and it is the only procedure which will ensure the smooth working of the Act."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"I have nothing more to add."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 204-206.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that sub-clause (3) of clause 106 (now clause 97) be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, I have put this amendment for the consideration of the Council, viz., to omit sub-clause (3) of clause 106 (now clause 97). The object of the amendment is to invite legal practitioners to attend union courts. If legal practitioners are considered to be obstacles in the way of the administration of justice, that is another point, but if these legal practitioners are not allowed to attend these union courts, the result will be that suitors will be under the influence of touts. I do not wish to add any other reason to what I have said, but if Government consider that they should not attend such courts, that is another matter, but I thought it my duty to bring the matter for the consideration of your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I belong to the legal profession, but I think that the very object of this Bill would be defeated by allowing legal practitioners to appear in these union courts. The appearance of a legal practitioner before any court no doubt helps considerably for better administration of justice, but in establishing these union courts, we are thinking more of the expenses of litigants than of anything else. We want to establish courts to avoid ruinous litigation, but if experienced lawyers are permitted to appear in these courts, then I do not think there will be much difference between a suit tried in the union court and that tried by the ordinary munsif. Besides, my Lord, we have carefully limited the extent of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the union courts up to only Rs. 200, and in case of criminal cases, we have specified certain simple and ordinary offences. In these matters if we permit the services of lawyers to be available in these courts, a rich man might harass a poor man and at the same time both may be ruined by the heavy expense of litigation. In this view I have always considered that it is a very salutary provision by which legal practitioners are debarred from appearing in these courts, but there is one little difficulty which I hope Sir Henry Wheeler will try to explain, and that is this—the Legal Practitioners Act is an enactment of the Government of India, and under that Act lawyers are authorised to practise in all courts subordinate to the High Court, and it is a question whether in face of that statutory power we can legitimately debar them from appearing in those courts. But I have already said I welcome this salutary provision, provided it does not go against the provisions of the Legal Practitioners Act over which this Council has no jurisdiction.”

*Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; The President ;

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“I would accept the provision of the Bill as it stands, but there is one point to which I would draw attention. There is a provision here that full-time servant, partner or a relative of the party may appear before the union courts. My hon'ble friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, says that if there is a fight between a money-lender and an agriculturist, the money-lender may have a powerful lawyer to appear for him, but at the same time a full-time servant is not always available to appear for the party, and therefore I would ask whether it would not be better to omit the provision of a full-time servant.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“I rise to a point of order ; this is absolutely a different matter.”

The President said :—

“I think that is so ; I was trying to see what bearing the speech of the Hon'ble Member had on this amendment. I do not find any.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

“I do not think there is much to add to what Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has said against this proposal which on behalf of Government I oppose. He has raised one point, however, as to whether we can legislate for the exclusion of legal practitioners on the ground that the Legal Practitioners Act of 1879 was an Act of the Government of India. In this connection I would inform him that in the original draft of the Bill which we sent up for approval of the Government of India, we included this provision pointing out to the Government of India that notwithstanding anything contained in the Legal Practitioners Act, legal practitioners should not be allowed to practise before the union court or the union bench and the Government of India raised no objection. I do not think therefore that there can be any difficulty on this point, and I think this Council has ample jurisdiction to pass the proposal as set out in the Bill. As to the merits, I would simply add this. In the district courts of the United Provinces and in the Punjab, legal practitioners are not allowed, and when the District Administration Committee issued its report, they said as follows : ‘We think it would be inconsistent with the character and constitution of village courts and for the purposes for which they are intended, to allow legal practitioners to practise in these courts, and we are strongly of opinion that they should be rigorously excluded.’ With these remarks on behalf of Government I oppose this amendment.”

The motion was then put and lost.

Two identical motions, Nos. 205 and 206, in the names of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri and the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta respectively, were deemed to be withdrawn.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Mr. Duval.

AMENDMENT No. 207.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that for the words "after previous publication", in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 111 (now clause 101), the words "subject to the provisions of section 143 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885", be substituted.

He said :

"My Lord, I believe that the provisions of section 143 of the Local Self-Government Act should be taken in here, and I believe that that also is the intention of Government as far as I can judge ; it would be better to have that clause inserted here. Then perhaps the objections raised by some of my hon'ble friends about the rules not being considered by the legislature would be minimised. If my amendment is accepted, Government would be required to consider criticisms on the rules before they are finally published."

The Hon'ble Mr. Duval said :—

"I would submit that this amendment is perfectly unnecessary. No doubt under section 143 of the Local Self-Government Act rules could only be framed after observing certain formalities. Since, however, 1885, in which year that section was passed, we have had the General Clauses Act, I of 1889, and section 24 of that Act says :—

Where, by any Bengal Act, a power to make rules or by-laws is expressed to be given subject to the condition of the rules or by-laws (as we have provided in this clause) being made after previous publication, then the following provisions shall apply, namely—

- (1) the authority having power to make the rules or by-laws shall, before making them, publish a draft of the proposed rules or by-laws for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby ;
- (2) the publication shall be made in such manner as that authority deems to be sufficient, or, if the condition with respect to previous publication so requires, in such manner as the Local Government prescribes ;
- (3) there shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date on or after which the draft will be taken into consideration ;
- (4) the authority having power to make the rules or by-laws, and, where the rules or by-laws are to be made with the sanction, approval or concurrence of another authority, that authority also shall consider any objection or suggestion which may be received by the authority having power to make the rules or by-laws from any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified ;
- (5) the publication in the Calcutta Gazette of a rule or by-law purporting to have been made in exercise of a power to make rules or by-laws after previous publication shall be conclusive proof that the rule or by-law has been duly made.

I submit, my Lord, that in view of this statutory provision of the General Clauses Act and of the fact that in this clause we have inserted that the rules can only be made by after previous publication, there is absolutely no necessity to refer to the old Act of 1885, nor to section 143 of that Act. The present law under the General Clauses Act covers the object which Government intended and which the Hon'ble Member also wishes."

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I thank the Hon'ble Member for the information which he has furnished, and I beg leave to withdraw my amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 208.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta :—

That after the word "publication" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 111 (now clause 101), the words "and after consideration of the views of the district boards" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, in view of the provisions of the General Clauses Act which we have just heard, I beg leave to withdraw this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 209.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri :—

That after the word "president" in line 2 of sub-clause (2) (b) of clause 111 (now clause 101), the words "or vice-president" be inserted.

He said :

"My Lord, this has become unnecessary, because the provision for a vice-president has not been accepted by the House, so I beg leave to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 210.

The Hon'ble Member being absent, the following motion was deemed to be withdrawn :—

If motion No. 46 be carried, the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that after sub-clause (2) (e) of clause 111 (now clause 101), the following be inserted, namely :—

"(ee) prescribing the procedure for convening and conducting meetings for passing votes of censure on members under section 14B."

AMENDMENT No. 211.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta :—

That sub-clause (2) (h) of clause 111 (now clause 101), be omitted.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; The President; Sir Henry Wheeler; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I am not quite sure, my Lord, in view of the decisions already come to by the Council, whether it is in order to move this amendment. I have my doubts about it. If this amendment is passed, it will not be quite in conformity with the decisions which the Council has already arrived at."

The President said :—

"Yes, I think the Hon'ble Member is right. He proposes to leave out sub-clause (h) of clause 111 (now clause 101) which gives power for 'regulating the powers and duties of union boards in regard to the control to be exercised by them, over dafadars and chaukidars within the union'. The Hon'ble Member suggests that if that amendment is carried that would be contrary to the decision which has already been arrived at by the Council. I think he is correct; it would be so. Under these circumstances he is not in order in moving it."

The motion was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 212.

The following motion was also covered by a previous decision of the Council and was deemed to be withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move that the words "of dafadars, and" in line 1 of sub-clause (2) (i) of clause 111 (now clause 101), be omitted.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"With your permission, and in connection with a previous amendment accepted by this Council, I will now move, Sir, that after sub-clause (i) of clause 111 (now clause 101) the following be inserted, viz.:—

'(ia) prescribing the processes to be served by dafadars or chaukidars and regulating the service of such processes'.

The amendment will be understood in the light of the discussion that we had yesterday.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 213.

The Hon'ble Member being absent the following motion was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq to move that after sub-clause (2)(n) of clause 111 (now clause 101), the following be inserted, namely :—

"(nn) fixing the period within which, and the manner in which, an appeal under section 61, sub-section (3), shall be preferred."

AMENDMENT No. 214.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that item 3 in column 4 of Schedule I, be omitted.

He said :

"The object of item No. 3 in column 4 of Schedule I is to enable local boards to be established even for parts of sub-divisions while section 6 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act lays down a sub-divisional area to be the minimum local board area. The original Bill contemplated the substitution of circle boards for local boards, the circle boards comprising only parts of a sub-divisional area. The Select Committee have retained the local board, though the amendment of section 6 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act in the manner would enable Government to create local boards for what were proposed to be circle board areas. So the distinction between local boards and circle boards would be more in name than in substance.

Section 6 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act should be left as it is, and local boards should not be permitted to be established for less than sub-divisional areas. In justifying the elimination of the circle board the Select Committee observed: 'We accept the view that the functions to be exercised by such bodies would be inadequate to confer a status likely to attract energetic members or to give them a keen interest in their work.' If the local boards are to exercise an efficient control over union boards placed under their supervision, they must be composed of men who are of a type superior to the members of the union boards and we cannot have such a type of men unless we include the sub-divisional headquarters within a local board area. Moreover, a too close control—such as would be exercised by local boards for areas smaller than sub-divisional areas would tend to make the union boards lifeless. Whatever supervision there is to be over these little self-governing units it must be exercised from a distance and by persons capable of efficiently exercising such control. There is also a risk that if areas smaller than sub-divisional areas are constituted into local boards, the circle officer may be in a position to impose his will on these weak bodies and reduce them to mere tools in the hands of the executive. It is very significant that under the scheme propounded by the District Administration Committee, the circle officer was to have been the chairman of union boards. This feature has, no doubt, been omitted in the Bill. But if we have miniature local boards of the same size as the circle boards, the circle officer, though not actually the president, will virtually be their dictator. Question of cost is important too. By having a larger number of local boards, establishment charges would be increased. Everything will have to be met from local taxation, since Government are not definitely committing themselves to any contribution. District boards are also not very affluent. Too close a control was not favoured by the Decentralization Commission even in matters of finance and audit. In every matter it is now proposed to have too close control."

"My Lord. I may explain the reasons which led the Select Committee to insert this item in the schedule. Local boards have been established throughout all but five districts in which the Local Self-Government Act is in force. Two of these districts (Bogra and Malda) have no sub-divisions, and have therefore no local board. There is also no local board in the district of Chittagong or in the Sadar sub-division of Dinajpur and the Sadar sub-division of Jalpaiguri. With reference to that, I may mention that the question of establishing local boards in the district of Chittagong has been kept in abeyance, because this Bill, as introduced, provided for circle boards; and it was felt that there would be little object in introducing local boards when they would be replaced in a short time by circle boards. Now that the idea of establishing circle boards has been dropped, the question of introducing the local board system in Chittagong will be taken up.

To revert to the amendment, the Local Self-Government Act allows Government only to establish a local board for a whole sub-division or two or more sub-divisions, and the object of this item in the schedule is to enable Government to establish local boards for parts of sub-divisions.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Mr. O'Malley.

The reason is first that, as explained by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler when the Bill was previously under debate, it will be necessary to introduce the Act gradually and in selected areas. To take the case of the districts in which there are at present no local boards, it may not be possible to introduce the Act at one step in the whole of the districts of Bogra and Malda. It may be desirable first to introduce it in parts only of those districts; in that case it will be desirable that a local board, as the controlling authority over union boards, should be established only for that part of the district in which union boards are established. In the rest of the district, the District Boards would continue to have direct and exclusive jurisdiction. Again, in the sadar sub-division of Jalpaiguri it might not be desirable to introduce the Act and to establish union boards throughout the whole area. The tea-garden coolies are not a very advanced population and would not form a suitable material for such an advanced system as the Bill contemplates. Outside the tea-garden areas, however, it might be possible to establish union boards, and in that case it would be possible for Government by this amendment of the Local Self-Government Act to establish a local board for the area having union boards. That is the main object of this amendment of the Local Self-Government Act.

The Select Committee also had in view a contingency which is at present remote viz., that in the course of time the local boards, with the growth of union boards and the consequent expansion of their work, will find it difficult to exercise effective supervision over the whole number. The Hon'ble Mover has not realised what a large number of union boards will be established throughout the districts. The average per district would be about 250. It is to meet such a contingency that this amendment is partially designed. If any local board finds it impossible to get through its work, it will enable the Government to give it a smaller area of control by establishing smaller boards. This, however, is a contingency which is not likely to arise for some time, and the item in the schedule is for the present contemplated to meet only the cases of the districts throughout which local boards have not been established. This item is therefore necessary, and I am unable to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have tried to follow the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley's speech and as far as I understand him I think he says that such places as Bogra and Malda have no local boards as there are no sub-divisions. But it is necessary to have local boards intervening between the district boards and union boards. What I fail to understand is that when the district has not yet been sub-divided into sub-divisions it seems that there is no necessity for having a local board there. Further, I would like to quote the Hon'ble Mr. Hart's opinion on this point. He says that it is not necessary to have intermediate bodies as circle boards or local boards. I think that it will be considered sufficient if the union boards are supervised by the standing committees of the district boards. Supposing Malda and Bogra have the district board standing committees to supervise their union boards, I do not think there will be any difficulty."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, may I refer the Hon'ble Member to clause 55A (now clause 50) of the Bill which says that subject to the control of the district board, a local board shall supervise the administration of union boards."

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta;

Sir Henry Wheeler; The President.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (continuing) said :—

“My Lord, I quite understand that clause; but that clause gives the local Government the discretion to add to the number of local boards. What I say is—that it is necessary to ensure supervision. The provisions of the present Bill are quite sufficient to carry out the supervision of the union boards; and if the contingency to which the Hon'ble Member has referred arises, I think that the district board in such a small district as Malda will be able to manage it by their standing committees.

Further, it has been stated that there might be on an average 25 union boards in a district. It may be so; but these boards will be supervised by two bodies—first by the local board and then by the district board. Where there are no local boards in smaller areas, the district boards will be able to look after them and the creation of union boards will add considerably to the cost of the self-governing institution, which I submit is unnecessary. The objection against the circle boards applies to this clause also. A grave impediment to the success of this measure is that it involves a considerable increase in the burden of taxation and that is also my experience in the case of the present union committees.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 215.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that items 4 and 5 in Schedule III be omitted.

He said :

“My Lord, in the course of the discussion on a previous amendment, I have already submitted my reasons for objecting to the delegation of powers by the District Magistrate to subordinate officials. Items 4 and 5 are the most important items in Schedule III. In item 4, it is proposed to delegate the powers of appointment and dismissal of chaukidars and dafadars and in item 5 of the fining of dafadars and chaukidars, to the sub-divisional magistrate, superintendent of police or circle officer. My contention is that these powers should not be delegated, because we have had complaints in the past about the evil effects of the delegation of these powers by the district magistrate to the police. I propose, therefore, that these two items be omitted from the schedule.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, yesterday in amendment No. 137 the Hon'ble Member sought to omit from the Bill the whole of Schedule III. His present proposal is to omit a part of it only. But, as the Council decided yesterday to retain the whole, I am not sure whether he is in order in asking for a modification of it in part.”

The President said :—

“The motion that the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler is referring to is to omit clause 52 (now clause 47) and Schedule III. I pointed out at the time that the Hon'ble Member could not then deal with Schedule III, and that he would have to wait till we came to it. The question which I then put was that clause 52 be omitted and that was negatived; but that does not prevent him from proposing an amendment for omitting certain items from the schedule.”

Sir Henry Wheeler ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I misunderstood your Excellency's remarks. As regards the merits of the proposal, the amendment, if accepted, will require that the appointment, dismissal and fining of dafadars and chaukidars must be done by the district magistrate throughout the whole district. I have very little to add to what the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said yesterday in connection with amendment No. 137. It is an absolute impossibility for the district magistrate personally to discharge all these functions throughout the district, and it would not be satisfactory that he should attempt to do so. It is far better to delegate these powers to somebody, i.e., the sub-divisional officer, the superintendent of police or the circle officer, who is more closely cognizant of the facts and the circumstances which regulate them. For the reason that the adoption of this proposal will seriously impede the administration of the Act, I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, it is said that it is not possible for the district magistrate to discharge all these functions and the power must necessarily be delegated to somebody. Now, what will be the result? The result will be the continuance of the old system. Although there has been a good organisation of the chaukidari union, although the union board is formed with larger powers and although the chaukidars are admitted to be the servants of the union boards, still, for all practical purposes, they will be the servants of the police. So, the present position will be continued and no improvement will be effected of this very important question. For these reasons, I would press this amendment."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 216.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that the words "circle officer" and "superintendent of police," wherever they occur in column 2 of Schedule III be omitted.

He said :

"My Lord, as regards this amendment my submission is that, in the first instance, I moved for the omission of Schedule III. That has, of course, been negatived, then I moved that out of the several items of that schedule, items Nos. 4 and 5 be omitted. That has also been negatived. My only alternative is now to move that in items Nos. 4 and 5, the words 'superintendent of police or circle officer' wherever they occur may be omitted. As a matter of fact, however, these words occur only in items Nos. 4 and 5. In other words, the result of the acceptance of this amendment will be that so far as the sub-divisional magistrate is concerned, the authority of the district magistrate in these two matters may be delegated to the former and not to the superintendent of police or circle officer. I have nothing further to say as I have already stated my reasons."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the result of the amendment, if accepted, would be that the district magistrate could only delegate these powers to the sub-divisional magistrate and not to anybody else. At present, he can delegate authority to the superintendent of police, and this practice has been in force since 1892, when the right so to delegate was introduced by the amending Act of that year. Sir Henry Cotton then explained that this delegation had not been given at the time of the Act of 1870, mainly because the position of the superintendent of police at that time had not been clearly defined or understood. He further remarked :—

‘When the Act of 1870 was passed, it was thought expedient that all power and control in regard to the village watch should rest with the magisterial authorities only, not with the heads of the department. However, there has been some changes since those times, and there is now no doubt in the minds of anyone as to the exact position and relations between the magistrate of the district and the district superintendent. In these circumstances it was thought it would be administratively convenient to empower the magistrate of the district to delegate his authority, subject to the sanction of the Commissioner, to the district superintendent of police, if he should wish to do so in preference to any magisterial officer subordinate to him. By such delegation, he will be merely giving effect to the principle which underlies all the old Regulations in Bengal with regard to the relations between the village watch and the regular police. At the same time the power, if so delegated, will have a tendency to result in the improved organisation of the village watch, which is one of the main objects of the Bill which I have introduced into Council.’

These, Sir, were the reasons for which the power was not given in 1870, but was given in 1892. Since then it has been exercised in various ways in different districts without any inconvenience to the administration and without any bad results ; and I submit that there is no justification for seeking to eliminate the authority of so delegating.

The question of circle officers is no doubt more new, as they are a newer creation ; but we hope that they will play an important part in the development of village self-government. In this connection, I would like to correct an impression which the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta sought to convey earlier in the day, that the District Administration Committee favoured the cry of developing village self-government merely for the sake of securing the appointment of circle officers. The facts are far otherwise. They regarded the circle officer throughout as one of the most fundamental factors in the success of any scheme of village self-government, and that was not only their experience, but it is the experience of all those who have at one time and another enquired into the matter. I have previously referred to two enquiries made by committees presided over by Mr. Beames and Mr. Monro. The finding of both these committees was that part of the reason of the failure of the chaukidari administration lay in the absence of any agency which could exercise supervision. Failing that agency, resort had to be had to the police, but although these committees strongly recommended that if anything was to be done to improve the chaukidari panchayats and to bring them under influence other than those of the police, it must be by the creation of a subsidiary agency which did not then exist ; nothing was ever done in that direction. When I enquired into the matter in 1905-06, I again drew attention to this defect and pressed the point ; but just as the recommendations of these two earlier bodies were disregarded, so too my small recommendation did not get through. The District Administration Committee after examining these old papers again came to the same conclusion. To substantiate my contention regarding the importance which they attached to this point, I would read a few extracts from their report. This is what they said in paragraph 94 :—

‘The proposed scheme (of circle officers) is one of great administrative importance, for it contemplates the creation, not only of a village organization which it may be possible to utilize as the basis of real local self-government in Bengal, but also of a supervising local agency, without which no village system can ever be expected to work satisfactorily.’

In another paragraph, they referred to the detriment to the working of the system which had resulted from the constant interference of the police, which, though not contemplated by law, had to be employed in the absence of any other agency. This was exactly the contention of Mr. Beames' and Mr. Monro's committees and of myself. In paragraph 97, the District Administration Committee observed :—

'Over and over again it has been pointed out that, without at least one whole-time special officer to supervise the work of the panchayats in each district, the president system was bound to fail, but the question has invariably been shelved on some ground or other, and, until the recent deputation of Mr. Weston and Mr. J. N. Gupta to supervise the introduction of an experimental circle system into certain selected sub-divisions, practically nothing was done.'

This finding shows that the failure of the chaukidari panchayats and union committees, as also of Mr. Savage's president system was due to the want of adequate supervision. As regards the latter the Committee remarked in paragraph 96 :—

'The initial mistake was made of attempting to introduce it without the special supervision, which both Mr. Savage and Mr. Wheeler, from the first, had strongly insisted upon as necessary to its success.'

'So, Sir, I submit that the circle officer is meant to fill a very definite place in the development of village self-government which we all wish to see, and that it would be a fatal mistake to endeavour to deprive him of the powers which, by delegation, it would be possible to give him under the Bill as it stands.'

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I wish to touch on two points in reply. In the first place, if it is known that the district officers will not be able to discharge their functions and as a matter of necessity these powers will have to be delegated to the subordinate officials, it is difficult to understand why the power should be retained at all in the Bill for the district magistrate. Would it not be better in that case to lay down expressly that this power is to be exercised by the superintendent of police or the circle officer? That would have been more proper and people would have known what the position exactly was.

"Then, my Lord, it is said that the quotations that have been made from the report of the District Administration Committee show that the circle officer is an essential factor in the scheme of village self-government which is sought to be developed by the Bill before us. That is a point, my Lord, on which we have not of course agreed. I only submit this that I am sure some years after it will be realised that if the very good effort made by Government to develop the village self-government fails, it will only fail on account of the institution of their plan of circle officers."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 217.

The following motion was held to be covered by the decision on the previous motion and was deemed to be withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that the reference to "circle officer" in item 4 and in item 5 of Schedule III be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 218.

The following motion was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that for the words "twenty rupees" in the last line of item 4 of Part A of Schedule IV, the words "twenty-five rupees" be substituted.

*Babu Akhil Chandra Datta; Sir H. Wheeler.AMENDMENT No. 219.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that for the word and figures "and 411", at the end of item 4 of Part A of Schedule IV, the figures and word "411, 456 and 457" be substituted.

He said :

"My Lord, this schedule (IV) defines the offences triable by a union bench. Item 4 gives a list of some sections of the Indian Penal Code under which the offences will be triable by a union bench. In this case I do not ask for any substitution but propose the addition of two more offences, these offences being under sections 456 and 457 of the Indian Penal Code, viz., the offences of lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night; in section 457 there is an additional element that the offences may be committed with the object of committing some offence. The object why I have made this proposal is that from our experience we know—and that is also corroborated by the report of the Police Department—that this class of cases, viz., of house-trespass and house-breaking by night, is by the very nature of the offences such that it is very difficult for the police to detect the criminals. Of course, in some cases the offenders are caught red-handed in the very act of committing these offences and they are detected, without the help of police. But in cases where the offenders are not detected red-handed, it is very difficult for the police to make the detection, not because the police are inefficient, nor because the police are corrupt, but because from the very nature of the offence it is very difficult for them to do so. If there is a case of house-breaking, the offence is committed at dead of night, and as there are no eye-witnesses to prove the crime it is impossible for the police to find out the criminals. This fact is corroborated by the result of the police investigation as shown in the reports of the Police Department. Therefore, it is believed by some people who have got experience of this matter that these offences might very well be transferred from the jurisdiction of the police to the jurisdiction of the village benches—if they have jurisdiction the aggrieved party can go to the village courts, and these courts consisting of members of the village and of the locality will be in a better position to do justice to cases under this clause than other people. That is the object of this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, Schedule IV, Part A of the Bill defines the cases which shall be triable by the union bench if committed within their jurisdiction. It was deliberately drawn on cautious lines as this experiment of union benches is new. They have yet got to be tested and prove their capacity, and it was not thought expedient to entrust them, especially at the outset, with the trial of cases of much importance. If we accept the amendment we should ordinarily make triable by them the offences of lurking house-trespass by night, and house-breaking by night with intent to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment. These may be very serious offences. In form, too, the amendment is defective as it would make these offences triable when the value of the property in the opinion of the union bench is not over Rs. 20, but the element of property might not necessarily come into these two sections, and, if not, I am not quite clear how the amendment would be construed. But my main objection is that these are important offences which very often involve previously convicted bad characters for whom the limit of punishment which the union bench can give would be quite inappropriate. For these reasons, I would prefer not to go beyond the schedule as now framed. In what way this change would facilitate the detection of these offences, I do not understand. I fail to appreciate the Hon'ble Member's argument, and if my memory is not at fault, I think he opposed a suggestion that the chaukidar should have power to arrest a person found in possession of an implement of house-breaking, among others, which is far more in the direction of prevention than the trial of the case. The trial of the case presupposes that the accused has already been caught."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I do not think any useful purpose will be served by additional observations. I therefore beg to withdraw this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 220 AND 221.

The President said :—

"The next two amendments Nos. 220 and 221 have got misplaced. Amendment 221 will be taken up first and then 220."

Amendment No. 221 was as follows :—

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem to move that after item 4 of Part A of Schedule IV the following be inserted, namely :—

"5. Cases under sections 133 and 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am told that it will be unwise to invest the union boards with these extensive powers which I propose to give them by this amendment ; therefore, I do not think I will be justified in detaining the Council over this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Amendment No. 220 was as follows :—

Also to move that for the words "twenty rupees", in lines 4 and 5 of Part B of Schedule IV, the words "fifty rupees" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"I want to follow the footsteps of my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and withdraw this amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved that the Secretary be directed to renumber the clauses and sub-clauses of the Bill in consecutive order and to make corresponding alterations in all cross-references thereto.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler also moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari; The President.

He said :

"After the lengthy discussions of the last two days, I do not propose to make a speech, but would merely put the motion as it stands."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, before the motion is put to the vote, I desire in person to congratulate your Excellency's Government, and your Excellency in particular, on the fairly smooth passage of this Bill through the Council. It was resubmitted to the Select Committee, a procedure which, at one time it was thought, would mean a great deal of delay. Fortunately that apprehension has proved to be unfounded and by this somewhat unusual procedure the ground was considerably cleared. By bringing your Excellency's Government into 'the court,' of the Select Committee, we have got our 10 per cent. 'discount' and a great many amendments have been accepted. If we have not done better it is more our misfortune than our fault. Non-official members have rarely been in their places and have freely differed from one another. As I had occasion to point out and claim before, we are guided by individual judgment and do not favour cliques and caucuses. We have also done our very best to do away with misapprehensions in the minds of your Excellency's Government that there would be delay and obstructiveness. Whatever may be our different points of view, this Bill will be the first step towards that great goal of self-government towards which we are all looking forward, each in our own individual way. Your Excellency on assumption of office made this measure your particular care and I congratulate your Excellency on the successful ending of your worthy labour. When the Reforms Scheme comes into operation, we shall have the initial means ready to begin this new and great service of the country."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

"It is usual for the President to say a few words at the conclusion of the session as to the work which has been done. We have just had three rather long and strenuous days and I propose, therefore, to be very brief in such remarks as I shall make in regard to the past session. The Council, I think, may congratulate itself upon the most fruitful session from the legislative point of view which it has enjoyed for some years past. Several Bills have reached the Statute Book and one or two are very nearly there. Our old and familiar friend, the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Bill, has at last become the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act. Even though we may not all of us appreciate the actual benefits which that measure confers upon the community, I am sure that for other reasons we are thankful to think that it has passed beyond the purview of this Chamber. Another measure of value, though not a very large measure, for which the Council have been responsible during the past session, is the Bengal Tenancy Amendment Act of 1919, upon the passage of which I would congratulate both the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming and the members of this Council.

Then I must make a passing reference to two measures, the passage of which marks a new stage, I think, in the development of legislative practice in this country. I refer to the Juvenile Smoking Act of 1919 and to the Bengal Primary Education Bill, the latter of which has passed this Council and is now awaiting the sanction of His Excellency the Viceroy. I say that these two measures mark a fresh stage in the legislative practice of this country, because they are, I believe, the first enactments for which private members of the Bengal Legislative Council have been responsible. I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating the authors of these two Bills—the Hon'ble Dr. Suhrawardy, the author of the Juvenile Smoking Bill, and the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, the author of the Bengal Primary Education Bill—upon the passage of these two measures. Both of them have valuable possibilities. There may be some difference of opinion as to the extent to which the various authorities, who will be authorized under the Juvenile Smoking Act, to adopt a punitive attitude towards small boys, will put it into practice. At any rate the passage of the Act establishes the principle that it is one of the duties of the legislature to assist the public to bring about such changes in the habits of the people as it believes to be desirable and salutary. With regard to the Bengal Primary Education Bill, I should like to express my personal satisfaction, and, I think, I may say the satisfaction of my Government, at the passage of that measure. The whole question of primary education was under the consideration of the Bengal Government, and in particular of my hon'ble colleague the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, when this Bill was introduced, and the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, fitted in so well with the views which we had formed as to the best methods of proceeding with a view to extending primary education in Bengal that we accepted it with satisfaction and gratitude. I believe that a large step in advance will be made in the direction of extending primary education as a result of the provisions of the measure.

One other Bill has advanced appreciably during the past session and that is the Food Adulteration Bill, another measure to which both the Government and, I am sure, the Hon'ble Members of this Council attach great importance. The report of the Select Committee upon the Bill has been presented, and I hope that it will be possible for us to take it into consideration during the forthcoming summer session of the Council.

Finally, we have this afternoon concluded our labours upon the Village Self-Government Bill, and I would express my appreciation of the kindly remark which fell from the Hon'ble Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari when the Bill was on the point of being accepted by the Council a few moments ago.

I should like also to express my thanks to the many Hon'ble Members of this Council for the assistance and co-operation which they have given us in giving this measure its final shape. In particular I would like to express my thanks to the members of the Select Committee for giving so much time and so much labour to the matter. It would be ungrateful of me also if I were not to take this opportunity of expressing to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler my thanks for the immense amount of time and labour which he has given to the measure. That time and labour has been over and above the time and labour which he has to devote to his ordinary duties. But for the unfortunate illness of the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan the Bill would have been conducted through the Council by him. I mention that because I think it is only fair to Sir Henry Wheeler who has had very heavy additional duties thrown upon his shoulders that we should express to him our thanks and appreciation for the courteous manner in which he has discharged his duties.

That I think is all that I need say about our legislative output. As I have said I think it is the most useful legislative output for which this Council has been responsible for a good many years past.

So far as the other functions of this Council are concerned, namely, the criticism of the executive Government, I think Hon'ble Members may look back on a satisfactory session. They have moved a number of resolutions on matters of general importance, some 24 in all, and they have moved some 34 resolutions on the Financial Statement, they have also displayed a laudable desire for information by asking a number of questions, some 360 in all. The Government have at all times done their best to supply the information which has been asked for in these questions. I may point out that the mere figure of 360 does not by any means indicate the real number of questions asked, since a single question is very often divided up into a very large number of sub-heads, and I should say that the actual number of questions asked was nearer 1,500 or 2,000 than the number suggested by the official figures.

There is only one other piece of work to which I need make reference and that is the special session of the Council which was held in November last for the consideration of the Reform Scheme. Hon'ble Members will remember that a committee of non-official members of this Council was appointed as a result of that special meeting in order that they might consider the Reform Scheme and report to Government their opinions upon it. As a result of their labours the Government had placed in their hands a useful and interesting document which clearly indicated to them the views which non-official members of this Council take with regard to the different aspects of the Reform Scheme, and we are proportionately grateful to them for the time and trouble which they took in preparing their report.

It only remains for me to wish you a pleasant vacation until we next meet at a later period of the summer."

ADJOURNMENT.

"The Council now stands adjourned sine die."

Abstract of the Proceedings of the Bengal Legislative Council assembled under the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1915.

THE Council met in the Council Chamber at Government House, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 3rd July, 1919, at 11 A.M.

Present :

HIS EXCELLENCY THE RIGHT HON'BLE LAWRENCE JOHN LUMLEY DUNDAS,

The following questions which had been starred were put and answered :—

STARRED QUESTIONS.

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

*I.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what officer is in charge of the drinking water reserve tank in Diamond Harbour known as Talpukur? Drinking water reserve tank in Diamond Harbour.

(b) Has any notice been taken of the deterioration of the tank and its embankment?

(c) Are the Government aware that it is full of weeds and rank vegetation?

(d) Is it the only reserve tank to supply good drinking water in the Hajipur area?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are taking any steps to preserve the tank in good condition and to improve it?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) The Sub-divisional Officer of Diamond Harbour.

(b) and (c) It is reported that the tank has not deteriorated. There are some red lotuses in the middle of the tank and a fringe of weeds round it. The vegetation will be cleared as usual after the rains, when the annual repairs to the embankments will also be carried out.

(d) Yes.

(e) All necessary steps to keep the tank in good condition are taken every year."

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

*II.

(a) Are the Government aware that the Diamond Harbour creek beyond the cross dam has silted up, and that the area has become marshy and wild vegetation is growing on the silted up channel rendering the place unhealthy? Silted up of the Diamond Harbour creek

(b) Is there any proposal to reclaim the area?

(c) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of taking steps for such reclamation before the rains set in?

(d) Are the Government aware that the only communication between Hajipur and Diamond Harbour is a circuitous road over the cross dam?

(e) Are the Government considering the desirability of making an easy and direct road between the two banks of the creek connecting Hajipur with Diamond Harbour?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The ground within the creek is not yet fit for reclamation as tidal water still overflows it. A town planning scheme for Diamond Harbour is however under contemplation and the ground will be reclaimed when this scheme is carried out.

(d) Yes.

(e) A cross dam near the river bank is part of the town improvement scheme.”

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

III.

(a) Are the Government aware of the opinion expressed that one reserve tank at Hajipur is not sufficient for that extensive and populous area?

(b) Are the Government also aware that there is a large boat traffic in Diamond Harbour and that another reserve tank is greatly needed in Hajipur?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of providing such a tank in the silted up area caused by the old Diamond Harbour creek on the south side of the cross dam?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The reply is in the negative.

(b) Government are aware that there is a large boat traffic in Diamond Harbour.

(c) This matter will be considered in connection with the improvement scheme referred to in the reply to question No. *II.”

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

IV.

Will the Government be pleased to state when the creation of a new sub-division at Vishnupur in the district of the 24-Parganas will be taken in hand, and when the Munsif at Baruipur is to be removed to Alipur as foreshadowed in the Government memorandum No. 3721 P., dated the 12th April, 1918?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“The formation of new sub-divisions in the 24-Parganas and other districts has been kept in abeyance for financial reasons and it is not possible at present to say when they will be carried out.”

By the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur:—

V.

(a) Are the Government aware that in the southern section of the Eastern Bengal Railway first and second class passengers are not provided in the trains with a lavatory, and that there is no drinking water available at the stations in the hot weather?

(b) Are the Government also aware that the third class and inter-class carriages in this section are generally in a dirty and untidy condition and are not usually provided with lavatory arrangements, and that the trains are very much overcrowded?

(c) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of taking such steps as may be necessary to redress the above grievances?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) The management of the Eastern Bengal Railway reports that the 1st and 2nd class carriages which run on the southern section are not provided with lavatories. The distances between Calcutta and the several termini on this section are 37, 28 and 17 miles respectively and the longest time taken on any of the journeys is a little over two hours. Lavatories for the use of 1st and 2nd class passengers are provided at all the terminal stations and at Ballygunge, Sonarpur, Baruipur, Magrahat. In view of the conveniences provided it is not considered necessary to provide lavatory accommodation in carriages for short-run journeys.

Drinking water is procurable at the terminal stations and at Ballygunge, Sonarpur, Baruipur, Magrahat, Ghutiyari Sharif, Champahati, Kalighat and Majherhat.

(b) It has been ascertained from the management of the Railway that the 3rd and inter-class carriages on this section have become dirtier and more neglected in appearance during recent years owing to circumstances arising out of the war, which have precluded renovation and renewal of coaching stock to the extent that is desirable. Lavatories are not provided in these classes of carriages for the reasons stated in the reply to question (a) above. A recent census shows that there have been a few instances of overcrowding due chiefly to fluctuations of traffic from day to day and only occasionally to variations in the capacity of the trains.

(c) Endeavours are being made to improve the train service, but the management is still labouring under the difficulties created by the war. As new stock is constructed, an improvement may be expected. In regard to overcrowding, two of the train compositions have recently been strengthened."

With reference to the resolution regarding the organization of the cloth weaving industry which was accepted at a meeting of the Council on the 3rd July, 1918, will the Government be pleased to state what steps (if any) have been taken in pursuance thereof, and with what results?

Organization
the cloth weaving industry.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement made by the Hon'ble the Revenue Member in charge in connection with the said resolution. This was accepted on the understanding that the agencies for any advance should be, first, the Co-operative movement, secondly, the Weaving Institute, and thirdly, agricultural improvements. On these lines Government were already taking action. As an interesting advance has been made by the Department of Co-operative Credit, a copy of a note on the subject written by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, is laid on the library table. The Hon'ble Member is also referred to the answers given to his questions Nos. VII and VIII."

Improvement
of cotton cultivation.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps (if any) have been taken in pursuance of the resolution regarding the improvement of cotton cultivation, which was carried at a meeting of the Council held on the 19th August, 1918?

(b) What are the results of the inquiry undertaken by Mr. N. N. Pillai in this connection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:

“ (a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Press Communiqué of the 28th October, 1918, of which a copy has been laid on the library table. In paragraph 9 of that Communiqué a reference was made to a recommendation that seed for home-spinning purposes should be imported and distributed in small quantities to those prepared to use the produce for home-spinning. Last January Government accordingly sanctioned a grant for the purchase of 1,100 maunds, which had been ascertained to be the requirements for this purpose of the Dharwar American variety for distribution free for the spring sowings. Experiments at Dacca and elsewhere in the province had demonstrated the superiority of this variety. Meanwhile the Agricultural Department are continuing their investigations. The latest recommendation regarding the improvement of cotton cultivation in Bengal will be found in Chapter X of the Report of the Indian Cotton Committee, 1919.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the report which has been laid on the library table.”

rabi food crops.

With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. XLIII of the 3rd July, 1918, will the Government be pleased to state—

- (a) what measures (if any) have been adopted for bringing about a more extensive cultivation of rabi food crops, and
- (b) what conclusions were arrived at by the Provincial Agricultural Association in regard to this question last year, and how far they have been put into practice?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ (a) Rabi seeds to sow 11,700 acres were distributed under the Agriculturists Loans Act in the flooded areas of Rajshahi and Bogra districts last October. This year arrangements have already been made to supply cash orders for about Rs. 20,000 worth of rabi seeds in the districts of Rajshahi, Bogra, Pabna and Dinajpur.

(b) A copy of the conclusions of the Bengal Provincial Agricultural Association in regard to this question is laid on the table.

The answer to the second part of the question is given in (a) above.”

Resolutions of the Bengal Provincial Agricultural Association at their meeting held in Calcutta on the 4th July, 1918, referred to in the reply to question No. IX (Starred).

Measures for increasing the cultivation of rabi food-crops in Bengal with the object of relieving railway traffic.

I. (1) The Association note that the following causes operate to discourage the more extensive cultivation of rabi food-crops in Bengal :—

- (i) Before the crops can be harvested it is time to prepare the land for jute and other bhadoi crops.
- (ii) Some kinds of rabi pulse crops following bhadoi crops are believed in some districts to impoverish the land and diminish the yield of the next bhadoi crops.
- (iii) Low-lying land does not dry up early enough to admit of sowing a rabi crop in November.
- (iv) Bengal rabi food-crops are generally of inferior quality and cannot compete with produce from other parts imported by railway.
- (v) Cultivators are averse to the hard work involved in producing a good rabi crop.
- (vi) The necessary practice of letting cattle loose to graze in the rice-stubble after the harvest of winter rice causes much damage to rabi crops.
- (vii) Red laterite soil and very low land are unsuitable for rabi crops, and the area which is suitable and not already used for rabi crops is strictly limited.
- (viii) On certain soils rabi crops require irrigation for which facilities are not always available.
- (ix) The outturn is uncertain.
- (x) The plough cattle in Bengal are generally in poor condition after the rains.

(2) The Association deprecate any attempt to grow rabi crops as a substitute for a crop which has been found by experience to pay better.

(3) The Association note the opinions that in certain districts the extension of the cultivation of rabi crops is practicable to a limited degree without the curtailment of the area under other crops, and support the proposal for issuing loans under the Land Improvement Loans Act in Birbhum and Bankura for schemes for irrigation of rabi crops, and as regards seed recommend loans under the Agriculturists' Loans Act where such are required, and the supply of imported seed by the Agricultural Department at cost price and on cash payment to individuals and rural associations through the departmental seed stores. As an alternative method they recommend that Government should advance money for the purchase of seed to Agricultural Associations, or District Boards, and that the Associations or Boards should be authorized to advance money or seed on credit to cultivators without charging interest, but should be responsible for recovering the advances after the harvest and repaying Government in full, themselves bearing any loss due to short recoveries.

(a) With reference to the discussion on the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq at the Council meeting on the 19th August, 1918, suggesting an increase in the pay of public servants, will the Government be pleased to state whether the question is at present under their consideration?

Increase in the pay of public servants.

(b) Have the Government received any representations from any branch of the public service in the matter? If so, will the Government be pleased to indicate the purport of each such representation and the orders passed thereon?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of making the necessary inquiries as to what steps (if any) have been taken for relieving the distress of public servants in the various offices and departments under the Government of India, and in the offices under the different Provincial Governments?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the communiqué issued on the 12th June, 1919, by this Government, a copy of which is laid upon the table.

(b) Representations have been received from many branches of the public service. The purport of all the representations has been the same, viz., that the prevailing high prices warrant some improvement in the pay of posts fixed when prices were generally lower. In some of the petitions increase of work and responsibility have also been urged.

In some cases a reorganisation of a particular cadre has been the result. Other cases have been considered to be met by the issue of the orders on which the communiqué is based. In other cases Government have been unable at present to do anything owing to financial reasons.

(c) The Government of Bengal are primarily concerned with conditions in this Presidency, although they are to some extent aware of the action taken by the Government of India and other Provincial Governments in the matter. The need of further inquiry in this direction is doubted.”

Press communiqué referred to in the answer by the HON'BLE MR. PAYNE to question No. X (Starred) asked by the HON'BLE RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR at the Council meeting of the 3rd July, 1919.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

Those drawing over	12	1 0

(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the reply to the questions of the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi in the Imperial Legislative Council regarding the improvement of the Educational Service (vide question No. 29 published in the Gazette of India of the 8th March last), in which the Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair stated that as regards the higher services, whose case was considered by the University Commission, in view of the delay likely to be entailed by its investigations and the framing of conclusions, personal allowances were granted in 1913 to certain members of the Provincial Educational Service whose special attainments or whose unsatisfactory position as regards emoluments appeared to justify such treatment and subsequently some allowances were given to the members of the Indian Educational Service whose interests were prejudiced by this inevitable delay?

Improvement of the Educational Service.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing—

- (i) the names of those officers in this Province to whom these special allowances were granted, and
- (ii) the special circumstances in each case for granting these allowances and the principle which guided the grant of such allowances?

(c) Are the Government aware of the discontent that has been created among the members of the Provincial Educational Service educated in India owing to the grant of these allowances on what is believed to be the basis of education in England only, apart from the intrinsic merit or academic qualifications of the recipients?

(d) If so, what steps (if any) are being or have been taken to allay such discontent?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The Hon'ble Member presumably means the Public Services Commission and not the University Commission. The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) (i) The names of the officers are as follows:—

Provincial Educational Service.

Sir P. C. Roy
Dr. D. N. Mullick.
Mr. S. C. Mahalanobis
Rai Bahadur P. Chatterji
Mr. J. N. Das Gupta

Indian Educational Service.

Mr. B. Heaton.
Mr. H. R. James
Mr. F. C. Turner.
Mr. T. H. Richardson.
Mr. J. R. Barrow.

(ii) The principles on which these allowances are granted were laid down by the Government of India. In the case of the Provincial Educational Service, officers were selected for allowances who possessed European qualifications and who by their academic attainments and the value of the work done by them in Government service seemed to deserve special treatment in anticipation of general measures for the amelioration of the service. In the case of the Indian Educational Service also allowances have been given in deserving cases as a temporary measure of alleviation pending the result of the Public Services Commission, special consideration being given to cases of hardship where officers of long service had not attained to junior or senior allowances.

(c) The reply is in the negative.

(d) The question does not arise."

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"Eight officers of the Provincial Educational Service have recently been promoted to the Indian Educational Service and not ten as stated in the question. A statement giving particulars of their university careers, as far as available, is laid on the table."

(a) Is it a fact that Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur is in receipt of a house allowance of Rs. 60 only since 1910? House allowance of Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur.

(b) Is it a fact that he is given this allowance on condition that he should live in a house close to the college and its attached hostels?

(c) Is it a fact that he had to build a house at a considerable outlay as no suitable house was available?

(d) Is it also a fact that when he applied for a house building advance Government declined to sanction it?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a), (b), (c) and (d) In 1907 Rai K. K. Banerji Bahadur applied for house-allowance but the Director of Public Instruction was unable to grant unless the Rai Bahadur took up his residence nearer the college hostels, so as to exercise closer supervision over them. There was no suitable house available and the Rai Bahadur asked for a building advance with the intention of building on a plot of land which he owned near the hostels. This application was refused, as there was at the time a scheme for the construction by Government of quarters for the Principal of the college. This scheme did not materialize and the Rai Bahadur constructed a house of his own on the land referred to. He was then granted a house-rent allowance of Rs. 60 a month with effect from 1st March, 1910.”

(a) Is it a fact that when Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur took over charge of the Rajshahi College in 1897, it was in a moribund condition? Status of the Rajshahi College under the principalship of Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur.

(b) Is it a fact that only 3 B. A.'s in pass course were turned out in the four years immediately preceding his appointment, and that since his appointment the college has been growing steadily and it is now one of the biggest colleges in Bengal?

(c) Is it a fact that the fee receipt in 1896 was about Rs. 4,000 and that it is now nearly Rs. 60,000?

(d) Is it a fact that his predecessor was an Indian Educational Service officer?

(e) Is it a fact that the numerical strength of the college is practically equivalent to that of the Krishnagar, Hooghly and Chittagong colleges put together?

(f) Is it also a fact that over one hundred graduates (B. A.'s and B. Sc.'s), many with high Honours, and about one hundred and fifty I. A.'s and I. Sc.'s are turned out annually by the college, and that these numbers are much greater than the numbers of graduates and under-graduates turned out annually by the Krishnagar, Hooghly and Chittagong colleges put together?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) and (b) During the 4 years preceding the appointment of the Rai Bahadur the college turned out 4 graduates in the pass course. When the Rai Bahadur assumed charge in 1897 the number of pupils on the rolls was 116, while the college is now one of the biggest institutions of its kind in Bengal. All credit is due to the Rai Bahadur for his admirable work as Principal, and in spite of the fact that his term of office has coincided with a remarkable expansion in the demand for collegiate education, no one can doubt that the development of the college is due mainly to his administrative ability and his zeal for the welfare of the institution.

(c) The figures are approximately correct.

(d) The reply is in the affirmative.

(e) It was almost so in 1917-18, but in 1918-19 the numerical strength of the three colleges exceeded that of the Rajshahi College by 123.

(f) During the last three years the average number of graduates and under-graduates from Rajshahi College have been roughly 100 and 125, respectively, as against averages of 70 and 132 for the other three colleges referred to.”

Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur.

(a) Is it a fact that European officers such as Messrs. Billing and Shaw who were in the Provincial Educational Service and who were the Principals of the Krishnagar and Hooghly Colleges, respectively, have been promoted to the Indian Educational Service?

(b) Is it a fact that Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur is seeking appointment elsewhere in consequence of supersession by his juniors?

(c) Is it also a fact that many senior professors are to be transferred during the ensuing session?

(d) Are the Government aware that the Rajshahi College is practically in its infancy and of the necessity of taking special care in the appointment of its Principal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) There were special circumstances in Mr. Billing's case. His promotion to the Indian Educational Service was decided on when the services were reorganised in 1896 and he was promoted to the Indian Educational Service in 1898, having already officiated in the old graded service for 8 years. This Government have no information about Mr. Shaw, who was in Class I of the Provincial Educational Service when the province of Bihar and Orissa was formed.

(b) It is a fact that Rai Kumudinikanta Banerji Bahadur has accepted temporarily a post under the Calcutta University as Inspector of colleges on Rs. 800 a month—a higher salary than he is now drawing in Government employ.

(c) Two professors have been transferred with the consent of the Governing Board. It is not proposed to transfer any other senior professor from the college.

(d) Government realise the necessity of taking special care in the appointment of the Principal.”

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the rules in force for controlling the sale of kerosine oil are the same in the various districts of Bengal?

(d) If not, will the Government be pleased to state in what respects they differ?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) and (b) Government have not brought the sale of kerosine oil under control as contemplated in the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules, 1915. Government, however, with the agreement of the Oil Companies, issued executive instructions to all district officers, pointing out that the sub-agents of the Oil Companies were under agreement to sell at certain wholesale rates, and instructing district officers to arrange with the sub-agents to appoint dealers who would agree to sell kerosine oil retail at prices fixed by the district officer with reference to the authorised sub-agents' prices.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the amounts that have been spent on inquiries in regard to stegomyia, year after year, and the result of such inquiries? Expenditure
inquiries.

(b) Will the Government be also pleased to make a similar statement in regard to the investigations in connection with diabetes?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) and (b) A statement showing the expenditure incurred by Government in regard to inquiries into stegomyia and diabetes is laid on the table.

Stegomyia Survey.—In 1912 a stegomyia survey was made of the port by Major MacGilchrist, I.M.S.. As a result of his inquiry it was arranged to undertake an investigation in typical areas in Calcutta, and in 1914 effect was given to this by the deputation of an Assistant Surgeon, Dr. C. K. Nandi, to work for one year under the Health Officer of the Corporation. Dr. Nandi carried out a survey in two selected areas in the city. Subsequently, a further inquiry was made in 1915 by Major Christopher, who was deputed for the purpose by the Government of India at the request of this Government, and as a result of his report the Corporation recommended that a campaign against stegomyia on the lines suggested by him should be conducted first in the port under a specially qualified officer. It was, however, found that there would be considerable difficulty in doing this owing to the port area being under the separate jurisdiction of several local bodies and the insufficiency of the powers of these bodies for the purpose in view. The first thing necessary was to establish a homogeneous sanitary control over the whole area. The matter was, therefore, referred to a conference representing the different bodies concerned, which submitted a report and a draft Bill to give effect to their suggestions. A Bill known as the Calcutta Port Sanitation Bill, is now under the consideration of Government.

Diabetes Inquiry.—The inquiry into diabetes by Major McCay and his co-workers in Calcutta has yielded valuable scientific results and has added to our knowledge of the pathology of the disease as well as indicating essential points in its successful treatment. A series of papers describing the results have been published in the Indian Journal of Medical Research.

A copy of the report of Major MacGilchrist, a summary of Dr. C. K. Nandi's survey, Major Christopher's memorandum and the report of the conference to consider the homogenous sanitary control of the port area are laid on the library table.”

Lease of a

(b) If so, on what terms?

(c) Is it a fact that objections have been raised by, among others, certain public associations of Chittagong, against the said proposal? If the answer be in the affirmative, what is the purport of such objections and what steps (if any) are the Government taking thereon?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) The terms on which the lease, if it is eventually granted, will be given are at present under consideration

(c) It is a fact that objections have been raised by the Chittagong Association. The main objections are that the forest reserve in question provides bamboos for the local needs of Chittagong and the Chittagong Hill-tracts; and that there will be a dislocation of the supply and a rise in local prices. The objections are being carefully considered and they have also been forwarded to the local officers for report.”

Date-gur and sugarcane investigations at Dacca Farm.

What progress has been made in Mr. Annett's investigations regarding date-gur, and what results have been obtained from the examination of Bengal varieties of sugarcane in regard to the sucrose contents of their juices, at the Dacca Farm?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“The investigation into date-sugar has been in abeyance since the departure of Mr. Annett from this province. This is partly due to the urgent necessity of proceeding with the soil survey of the province; but chiefly because the work on cane-sugar is considered more important.

The work on sugar-cane has made considerable progress, as regards both the testing of exotic varieties and the classification of local races. Distribution of a superior cane has been proceeding for the past two years and careful arrangements are being made to make the distribution scheme as efficient as possible. It is hoped that the work on cane-sugar will yield sufficiently definite results, in the course of the next two years, to allow of the resumption of the date-sugar investigation.”

Management of Chittagong Port.

(a) Is there any proposal for handing over the management of the port of Chittagong to the Assam-Bengal Railway?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay all the papers in connection therewith on the table?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) The Government of India have proposed that the management of the port of Chittagong be transferred to the Assam-Bengal Railway; and the Government of Bengal, after consulting the local authorities, have agreed, as it appeared, after detailed examination of various alternatives and of the finances of the port, that there was no other possible alternative for financing the improvements recommended on the report of Sir George Buchanan.

(a) With reference to unstarred question No.1 of the 3rd April, 1919, Hindu girl education
will the Government be pleased to publish the report of the Committee on the future organization of Hindu girls' education?

(b) When was the said report submitted by the said Committee, and what action has since been taken thereon?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) A copy of the report of the Hindu Female Education Committee is laid on the library table

(b) The report of the Committee was submitted to Government on the 31st March, 1916. The terms of reference to the Committee were—

(i) to consider and report on the existing facilities for the education of Hindu girls and the extent to which the various sections of Hindu society avail themselves of the several agencies which are now employed;

(ii) to consider and report in detail on the extent to which the existing facilities are adequate and satisfactory,

(iii) to make detailed suggestions, with approximate estimates of cost, for remedying any defects which the Committee finds to exist.

With regard to the first and second some of the facts and figures in the Committee's report were found on examination to be incorrect and Government was consequently unable to accept altogether the findings of the Committee.

In respect of the third, the suggestions of the Committee centred round three main proposals, viz. :—

(a) revision of the curricula on lines formulated by it with a view to their adoption in girls' schools,

(b) Establishment of a thoroughly equipped model secondary school under Government management (not following the ordinary high school course) at Calcutta,

(c) constitution of a thoroughly representative standing Committee with full executive functions and exercising absolute control over Hindu female education with a staff of Hindu and Brahmo Inspectresses Government are unable to accept the first and the last of these proposals, but as regards the second, the Director of Public Instruction was called on to submit a scheme which, however, could not be considered on account of the financial stringency consequent on the war. A scheme has, however, been recently submitted and is now under the consideration of Government."

(a) Is it a fact that in the first week of June last, influenza broke out in a virulent form in the Dacca Central Jail and that a number of prisoners died? Influenza in Dacca Central Jail.

(b) Have the Government made an inquiry into the circumstances of this sudden outbreak of the disease in the said jail?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“Influenza broke out in an epidemic form in the Dacca Central Jail on the 19th May. Up to the 30th June, there were 244 cases among the prisoners, of which 18 proved fatal. An assistant jailor also died. An inquiry has been held by the medical officer into the causes of the outbreak. The available evidence suggests that the infection was introduced into the jail by the head tailor, a paid employé, whose family were suffering from the disease. The first cases occurred among the prisoners employed on tailoring work and not among persons newly admitted to the jail. After the outbreak of the epidemic, jail manufactures were stopped, the prisoners were segregated as far as possible, and all precautions were taken to prevent the disease from spreading. The epidemic is now subsiding, and no fresh cases have occurred since the 25th June.”

(a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 21 asked at the meeting of the Council held on the 4th September, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state from what source the information wanted was gathered? Zamindars of Amta Drainage Basin.

(b) Is it a fact that Babu Kashiswar Mukherjee of Uttarpara referred to in the said statement sold his zamindari right of the land in respect of the Amta drainage scheme, bearing tauzi, No. 38, under the Collector of Hooghly, by a registered deed on the 7th August, 1914, to the late Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur?

(c) Is it a fact that the late Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur paid land-revenue and cesses to the Collector of Hooghly in his own name after the purchase by him of the said estate from Babu Kashiswar Mukherjee and that since the death of Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur, land-revenue and cesses on account of the above estate have been paid by his son, Babu Fateh Lal Singh Nahar Bahadur, to the Collector of Hooghly?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Gcode:—

“(a) The information was procured from the Collector of Hooghly.

(b) and (c) Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur's name was registered in tauzi No. 38, under the Collector of Hooghly, in place of Babu Kashiswar Mukherjee of Uttarpara in 1914-15 after purchase of the estate and Babu Fateh Singh Nahar, son of Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur, had his name recorded in place of his father by virtue of a deed of gift in 1918-19. Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur paid revenue and cess in his name in respect of his share of tauzi, No. 38 up to September kist, 1918, since when his son, Babu Fateh Singh Nahar, has been paying revenue and cess.”

Indian Police Officers and

(a) Is it a fact that Indian police-officers up to the rank of Deputy Superintendent are not allowed to keep revolvers in their possession without a license?

(b) If so, is it in accordance with the law on the matter or on account of any executive order of the Government?

(c) If such prohibition is due to any executive order, was the order made by the Provincial or the Imperial Government?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of any such circular or regulation as may be in existence relating to this matter?

(e) Are the Government considering the desirability of exempting Indian police-officers from the necessity of taking out licenses for keeping revolvers in their possession?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a), (b), (c) and (d) No specific orders have been passed requiring Indian police-officers to take out licenses for revolvers kept for their personal use. Their obligation to do so arises from the fact that no orders have been issued exempting them from the provisions of the Arms Act in respect of revolvers. Revolvers are supplied by Government to officers who require such weapons for the performance of their duties, and in those cases no license is necessary.

(e) No. The Government of India in their Resolution No. 2125 C., dated the 21st March, 1919, have intimated their intention of revising the Indian Arms Rules in a manner which will make it obligatory, after the 1st January, 1920, for all police officers, whether Indian or European, to take out licenses for firearms of any description, other than those supplied by Government.”

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the action of the Bihar and Orissa Government in granting from October 1st, 1918, an increased rate of grain compensation allowance to all Government servants drawing not more than Rs. 16 a month?

(d) Have the Government in contemplation any scheme of an increased rate of grain compensation allowance for all Government employés?

(e) What is the position as regards the proposal made to the Government of India for the grant of a war bonus?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing, district by district, the amount of agricultural loans and gratuitous relief sanctioned and distributed since January last?

(g) How far have the existing relief operations benefited the poorer middle classes?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) Government have not made any special survey of the nature suggested; for the condition of the population in the province is practically always under survey. It is reviewed in certain fortnightly reports which are furnished to Government, in special local reports which Government have received and in the weekly and monthly weather and crop reports which are published in the Calcutta Gazette. A periodical review is also made of the food-stuffs position and prices obtaining in the different districts

(b) Agricultural loans have been given, where necessary, to relieve the agriculturists who require such advances.

(c) Yes

(d) All Government employes are not eligible for grain compensation allowance. Government are at present considering whether any extension of the present scheme of grain compensation allowance is necessary or advisable.

(e) A war allowance has recently been sanctioned to all employes of Government drawing more than Rs 12 and not more than Rs 50 per month. As has been previously explained in Council, the pay of menials has been already improved.

(f) A statement is laid on the table so far as information is available

Is it a fact—

Arbitrary assessment upon the members of certain rural societies.

(a) that the Sub-divisional Officer of Madaripur was appointed liquidator of certain societies and that he deputed his peshkar to make assessment upon the members of Sirkhara, Birangal and Sajandawal Rural Societies; and

(b) that the assessment was made arbitrarily and that the liquidator refused to entertain complaints against the assessment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) The Sub-divisional Officer of Madaripur was appointed liquidator of the Co-operative Societies of Sirkhara, Birangal and Sajandawal. In order to assess the amount to be paid by each member as contribution to the assets of the society according to his ability to pay, it was necessary to have confidential inquiries made about the property of the members. These inquiries were first conducted confidentially by the liquidation clerk, who is also the Sub-divisional Officer's peshkar, and were then tested on the spot personally either by the Sub-divisional Officer, or a Sub-Deputy Collector, or an Inspector of Co-operative Societies.

(b) From the above it will appear that the assessment was not made arbitrarily. It is not a fact that the liquidator refused to entertain complaints against the assessment. In one case he revised his original order of assessment when he found that an improvement could be made. In the case of Sajandawal there was an appeal to the District Judge which was dismissed.

It may be noted for the information of the Council that the complaint made by the objectors was against their assessment at more than their individual debts to the society. But, as the societies were concerns with unlimited liability, this was irrelevant.”

Small-pox at Dacca.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement regarding the recent outbreak of small-pox at Dacca, showing—

(a) the number of seizures and deaths therefrom; and

(b) the special measures taken to prevent the spread of infection and to combat the disease?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) As all cases are not reported and many concealed, the number of seizures cannot be accurately stated, but up to the end of the second week of June 443 deaths from small-pox were reported.

(b) A copy of the report of Dr. Sufi, Deputy Sanitary Commissioner on the outbreak at Dacca, is laid on the table.”

Report of Dr. Sufi referred to in the answer by the HON'BLE MR. GOODE to question No. 25 (Unstarred) asked by the HON'BLE MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ at the Council meeting of the 3rd July, 1919.

The following is a brief history of the small-pox epidemic in the Dacca town :—

The first case was reported on the 30th December, 1918, from the mehtars' depôt at Meranjulla. Attempts either to vaccinate the contacts or to segregate the patients failed entirely. The next case with fatal results occurred at Bangshall and was registered on the 1st January, 1919. Six contacts were operated upon but only a few of the neighbours, about 23 in number, could be vaccinated. Some cases were reported on the 12th January, 1919, from the railway staff quarters; 17 contacts were vaccinated and 158 operations were performed amongst the staff. A few cases occurred shortly after in the neighbouring quarters and 12 vaccinations were performed in the Agasadak Bazar. Altogether 4 deaths were recorded during this month, while 530 primary and 570 revaccinations were performed by the 4 permanent vaccinators. A warning notice was circulated by the Health Officer at this stage, explaining to the public the necessity of taking vaccination.

By the second week of February the disease had become epidemic and scattered throughout the town. One additional vaccinator was appointed on the 20th February. Free vaccination by house-to-house visitation was notified on the same date. Two thousand six hundred and eighty-four operations (787 primary and 1,897 revaccinations) were performed in this month and 53 deaths were recorded.

On the 18th March, 1919, the Health Officer issued a circular letter to the schools requesting the authorities "not to allow any student to attend school in whose residence a patient has been suffering from small-pox until the house is declared by the Health Department to be free from infection". On the same date the Health Officer issued another circular letter recommending revaccination of students and closure of schools and colleges as early as possible if there be no serious objection. The vaccination staff was also strengthened by the addition of 1 male and 1 female vaccinators, thus bringing up the total strength to 10 operators. A systematic survey which was made on the 14th March under the direct supervision of the Health Officer proved the existence of 325 cases on that date, but after making allowances for the concealed cases, the number may be fairly assumed to be about 400 or at the highest 500.

Disinfection of the houses and of the patients' bedding and clothing was also performed, while the main streets and the lanes of the infected areas were watered twice a day. Hackney-carriages used by patients were also directed to be disinfected. For information, the Health Officer depended upon the vaccinators, the municipal out-door officers and medical practitioners who were supplied with printed post-cards for this purpose. Patients were treated at the Mitford Hospital where arrangements were very satisfactory.

Such was the state of affairs when I arrived at Dacca on the 23rd March, 1919. I very soon discovered that there was a panic in the town, that the staff of vaccinators was quite inadequate to cope with the emergent conditions, that even Government officials had to wait for even 3 or 4 days before they could secure the services of a vaccinator, and finally that the Health Officer had no organized means at his disposal of getting information as to the number of fresh attacks. Somehow or other those in charge had failed to grasp the situation at the very commencement and now the disease having spread to every quarter of the town it was impossible to restrict the area of its invasion.

At my suggestion the Commissioners at their meeting held on the 25th March, 1919, sanctioned the raising of the strength of the staff to 25 male and 3 female vaccinators, placing 15 vaccinators to work under the 15 Municipal Commissioners and the remaining 10 male and 3 female vaccinators under the direct orders of the Health Officer. Trained hands being unavailable probationers were engaged and trained. The number of the men on disinfection duty was also increased; they were divided into three batches, and each batch was placed under a Sanitary Inspector. Better arrangements were made at the instance of the Health Officer for flushing pucca drains and clearing kutcha drains and for watering more roads than previously. The Chairman also promised me to award As. 4 to every informer of a small-pox case after verification, but I am afraid it was not found possible for some reason or other to translate the promise into action as shown by the fact that the column for fresh attacks in the weekly small-pox statement was always left blank.

Judging from the weekly reports received it appears that the epidemic is gradually getting down and that the number of weekly operations performed is satisfactory, considering the atmospheric conditions.

Accommodation in certain steamers for inter-class female passengers.

(a) Are the Government aware that the inter-class female compartments in the steamers of the India General Navigation and Railway Company and Rivers Steam Navigation Company plying between Goalundo, Chandpor and Narayanganj are very unsuitable?

(b) Are the Government also aware that in these steamers—

(i) there is no cabin provided, but that a portion of the space which was originally used as a hospital is partitioned from the rest of the deck only by a purdah;

(ii) a portion of the compartment is used as a hospital and also as an office for the transshipment staff;

(iii) the female compartment and the said office are not partitioned off properly and the female passengers are exposed to the view of the staff;

(iv) there is no bath-room attached to the compartment, and the female passengers have to walk through crowds of third-class male passengers along the deck to the lower deck where they have to use the bath-room provided for the third-class male passengers;

(v) the accommodation of this bath-room is inadequate in consideration of the usual number of passengers;

(vi) there is no wire-netting by the side of the compartments, there being only a canvas protection, the bottom of which is in places usually worn out, rendering the compartment unsafe for children; and

(vii) no seats of any description are provided in these compartments?

(c) Is it a fact that the inter-class fare in these steamers is double that of the third class?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking such steps as they think fit for the removal of the grievances referred to in the foregoing questions?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) Government are aware that complaints have been made regarding the accommodation provided for inter-class female passengers.

(b) (i) and (ii) No cabin is provided for inter-class female passengers. The space set aside for the purpose has not been proved to be unsuitable.

(iii) The compartment is partitioned off from the office portion by a wooden or canvas partition to a height of about 5 feet and wire-netting from above this to the roof. A purdah is also supplied to cover the wire-netting so that there may be absolute privacy on either side.

(b) (iv) and (v) The Steamer Companies do not consider it desirable or feasible to arrange latrine accommodation for inter-class females in the space allotted to them on the upper deck. Steps are being taken to improve the latrine accommodation existing on the main deck.

(vi) On some of the vessels wire-netting is provided; on canvas-fitted steamers steps are being taken to fit wire-netting so as to ensure safety.

(vii) No seats are provided; experience shows that the passengers ordinarily prefer to sit or lie on their own mats or rugs.

(c) Yes.

(d) The attention of the Steamer Companies will be invited to the complaints which have been made.”

(a) Are the Government aware that in the steamers of the India General Navigation and Railway Company and the Rivers Steam Navigation Company plying between Goalundo, Chandpore and Narayanganj—

Accommodat
in certain steamers for third-class female passengers at second-class
passengers.

(i) the accommodation for third-class female passengers has been provided in a place very near the funnel and that this space remains hot all the time the steamers run, and even the deck is uncomfortably hot;

(ii) there is no provision for seats of any description; and

(iii) there is no bath-room attached to the third-class female compartments?

(b) Are the Government also aware that—

(i) the accommodation for second-class passengers in the above mentioned steamers is inadequate and poor;

(ii) there is no provision for proper ventilation in the cabins;

(iii) there is no other furniture in the compartment except a bedstead;

(iv) there is no deck for the second-class passengers, and they are not allowed to use the deck provided for the first-class passengers; and

(v) the second-class fare is considerably more than half of the first class and more than double that of the inter-class?

(c) Are the Government aware of the feeling that exists that the difference of fare between the first and the second class is out of all proportion to the comforts provided for the two classes?

(d) Are the Government aware that the sweetmeat stalls in the said steamers are let out to the highest bidder, who again sublets them to others at exorbitant rents, and that the latter sell bad sweetmeats at a high price?

(e) Are the Government also aware that the sub-contractor is compelled to purchase articles from such shops as are selected by the contractors and that this results in the sale of bad articles at higher prices than the usual market price?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) (i) Separate accommodation for third-class female passengers has been recently provided in some 40 vessels. The position of the accommodation has not been found unsuitable, but all enclosed spaces are warmer than the open deck

(ii) Seating accommodation is not provided for third-class passengers

(iii) It is not possible to arrange latrine accommodation for third-class female passengers in the space allotted to them on the upper deck.

(b) (i) to (iv) The second-class accommodation is somewhat inadequate, and in view of the increasing number of passengers travelling by these vessels in that class, the question has been duly considered in the designs for the proposed new steamers for the Padma service. Inquiries are being made as to what improvements, if any, can possibly be carried out in respect of the provision of additional furniture and ventilation in the cabins of the existing vessels.

(b) (v) The second-class fare is double the inter-class fare.

(c) Government have no information on the subject.

(d) and (e) The Steamer Companies' Messing Department have recently taken into their own hands the management of the sweetmeat stalls on some of the steamers of the Barisal service; should this prove to be the success which is anticipated, the arrangement will be extended to the Padma services, with results which, it is hoped, will prove satisfactory to the travelling public.”

(c) Are the Government aware that there is an impression that the soldiers used greater force than was warranted by the situation and by the law?

(d) Have the Government ascertained whether there is any foundation for such an impression?

(e) Are the Government considering the desirability of appointing a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to inquire whether the action of the military was justifiable during those disturbances?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"Government have received full reports on the disturbances and are satisfied that the police and the troops behaved with forbearance, and that there is no ground for the suggestion that they used greater force than was warranted by the situation or by the law. Government do not propose to lay any papers on the table or to institute further inquiries."

(b) Have the Government issued any resolution upon the said report? If so, will they be pleased to lay the resolution on the table?

(c) What action (if any) has been taken by the Government to give effect to the recommendation of the said Committee?

(b) Has Mr. Glen George executed any deed of agreement as to the conditions upon which sanction has been accorded to him to manufacture salt? If so, what is the date of the deed?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all papers and orders in connection with the prayers of Mr. Glen George, Mr. P. C. Das, Babu Surendra Chandra Ghosh, Babu Mohendra Chandra Ghoshal and others in the district of Chittagong for permission to manufacture salt?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to describe fully the conditions upon which permission has been given to Mr. Glen George?

(e) Is he employed in any other capacity under the Government anywhere else?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) (i) Mr. P. C. Das prayed that the rules regarding the entertainment of extra preventive staff might in his case be dispensed with, as he considers that the staff ordinarily employed in the Cox's Bazar sub-division was sufficient during the initial stage of his scheme. Government were unable to accept this view, but the question of what preventive staff was necessary in connection with his scheme did not therefore arise.

(ii) It has been decided by Government to employ the following establishment in this connection and to realise from the firm such portion of the cost thereof as exceeds 5 per cent. of the duty levied:—

			Rs.
1 inspector on	100 per mensem.
2 sub-inspectors on	50 each per mensem.
1 petty officer on	12 per mensem.
1 peon on	12 “ “
3 peons on	11 each per mensem.
6 peons on	10 “ “

This staff will be employed as soon as the manufacture of salt commences.

(b) No deed of agreement was executed, but a license, dated the 2nd October, 1918, has been granted to Mr. Glen George containing the conditions under which he, or his assignee, may manufacture salt.

(c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to question No. XXXVI (d) on the 19th February, 1918. Copies of the original applications of Mr. P. C. Government are not prepared to lay other papers upon the table.

To—The Collector of Chittagong.

(Through the Inspector of Excise and Salt, Cox's Bazar.)

I HAVE the honour to solicit your favour of granting me a permit to manufacture salt locally for sale to the people of Cox's Bazar subdivision for local consumption on payment of the usual duty.

2. I am ready to open a godown where the manufactured salt will be stored and duty levied according to the rules.

3. As the attempt is quite a new and experimental one, the rules about the entertainment of extra preventive staff may be dispensed with till such time as the project does not appear sufficiently useful and matured. The present staff of the preventive officers may be considered sufficient for the purpose at present.

4. If you are pleased to grant me the permit on the above condition, I may be informed of the order, so that I may be able to start with the preliminaries at once.

PROPOSAL FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF SALT IN THE CONTAI SUBDIVISION OF THE MIDNAPORE DISTRICT.

Dated Calcutta, the 22nd April 1918.

From—GLEN GEORGE, Esq., Chief Mining Engineer to Messrs Andrew Yule & Co.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Dept.

I BEG to address you on the subject of the manufacture of salt in Bengal. You are, of course, aware of the relative difficulty in obtaining supplies of imported salt compared with those available in pre-war times, and also of the causes which have led to the strong preference of the population of Bengal for the white imported salt as against the brown Madras salt. In view of the existing shortage of freight which is certain to continue for five or more years after the declaration of peace, there will evidently be a great market for a salt which, manufactured in India, will be equal in quality to the white imported salt.

The ordinary methods of manufacture obtaining in Madras are not likely to be successful at the head of the Bay of Bengal owing to the humidity and the length of the monsoon season. I propose, therefore, a method of which the final step will be evaporation in multiple effect evaporators. As this is the final stage in the manufacture of Liverpool salt, whatever may be the financial results, a salt equal in quality to Liverpool salt will certainly be produced.

The earlier stages in the proposed method are of a technical nature, but their effect is to overcome the difficulty in regard to the humidity and the shortness of the season.

I have recently personally investigated the salinity of the sea at a site near Contai and found the salinity sufficient: in fact, it is that of ordinary sea-water at this season. During the five monsoon months the salinity may be low, but storage of concentrated brine will enable the factory to work continuously.

You will doubtless recollect an application made by me to the Madras Government for a site and salt license in the Ganjam district. The methods proposed there are merely improved Madras methods requiring no coal. The syndicate I represent is strongly of opinion that in addition there is room for a factory near Calcutta on new lines which can make salt identical to Liverpool salt.

The syndicate which I represent is prepared to put up a salt factory at Contai on my proposed lines and to find the capital necessary, which will be five to six lakhs.

We ask for no financial assistance or special terms, but merely a lease of the site, which I have ascertained to be on Government khas land, and the sympathy of your Government with the proposal. I beg, therefore, to enquire whether the Government of Bengal will be prepared to grant me a license to manufacture salt from sea-water on a site, particulars of which will be sent in to the Board of Revenue near Contai.

Copy of Government Order dealing with applications from Chittagong for the manufacture of salt.

No. 2945-S.R., dated Calcutta, the 22nd December, 1917.

From—The HON'BLE MR. J. DONALD, M.A., C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department,

To—The Commissioner of the Chittagong Division.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letters noted in the margin, forwarding applications from certain salt merchants in Chittagong for permission to manufacture salt locally. In view of the high prices of salt prevailing in Chittagong, at present you recommend that the proposal for the local manufacture of salt may be sanctioned at an early date.

2. In reply, I am to enclose a copy of a note recorded by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, stating the result of inquiries made by him during his recent visit to Chittagong, and to say that before taking steps towards the removal of the prohibition on salt manufacture in Chittagong which now subsists, the Governor in Council desires to have detailed proposals giving information on the points raised in the note together with a draft of the rules necessary to regulate manufacture. The Collector of Chittagong should correspond direct in this matter with the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, who will submit proposals for the orders of Government. But the matter should be dealt with promptly, and an early decision arrived at, whether anything is practicable or not in the direction of local manufacture.

3. With regard to the last paragraph of the Excise Commissioner's note, I am to invite your attention to the recent Press Communiqué (copies enclosed) issued by Government on the subject of the supplies of salt, and to request that the information given therein may be communicated to the dealers in Chittagong with a view to arrangements being made for the import of salt from Madras by brigs.

Copy of Government Order dealing with Mr. P. C. Das's application for the manufacture of salt.

Dated Calcutta, the 19th April 1918.

From—The HON'BLE MR. J. DONALD, M.A., C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Dept.,

To—The Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 243-E., dated 10th April 1918, with which you submit copies of two petitions from

Mr. P. C. Das, retired Sub-Deputy Collector, Cox's Bazar, asking for permission to manufacture salt, experimentally from salt earth and sand and saline ashes for a period of six months on payment of duty, and in reply to say that, in the circumstances stated in your letter Government are unable to grant the permission asked for by the petitioner. I am to request that the petitioner may be informed that Government are unable to agree to proposals which do not provide for adequate supervision over the processes of manufacture and that this can only be effected by the employment of special staff.

Copy of Government Order dealing with the application of Mr. Glen George for the manufacture of salt.

No. 137 T.—S. R., dated Darjeeling, the 2nd October 1918.

From—H. P. V. TOWNEND, Esq., I.C.S., Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department,

To—GLEN GEORGE, Esq., Chief Mining Engineer to Messrs. Andrew Yule & Co.

WITH reference to the correspondence ending with your letter, dated the 25th July 1918, I am directed to say that the Governor in Council is pleased to accept the scheme for the establishment of a factory for the manufacture of salt within the Contai subdivision of the district of Midnapore, and to authorize you to manufacture the said commodity in the factory subject to the terms and conditions specified in the license enclosed herewith. You are also authorized to assign the license, now granted to you, to the company to be formed and called the Chemical Industries. Limited, on condition that the assignees agree to the terms and conditions of the license.

2. With reference to condition (2) of the license, I am to explain that Government have no wish to hamper your enterprise by impossible conditions, but that they must retain the right to safeguard Government revenue accruing from salt manufactured in the factory if any of the conditions prove to be defective.

Copy of license granted to Mr. Glen George.

No. 138 T.—S. R., dated the 2nd October 1918.

Copy, with a copy of the license, forwarded to the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, for information and necessary action.

License for the manufacture of salt.

Mr. Glen George of Disergarh in the district of Burdwan is hereby authorized by the Government of Bengal to manufacture salt within the Contai subdivision of the district of Midnapore on the following conditions :—

Conditions of license.

(1) The licensee, his agents and servants, shall be bound by the provisions of the Indian Salt Act, 1882 (XII of 1882), and by all rules relating to the manufacture of salt and for the issue of salt from licensed premises which may, from time to time, be prescribed under the said Act by the Government of India.

(2) This license shall remain in force for one year from the date on which it is granted :

Provided that during a period of nineteen years next thereafter the licensee, if he has duly observed the conditions of his license in force, shall have the option to have the license renewed for one year at the end of each successive year subject to such modifications of the conditions of his license in force as may be prescribed by the Government of Bengal at the time of each renewal after considering any suggestions or objections made with regard thereto by the licensee.

(3) The licensee shall make a deposit of Rs. 1,000 in advance as security for the due observance of the conditions of this license and shall execute a bond pledging the premises and all apparatus and utensils employed in the manufacture of salt, for the due discharge of all payments which may become due to Government. In lieu of executing such a bond, the licensee may deposit Government promissory notes of such value as the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may direct.

(4) The licensee shall, before commencing the manufacture of salt, submit, for the approval of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, a plan and description in writing signed by himself of all structures, buildings and rooms within the boiling and drying house compound, specifying the purpose for which each is to be used. No alteration of, or addition to, the boiling and drying house compound or any building or room intended for the manufacture, drying, storage, handling or weighment of salt therein shall be made without the written permission of the officer in charge, provided that the latter in important matters may require the permission of the Assistant Commissioner to be obtained through him.

(5) The boiling and drying house compound shall be surrounded by a wall to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, with only one passage, and it shall be properly secured against the issue of salt, except by the passage so provided.

(6) The place intended for the storage of salt before weighment shall be within the boiling and drying house compound. It shall be securely fenced to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, and in the fence there shall be a single gate.

(7) The structures, buildings and rooms in the boiling and drying house compound and the surrounding wall shall be kept in good repair to the satisfaction of the Assistant Commissioner.

(8) The licensee shall construct and maintain at his own expense suitable quarters to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, and shall let them out at such rents as the Public Works Department may consider reasonable for the accommodation of the officer in charge and other establishment required for supervision. He shall also provide a suitable office-room within the boiling and drying house compound for the officer in charge with such furniture as may be required for use therein.

(9) The licensee shall have, on the outside of the door of every building or room in the boiling and drying house compound, a name painted legibly in oilpaint indicating the purpose for which such building or room is intended to be used.

(10) The licensee shall give at least fifteen days' notice in writing to the Assistant Commissioner of the date on which he proposes to commence manufacturing salt and at least one month's notice before he ceases to manufacture any salt.

(11) In case the licensee shall cease manufacturing or issuing salt for a period exceeding one month, the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may withdraw the establishment stationed at the factory and may prohibit all further manufacture and issue of salt until the licensee has given him fifteen days' notice in writing of the date on which he proposes to recommence operations.

(12) The licensee shall pay into the Bank of Bengal in advance such sum as will be sufficient to pay the duty on any salt that may be manufactured at any time, and the licensee shall not manufacture any salt unless the duty payable in respect of it has been paid by him in advance.

(13) The manufacture of salt shall be carried on only in the place or building specified for the purpose by the terms of clause (4) of these conditions.

(14) The licensee shall not cause any salt to be formed in any place outside the boiling and drying house compound, and he shall destroy such salt if accidentally formed.

(15) The salt manufactured shall contain not less than 91 per cent. sodium chloride and not more than 3 per cent. of magnesium salt. Any salt which does not conform to these requirements shall be destroyed by the licensee.

(16) The licensee shall, at all times, allow samples of salt not exceeding one seer in weight each to be taken by the officer in charge for submission to the Chemical Examiner for Customs and Excise for analysis.

(17) All salt manufactured shall be removed from the boiling and drying house either direct to the place of weighment or to the place of storage and thence to the place of weighment in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

(18) All salt weighed on any day shall, after such weighment and check weighment (if any), be removed from the boiling and drying house compound on that day in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

(19) No salt shall be presented for weighment after 5 P.M., unless the licensee desires the weighment to go on after that hour and makes proper arrangements to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, for lighting the boiling and drying house compound and the entrance thereto.

(20) The weighment of salt shall be carried on under the supervision of the officers of the Excise and Salt Department with the scales provided by Government for the purpose, in such manner, and at such times, as the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may from time to time direct.

(21) Save under a pass granted by a salt revenue officer of or above the rank of a Sub-Inspector of Excise and Salt, the licensee shall not remove any salt from the boiling and drying house compound, nor shall the officer in charge grant a pass for the removal of any salt which has not been duly weighed.

(22) The licensee shall provide, at his own expense, sufficient establishment (other than the establishment referred to in clause 28) for the weighment and issue of salt and all work connected therewith.

(23) No operation connected with the storage, weighment or issue of salt shall ordinarily take place on Sundays and on holidays prescribed by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

(24) When the manufacture of salt is carried on at night and at all times when a Government officer is not present in the boiling and drying house compound, the gates shall remain locked, provided that on Sundays and on prescribed holidays the registered servants of the licensee may be allowed ingress and egress between sunrise and sunset.

(25) The licensee shall so arrange his operations on working days that no excise officer need be on duty for more than eight hours per diem.

(26) If an excise officer has to work more than eight hours on any ordinary working day or on Sundays or prescribed holidays, the licensee shall pay such overtime fees as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

(27) The licensee shall keep accurate accounts which shall be written up daily showing such particulars as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, and shall produce the same for inspection whenever required by the officer in charge or any other officer of the Excise and Salt Department not below the rank of a Sub-Inspector.

(28) Subject to the directions of Government, the Excise Commissioner may employ at the factory and place of storage such establishment for the purpose of guarding the salt and realizing the revenue thereon as he considers necessary, and the licensee shall pay each month so much of the expenditure incurred by Government on the establishment so employed as may exceed 5 per cent. of the duty levied on the salt manufactured in the factory and issued therefrom for consumption during the preceding month.

(29) The licensee shall not have any pecuniary transaction of any kind whatever with any of the officers of the Excise and Salt Department.

(30) The licensee shall allow the officers of the Excise and Salt Department free access to all parts of the factory and shall afford all reasonable facilities for any investigation that they may desire to make.

(31) Except with the permission of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, the officer in charge or a superior officer of the Excise and Salt Department, no one except superior officers of other Government departments, the licensee, his agents or his employees authorized for the purpose shall be allowed to enter the boiling and drying house compound. A register shall be kept of the names of all persons employed by the licensee, and all authorized employees shall be supplied with passes for ingress and egress.

(32) The officer in charge of the factory may eject or exclude from the premises any person who, in his opinion, has committed, or is about to commit, any breach of these conditions or of the provisions of the Indian Salt Act, 1882, or any rules made thereunder, or who shall be intoxicated, riotous or disorderly.

(33) If it comes to the knowledge of the licensee that any person employed by him in the manufacture, storage or issue of salt has committed any breach of the provisions of the Indian Salt Act, 1882, or any rules made thereunder, or of the engagements entered into by him, he shall forthwith report the matter to the officer in charge and comply with the directions of that officer respecting the continued employment of such person.

(34) In case of any breach or attempted breach of the conditions of this license by the licensee or any person in his employment, the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may impose on the licensee a fine not exceeding the sum of Rs. 50 for every breach or attempted breach of such conditions or, at the option of the said Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may declare the money, if any deposited by the licensee, forfeited and may cancel the license.

(35) It shall be lawful for the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, to deduct the amount of fines imposed under the last preceding condition from the amount deposited by the licensee as security for the due performance of the conditions of this license, and for this purpose the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may sell all or any of the Government promissory notes or stock notes deposited or of the property hypothecated.

(36) The licensee shall, within fifteen days from the date of receipt of a notice from the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, informing him of any deduction made from his security deposit for the due performance of his engagement, replace the amount so deducted from the said deposit.

(37) The imposition of a fine or forfeiture of deposit or the cancellation of the license under condition (34) shall not be held to preclude the prosecution of any person for any offence which he may have committed, or attempted to commit, against the provisions of the Indian Salt Act, 1882, or any other law for the time being in force relating to salt revenue.

(38) (a) All sums due by the licensee to Government may be recovered from the amount of deposit made by him or by sale of the factory premises, machinery and other things pledged under the bond mentioned in clause (3).

(b) On the expiry of the license either on account of expiry of the term or on account of cancellation or suspension, the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, may take over, or permit the successor of the licensee to take over, the balance of salt in the boiling and drying house compound at cost price or may require the licensee forthwith to remove such salt on payment of full duty.

(c) If the licensee shall fail so to remove all salt within ten days of the receipt of written notice from the Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal, the cost of any establishment which it may be necessary to employ at the factory may be recovered from the licensee, and if he shall fail to do so, within one month, the salt shall be liable to forfeiture at the discretion of the said Commissioner of Excise and Salt, Bengal.

(39) The licensee may, with the approval of the Government of Bengal, assign his license to any company or firm on condition that the assignee agrees to the terms and conditions of this license.

(b) Is it a fact that the present scale of pay of ministerial officers was fixed in West Bengal districts in 1906 and in East Bengal districts in 1911, upon the recommendation of the different committees appointed to submit schemes, among other matters, for revision of the rates of pay of ministerial officers, and that the committees recommended the present scale of pay on the basis of the costs of living prevailing at about the time of the revision?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether after the last revision, any increment of pay was granted to ministerial officers owing to the abnormal rise in the price of the necessaries of life? If so, what increment was granted and for what periods?

(d) Is it a fact that increments have been granted to officers in the Post and Telegraph Departments of the Government of India and some State Railways on the ground of high prices?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state to what extent the cost of living has increased in 1919, as compared with the years 1906-1911, and what action the Government are taking to raise the pay of the ministerial officers to ease the situation?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) Yes, but the current cost of living on these dates was presumably only one of other factors considered.

(c) There has been no general revision; recently certain special concessions have been allowed.

(d) Government understand that this is so.

(e) It is not possible to calculate this except separately for different classes of people. Furthermore prices of essential commodities have not uniformly risen. They have fluctuated. The following figures for retail prices are given by the Department of Statistics (the prices are in rupees) :—

(a) With reference to the statement laid on the table in reply to starred question No. 21 on the 4th September, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Babu Kashiswar Mukherjee of Uttarpara referred to in the said statement sold his zamindari right of the land bearing tauzi No. 38 under the Collector of Hooghly under a registered Deed bearing No. 2693 for 1914 registered on the 7th August, 1914, in the Calcutta Registration office, for Rs. 1,99,000 to the late Rai Setab Chand Nahar Bahadur?

(b) Are the Government considering the advisability of appointing Babu Fateh Singh Nahar as one of the Drainage Commissioners in connection with the Amta drainage scheme in the district of Howrah, in accordance with the terms contained in order No. 710 L.S.-G., dated the 3rd March, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 5th March, 1919?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to section 22 of the Bengal Sanitary Drainage Act, 1895, which lays down how the cost is to be realised. As patnidars ordinarily pay road-cess through the zamindars and not direct to Government, the drainage cess will be realised from zamindars unless there is a stipulation in the patni lease that they will pay cess direct to Government.

pargana Moyna in Tamluk.*

(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the condition of the obstructed drainage in pargana Moyna, subdivision Tamluk, in the district of Midnapore, owing to the silting up of the Cossye river?

(b) Are the Government in possession of any memorial submitted to His Excellency the Governor in Council by the people of the affected locality in the middle of June, 1919?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps (if any) they are taking in regard thereto?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) An investigation of the congested drainage conditions of pargana Moyna, subdivision Tamluk, in the district of Midnapore, was carried out in the year 1910. The survey showed that the tract requiring drainage was an extremely low one and that any scheme drawn up under ordinary methods would not be entirely effective except at a prohibitive cost. Two remedial measures were, however, put forward by the Chief Engineer for acceptance by the people interested. These were:—

- (i) To throw open two square miles of land at a time to tidal spill so that a deposit of silt on the low area would raise it in the course of time, and the flow back of clear water would scour out the drainage channels and make them effective for draining the remaining area.
- (ii) In the alternative, a drainage cut with its outfall at the junction of the Kaliaghye and Cossye rivers.

The Commissioner, to whom the proposals were referred, reported that neither of the schemes found favour with the people interested.

(b) Is it a fact that the percentages of collection of the current and arrear demands of the said estate were not satisfactory during the last three years up to 1324 (B. S.)?

(c) Did the collection improve during 1918-19, i.e., 1325 B.S.?

(d) Referring to the figures in column (7), Appendix III of the printed Report of the Ward's Estate for the years 1916-17 and 1917-18, will the Government be pleased to state what was the nature of the inquiry held and by whom, and whether the Deputy Collector in charge of the Wards' Estate or the Collector of the district satisfied himself as to the accuracy of the amounts in question which could not be realised by the responsible officers of the Gobardanga Wards' Estate?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they are taking for the better administration of the above estate?

Answer by Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) The increase in the balances of current demand of the Gobardanga Estate in 1916-17 and 1917-18 was due to exceptional economic conditions caused by the war. The balances have subsequently been reduced.

(b) No.

(c) Yes.

(d) No special inquiry was held. The Collector and Wards' Deputy Collector examine the monthly collection statements submitted by the Manager and satisfy themselves regarding the accuracy of the figures.

Public Works Department
Division for Damodar Basin

Will the Government be pleased to state—

- (a) what steps, if any, have been taken to give effect to the creation of the special Public Works Department division for the Damodar basin;
- (b) what final arrangements have been made to communicate flood-warnings to the people on receipt of telegrams from the gauge officers at Raniganj and Barakar; and
- (c) what progress, if any, has been made in the excavation of the Uchi Nala?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) A redistribution of the area included within the existing Circular and Eastern Canals and Northern Drainage and Embankment Division is under consideration.

This redistribution is proposed to be effected—

- (i) by the creation of a new division with headquarters at Khulna for which provision has been made in the current year's budget;
- (ii) by alterations in the areas now comprised within the Circular and Eastern Canals Division and the Northern Drainage and Embankment Division so as to give effect to the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Member in this Council at the meeting held on Tuesday, the 19th February, 1919, in the terms finally accepted by the Legislative Council. The sanction of the Government of India to the creation of the new division is required, and will be asked for at an early date. At the present time there is no officer available to fill the post of Executive Engineer of the proposed new division, but it is hoped that the new division will be created in November next.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given in this Council to his starred question No. 10 at the meeting of the 19th August, 1918. No gauge officer is stationed at Barakar, nor is this necessary. The arrangements for the issue of flood-warnings are as given in detail below:—

The gauge reader stationed at Raniganj sends telegrams to the Government officers concerned and also to the Sub-Overseer stationed at Jamalpur. The latter officer communicates the warning to the people interested in the undermentioned manner. One peon proceeds to Berugram, another to Srikrishnabore and two in turn as directed by the Sub-Overseer down the right embankment, crossing the Damodar at Mohanpur. The Sub-Overseer stationed at Baikantapur on the right bank on receiving instruction from the peons warns the villagers on the right bank. He has also instructions to inform people in important villages and certain specially selected persons. The Raniganj gauge readings are made known to everyone so that in the course of time the people will learn by experience what condition of flood to expect against a level recorded at Raniganj.

(c) Three quarters of the excavation work of the Uchi Nala has been completed. It was not possible to complete the whole work before the present monsoon. The outlet from the Sankari Bil to the existing nala was fully completed last March and has been helpful in draining the spill area.”

There are, however, others which cannot be given effect to without recourse to legislation and which, therefore, must wait until it is possible to take up the amendment of the Bengal Municipal Act and Local Self-Government Act.”

Chaudhuri.

In regard to the circumstances referred to in the reply to unstarred question No. 24 of the 3rd April, 1919, regarding the bequest of Mr. B. Pal Chaudhuri, will the Government be pleased to state what action (if any) they are taking in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“ Government do not propose to take any action. The bequest was made to the District Board of Nadia and it is understood that that body is dealing with the matter.”

What steps have been taken in pursuance of Government resolution No. 1478-Medical, dated the 31st August, 1917, and Government letter No. 2752-Medical, dated the 18th September, 1917, regarding the desirability of bringing district board dispensaries within easy reach of villages? District Board dispensaries.

54.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the names of persons who have been released from internment “ unconditionally,” together with the dates of internment and release in each case? Unconditional release of certain internees.

(b) What are the considerations that generally determine such “ unconditional ” release?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“ (a) and (b) Government are not prepared to give the names asked for. The second part of the question does not permit of a general answer; the form of order passed depends upon the merits of the individual case ”

55.

Will the Government be pleased to state the number of visits paid since their appointment by the non-official visitors to each political prisoner and the interval between different visits to each? Non-official visitors to political prisoners.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“ Non-official visits to State prisoners are usually paid monthly, and appear to have numbered 77 to date, though this number is of visits to the jail, which may contain more than one prisoner. In the case of détenus the information could not be compiled without undue labour which it is thought unnecessary to undertake.”

Revision of the terms of existing risk notes.

(a) Is it a fact that the terms of the risk notes at present in force were drawn up nearly thirty years ago when conditions prevailing in the country were quite different to what they are at the present day?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of recommending to the Government of India that the Railway Board be instructed to inquire into the matter with a view to the revision of the said terms?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of expediting the expenditure of these surpluses and, if so, are the Government in a position to say when these surpluses are likely to be fully spent?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) (i) and (ii) and (b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to unstarred question No. 45 asked by the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray.

(c) No expenditure out of these surpluses can be incurred without the sanction of the Government of India and Government are not in a position to say at present how soon these surpluses can be spent.”

(a) In regard to my question No. 19 (unstarred) asked at the meeting of Council on the 3rd April last regarding the grant of hill allowance to the teachers of the Rangamati High English School, are the Government considering the desirability of increasing the allowance in question up to 33 per cent. of the pay of the teachers so that the deduction of house-rent at the rate of 10 per cent. on their salary will leave intact the 20 per cent. allowance on their pay which was formerly granted to compensate them for the other inconveniences of the place?

Grant of hill allowance to the teachers of the Rangamati High English School.

(b) With reference to the reply given to the second part of the question referred to in clause (a), are the Government considering the desirability of reconsidering the matter of granting the increase in the hill allowance at least from the date on which such increase was granted to the ministerial officers of Rangamati?

Has any progress in vernacular medical education.

Has any progress been made in regard to the question of vernacular medical education? If not, what are the reasons for the delay in giving effect to the proposal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

"The questioner is referred to the reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald to a question on the same subject asked by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray on the 5th March, 1919. It was then stated that Government did not contemplate the establishment of schools or the opening of special classes for imparting medical education in the vernacular. This decision was arrived at upon full consideration and after a reference to the Government of India. The existing facilities for imparting medical education in English are still behind the demand for such a training, and it is to the provision of further facilities upon existing lines that it is the wish of the local Government to give preference."

Non-official efforts for sanitary improvement in certain malarial areas.

Are the Government aware of non-official efforts for effecting sanitary improvements in certain malarial areas on co-operative principles? If so, what steps (if any) are the Government taking for furthering these and other similar efforts?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:-

" Government are aware of the interesting movement which has recently sprung into existence in the direction of the formation of anti-malarial societies on co-operative lines. There are now three such societies in operation, viz. in Panihati, Sukchar and Sodepore, in the 24-Parganas district. Their aims are to provide for free medical attendance and treatment to the members of the society and to carry out local sanitary improvements. The Co-operative Society at Naogaon has also decided to open three dispensaries and to employ three doctors. Quite recently Rai Bahadur, Dr. G. C. Chatterji who has been a pioneer in this movement, and a number of other gentlemen interested in co-operation and sanitation, approached the Registrar with a view to the registration of a provincial society at Calcutta for the encouragement of anti-malarial societies in the mufassal. The Registrar has given them every assistance in drafting by-laws and in making preliminary arrangements.

The Registrar is giving every encouragement in his power to these societies. The Bengal Co-operative Organisation Society, which receives a subsidy from Government towards its publication, has also given wide publication in its journals to the formation of these societies and to other anti-malarial propaganda."

With reference to unstarred question No. LXXVI of the 3rd July, 1918, will the Government be pleased to state—

Development of resources of the country.

- (a) what steps (if any) have been taken for the development of the resources of the country since the last war conferences at Delhi and at Calcutta;
- (b) in what directions such steps have been taken, and with what result; and
- (c) to what extent Indian capital and talents have been utilised thereby?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

" (a) and (b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to questions VI (e) and (f) on the 18th February last. A copy of the new edition of the Indian Munitions Board's handbook is laid upon the library table and attention is invited to articles 2 3 (a), 8, 17, 29, 30 and 36.

The Hon'ble Member is also referred to the speech of the Hon'ble Revenue Member in reply to the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter on the 27th March, 1919, in which some of the steps taken to develop the resources of the Forest and Cinchona Departments were summarised.

Government have at present under consideration two applications for the extraction of wood or bamboo from forests in the Chittagong Hill-tracts Forests Division for commercial purposes.

The investigation of the tannin resources of the Sunderbans is being conducted by an expert to the Government of India.

With regard to agriculture, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the Government Resolution No. 631-T.R., dated the 7th June, 1919, of which a copy is laid on the library table.

With regard to the weaving industry, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to starred question No. VI.

(c) It is difficult to answer this question precisely. During 18 months the Indian Munitions Board placed net orders to the value of 34 crores of rupees. An analysis of bills amounting to 8½ crores shewed that 47 per cent was paid to purely Indian firms.

It is understood that Indians have not stood aloof from the Industrial section of the share market, while a few of the Industrial Companies are believed to have been subscribed to almost entirely by Indians.

An Indian superintendent and an Indian chemist have been appointed to the new Government Research Tannery."

investigations.

(a) What amount has so far been expended in connection with Miss Cleghorn's investigations regarding silk-worms, and to what practical application have the results of these investigations been put?

(b) Has any expert opinion been obtained with regard to the value of these investigations?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Rupees seventy-one thousand three hundred and four have been expended so far in five years in connection with Miss Cleghorn's investigation into silk.

The work involves a complete and detailed study of silk-worms, of which the production of hybrids is one branch. An observation made by Miss Cleghorn has been made the basis of a valuable method of selection, whereby the eggs of moths preserving the greatest vitality are used in the production of seed cocoons for distribution to rearers.

The races will have to be tested for several years before it can be deemed safe to distribute them to rearers.

(b) Mr. Maxwell-Lefroy, Professor of Entomology at the Imperial College of Science, London, and lately Silk Specialist to the Government of India, spoke highly of Miss Cleghorn's work, and his remarks have been endorsed by the Bengal Silk Committee."

(c) The Hoorhoora khal has been excavated by hand labour, for a length of 3 miles in the district of Howrah, to a width of 50 feet and a depth of 12 feet. This portion of the khal will be finally improved by dredging.

(ii) (a) Study of Natural Phenomena.—

Available statistics of rainfall and flood gaugings have been analysed and from these have been established the nature and frequency of floods in the Damodar river. The maximum possible flood to be provided for in the design of the flood-regulating dams has been calculated.

(b) River Surveys.—

(i) From cross sections and flood levels the maximum rate of discharge of the record flood of 1913 for various sites has been calculated.

(ii) Levels have been taken along the right bank of the river where the flood water spills to estimate the extent of the spill.

(iii) Cross sections of the Lower Damodar have been taken to ascertain the actual carrying capacity of the river between banks.

(c) River Gauging.—

During the monsoon special gaugings have been carried out at several selected sites, velocity observations made and experiments to ascertain the proportion of silt carried in the water.

(d) Reconnaisances for Dam sites :—

The valleys of the Barakar and Upper Damodar rivers and of some of their main tributaries have been examined and the possibility of the construction of reservoir dams investigated.

(e) Survey and investigation of selected sites for Dams.—

(i) Basins of proposed reservoirs have been contoured, and information obtained of the area likely to be submerged.

(ii) Detailed plans for each site have been prepared.

(iii) The nature of the soil, sub-soil and rock available at each site has been thoroughly investigated.

(iv) Information in regard to materials of construction available has been collected.

(f) Design of Dams and Reservoirs.—

The general principles and outlines of designs have been worked out while the detailed proposals are well in hand; a definite project for control of the floods by reservoirs is under preparation.

(iii) Surveys are being made to trace (if possible) the changes in the features of the country during the last 60 years both as regards the levels of the country and the changes in the Begua and other spill khals. The survey extends to the extreme limits of the 1913 flood; and, when completed, will afford valuable indications as to the extent of relief possible for the prevention of water-logging after a flood.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

"As the result of a circular issued by Government on the 18th September, 1917, urging upon district boards the necessity for establishing more dispensaries in the mufassal, 10 such dispensaries were opened during 1918, 4 have been opened during the preceding months of the current year and proposals for opening 134 more are now under consideration."

(a) With reference to the answer to unstarred question No. XI of 3rd July, 1917, regarding the removal of the headquarters station of the Noakhali district, are the Government aware that the erosion of the river Meghna has proceeded with alarming rapidity during the last two years and that the zilla school, the Madrassa the Mission House, the Hindu and Muhammadan Boarding buildings and some residential buildings have already been washed away?

Removal of district.

(b) Are the Government also aware that the erosion of the Meghna has been a matter of grave anxiety and great concern to the people of Noakhali?

(c) Are the Government considering the necessity of making any arrangement for the removal of the headquarters station at once?

(d) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what site, if any, has been selected for this purpose and whether this removal will be temporary or permanent?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"It is unfortunately the case that the erosion by the Meghna at Noakhali is proceeding at a rather more rapid rate this year than in former years, and that the buildings mentioned in the question which lay between the river and the town have been washed away. Government have no doubt that the situation is causing grave anxiety to the people of Noakhali. At the same time, the town itself is in no immediate danger, and there is still the possibility that the erosion may cease before the river reaches the town. In these circumstances, Government propose to adhere to the policy which they have already declared in this Council and elsewhere. They have no intention of abandoning the present station unless the erosion of the Meghna should render this course necessary, and have come to no decision as to the site which should in that event be selected as the headquarters. Meanwhile temporary quarters are being built at Sonapur, and will shortly be ready, for those officials whose houses are in most imminent danger, and arrangements have been made for the temporary accommodation of the zilla school and madrassa."

Rise in the price of rice and other food-stuffs in Bengal.

(a) Are the Government aware that the rise in the price of rice and other food-stuffs in the Presidency has been very rapid and abnormal since the beginning of this year?

(b) Are the Government also aware that this rise has been causing great anxiety to the whole population of the Presidency and that the poorer people are already suffering a great deal on this account?

(c) Have the Government taken any steps to ascertain the causes of this rise? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what these causes are?

(d) What steps (if any) are the Government taking with a view to mitigating the sufferings of the poor of this Presidency on account of the rise of prices?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a), (b), (c) and (d) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement which will be made in connection with the resolutions on the same subject which will be moved at the present Council meeting and to the following Press communiqué of the 14th June, 1919:—

‘The question of the retail price of rice in the Bengal Presidency has been continuously under examination by the Local Government for many months past; and, in particular, the pronounced rise which began last April has been the subject of careful and minute examination. It is within the knowledge of the public that the control of rice is under the direction of the Government of India. The general principle which is being adopted is that supplies of rice are being directed from the provinces in which stocks are still available to those provinces in which but for outside help actual shortage of food is feared. But on the representation of the Bengal Government regarding the abnormally high prices now prevailing in the Presidency, the Imperial Government have re-examined the whole question of outside demands on Bengal and in its interests have adopted the following measures.

2. The monthly allotment made by the Foodstuffs Commissioner for exports of rice by rail to other provinces has been materially decreased; and overseas export to Madras has been substantially reduced. A moderate allotment of Burma rice has been made for Bengal via Calcutta, which, it is anticipated, will be continued monthly; whilst arrangements have been made for the import of rice from Akyab to Chittagong for the use of Assam and of the Eastern districts of Bengal. The Government of India have also under consideration measures for the prevention of the creation of competitive prices by purchasers from other provinces bidding against one another. Further, the freight of rice from Rangoon to Calcutta has been decreased.

3. The Government of Bengal have at present no reason to anticipate any actual shortage of rice; but by the census of stocks of rice in the province, orders for which have recently issued, it is proposed to ascertain more clearly the position in each district and in the Presidency as a whole, and, in particular, whether there is any improper holding up of stocks.’ ”

High prices of cloth in Bengal.

(a) Are the Government aware that high prices of cloth are still prevailing throughout the Presidency, and that there is also an upward tendency of these prices?

(b) Are the Government also aware that great distress prevails throughout the Presidency owing to these high prices?

(c) Have the Government caused any inquiry to be made into the causes of these high prices of cloth? If so, what are the causes?

(d) Is there any reason to think that there is a likelihood of these prices falling soon?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps (if any) they are taking to control the prices of cloth?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) The price of cloth throughout the Presidency is still considerably above the pre-war normal, but retail prices have varied very little during the last six months and are now very much the same as they were in the latter part of January.

(b) Yes.

(c) An inquiry was made by a Committee appointed by Government in July, 1918. The same causes of high prices which were then found to exist are still at work. These were explained in the course of the debate on the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Babadur on the 19th February, 1919.

(d) There are signs of future improvement in imports of cloth, but it is difficult to forecast future prices.

(e) Government are carefully watching the trend of prices of cloth, but do not at present contemplate taking any special action.”

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.*THE CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL BILL, 1917.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, moved that the Calcutta Municipal Bill, 1917, be withdrawn.

He said :—

"My Lord, in moving this motion I feel that on behalf of Government I must explain at some length the reasons that have weighed with the Government to decide upon the course which I have now proposed. It may be within the recollection of members of this Council that Sir S. P. Sinha (now Lord Sinha) when introducing the Calcutta Municipal Bill on the 27th of November, 1917, pointed out that doubts and difficulties had from time to time arisen with regard to the construction and practical operation of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1899 and there had been also a growing volume of public opinion that the constitution of the Corporation should be further liberalized. Lord Sinha then sketched the genesis of the present Bill and, among other things, he pointed out that 'in the address which the Chairman and the Commissioners of the Calcutta Corporation presented on behalf of the citizens of Calcutta, to His Excellency Lord Carmichael, on his arrival in Calcutta, to take up the Government of the Presidency, they expressed the opinion that their administration would not be effective without some radical alterations in the law and in the constitution of the Corporation, and they invited consideration of the suggestions of the Royal Commission on Decentralization regarding the Corporation'. I may mention here that the Royal Commission upon Decentralization, after going into the question of municipal administration generally, were strongly impressed with the necessity of relieving the Chairman from having to preside at all meetings of the Corporation and the General Committee and at practically all special and sub-committees. They accordingly recommended in their Report the adoption of the system in force in Bombay under which all executive authority vests in a Municipal Commissioner appointed by Government, who is not a member of the Corporation. Lord Sinha then went on to say—'several representations were subsequently submitted to Government from private individuals, as well as from representative Associations, and various proposals were suggested for the consideration of Government with a view to the amendment of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899. The Government of Lord Carmichael realized that there was a widespread feeling in favour of amending the Act, and in particular of an alteration in the constitution of the Corporation. The various proposals and suggestions which had been put forward were considered and examined, and a Resolution was published in 1913, inviting the views of the Calcutta Corporation and the general public on the main alterations suggested in the law, which related principally to the constitution of the Corporation and the administrative machinery employed. After consideration of the views expressed the Bill now under discussion was prepared by Lord Carmichael's Government and eventually introduced as I have already mentioned in March 1917.

The main features of this Bill are—

- (i) the increase of the number of Commissioners ;
- (ii) the election of Muhammadan representatives by separate District Electorates of their own, precluding them at the same time from taking part in the General or Ward elections ;
- (iii) the abolition of plural voting ;
- (iv) the appointment of a Commissioner by the Government as the head of the executive and the election of a Chairman by the Corporation to preside at its meetings and the abolition of the General Committee and the creation of a General Appeals Committee and a Buildings Appeals Committee.

These changes were primarily proposed to meet popular demands and at the same time to give the Corporation a more liberal constitution than under the present law of 1899. To take the case of Muhammadan representation, public opinion was invited on the subject and as stated by Lord Sinha 'in spite of the unanimous opposition of the Hindu associations the consensus of opinion, including that of the Corporation, was in favour of securing adequate representation to this important community by a separate communal electorate'. The proposal for the abolition of plural voting was designed to make the constitution of the Corporation more democratic whilst in introducing the Bombay system of vesting all executive authority in a Municipal Commissioner appointed by Government, we were following the recommendations of the Royal Commission upon Decentralization. As regards the fifth of the important constitutional changes proposed there was a strong body of opinion, including that of the Corporation itself, in favour of the abolition of the General Committee and the transfer of its powers partly to the Corporation and partly to the Municipal Commissioner.

When Your Excellency's Government came into office in 1917, they succeeded to this Bill as a legacy from Lord Carmichael's Government, and it was decided to introduce it, though it was recognized that it would be introduced at a time when the general principles of the development in India of Local Self-Government were about to be further examined and that new and more liberal principles might be enunciated and that there might be a change in the public attitude towards the provisions contained in the Bill. The Government of Bengal realized then, as they do now, the necessity for carrying public opinion with them in a measure of this kind and were fully alive to the fact that their policy would have to be determined by the reception it met. The Bill was accordingly introduced as a medium of ascertaining what form of City Government the public of Bengal in general and the Corporation of Calcutta in particular wished to have. It was on this account that in addressing the Council on 4th April, 1918, Your Excellency remarked that when the views of the Corporation and other public bodies on the Bill had been submitted they would receive careful and earnest attention from Government, and Your Excellency at the same time gave voice to the hope that the expression of their views would not be unduly delayed though there was no desire on the part of Government to curtail the time necessary for a full considered opinion.

Well, the Corporation have had ample time to consider the provisions of the Bill, although I am much afraid that some of its members would probably have liked to have had more time for the purpose, but which the Government did not feel justified in granting as already two full years had elapsed since the introduction of the measure by Lord Sinha in 1917. However, in March last they submitted their opinion on the provisions relating to the constitution and government of the City, and from their views one thing is certain, viz., that they do not want the organization embodied in the Bill. The Corporation, of course, like other people are free to change their minds and in the present instance they have certainly done so effectually. In fact, in certain aspects there has been an entire transformation of their ideas, for they now protest against some of the changes they themselves formerly asked for, largely it seems because of the conflict between certain features of the Bill and some of the principles laid down in the Resolution on Local Self-Government issued by the Government of India in May, 1918, nearly six months after the Bill was introduced.

The Corporation have now made a number of proposals which are in entire opposition to the system incorporated in the Bill. To give an instance, the Bill provides for nominations of Commissioners by various public bodies, whereas the Corporation recommend that this method of representation by special electorates should be entirely done away with. Their recommendation is certainly consonant with the view put forward in the Report of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State on Indian constitutional reforms that the number of special electorates should be as restricted as possible, and that minority interests should, wherever necessary, be represented not by class or interest electorates, but by nomination. The Corporation then again in another direction are so far democratic that they wish to lower the qualifications for franchise and to introduce female suffrage, thus going beyond the scope of the Bill; on the other hand, however, they are opposed to the democratic innovation which we introduce in the Bill, viz., the abolition of plural voting. Again, they are of opinion that no separate Muhammadan electorate is necessary. In this matter, of course, their views are in accordance with those expressed in the Resolution of the Government of India in May, 1918, on Local Self-Government which states that special representation of minorities, where necessary, should preferably be effected by the system of nomination rather than by introducing some system of communal electorates. Lastly, the Corporation have proposed that they should have power to appoint and remove the Municipal Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner subject to the approval of Government. Here, again, they follow the view of the Government of India who have laid down in their Resolution that the executive head may be nominated by the Municipal Board but his appointment should be approved by Government and he should not be removed without the sanction of Government unless by the vote of a substantial majority of the Board.

Turning to the other views that have been expressed by different public bodies, some of which are more or less of an adverse character, we find, for instance, the Indian Association object to many of the provisions of the Bill relating to constitution. They urge—

- (1) that the Corporation should be the sole supreme authority delegating its powers to the Municipal Commissioner and to different committees;
- (2) the Municipal Commissioner should be elected by the Corporation subject to the veto of Government, and the Corporation should have the sole power of appointing the Deputy Commissioner;
- (3) the elected element on the Corporation should be increased;

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

- (4) that there should be no separate Muhammadan electorate ; and
- (5) the provisions for franchise are old and out of date and the franchise should be broadened.

The Anglo-Indian Association would like—

- (1) that the Corporation should be recognized as the supreme authority with power to appoint committees, there being no co-ordinate authorities ;
- (2) that the control of Government should be external ; and
- (3) that there should be female suffrage.

Coming to Muhammadan sentiment, we find the Bengal Presidency Moslem League regard the Bill as unsatisfactory and retrograde, because according to them the Corporation should have the supreme controlling authority and also they do not consider that the Muhammadans have been given sufficient representation. The Central National Muhammadan Association, whilst also asking for more Muhammadan representation, wish the qualifications for franchise to be lowered. The Calcutta 'Trades' Association seem to think that the Bill is abortive in consequence of impending constitutional changes. They understand, they say, that it is now likely, owing to the change in the political atmosphere of India, that much more extensive proposals will be forthcoming for the liberalizing of the constitution ; and while, therefore, they evidently do not favour our proceeding with the proposed new Bill, they have suggested dividing the Bill into two parts, and going ahead at the earliest possible opportunity with such sections that deal with practical City Government after necessary revision. It is curious, though at the same time not uninteresting, to find two of the most prominent European Associations in Calcutta advocating our not proceeding with the Bill in view of the pending reforms. I have already quoted what the Calcutta 'Trades' Association have said and as it might interest the members of this Council, I may point out that so far back as May 1918, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, in their reply to the Government, advocated the same thing. My Lord, I have already, I am afraid, trespassed on the time of this Council and I shall, therefore, now briefly state why it is that the Government propose to withdraw the Bill. It must be evident to members of this Council from the view received by the Government from the different bodies, particularly the Calcutta Corporation itself, that the Bill introduced in 1917, instead of having received a warm welcome, has had, in certain respects, at any rate, a somewhat chilly and hostile reception. Government are more anxious now than ever of popularizing Local Self-Government in the country and in view, therefore, of the coming reforms as well as, of course, of the fact that Government have no desire to force on an unwilling Corporation a constitution which it does not consider popular, they have consequently decided to move for the withdrawal of the Bill. Although, however, Government propose to withdraw this Bill, they hope to be able to introduce before very long fresh legislation for certain practical administrative reforms of which the necessity had long been felt. The Bill as introduced, as I have already pointed out, provided for enlarging the constitution of the Corporation and for a more equitable representation of all sections of the community. It was also intended at the same time to overcome practical difficulties which have been experienced as the result of the working of the Act since 1899. The Corporation have submitted a representation that there are certain urgent and non-controversial matters of an administrative character in regard to which immediate legislation is necessary, such as the improvement of the milk-supply, the licensing of theatres and the revision of the existing law regarding food adulteration.

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Government, therefore, whilst deciding to withdraw the present Bill, agree that grave inconvenience will be caused if legislation for administrative reforms of this character is deferred, and it is, therefore, proposed to introduce as soon as possible an amending Bill dealing solely with administrative reforms which lie outside the field of political controversy.

My Lord, I now beg to move that the Calcutta Municipal Bill, 1917, be withdrawn."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, permit me to congratulate the Government on its decision to withdraw the Calcutta Municipal Bill. The Bill has been introduced in 1917, some years after the breaking up of the war. The Bill might have studied the temper of the people and the atmosphere of 1912-13, but from the time when instructions to draft the Bill were issued, the political atmosphere (as the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur has said) has changed. It has rapidly changed and the Bill as it was introduced was an anachronism, and, it would be an advantage for the Government, having now received the opinions of the several bodies interested in the efficient working of the Municipality, that they should withdraw the Bill and frame a new Bill on the lines of public opinion of the present time, and the views which the Government of the present day might entertain on it, because I am sure the opinion of Government also changes with the change of time and that what they considered wise and good some 5 years ago may not be so now. Then, my Lord, something has been said about the changing attitude of the Corporation of Calcutta. I plead guilty to that, my Lord. We are bound to change our attitude with the progress of time and it is no credit to a person or to a public body if they cannot change—change which may be due to the change in the political atmosphere or as a result of public criticism. If something be found better, there is no reason why we should not change our present view and adopt a new one. For instance, the question of female suffrage which has been referred to by the Hon'ble Member. It will be found that certain provinces in British India have gone ahead of us, and have given votes to female owners and occupiers of property. Bombay has been satisfied with such a thing since the year 1888. By Bombay I do not mean the city of Bombay alone but also the mufassal districts where they have given votes to females. There are female electors without causing any inconvenience. This is also the case in the United Provinces where, I believe, female suffrage was given some 10 or 15 years ago. There is something of this kind in the Punjab also, so that female suffrage, as suggested by the Calcutta Corporation for introduction, is not an experiment and is not a thing which ought not to have been put forward by such a sedate body as the Calcutta Corporation. As I said, my Lord, I am glad that the measure is being withdrawn and that the materials now before the Council will form the foundation of a new and better measure."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, when I entered the Council Chamber I had no idea of speaking on this motion ; and I did not anticipate such a lucid speech from the Hon'ble Member in charge. But I am glad that he has dealt with the whole history of the Calcutta Municipality. I think, my Lord, I may say that I do not agree with my hon'ble friend to the left (Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur) that the Bill should not have been introduced at all in the year 1917. I am glad that it was introduced and that the public had an opportunity of seeing what the Government proposed to do in connection with the Calcutta Municipality and what reforms and changes the Government proposed to introduce. I am glad that this introduction afforded an opportunity not only to the Corporation but also to the public generally to express their views on the subject.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan has dwelt on the delay on the part of the Corporation in submitting their opinion on this Bill. Well, my Lord, it is the old old cry that the Corporation is an arsenal of delays. May I not retort and ask, how many years the Government of Bengal took in incubating this measure? If I go back to the history of this measure, I may say that in 1913 the main proposals relating to the constitution were formulated and a special officer was deputed to draft the Bill. If with all the resources at their disposal Government took no less than four years to deal with a measure of such magnitude, I think the Corporation and the public bodies have not taken an unduly long time over this measure which is a big volume containing nearly 600 sections with a number of schedules.

Then, my Lord, the first instalment of the opinion of the Corporation was submitted some time in March last. This related to the constitution, and the subject naturally took a great deal of time. The Corporation is a heterogenous body, consisting of Europeans and Indians, Hindus and Muhammadans, Parsis and Jews, and we had to harmonize the views of the different sections of the community. I think that the Corporation, instead of being accused of delay, ought to be congratulated on being able to submit their views on the constitutional portions, which are endorsed by all sections of the community, European and Indian.

My Lord, the Corporation have been charged—and I take the charge in a light-hearted way—with changing their views. The main point is whether the Corporation should be the supreme authority, as was the case long before the Indian Constitutional Reforms were even dreamed of by Mr. Montagu; I believe he was then in his cradle. In 1863, the Government of Sir Cecil Beadon created the Corporation, and made it the supreme authority. There were no co-ordinate authorities, nor was the executive free from the control of the Corporation. Then, in 1876, the elective system was partially introduced in Sir Richard Temple's time, and in Sir Stuart Bayley's time in 1888 the suburbs were amalgamated with Calcutta. Ten years later, unluckily for us at an evil moment—I think in a fit of anger—everything was smashed, and in 1899 an Act was passed, pulling the Corporation down from the position it had occupied since 1863. I think it is clear from the proceedings of the Corporation that we—the representatives of rate-payers—wanted at least the restoration of the constitution which Calcutta had enjoyed since 1863. Fortunately or unfortunately, I am glad that the Bill revealed to the general public what Government intended to do. The Bill proposed to keep the Corporation as an ornamental body with some increase in the number of members and we were to be content with some additional chairs in the Corporation Council Chamber. That, my Lord, was a position which we were not prepared to accept, especially in view of the fact that high hopes were engendered in our minds after the publication of the celebrated Report on Constitutional Reforms by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India.

My Lord, the first Calcutta Municipal Act creating the Corporation was passed in 1863 and after a lapse of 12 or 13 years it was amended in 1876; it was again amended in 1888 and finally in 1899 a retrograde measure was passed, doing away with the Corporation as a supreme authority in Municipal affairs. In 1917 we were pressed with this disappointing Bill, although we had always been promised in very sweet and comforting expressions by successive Viceroy and Governors that the Act would be amended and that there would be something like real local self-government as you have in your own country. We came to the Throne Room of Government House and presented addresses; and we had hopes held out but nothing tangible has yet been done to fulfil those hopes. I may also submit that not only the Corporation but generally all the public bodies, including the Anglo-Indian Association, the Calcutta Trades' Association, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the Muhammadan Association and other Indian Associations and even the non-official European Commissioners think that the time has changed and that the constitution of the Corporation should be liberalized. That shows, my Lord, the volume of public opinion and the depth of public feeling in the country, and I hope that now that the Bill is to be withdrawn effect will be given to the popular wishes in this matter. If in this small matter of City Government we are not to have genuine self-government, what is the use of giving us hopes of enlarged powers in the Provincial Councils or in the Government of India? If we are not to be trusted after 50 years of British rule to manage our own local affairs, and we are to be always in the leading strings of the executive head of the Corporation, far better that there should be no reform than a reform in which we shall be rewarded only with some additional chairs in the Corporation Council Chamber.

As regards the change of views of the Corporation, I may say a word or two before I sit down. I do not think that there has been any material change, but having regard to the publication of the report on the Indian constitutional reforms, the Corporation thought that as regards European representation, it should be secured through earmarking a certain number of seats for Europeans in some Wards instead of through election by close association. As regards Moslem representation it took a little time to harmonize the views of Hindus and Muhammadans on the subject and the opinion arrived at is the considered view of the Corporation. As regards female suffrage for which my gallant friend the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur fought hard in the Corporation, we accepted it by a majority. These are some of the details. There has been no change of opinion or attitude in regard to the main thing, viz., that the Corporation should be the supreme authority in Municipal affairs, and we implore the Government that in the matter of Municipal administration the Corporation should be the supreme authority."

to make provision for the sale of food in Bengal in a pure and genuine condition.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for the sale of food in Bengal in a pure and genuine condition and for the prevention of adulteration thereof ; "

He said :—

" My Lord, in making this amendment I beg to submit that the amendment suggested is based on the idea that the object of the Bill is to make provision for the sale of food in Bengal in a pure and genuine condition. The preamble ought to include such a language as referred to just now. The perusal of the several clauses of the Bill may justify me to make this suggestion. Reading 38 and 39 Vic. C. 63 upon which the Bill has been drafted, I am fortified to make this amendment as to the title and preamble. The title of the English Act runs thus :—' An Act to repeal the adulteration of food and drugs and to make better provision for the sale of food and drugs in a pure state whereas it is desirable that the Acts now in force relating to the adulteration of food should be repealed and that the law regarding the sale of food, etc., in a pure and genuine condition is to be amended'. I notice that the preamble in the Bill simply states for the prevention of adulteration of food in Bengal. The title and the preamble of the Act ought to be clear and exhaustive."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

" My Lord, I am sorry I am unable to accept this amendment. In opposing this amendment I am aware that the more recent English Act designed to prevent the adulteration of food and drugs bears the title of Sale of Food and Drugs Act. But the Sanitary Commissioner's note upon this point which is contained in the collection of opinions had some force in regard to the original title circulated to the Hon'ble Members and adopted by Government in this Bill, namely, the Prevention of Adulteration Bill. As the matter does not deal with adulteration generally but merely with the adulteration of food, while adulteration is actually practised in many other commodities, the Select Committee realized that some change in the title was necessary and the Bill now bears the title of the Bengal Food Adulteration Bill. This title is in my opinion adequate and it covers measures to secure both the sale and manufacture of pure food. I do not think that the amendment of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur would be an improvement. As both the title and preamble seem to me to be suitable and sufficiently expressive, I would request the Council to reject the proposed amendment."

The Bengal Food Adulteration Bill, 1919.

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur; The President.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, it is not necessary for me to add anything more. I have sufficiently explained my views to the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Clause 1.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur was to have moved that for the words "Bengal Food Adulteration Act" in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 1, the words "Bengal Pure Food Act" be substituted.

The President said :—

"The amendment standing in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is consequential on the first amendment and therefore falls."

The amendment was then deemed to be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 3.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that in sub-clause (2) of clause 1, the following be omitted, namely :—

"(1) in lines 2 and 3, the words, brackets and figures 'except Calcutta as defined in clause (7) of section 3 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899,' and

(2) in line 7, the words 'outside Calcutta'."

He said :—

"My Lord, the proposed amendment suggests to the Council that the Act should be extended to Calcutta. Whoever has carefully read the clauses of the Bill cannot express his debt of gratitude to the hon'ble mover of the Bill and the Select Committee. The provisions of the English Acts from 1875 to 1907, specially the sale of Food and Drugs Acts of 1875, 1879, of 1899, the Butter and Margarine Act of 1907, have been made applicable to Bengal as far as they may be possible. The Bill is not exhaustive and is capable of further amendments and improvements. The intricacies of the English law have been carefully avoided and the clauses exhibit care and attention paid to bring home at present cases so far as Bengal is concerned. Clauses 5, 6 and 8 are elastic. The warranty sections, so familiar to English lawyers, may be made applicable to these clauses. My Lord, I regret to note that this Bill has been declared not to be applicable to Calcutta, notwithstanding the valuable opinion of the Marwari Association, Calcutta, to the effect that various articles of food of common consumption, such as ghee, oil, atta, etc., are imported into the interior of the Presidency of Bengal from Calcutta. Having regard to some of the provisions of the Bill the Association are of opinion that the clause should be so altered as to make the law applicable to Calcutta also in order to check, as far as possible, the sale in the mufassal of adulterated articles imported from Calcutta. It is submitted that the field of the operation of the Bill should not be in the mufassal only, but in Calcutta also, the centre of trade and commerce. If the provisions of the Bill are administered with care in Calcutta, there may be a salutary check on the sale of adulterated food in the Province. Sections 495 and 496 of the Calcutta Municipal Act (Ben. Act III of 1899) now in force, in Chapter XXXV, are, in my opinion, not exhaustive and therefore powerless to prevent adulteration. In the new Bill which has been withdrawn the improvements suggested in Chapter XXIX will therefore be of no practical utility to the public."

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Only the Ghee Act has been passed by Your Excellency's Council for Calcutta, but I regret to note that nothing has been done as yet for the prevention of the sale of milk, mustard oil, etc., in adulterated condition by a very large number of vendors in markets of Calcutta excepting in a few markets belonging to the Calcutta Corporation. Had the sections of the Calcutta Municipal Act now in force been powerful enough to enforce the sale of milk, mustard oil, etc., in a pure and genuine condition only, the vendors in Calcutta markets referred to above would not have ventured to sell them in an adulterated condition and could not exhibit signboards and placards to the effect that they sell adulterated articles."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, it was a little bit surprising to me when I moved for the withdrawal of the Calcutta Municipal Bill that the two gallant gentlemen who defended the opinion of the Corporation did not at all welcome my proposal except by their silence to take up urgent legislation in connection with better milk-supply and of further and more adequate control against the adulteration of food. Therefore, it is perhaps in one sense very pleasant to hear the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur suggesting that this Act should apply to Calcutta as well as to the mufassal. My Lord, I quite agree that some measure to prevent the sale and manufacture of adulterated food in Calcutta is even more urgently required than in the mufassal, and if Government were proposing to leave Calcutta alone, the hon'ble mover of this amendment would be justified in complaining against the distinction which the legislature would be setting up by excluding Calcutta in this manner. But if the Hon'ble Member who has moved this amendment heard me correctly, I am sure he must have realized that it is proposed at a very early date to lay before this Council a short amending Bill which would provide for certain urgent amendments for Calcutta. A draft of that Bill, as I have already said, is now under preparation and I may inform the Hon'ble Member that it contains adequate provisions for the prevention of food adulteration in Calcutta. As I have pointed out it is more convenient to have the Municipal law contained within the four corners of one Act, and a further reason for not accepting the Hon'ble Member's amendment is that the Corporation has not been consulted on this Bill. In view of this, I trust that the Hon'ble Mover will see his way to withdraw it. I regret that I am unable to accept it."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, although this matter was not referred to the Corporation it was discussed in one of our committees and the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan is quite right in saying that the Calcutta Municipal Bill contained certain provisions—I may say additional provisions—which would adequately check this evil in Calcutta. They therefore felt no necessity for pressing for an extension of this Act to Calcutta. I believe everyone is anxious that there should be adequate check over the sale of adulterated foodstuffs in Calcutta as well, and I am sure that when the Act is amended and when the emergency legislation foreshadowed in the speech of the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur and requested by the Corporation is passed, there will be no difficulty in coping with the evil in Calcutta.

With reference to the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur's observation that the two gallant gentlemen (meaning my honourable colleague Rai Bahadur Debender Chunder Ghose and myself) did not thank Government for acceding to the request of the Corporation to take up an emergency legislation for the better control of food and drugs in Calcutta and in connection with certain other matters I did not know that Government were in need of compliments. We were talking about the constitution of the Corporation,

The Bengal Food Adulteration Bill, 191

d the question of emergency legislation did not arise. However, I shall ar it in mind and will never let an opportunity pass of paying a compliment Government for any little act of kindness and justice or for doing air duty, at least so long as the Hon'ble Member occupies an honoured ice in the counsels of Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have already submitted my views in connection with the amendment. To my mind it appears that the Act as it is ought to be exhaustive and applicable to the whole Province inclusive of Calcutta. When the Act was passed there was a saving clause that notification may be made with regard to its operation in the mufassal. But, my Lord, that Act is applicable, as far as I understand and as far as my information goes, only to Calcutta. If there be one Act applicable to the mufassal and another to Calcutta there may be some difficulty. I always thought it necessary that in cases like this, where adulterated food is the subject matter of consideration, there ought to be one Act applicable to the whole Province. Why do I say that? Because, in the mufassal where food is adulterated, the practice may be checked if the whole thing is brought under the control of one and the same authority. That is the view, my lord, which persuaded me to come to the Council and ask for the consideration of your Excellency's Council whether this Bill ought to have its operation in Calcutta or not. The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Burdwan has told me that there will be an emergency Bill, but it is not known as yet what the Bill will contain, but all the difficulties which I have submitted to the Council are obviated under the provisions of the emergency Bill I have nothing more to say and find that the representative of the Calcutta Corporation also agrees with the views of the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Burdwan. I think I had better withdraw this amendment and leave the matter as it now stands."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 4.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that the words "after previous publication", in line 4 of sub-clause (2) of clause 1, be omitted.

he said :—

"My Lord, I think I should not press for this amendment. On reconsideration I see that 'after previous publication' has been rightly introduced in the Bill. I, therefore, beg leave to withdraw the motion."

The motion was then by leave of the President withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 5.

Clause 2.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that after sub-clause (4) of clause 2, the following be inserted, namely :—

"(4a) 'offence' means anything made punishable by this Act."

he said :—

"My Lord, I think 'offence' should be defined. I have not consulted the Bengal General Clauses Act very carefully and I do not know whether that Act would cover this. In the case of the Village Self-Government Act 'offence' has to be defined. So I think it should be defined in this Act too."

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Mr. Goode.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member's intention is to make the section stronger and more free from any possible legal flaw and I would have welcomed his proposal if it had appeared necessary from this point of view. Government are, however, advised that there is no necessity to define the word 'offence', as the definition in section 3 (30) of the General Clauses Act, to which some reference has been made by the Hon'ble Member, will apply. The amendment is unnecessary, and I hope the Hon'ble Member will not press it."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"In view of the fact that it is covered by the General Clauses Act, I do not press it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 6.

Clause 5.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that the words "to the prejudice of the purchaser", in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 5, be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' will, I think, hamper prosecutions. It is rather difficult to prove and this is the view not only of myself but also of the Collector of Rangpur and some other gentlemen, who have given their opinions on the clause. I do not know whether the attention of the Select Committee was drawn to it, but the report does not show on what ground the suggestion was not accepted. After full consideration I would suggest the deletion of the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser'."

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

"My Lord, I quite agree with the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that it will be necessarily difficult to prove prejudice in the case of a prosecution and that Government will be very well advised to accept the amendment which the Hon'ble Mover has now placed before the Council if such proof is necessary. But as a matter of fact there are several very clear rulings in the English Courts which show that actual prejudice or damage need not be proved in establishing an offence under the section of the English Act which resembles the drafting of the clause which is now before the House. These words also occur in the United Provinces Act of 1912 and Government are advised that it runs no risk in retaining these words within the Bill. I appreciate the desire of the Hon'ble Member to make this Act as effective and free from flaw as possible and we would very gladly accept his amendment if it appeared to be necessary. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur may admit that if it appeared force in the precedent that I have urged but at the same time I apprehend he may ask me why, if there is any doubt in the matter, when the English Courts have taken several years to arrive at a clear decision on the meaning of the words in the Act, we should run any risk of similar doubts in the Courts of Bengal. I think, my Lord, that argument would be very well taken; but for one fact, and that is this : that various absurdities will arise if we delete these words from the clause as it now stands. The English Courts have expressly ruled on several occasions that these words were inserted in the English Act purely with the intention of protecting a tradesman who sells, for example, a superior article to that which is asked for by the purchaser. It certainly will be an absurdity if the tradesman who sells a superior article is liable on a very technical interpretation of the clause to prosecution. The English Courts, therefore, held that the words were expressly inserted in the English Acts to prevent this anomaly arising. In view of these circumstances, my Lord, I hope that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur will withdraw this amendment. We must be guided in such matters by our law officers and I think I can confidently assure him that the difficulty which he apprehends will never arise."

The Bengal Food Adulteration Bill, 1919

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; The President.

the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I thank the Hon'ble Mr. Goode for his lucid explanation of this point. I quite appreciate that this matter has received careful consideration at the hands of Government.

I may say without hesitation that we are deeply grateful to Government for introducing this measure which is a very beneficial piece of legislation. It is free from political controversy as it is not a measure in which we are scrambling for power, but it is a measure which is designed in the interests of public health. Our suggestions are, however, made merely with the object of helping the Government as far as it lies within our power to improve the Bill. In view, however, of the explanation that has been given by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode, I beg to withdraw this motion."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 7.

The following amendment being analogous to Amendment No. 6 was deemed to have been withdrawn :—

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri to move that for the words "the prejudice of the", in line 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 5, the word "any" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 8.

New clause 9A.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur was to have moved that after clause 9 (now clause 8) the following be inserted, namely :—

"9A. (1) No person shall sell, expose for sale, or manufacture or store for sale any article of food which is diseased, unsound, unwholesome or unfit for human consumption or the nature, substance or quality of which has deteriorated through exposure, age, atmospheric action or damage from fire or water, or through any other cause.

(2) In any prosecution under this section the Court shall, unless and until the contrary is proved, presume that any article of food found in the possession of a person who is in the habit of keeping articles of food for human consumption has been so manufactured or stored for sale by such person."

The President

"This motion is beyond the scope of the Bill. It is also unnecessary; and if the Hon'ble Member will look up the Bengal Municipal Act, he will find that a similar section, namely, 250, exists in the Act; so that this proposal is in any case not necessary. Moreover, in view of the decision of the Council with regard to the preamble of the Bill, it will now be out of order as being beyond the scope of the measure."

The motion was then deemed to have been withdrawn.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Mr. Goode.

AMENDMENT No. 9.

Clause 11.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that the following be added to clause 11 (now clause 10), namely :—

“(4) Any purchaser may also require, by tender of the price, the sale to him for the purpose of analysis of such quantity of any food exposed or intended for sale, as is reasonably requisite for analysis, and any person in possession of, or exposing the same for sale, shall be bound to sell such quantity.”

He said :—

“My Lord, clause 11 (now clause 10) relates to the compulsory sale by any purchaser of goods for purposes of analysis. My proposition goes a little beyond what is contemplated in this clause. I move that the purchaser may also require, by tender of the price, the sale to him for the purpose of analysis of such quantity of any food exposed or intended for sale, as is reasonably requisite for analysis, and any person in possession of, or exposing the same for sale, shall be bound to sell such quantity.

My object is to enable any private person—and not merely a person duly authorized by the local Government—to purchase articles of food for analysis and to make it clear that the shop-keeper is bound to sell the articles to him. I know that both clauses 10 (now clause 9) and 12 (now clause 11) give authority to any person duly authorized by the local Government or under rules made under this Act to purchase any article for the purpose of analysis, but it is not clearly specified whether a seller shall be bound to sell to a private person for the purpose of analysis, and I want it to be clearly stated in the Bill. This clause is suggested by the Anglo-Indian Association in their opinion on this Bill. I do not know the view of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill with respect to this clause, but I shall be glad to hear him on the subject.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

“My Lord, the department thoroughly appreciates the intention of the Hon'ble Member to render the law as effective as possible ; and I think the reason why so few of the amendments which have been before the House appear necessary, is because the Select Committee went into this Bill with very special care and attention.

In regard to the amendment which is now before the House, I think that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur will admit that it is somewhat superfluous and unnecessary. Clause 12 (now clause 11) of the Bill provides that any person who has purchased any article of food may inform the vendor that he will have an analysis made, and a certain procedure is laid down which he must adopt for that purpose. Now, the intention of the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur's amendment is that any private purchaser should be in a position to demand the compulsory sale of any article of food which he wishes to be analysed. In the first place, I think the amendment, if accepted, would really prove a dead letter. I cannot conceive that any one in Calcutta is going to make it his business to go round to markets and shops in order to expose himself to the odium of demanding samples to be sent to the Health Officer or to the authority who will administer this Act. As the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur knows, food inspection in the Corporation is very difficult to work and I think that no private person is likely to take upon himself the burden, and, I may say, to incur the odium which a Food Inspector must incur in the course of his duties. I think it is sufficient that he should have the powers which clause 12 of the Bill gives him ; and I have little doubt that the Rai Bahadur will on further reflection accept the assurance that his amendment is not really required. I am, therefore, compelled to oppose the amendment ; but I hope the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur will withdraw it.”

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened with great attention to the observations of Goode. I want to explain, my Lord, that clause 12 (now clause 11) gives right to any private person or purchaser, when he wishes to have an article analysed, after the purchase, to declare it to the seller that he is going to have it analysed. He may take a sample and send it to such analyst as the Government may appoint. I am giving a concrete instance :— Suppose a public-spirited gentleman finds that a grocer systematically adulterates food-stuffs to the public in spite of the Sanitary Inspector or the Food Inspector. He may take a sample. If the purchaser happens to live in the same quarter in which the shop is situated, he may have great trouble in getting it the next time, as the grocer may say I won't sell you because on the last occasion when I sold you you sent a public analyst and that person cannot compel him to sell the article. The efforts of the local authorities, under the present provision, will not be supplemented by public-spirited gentlemen who may otherwise be inclined to do so. Mr. Goode says that private persons would not care to undertake the trouble, but times are changing, and we are now aspiring for reforms in all directions when we should be expected to look to these little things ourselves.

I think, my Lord, that the public will supplement the efforts of the local authorities. In spite, therefore, my Lord, of what has fallen from Mr. Goode, I respectfully press my motion for the consideration of this House."

The motion being put, a division was taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENTS Nos. 10, 11 and 12.

The President said :—

“Items Nos. 10, 11 and 12 are consequential on item No. 8 and are, therefore, out of order”.

The following amendments were then deemed to have been withdrawn:—

Clause 13 (now clause 12).

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to move that after the word “adulterated” in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 13, the following be inserted, namely :—

“or deteriorated in regard to its quality, nature or substance, or diseased, unwholesome, unsound or unfit for human consumption”.

Clause 14 (now clause 13).

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to move that after the word “adulterated”, in line 2 of sub-clause (2) of clause 14, the following be inserted, namely :—

“or deteriorated in regard to its quality, nature or substance, or diseased, unwholesome, unsound or unfit for human consumption”.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to move that after the word “adulterated”, in line 2 of sub-clause (3) of clause 14, the following be inserted, namely :—

“or deteriorated in regard to its quality, nature or substance, or diseased, unwholesome, unsound or unfit for human consumption”.

AMENDMENT No. 13.

Clause 15 (now clause 14).

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that in line 10 of the proviso to clause 15 (now clause 14) after the words “the said Court”, the following be inserted, namely :—

“and the said report shall be admissible”.

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

“My Lord, this amendment is a very small one, and I think that it is essary to add the words as suggested because a question may hereafter be as to the advisability of such a measure.”

Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

“My Lord, the main principle underlying the whole of this Bill is to give ter fool to the people of Bengal, and to make their food more madhu, that sweet and wholesome. I am glad that this last amendment should be dhurena samapayet. I would like to accept the amendment with some ht modification. What I would like to point out is that it would be better add the words ‘in such courts’ as it now appears in the paper provided t the word ‘and’ which occurs before ‘the expense of such analysis’ in 10 of the proviso is deleted, and if the Hon'ble Member who has moved s amendment is willing to the deletion of the word ‘and’ before the words e expense of such analysis’ in line 10 of the proviso, then I have no ection to accepting his amendment.”

Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I have no objection to the suggestions which have been de.”

The motion was then put in the following amended form and eed to :—

That after the words “the said Court,” the following be inserted, nely :—

“and the said report shall be admissible in evidence in such Court”; and t the word “and” before the words “the expense” be omitted.

AMENDMENT No. 14.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of rdwan, moved that the Secretary be directed to renumber the clauses d sub-clauses of the Bill in consecutive order and to make corresponding erations in all cross-references thereto.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, also moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 8 AND 9.

THE CALCUTTA AND SUBURBAN POLICE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Calcutta Police Act, 1866, and the Calcutta Suburban Police Act, 1866.

He said :—

“My Lord, the Bill which is already in the hands of Hon'ble Members, and which I now ask permission to introduce, is a short Bill, and I trust that my remarks in explaining its provisions may be brief. It will be observed that the Bill, in its two material clauses, deals with the amendment of two sections of the Calcutta and the Suburban Police Acts; but as these two sections in their respective Acts are drafted on analogous lines, I will quote in detail only that which is in the Calcutta Police Act.

In clause 2 of the Bill, we propose to amend section 9 of the Calcutta Police Act. Section 9 runs as follows :—

‘The Police force shall be under the exclusive direction and control of the Commissioner of Police, who may from time to time, subject to the approbation of the said Lieutenant-Governor, frame such orders and regulations as he shall deem expedient relating to the general government of the force, the places of residence, the classification, rank, distribution and particular service of the several members thereof, their inspection, the description of arms, accoutrements and other necessities to be furnished to them, and all such other orders and regulations relative to the said Police force as the said Commissioner shall from time to time deem expedient for preventing neglect or abuse and for rendering such force efficient in the discharge of all its duties.’

There are two points in the section to which I would invite special attention. The first is its wide nature, covering, in effect, the whole ordinary administration of the force and the details connected therewith. The second is the use of the somewhat unusual word in modern legislation—‘approbation’, and this particular amendment in the Bill relates to that word ‘approbation’. It is a somewhat unusual word, as I have said, and I have been unable to trace any detailed discussion of it in connection with the Act of 1866; it seems to have been a legacy from the original Police Act of 1856, and has, therefore, stood in the section for a long time. But in more modern Acts, as the Council is aware, the distinction in the matter of outside control is usually made between two methods: first, certain things may be permissible subject to previous sanction—it may be of the local Government or of the Government of India—which means that action cannot be taken without the prior sanction of superior authority. Or again, certain things may be permissible subject to the control of the local Government or of the Government of India, as the case may be, which means that the superior authority has a statutory right of supervision and interference, if necessary, with the act of the subordinate authority, but that the latter need not refer for sanction before taking action. These are the two ordinary expressions employed in Acts now-a-days, and the question is, what exactly does approbation mean? Does it mean subject to the prior sanction, or merely subject to control? Now, as a matter of fact, it has always, for practical purposes, been interpreted hitherto, as subject to the control of the local Government, and in that view the Commissioner of Police, in the vast majority of cases, passes orders under this section relative to the government of the force and the other details mentioned without any prior reference to the local Government. And I submit to the Council that it is necessary that he should do so. He has done so in the past and no evil effects have resulted therefrom. It is essential that he should have this power in order to ensure the maintenance of discipline in a large and populous city like Calcutta, where the force consists of numerous bodies of men congregated together, and where any deterioration of the authority of the Commissioner of Police is likely to have serious and unfortunate consequences. Such deterioration of authority might easily result, were it open to question whether an order of the Commissioner of Police had or had not received the prior sanction of the local Government. In many cases, indeed, it might be difficult, if not impossible, for the Commissioner to obtain the prior sanction of the local Government, for instance, if orders had to be passed in an emergency. For these reasons the proposal of the Bill is to substitute the word 'control' for the word 'approbation', thus regulating what is, in effect, the existing practice.

The second amendment relates to section 10 of the Calcutta Act, which gives power to the Commissioner to suspend or dismiss any member of the force. The difficulty which has arisen in that connection relates to a case which has also brought to the fore the desirability of the amendment of section 9, which I have already explained. It is a case which has recently occupied the attention of the Police Court and the High Court in Calcutta. The facts are briefly these: a charge was laid in one of the police-stations by a private complainant against a certain person, and in connection with that charge a head-constable misconducted himself and was ordered to be prosecuted, as I understand, for extortion. It is usual when charges of a serious nature are brought against a member of the Police force to suspend him, and so this man was suspended. In accordance with standing orders and long-standing practice in the Calcutta Police, a man under suspension is directed to be detained in barracks at the Police head-quarters at Lal Bazar pending the disposal of his case, and in this instance such an order was actually passed by the Deputy Commissioner, and the man was accordingly sent to Lal Bazar. He was then put on his trial on the charge of extortion preferred against him, and the Magistrate passed an order releasing him on bail; but under the disciplinary measures of the Commissioner of Police he was again sent back to Lal Bazar to remain there pending the final disposal of the case. He then complained against the Deputy Commissioner for wrongful confinement. The complaint was dismissed by the Presidency Magistrate. A motion was made to the High Court against that order, when two grounds were urged. The first was that this standing order of the Commissioner of Police was not a legal order, in so far as it had not received the prior approbation of the local Government. That is taking us back to clause 9, with which I have just been dealing, and it emphasises the defect which we now seek to make good. The second point taken was that, even had it been a legal order in this respect, the Commissioner of Police could not have passed it in respect of a man who was under suspension and over whom his disciplinary powers had ceased. In the High Court the Advocate-General stated that he was not prepared to maintain that these technical defects were non-existent, and the case was then sent back for retrial, that is, the complaint against the Deputy Commissioner was sent back for retrial. This naturally drew our attention to the question how it happens, contrary to the procedure under the general Police Act (V of 1861), that the Police authorities have no disciplinary powers over a man under suspension. That used to be the case in respect of the district police, but attention was drawn to the defect about the year 1895 by two rulings of two different High Courts which maintained that view. It was then considered that it was most undesirable that the position should be as ruled by the Courts, and, as a result, the general Police Act was amended in 1895. I will read the remarks of Sir Anthony MacDonnell on this point, which explain the reasons of the change which was then effected. He said :—

‘ Another provision connected with the internal discipline of the force is meant to affirm the legal responsibilities of a Police officer while under suspension. Doubts have been entertained whether, by the law as it at present stands, a Police officer, if placed under suspension, is not ipso facto, and so long as his suspension lasts, freed from his duty of obedience to his superiors. There can, I think, be no doubt as to its being desirable that a policeman, although under suspension, should remain subject to the obligations of duty and discipline till discharged from the service. A policeman while under suspension cannot well be turned out of barracks, while discipline in barracks must be maintained and insubordination or misconduct punished. It is, therefore, obviously desirable to make it clear that until a Police officer is discharged from the service he shall be subject to all the duties and responsibilities attaching to his position.’

These were the reasons given by Sir Anthony MacDonnell in 1895, and they were accepted by those consulted as eminently reasonable. There was practically no comment regarding them, and the general Police Act was amended on those lines. Apparently by an oversight—it must be remembered that the general Police Act is an Act of the Imperial Council while our Acts are Acts of the local Council—the Calcutta Act was not amended in a similar way, but all these years disciplinary measures have been taken against men under suspension and nobody has ever objected or drawn attention to the point. Now that attention has been drawn to it, however, in the manner which I have indicated, we seek to rectify the defect by inserting in our Calcutta Acts an amendment precisely similar to that which obtains in section 8 of the general Act.

That, Sir, is the Bill. It desires to make two changes which are merely in accordance with long-standing practice, which have worked without harm to anybody and without objection hitherto, but to the underlying defects of which attention has been drawn by a recent ruling of the Calcutta High Court. There is nothing new in the proposal, in so far as it is an embodiment of existing procedure, and, in respect of section 10 of the Calcutta Act, an embodiment of the precedent which has existed in the general Police Act since 1895.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler also moved that the said Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, the Hon'ble Mr. French, the Hon'ble Mr. Graham, the Hon'ble Mr. Mansell, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its consideration at the August meeting of the Council in Dacca.

He said :—

“ My Lord, as regards this motion I would merely add one explanatory remark as to why I am proposing to take up this Bill at Dacca. The reason is that in certain aspects the defects that have been revealed by the recent decision of the High Court are rather serious, and advantage might be taken of them seriously to interfere with the authority of the Commissioner of Police and the discipline of the force. I have indicated in my previous remarks that, in the circumstance of a large city like Calcutta, that is a position which we could not face with equanimity, and in so far as the Bill itself is a very short one, and in so far as it merely seeks to make legal what has actually been done for many years, we have thought it justifiable to propose that the further consideration of the Bill should be taken up at the next meeting of Council.”

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, one portion of the Bill proposes to substitute the word 'control' for the word 'approbation' in section 9 of Ben. Act IV of 1866 (the Calcutta Police Act) and section 3 of Ben. Act II of 1866 (the Calcutta Suburban Police Act). From the Statement of Objects and Reasons I notice that the author of the Bill states : 'That the meaning of the term approbation has never been judicially determined, but it might be held to require each individual order relating to the discipline of the Police force to be submitted to Government for approval before issue by the Commissioner of Police' and it is suggested that this would be impracticable, neither is it necessary ; and that the term 'control' is the expression ordinarily used in similar circumstances in modern legislation. I venture to submit that the legislation proposed is hardly necessary for various reasons. Since the year 1856, the Indian Legislature thought fit to express its idea on the subject by using the word approbation. In section 8 of Act XIII of 1856 (an Act for regulating the Police of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay), I notice that the word approbation finds a place. This section lays down that 'the Police force shall be under the exclusive direction and control of the Commissioner of Police, who may, from time to time, subject to the approbation of the Local Government, frame such order and regulations as he shall deem expedient, relative to the general government of the force, the places of residence, the classification, rank, distribution and particular service of the several members thereof ; their inspection, the description of arms, accoutrements and other necessities to be furnished to them ; and all such other orders and regulations relative to the said Police force as the said Commissioner shall from time to time deem expedient for preventing neglect or abuse and for rendering such force efficient in the discharge of all its duties.' The repealing Act XII of 1873 repealed Act XIII of 1856. The new Calcutta Police Act, IV of 1866 (B.C.) retained the spirit and the language of the old Act and I notice that section 9 of the new Act is a reproduction of section 8 of the Act of 1856. The Bengal Legislature accepted the language of the Supreme Legislature. This Act is in force up to the present moment. The Suburban Police Act also retains the same spirit and language as I find in section 9 of the Calcutta Police Act (vide section 3 of Ben. Act II of 1866).

When we turn to Act V of 1861, known as Mufassal Police Act, the same spirit and language are noticed, vide section 12 of Act V of 1860. It is an Act of the Indian Legislature ; chronologically it is earlier than the Acts of 1866. The difference in the provisions of the Calcutta Police Act and the Suburban Police and those of Act V of 1861 is that the Inspector-General of Police exercises the powers given in the place of the Commissioner of Police. My submission is that since the last 50 years the Bengal and the Imperial Legislatures have thought fit to retain the spirit and the language on this particular point under discussion. Act VIII of 1895, which was an amendment of the Police Act of 1861, did not modify the provisions of section 8 of Act V of 1861 as suggested in the present Bill. These Acts were subjected to criticism by distinguished lawyers and administrators for obvious reasons. The Police have got large powers and it is for the interest of the people that the orders and rules or regulations should be subject to the approbation or approval or sanction of the Local Government. The interest of the public is thus safeguarded by the Local Government. The judgment of the Commissioner of Police cannot be of a superior kind to that of the Government and the Bill suggests to delete the word approbation and substitute the word 'control.' The Imperial Legislature, Act V of 1861, in dealing with such cognate powers and privileges has retained the word 'approval' in section 12 of the Act. The provisions of Act V of 1861 affect a larger portion of India, whereas the proposed Bill intends to apply its provisions to a smaller section of the community. I have discussed the principles of the Bill from various standpoints. My Lord, the proposed alteration will not be appropriate. I notice that the Bill suggests that the Police force being under the control of the Commissioner of

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Police he is to frame rules and orders subject to the control of the Local Government, that means without the previous approval of the Local Government. I think no orders or rules of the Commissioner of Police shall be given effect to without the approval of the Local Government.

Another principle to be considered is whether this alteration is necessary at all. General orders and rules are based upon generalizations. Each concrete case must fall within their purview.

The effect of the change will be that the Police Commissioner may frame rules without the knowledge of the Local Government and give effect to them, though subject to the general control of the Local Government. Under the present law in force the orders and rules will not be legal unless they are scrutinized and approved of by Government. The present law makes it incumbent upon two persons to examine the legality, practicability and desirability of the rules before they are put in force. The Bill suggests merely that the Police Commissioner will have the sole power of enacting rules and the Local Government will have only power to control them. One will feel a difficulty to apprehend how the Local Government will control rules which have been with full authority enacted and already given effect to by the Commissioner of Police. Even if the procedure for approval of the orders and rules be a little dilatory, the Police Commissioner should, by the light of his experience, get them ready beforehand, before any individual occasion arises. To avoid little delay, the framing of effective rules cannot be given to one individual."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I am extremely sorry that, as at present advised, I feel constrained to oppose this motion. I am in general agreement with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur and I therefore propose to be very brief. It seems to me that although the amendments that have been proposed seem to be modest and unassuming enough, they involve changes having a far-reaching effect and it is therefore necessary that the motion which is now before the House should be subjected to some scrutiny.

My Lord, there are ordinarily four stages before any intended piece of legislation is moulded into statute law. There is first of all the stage when it is first introduced into Council and when Government explain generally the reasons why legislation on particular lines is being undertaken. The second stage is as laid down by rule 30 of the Business Rules, which lays down that when a Bill has been introduced it shall together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Calcutta Gazette. The third stage is what I may call the committee stage, when the Bill is referred for close examination and scrutiny by a Select Committee of the House, and the fourth and the final stage is when the Bill is taken up with proposed amendments for discussion in Council and ultimately passes into law. I submit that of all these four stages the second is by far the most important and for the following reasons. When Government propose legislation of a certain character they explain their reasons when the Bill is introduced and they take the public into confidence by giving out the reasons which have prompted Government to undertake that particular piece of legislation. It may be that the public also are of opinion that legislation of a particular character ought to be undertaken, or it may be that the public are not. It is for this reason that when the Bill is published in the Calcutta Gazette, the public are thereby invited to offer criticisms on the principles of the Bill and also to consider whether legislation should be undertaken at all and, if undertaken, whether it should be on the lines proposed by Government. I therefore submit that it is the second stage which gives the public an opportunity of criticising the principles of the Bill and this privilege should not be taken away unless it be for very urgent and strong reasons. In this particular case it is all the more necessary because, as I have submitted, although there are only two small clauses to be added to the Act, they confer very large powers on the Commissioner of Police and, secondly, they also take away to a certain extent the right of a Police officer who may, for a period, be under suspension from taking steps with a view to defending himself. Now it may be that after a Bill is published and sufficient cause is shown, legislation would not be undertaken and the proposed Bill might be withdrawn altogether. It is therefore that the second stage is the most important and should never be overlooked. In this particular case the course that is proposed is this: the Bill has been introduced formally only to-day and it is proposed to ignore rule 30 of the Business Rules and to refer the Bill at once to a Select Committee. So far as I have been able to gather from the speech of the Hon'ble Member in charge I have not been able to make out that any case exists for ignoring the provisions of rule 30 of the Business Rules. It has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur that these two amendments are proposing changes regarding certain expressions which have been in the Act for more than a century. The first proposal is to substitute the word 'control' for 'approbation.' This seems to be an innovation which I would submit is somewhat without precedence, except it be that it is proposed to confer on the Commissioner of Police much wider powers than he enjoys at present. As has been pointed out the word "approbation" existed in the earlier Act, XIII of 1856, which was the predecessor of the Calcutta Police Act. Section 8 of that Act spoke of approbation of the rules by the Local Government. As has been pointed out also, these very words occurred in the general Police Act of 1861 and it was not thought necessary to amend that Act. There is another matter which I would submit for the consideration of the Council and which has not been touched upon, and it is this. The Bengal Act has been amended no less than eleven times and on no occasion was it considered necessary to undertake legislation on the line that is proposed to-day. Leaving aside the amendments that have been introduced by all-India legislation, we find that the Bengal Act has been amended by the following Acts of the Bengal Council—II of 1867, I of 1869, II of 1876, IV of 1879, II of 1886, I of 1890, II of 1895, III of 1897, VI of 1905, III of 1907 and III of 1910. How is it, if these amendments are so very necessary that it is proposed to ignore the Rules of Business that they really escaped the attention of the administrators for over 53 years? How is it that on these eleven occasions it was not even suggested that legislation on these lines is necessary? I submit therefore that no case has been made out for rushing through the legislation in the manner proposed to-day. Then, my Lord, the Hon'ble Member in charge has remarked that recent judicial proceedings have brought to light the defects in the Calcutta Police Act. I submit it is not a compliment to those who framed the Act nor to the administrators who have administered the Act for a long time. I need not detain the Council very long upon this point because my hon'ble friend has already pointed out that it would be a dangerous innovation to take away the provision that the rules framed by the Commissioner of Police should be subject to the control of the Local Government. As a justification it is said that this has created inconvenience. If serious practical difficulties have not occurred since 1866 when the Calcutta Acts were passed, or 1861 when the India Act was passed, I may hope that nothing serious will happen if legislation is undertaken in the ordinary course. Before I sit down I may cite the opinions of two learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court as cited in 7 C. W. N., (page 883, on this point, although I must say that the word 'approbation' has not received any judicial interpretation yet. Their lordships expressed the opinion that rules so framed ought to be published for general information. And I submit that so far as this power of the Commissioner of Police is concerned it affects the public very materially and does not merely affect the control of the Police force. It is, therefore, necessary that when rules are framed under this power vested in the Commissioner of Police the said rules should be published or at any rate should be subject to the control of the Local Government.

My Lord, one word about the proposal of passing this measure in the Dacca session. I do not know what the feeling of other members on this point may be. But on my part I oppose this suggestion in spite of my advocacy of the claims of the eastern capital of Bengal. It is well known that most non-official members absent themselves from Dacca and Government will have an absolute majority there. Amendments might be proposed only to be defeated and it is certain Government will be able to carry this legislation through in any manner they like. But would it satisfy the public? Is it proper that legislation of such an important character should be undertaken at Dacca knowing, as Your Excellency's Government know very well, that attendance of the non-official members at Dacca has always been meagre. At any rate to satisfy public opinion I would suggest that the Bill should not be referred to a Select Committee now, that it should be published for criticism and that sufficient time may be given for the public to consider the legislation. It may be referred to a Select Committee afterwards and the Bill considered at one of the Calcutta sessions of the Council. I do not suggest that the Bill should not be introduced into the Council at all. But I suggest that all this hurry should be dropped because, I feel, that this hurry might be misinterpreted. With these observations I oppose the motion."

[The Council here adjourned for lunch.]

[The Council reassembled after lunch, at 2-30 p.m.]

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have only a few observations to make. I find that the motion of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler for referring this Bill to a Select Committee and also intimating that it will be passed at the Dacca session has been opposed at the outset. There may perhaps be good reasons for amending the Act ; but I think the public ought to be given an opportunity to have their say in the matter. I do not think that it will matter much if the passing of the Bill is deferred for a month. It is a fact that the meeting at Dacca is not so fully attended as at Calcutta and I can safely predict that it will not really affect the passing of the Bill whether it is put through its final stage at Dacca in August or at Calcutta in the beginning of September. I think therefore that, having regard to the strong public opinion on the subject that the Bill has not been published, the Government will do well to accede to the public request that it be published and be taken up in its final stage at the meeting of Council to be held in Calcutta in September next."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I admit that this Bill has to deal with the Police, and therefore it is almost bound to excite suspicion in the minds of some Hon'ble Members ; but I had hoped to show by my previous remarks that we were not, in effect, introducing any sweeping changes. The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq himself is bound to admit that the changes were seemingly modest, but apparently he sees something lurking behind them, which, he fears, may be far-reaching and detrimental to the public."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

I have endeavoured to make it clear to the Council that what we are trying to place upon a legal basis is no change at all. It is what we have been doing for many years, and that is the answer to the argument of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur which was supported by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, that because the word 'approbation' was in the Act of 1856, therefore, it is evident that there is now no reason to change it. I myself drew the attention of the Council to the fact that this word was in the Act of 1856, but I have tried to explain that we have never interpreted it in the sense in which we are now told that it should have been interpreted, namely, in the sense of requiring the prior sanction of Government to orders passed by the Commissioner of Police relative to the administration and organization of the force. It is because the matter has only recently been brought to the fore that it probably escaped the notice of the legislators, who, according to Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, on some 9 or 10 previous occasions amended the Act. Nobody has ever objected to the procedure, which was in force; hence no proposal was made to change it. The position is analogous to the general amendment of the Police Act in 1895 in the matter of disciplinary action over suspended police officers; the power was being exercised until the High Court said that it was illegal. Thereupon, Sir Antony Macdonald explained in the Imperial Council the reasons for taking that power, and it was accepted as reasonable that it should be definitely given by the law, if there was any doubt in the matter. So, the argument that the word 'approbation' was in the Act of 1856 has really no relevancy to the contention which I have placed before the Council, because it is only during the last few weeks that we have been told that the procedure which the Bill embodies, and which in fact we have practically been following for many years, is a procedure which is not warranted by law; and, indeed, if the provisions of this section, as so construed, were actually carried into effect, it would be impossible to administer a police force of the magnitude of the Calcutta Police. In his judgment of yesterday's date, dealing with the charge of wrongful confinement against the Deputy Commissioner to which I have previously alluded, Mr. Swinhoe remarked:—

'Under the provisions of section 9 of the Calcutta Police Act, practically all orders, however trivial they may be, framed by the Commissioner of Police relating to the Police force must first be forwarded for approbation to the local Government before they are valid and binding on the Police force. This procedure must necessarily cause delay and handicap the Commissioner of Police in his actions. It would be simpler, in my opinion, if possible, to provide that all orders passed by the Commissioner of Police under section 9 of the Act shall be valid and binding on the force until they are declared invalid by the local Government'.

I say without hesitation that if that view of Mr. Swinhoe is correct, and if Mr. Clarke, sitting at Lalbazar, has got to get the countersignature of Mr. Kerr from Writers' Buildings before he can take action against a member of the Police force, the whole machinery of the Calcutta Police can be brought to a standstill in 24 hours. So much, Sir, for the historical argument regarding the wording of the ancient Act of 1856.

I would refer further to the statement that has been made that the proposals which we have put forward so seriously affect the public that it is essential that they should be carefully scrutinized. The proposals which have been embodied in this Bill primarily and directly affect the discipline of the Police force, and not the general public. In so far as they indirectly affect the latter, it is in the interest of the general public that a stringent control should be exercised. Under the second clause of the Bill when a police officer is suspended on a heinous charge, he will not be freed from all disciplinary measures; it is right that the public should have that protection, and it will facilitate the maintenance of discipline in the force, which it is to the interest of the public to see at a high level. It is somewhat curious that, differing from the criticisms which are usually levelled at Government in the matter of their relations towards the police, exception should be taken when we are attempting to introduce a measure which is designed for the protection of the public against possible misconduct on the part of the police.

Another remark that has been incidentally made by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq is that by placing a suspended police officer under disciplinary action we deprive him of the opportunity of taking legal advice and defending himself against any charges that may be brought against him. This is not so. What the man is made to do is to go and live at headquarters, just as in the mufassal a member of the general police force will be told to go and stay in the lines, and he is not allowed to leave headquarters without the permission of the officer-in-charge. I had a talk particularly on this point with Mr. Clarke, and he tells me that all reasonable facilities are afforded to a man for consulting his legal advisers.

Another objection which has been taken is that, should we enact these changes which are embodied in clause 2 of the Bill, it would be possible for the Commissioner of Police to pass orders affecting the organization of the force without the knowledge of Government. With regard to this, may I point out that it is just what he has been doing for many years. Now that attention has been drawn to the point, and, if the Bill is passed into law, his orders will be subject to the control of the local Government, I have no doubt that we shall prescribe that copies of orders of a general character, or laying down a general policy, shall be submitted to Government, and they will be scrutinized, whereas, now, under the current interpretation of the section, we never see these orders at all. Far, therefore, from diminishing the supervision now exercised, the Bill will enhance it.

For these reasons, briefly, taken in addition to the arguments which I have already advanced, I do not think that the Bill need give rise to the suspicion with which some Members have sought to surround it; and in the matter of procedure, to which the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has taken exception, I would only remark that the course we have taken is one which is justified by our rules, and, in fact, it does not differ very materially from that which he would have us adopt. After this discussion, the Bill will be published, and its provisions will be made known; if any one wishes to criticise the Bill he will be at liberty to do so, even if there is no formal circulation; the main difference between the full procedure which is ordinarily taken and that which we are now following is that the interval between the introduction of the Bill in Council and its reference to Select Committee and its final consideration in Council is shortened. But, with reference to the shortness of that interval, may I point out that for practical purposes the Bill is one of two clauses and 21 lines, affecting not the public of Bengal but the public of Calcutta, or rather, indeed, not the public of Calcutta but the administration of the Police force. The reasons for our desiring to see this Bill passed into law as early as possible are those which I have already given.

The last point which has been alluded to by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur and Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq is that it is improper that we should pass this legislation at Dacca. Now, as a general theory, that is not a view which, I think, the local Government can ever endorse. It has now been the settled practice for some time to hold a Council session at Dacca; and it is a practice which has been adopted, as our predecessors understood, and as we have always understood, in deference to the feelings of many people of Eastern Bengal, among whom may be numbered the constituents of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. But if we have a Council session at Dacca, it must be a full session, and we cannot accept the theory that it is to be a kind of a day in the country, a sort of a picnic, or call it what you like, at which Hon'ble Members will have the pleasure of a river trip to Dacca and seeing something different from the surroundings of the Calcutta maidan. It must be a session at which ordinary business can be done; and obviously it must rank as a full session. However, in this particular instance, having regard to the circumstances of the Bill—especially as it affects the Calcutta Police—and having regard to the fact that the interval between the meeting of the Council at Dacca and the September meeting of this Council here is only about a fortnight, I do not press the theoretical point, and if it will soothe the minds of some Hon'ble Members that we should allow a fortnight's extension and take up this Bill here at the meeting of September, as suggested by Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, I have no objection to that small modification. With your permission therefore, Sir, I would substitute the words 'September' for 'August' and 'Calcutta' for 'Dacca'."

*Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq; the President; Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur;

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I would only wish to say one or two words as regards the Dacca session. I heartily endorse the remarks which Sir Henry Wheeler has made that it ought to be something of a reality and not a sort of a pleasure show. I wish, my lord, that Your Excellency could, under the rules, exercise a power which a mufassal guru exercises in pathsalas and compel members to attend. As a matter of fact there ought to be some rules that members failing to attend a certain number of sittings without sufficient cause shall show cause why they should not resign their seats in the Council. Since there is no such disciplinary power, the fact remains that members do not attend and we are at a great disadvantage when we wish to find out what the real trend of public mind is in regard to certain matters. I do not wish to take up the time of the Council by adding to what I have already said, but I adhere to my contention that the ordinary procedure should not be disregarded because it means a delay of a few weeks. I believe the Dacca meeting will take place on the 12th August and the Calcutta session will be towards the first week of September. Thus there will be a delay of only three weeks."

The President said :—

"The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has offered to meet the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq and postpone the consideration of the report of the Select Committee until the meeting of the Council to be held in Calcutta in September next."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"I am sorry, my Lord, that I did not follow the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler's remarks."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"Apropos what the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq urged about attaching a penalty for non-attendance at meetings at Dacca, I would suggest that there should be a penalty attached for inattention also." (Laughter.)

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

"My Lord, I attended the Dacca meeting two years ago. I found the Dāk Bungalow quite full, and if it had not been for the hospitality of Mr. French, I would have had to put up at the Maidan, as there was no accommodation for members. I think if a session is held at Dacca, we may look to Government to provide some accommodation for members. I should be glad if Government would arrange for accommodation for non-official members.

The President said :—

“ I should be glad to offer the Hon'ble Member hospitality at Dacca.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

“ Thank you, my Lord.”

The motion was then put in the following form and agreed to :—

That the said Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, the Hon'ble Mr. French, the Hon'ble Mr. Graham, the Hon'ble Mr. Mansell, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Dr. Abdulla-al-Mamun Suhrawardy and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its consideration at the September meeting of the Council in Calcutta.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 10 AND 11.

The Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a commission of inquiry be appointed to consider the whole problem of leprosy in the city of Calcutta, and the legislation required in connection therewith.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I intended to have brought forward this resolution in April last, but was prevented from attending the Council meeting.

I find now that the Health Officer has already submitted a note to the Corporation urging the appointment of a commission of inquiry to consider the whole problem of leprosy and the legislation required in connection therewith. This, I may say, only adds considerable force to my resolution and shows the extreme urgency of the matter.

It is quite evident to all who have had anything to do with lepers that the present Government of India Act No. III of 1898, commonly called ‘ The Leper Act ’, is not an efficient piece of legislation, that is to say, it does not result in the segregation of those lepers who are a menace to the community and who ought to be compulsorily segregated in leper asylums. This fact is admitted by the medical authorities as well as by those who are more directly concerned in looking after lepers.

The first thing for Government to do therefore is to take such action as may be necessary to have the Leper Act so amended, by the Government of India, that it may be effective. It must then be applied to the particular province and a real effort made to bring it into force.

Sir Frank Carter.

The following is the essential amendment of 'The Leper Act' which it is urged should be made :—

That the definition of a 'leper' section 2, sub-section (1), be made to include not only any person suffering from any variety of leprosy in which the process of ulceration has commenced, but any person in whom any tubercular form of the disease is present.

It may be thought that my resolution is ill-timed seeing that particulars regarding the beggar nuisance in the Presidency have lately been asked for, but reading through these sheets I see very little mention of lepers; the only report which deals with lepers at all in extenso is that of Mr. Sen.

Although it is estimated there are some 200,000 in India, there are probably not more than 1,000 in Calcutta, and it surely is the work of Government as well as the Corporation to see that they are properly cared for.

Leprosy in this city is admittedly on the increase as, according to the Census figures of 1911, there were only 300.

There are two main causes to which this increase can be attributed :—

First, lepers come down to Calcutta because they find themselves treated as outcasts in their own villages, and Calcutta is a safer and easier place for them to live in. They can earn their living by begging far more easily here than they can do it elsewhere.

Another factor which has contributed so largely to the increase of lepers is that they are imported into this city for the purpose of trade. There are Sirdar Lepers who, finding the display of leprous sores is calculated to move the pity of charitable people, bring them to Calcutta and make a living out of what they earn by begging.

Lepers can be divided into four classes :—

- (1) There are indigenous lepers who develop the disease without any taint in their ancestors;
- (2) There are children born of leper parents;
- (3) There are lepers who come down to Calcutta because they find it an easier place in which to make a living than their own homes in the country; and
- (4) Lepers who, as I have explained, are actually brought down to Calcutta by Sirdars for the purposes of trade.

As I have said before, no leper can be detained in an asylum when his sores are healed, so that there is nothing to stop the spread of leprosy in this city, and Government have no power to confine lepers in an asylum with the result that many escape. Most of the monthly admissions to the asylums are admission of lepers who have been there before.

It is now generally admitted that leprosy is contagious in its nature and the recognition of this fact has led to the foundation of various segregation camps in all civilised nations of the world where leprosy is apparent.

The segregation of lepers is undoubtedly necessary. The only point which can raise any controversy is the degree of segregation.

Leprosy was rampant in nearly all the countries in Europe in the Middle Ages. Homes were at that time erected in all the large cities of Europe, and it is said there were some 20,000 of these homes. In England there were as many as 112 and in France 2,000. Segregation of the leper stopped the spread of the disease.

Sir Frank Carr

The leper problem in this city is a difficult one, but I am quite sure that it can be overcome and at not too great a cost if the Government, the Corporation and the citizens of Calcutta would all assist. It is an urgent matter and must not be set aside for two or three years as the Government of India seem to think.

Now, what is provided for the lepers in Calcutta? A leper asylum at Gobra, which will hold at the outside about 150. It is situated outside Calcutta in Entally, and what does it consist of? A one-storied building for Europeans and Anglo-Indians; men on the ground floor and women on the first floor; a staircase in the middle goes up from one of the rooms. Communication between the ground floor and the first floor is easy and the room from which the staircase leads was used as a chapel by the Protestant and Roman Churches. This has been altered during the last two months. For this reason, there were constant disputes arising between the two Churches. The Roman Catholic Priest put up a picture of the Virgin and this offended the English Priest. The chapels should be entirely separate and there should be one for the Roman Catholics and one for the Protestants and not adjoining as at present, and the staircase should be outside. This would give two extra rooms. There is no accommodation for married couples and this is one of the chief reasons why the place is so unpopular.

There is no comfort in the building. The sun pours in in the hot weather, there were no chicks to keep it out. These have lately been provided. The beds are dirty, the sheets covered with stains, the mattresses stuffed with straw are little better, and the rooms are filthy. When I was there the other day the Eurasian female inmates bitterly complained of the mattresses, which were so old and uncomfortable, they could not get a decent rest on them; I examined them and one of the ladies said: 'These are not so bad, you should see mine, that takes the cake'. The attendance on the patients is most inadequate.

The quarters for the Indians are divided into several long and one-storied buildings, separate buildings for the Hindus and Muhammadans. There is a sort of enclosed yard with stalls attached like a place where cows are kept and here the lunatic lepers are housed. There is also a small building for the worst cases who are not expected to live long. This building is a disgrace to Calcutta.

When I was there the other day there were ten men in the very worst stages of leprosy in two small rooms. The beds all crowded together; there is no lavatory accommodation at all; no drainage, nothing.

There is no occupation provided for the lepers; they pass their days brooding over their misfortunes and their hopeless future, and yet they are not, by any means, a discontented lot. They are a wonderfully happy set considering all things.

There should be a Superintendent who would take some interest in the patient and attends to their wants; also a regular qualified doctor. I would suggest a European Superintendent who must be well paid, but he must be interested in the leper problem and above all he must be sympathetic. The only warder that I have seen is an Anglo-Indian who gets the princely sum of Rs. 5 per month.

So much for the asylum which will hold 150, but there are the rest of the lepers who live in the worst slums of the city—Radabazar, Machuabazar and Howrah. They are merely outcasts whom everyone loathes to touch; shunned by every person, they deteriorate step by step. They live on what little they earn, they huddle themselves together in small insanitary rooms and eke out their existence without any ray of hope. Their disease is visited on their unfortunate children who, with timely segregation, might lead useful lives both to themselves and the community.

Sir Frank Carter.

Lately, as there was accommodation in the asylum for more patients, two inspectors, or whatever they like to call themselves, were appointed to seek out the worst cases in the city and take them to the asylum. This frightened the lepers so much that they dispersed to all quarters of the city.

What steps are to be taken to improve the condition of these people and to stamp out leprosy from the city?

In the first place, a large plot of land, say about 500 acres, should be acquired away from Calcutta, preferably in the Hills or, at any rate, where the heat is not so great as it is in Calcutta, as the heat assists the disease. Land too, such as I indicate, would not be anything like as expensive as it is in and around Calcutta. Liberty of movement should be allowed to the lepers in this area and they should be well-housed, fed and properly cared for. Future marriages and intercourse between the sexes should be discouraged and, if possible, prevented and the children should be segregated from their parents. The lepers should be made happy and comfortable in every way so that there would be no reason for them to wish to leave the prescribed area; the whole place should be self-contained; shops and bazars started which could be managed by the lepers themselves. Leper labour should also be utilized in the growing of crops, the upkeep of cows and poultry, the weaving of cloth, etc., and every step should be taken to make them forget as far as possible that they are outcasted. But above all there must be proper superintendence and efficient medical supervision.

If this scheme was carried out then the present leper asylum could become an observation camp and a place where lepers could be collected before being sent to the leper settlement and medically treated.

This, even if Government do sanction the outlay, will take time, and meanwhile what is to be done to minimize the existing evil in Calcutta?

A strict census should be taken of all lepers in Calcutta whether pauper or not and their addresses should be registered. Tact must be used in doing this as lepers easily get frightened, and if they think they are going to be harassed they will, very likely, disperse into different parts of the city. Besides it should be the object of every one to treat those who are afflicted with this terrible disease with the utmost leniency and to show them every consideration for their feelings.

Lepers should be forced under penalty to live within certain specified areas in the city and strict guard should be kept to prevent their escape and mixing with the general public.

There should also be a Committee formed of, say, five members, one of whom should be a qualified medical man who would decide whether a man, woman or child was inflicted with leprosy, in which case a certificate should be granted which would force the leper to live within the specified area. This Committee should also listen to any complaints which may be made. A leper also should have the right of appeal to a Central Board against his detention.

As regards the influx of lepers into Calcutta steps must be taken to prevent this. The giving of alms should be discouraged but money should be provided by Government and the Corporation for their comforts. Precautions should also be taken to prevent lepers travelling by rail and steamer or cart without a special pass. Any leper arriving in Calcutta must be made to notify his arrival to the Committee who will arrange quarters for him. At the same time the Sirdars whose profession it is to import lepers should be dealt with by the law.

These, briefly, are the measures I would suggest to be adopted, and it is because the leper problem in Calcutta is such an urgent one that I ask Government to form a Committee of Inquiry."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved, by way of amendment, that in the Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter's resolution, after the word "city of Calcutta" the words "and other municipal towns in the mufassal" be inserted.

He said :—

"My object in making this amendment is to make the scope of the commission of inquiry comprehensive and not to limit it to Calcutta only but to extend it to the municipal towns in the mufassal. First, I shall deal with the necessity of an inquiry on the subject ; secondly, to legislate further, necessary, on the recommendations of the inquiry to be made. I am informed that the number of lepers is increasing. It is difficult without a proper inquiry to supply the accurate figures. Proper care should be taken as regards the treatment and comfort of the lepers, who are obliged to wander in the street in the mufassal, where there are a very few asylums. It is necessary in the interest of the public health that asylums for pauper lepers should be established under the supervision of Government and not to be left to private charity alone.

In the tropical climate, the number of lepers is very large. Even in Europe, leprosy prevails in Iceland, Norway and Sweden, parts of Russia particularly about Dorpat, Riga and the Caucasus, and in certain provinces of Spain and Portugal. In British India, according to the Report of the Leprosy Commission in 1890-91, there are 100,000 lepers. This is surely a low estimate. In Great Britain the cases are all imported. Leprosy is chronic and infectious. It is caused by Bacillus leproe characterized by the presence of tubercular nodules in the skin and mucous membranes or by changes in the nerves. It will be interesting to narrate how the contagion spread. Dr. Osler in his treatise on "The Principles and Practice of Medicine" in page 340 says :—'One of the most striking examples of the contagiousness of leprosy is the following : In 1860, a girl who had hitherto lived at Holstershov, where no leprosy existed, married and went to live at Tarwest with her mother-in-law, who was a leper. She remained healthy, but her three children became leprous, as also her younger sister, who came on a visit to Tarwest and slept with the children. The younger sister developed leprosy after returning to Holstershov. At the latter place a man fifty-two years old who married one of the younger children, acquired leprosy ; also a relative thirty-six years old, a tailor by occupation, who frequented the house, and his wife, who came from a place where no leprosy existed. The two men last mentioned are at present (1897) inmates of the leper asylum at Dorpat. There is certain evidence to show that the disease may spread through infected clothing, and the high percentage of washermen among lepers is also suggestive.' It is hardly necessary to discuss as to the medical aspect of the question.

Bengal Act V of 1895 was passed by the Bengal Legislative Council in the year of 1895. This Act provided for the segregation of pauper lepers and the control of lepers exercising certain trades. In 1898 the Supreme Legislative Council provided a similar Act. This Act provided for the segregation and medical treatment of pauper lepers and the control of lepers following certain callings. By Municipal notification No. 228-T.M. of 18th May 1901, under section 19 of the Act, the Act was declared to be in force in Bengal and Bengal Act V of 1895 ceased to have effect. By notification No. 253-Medical of 1895 all first class Magistrates have powers to send a leper to any asylum which has been declared under section 3 of the Act. Section 3 of Act III of 1895 provides that the Local Government by notification in the official gazette may appoint any place to be a leper asylum for the purpose of this Act and specify the local areas from which lepers may be sent to such asylum and may in like manner alter or cancel any such notification.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

Although Act III of 1898 is in operation in Bengal, yet there are no regular leper asylums in all places. In the Burdwan Division there are asylums in the district of Bankura and in Raniganj. These asylums have been set up by the mission to India and to East. The average monthly attendance at Raniganj is 179. At Bankura the number is 154. Government formerly paid Re. 1-8 as capitation grant, but nowadays have increased it to Rs. 4 per head. My information regarding Midnapore, Howrah and Birbhum is not encouraging, although the number of lepers is not insignificant. At Bankura the asylum is known as the Wesleyan Mission Leper Asylum. By a notification No. 361-Municipal, dated 25th February 1915, the local area is confined to Bankura district under the provisions of section 3 of Act 3 of 1898. If I properly understand the sections of the Act, the operation of the Act depends upon the establishment of a requisite number of leper asylums for the proper accommodation and treatment of the lepers. My submission therefore is that Government should seriously consider as to the necessity of establishing such asylums in the mufassal for the segregation of pauper lepers.

The decline of leprosy in Europe is attributed mainly to improved hygienic habits and surroundings, and to increased material prosperity, and it may be hoped that the same causes will gradually bring about its disappearance from India.

My Lord, I am deeply interested in the problem for the relief of the lepers and in the interest of public health.

It is suggested that a commission of inquiry should be made. The pauper lepers must not be allowed to move freely from door to door for charity. Exposed under the sun and the rain, they become the objects of pity. Fixed places of their residence should be selected after proper inquiry. Various other suggestions may be made for the further amendment of the law empowering the public to compulsorily remove all lepers and segregate them in the mufassal leper asylums."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, as the Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter said, this is a resolution that has stood over from last cold weather, and we all rejoice that the Hon'ble Mover is well once again after his serious illness, and still more, at the recognition, in the interval, of his many admirable works in the cause of the public of Bengal.

The resolution deals with a subject which necessarily excites the sympathy, and incidentally also the horror and repugnance of us all. Such is the terrible character of the disease of leprosy that we would all willingly do anything to alleviate the sufferings of those who are afflicted with it, and still more we would do anything in our power to save from contamination those—happily the vast majority—who are now unaffected by it. However that may be, my difficulty in accepting the course which the resolution proposes rests briefly on the fact that in this matter we, along with the rest of India, are only following a policy which has been very authoritatively laid down in the past. There may be grounds for saying that that policy requires reconsideration, and to this I shall refer again later, but, as matters stand, it is a policy laid down with as much authority as could have been hoped for, either at that time or any other, and until that policy is modified under equal authority it is very difficult for us to do anything of a sweeping character materially different from what we are at present doing. In order to substantiate that contention I shall, for as briefly as possible to the existing position.

Sir Henry Wheel

We are governed, as has been mentioned, in this matter by an India Act (III of 1898), and when that Act was passed the Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz who was in charge of it said specifically—"The Bill which is before the Council does not contemplate any action being taken for the control or segregation of lepers generally in this country. It would be extremely difficult to give practical effect to any measures of such wide application nor, in the opinion of the Government of India, are they called for. The present Bill is of a far more moderate scope and restricted character."

Therefore the Bill was designedly drawn upon modest lines, and its two main provisions are those which are meant to prevent lepers engaging in trades or occupations which bring them undesirably into contact with the public, and secondly, to prevent the wanderings of pauper lepers by giving authority for their arrest and for their consignment to asylums under the orders of Magistrates. These are the two main characteristics of the Act, and the Act itself rests, as I have said, on authoritative enquiries which will be found amply described in a Government resolution of the 23rd March, 1895, which I shall be happy to lend to the Hon'ble Member to read. Briefly what happened was that this subject began to attract marked attention so far back as 1888, when it was held that absolute segregation was an impossibility and all that was practicable was to encourage asylums to which lepers voluntarily could go. Later on the idea was mooted of founding colonies to which lepers should go voluntarily, and a Bill was actually drafted in 1889. When it was circulated considerable difference of opinion was disclosed. About that time the whole subject of leprosy was very much before the public owing to the labours of Father Damien, and a large fund was started in London under the auspices of the Prince of Wales for the investigation of leprosy. That led to the Leprosy Commission of 1890-91. On that Commission there were three leading English Doctors and two members of the Indian Medical Service. They made enquiries in India, among other places, and they made pronouncements as to the contagious character of leprosy which are not quite in accordance with the view expressed by Sir Frank Carter to-day. I will not discuss in detail the medical side of the question, but briefly, they did not think that leprosy was of a contagious character, and basing their conclusions on that finding, they distinctly held that the nature of the disease did not justify compulsory segregation. They advocated the adoption of voluntary isolation, together with the subsidiary measures relating to occupations and pauper lepers which were embodied in the Bill. That was their finding: but there was another curious development which adds to the authority attaching to it. The views of the Commission were referred again to two influential committees in England, partly composed of professional men and partly of public men, and I may mention a few names in order to show to the Council the character of the opinion on which action was taken. We find the names of medical men like Sir Dyce Duckworth, Dr. Hutchinson, Sir Andrew Clark, Sir James Paget, and Sir Joseph Fayrer, and of prominent men like Lord Curzon, the Bishop of London and Baron Rothschild. On the administrative side certain of the lay members of these committees dissented to some extent from the recommendations of the Commission, desiring a more active policy in the matter of segregation and founding colonies, but the majority of the medical members stuck to the opinion of their professional confrères, and after reviewing the facts, the Government of India stated in their resolution that they could only be guided by the professional advice which was tendered to them. Therefore, Sir, as I have said, we are governed by very authoritative recommendations, and until we can put up something more weighty than a provincial committee it is very difficult for us to modify a national policy. I do not

f Superintendents of leper asylums in Calcutta and they recommended the amendment of the legal definition of a leper in respect of the ulceration of sores in which Sir Frank Carter has referred. This was supported by the local Government and submitted to the Government of India, but the Government of India said that they were not prepared to go back on the findings of the Leprosy Commission of 1890-91.

That is the position in which we find ourselves, and within it we do what we can. The leper population of Bengal—it is important to remember—is only some 17,000, while the total population of the province is 45 millions. Fortunately, therefore, the proportion is small, and I do not think the evidence points to its growing rapidly, at any rate not in Bengal, although from the last census figures it might be argued that it is not on the decline in India as a whole. To deal with these 17,000 men we have an asylum in Calcutta at Gobra, while there are two other asylums—one at Bankura and the other at Raniganj. In the three of them we treat some 800 patients on an average, in addition to those who find relief at the ordinary hospitals. The action taken by us is very similar to, and somewhat in advance in some ways of, that taken in other provinces. For instance, the Lepers Act is not in force in Madras, the Punjab or the North-West Frontier Province, and it is only in force in limited areas in Bombay, the United Provinces and the Central Provinces. But where asylums are established in these provinces and action is taken, it is somewhat on similar lines to ours, i.e., by assisting private effort. In response to an enquiry that we made after we got notice of this resolution as to whether it was thought that there was need for a radical departure from the existing policy, all these provinces, with the exception of Burma, have replied in the negative. That renders it more difficult for us to take action. But I am quite aware that there is professional opinion in certain quarters—amongst the exponents of which is Sir Leonard Rogers, to whose views much weight is to be attached—which does not accept the findings of the Leprosy Commission from a medical point of view as final. To that extent there may be a case for further enquiry, but I do not think it is any use advocating an enquiry of a purely provincial character. Obviously at the present moment, in particular, it is extremely difficult to find available medical men, and without any disrespect to provincial authorities, an enquiry, limited to Bengal, and made by gentlemen who might help us here, could not in itself carry weight sufficient to induce the Government of India to go against the authorities of 1890-91. If there is any revision of the policy of the Leprosy Act, it must be based on an all-India enquiry, probably supported by the best opinion available at home and by whatever can be ascertained of the advances and experiences of other countries.

Sir Frank Carter has mentioned certain matters in which he particularly would like to see action taken, namely, the alteration of the legal definition of a leper, which as I have said was advocated in 1908; the establishment of leper colonies; the segregation of lepers in defined areas, preventing the influx of lepers to Calcutta; notifying their arrivals when they come, and such like. All these things require an amendment of the law, and the amendment in the law of some of these directions is not likely to be entirely non-controversial. If we once raise issues like the compulsory restraining of a man merely because he is afflicted with a terrible disease, and, it may be, the taking him away from his wife or children, we are apt to excite a considerable amount of difference of opinion, which renders it all the more important that, if anything is to be done, it should be backed by authoritative opinion. On these grounds I would deprecate the appointment of a provincial committee either for Calcutta, or as the Hon'ble Mr. Mahendra Chandra Mitra would have it, for the whole of Bengal. But we are perfectly willing to bring this discussion to the notice of the Government of India with a view to their ascertaining more fully the views of their disposal, whether the time has not yet come to re-examine this important subject. It is possible that they may do so at a convenient opportunity, but for the moment the time is most inopportune. Recent events, apart from this discussion, have drawn attention to this question of leprosy, and it is quite possible that the Government of India may decide that further investigation is justifiable. Obviously medical opinion and knowledge have advanced greatly since 1891, but I think we must leave it to the Government of India, although we are prepared to bring the question to their notice on these lines."

*Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari ; Sir Henry Wheeler ; Sir Frank Carter ;

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I quite appreciate the difficulties which are in the way of the acceptance of this motion, and I am sure they will be appreciated by the Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter. In the meantime we expect that the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler will do something to mitigate the evils and abuses of the existing system and that will go to a certain extent to prevent the dissemination of the disease, and to ameliorate the conditions of those who come within the purview of the law so far.

There is another matter in regard to which it may not be difficult to take action and that is preventing lepers to have anything to do with the vending of articles of food. This matter may immediately be attended to including those mentioned by Sir Frank Carter. And some assistance may be given to testing and having indigenous methods of treatment adopted."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I would like to mention one matter, as I forgot to do so. With regard to the Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter's references to the asylum at Gobra, I am perfectly willing to have a further inquiry made. I paid a visit to the asylum with Sir Frank Carter at the end of last cold weather, and he drew my attention to some of the points to which he has referred to-day. My recollection is that we did sanction a grant in order to remedy some of the defects, and also that I took up the matter of the moribund ward in particular. However, I will look into the matter again, and see whether anything more can be done."

The Hon'ble Sir Frank Carter said :—

"My Lord, I beg to express my thanks to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler for the assurance he has given to improve the condition of the leper asylum at Gobra. In view of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler's sympathetic reply, I ask for Your Excellency's permission to withdraw this resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government do take into consideration the amendment of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, at an early date, with a view to provide, as recommended by the Calcutta Improvement Trust, for the payment of the 15 per cent. statutory allowance in all cases of acquisition of land required for the improvement schemes of the Trust.

He said :—

"My Lord, some of the members of Your Excellency's Council are familiar with the subject and I find in this Council some members of Government who enacted this measure. Amongst them I find the Hon'ble Sir Henry

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Wheeler who was then a Secretary to the Government. This subject was very keenly discussed at the time when the Calcutta Improvement Bill was under consideration. The proposal to abolish the payment of 15 per cent. statutory allowance in cases of compulsory acquisition of land by the Trust was received with consternation and dismay throughout the city. It evoked the keenest opposition not only inside the Council but also outside it. What was then done is that the clause relating to the payment of a statutory allowance of 15 per cent. was not made applicable in connection with the acquisition by the Improvement Trust within Calcutta. Fifteen per cent. compensation would be payable if the Improvement Trust acquired land, however notoriously unhealthy that area may be, outside the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Corporation, that is, in the Manicktollah or Cossipore-Chitpore municipalities, but in all improvement schemes carried out by the Trust in the city that 15 per cent. which the people had been enjoying for the last 50 years was withdrawn. This evoked the greatest possible opposition in this Council when the measure came up. On reading the reports of the proceedings I find that the Select Committee was equally divided: of the 10 members in the Select Committee 5, including the Hon'ble Mr. Shorroek of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, were for the retention of the 15 per cent. allowance and 5 for the omission of that provision, but, I believe, that by the casting vote of the President of the Select Committee the motion for the retention of the allowance was lost. Now, my Lord, I think it may be known to Your Excellency's Government that there is widespread discontent in the city on account of the omission of this clause. The Improvement Trust has been in operation for the last seven years, and during the last two years especially its activities have extended towards the northern part of the town and affect a large number of poor middle class people—tenants, occupiers and owners of holdings who are generally poor and live from hand to mouth, and the growing discontent in the city has awakened the sympathy of even the quondam member in charge of the Bill, Mr. Bompas. Mr. Bompas, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne, who voted before for the abolition of this 15 per cent. and other members of the Trust made a recommendation to the Government for the restoration of the 15 per cent. allowance in all cases of acquisition by the Trust. I have got here the report of the Improvement Trust which I have no doubt has reached Your Excellency's Government and I do not think it is necessary to read it at length. I may say this that the Trust have, in their report, very strongly recommended that this 15 per cent. statutory allowance should be granted in all cases of acquisition by the Trust and this report is signed by Mr. Bompas, Mr. Payne, Raja Hrishikesh Laha and other members of the Trust. I may also mention that this question of 15 per cent. statutory allowance was considered by the Commission which was appointed by Government in 1887 and was presided over by Sir Charles Trevelyan to inquire into the sanitary and structural defects of Calcutta, and to suggest what steps should be taken for the improvement of the city. I find that the Commissioners said that they were strongly of opinion that the statutory allowance of 15 per cent. should not be withheld, that is to say, it should be continued in cases of acquisition for the improvement of the city. Then, my Lord, as regards the acquisition by other sister bodies in Calcutta (I mean the Calcutta Corporation, the Calcutta Port Trust, or Government) 15 per cent. statutory allowance is granted; it is not withheld as the ordinary Land Acquisition Act applies to such cases. Russa Road and other roads in the Bhowanipore area are being widened by the Trust. Lansdowne Road runs almost parallel to Russa Road and is being extended by the Corporation who are also carrying out other road improvements. The statutory allowance of 15 per cent. is allowed by the Corporation while the Trust grants nothing for lands acquired almost side by side under their scheme, and the schemes of the Trust and the Corporation are only half a mile or quarter of a mile from each other. Similarly, there is the Russa Road and there are some branch roads, such as Iswar Ganguly Lane, which are being widened by the Trust without the payment of statutory allowance, but side by side is the Kalighat Improvement Scheme carried out by the Corporation where 15 per cent. is being allowed. This, as I have said, is an anomalous position and involves great injustice to the people of Calcutta.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

There may be an impression that it would be putting money into the pockets of landlords. My Lord, it is our misfortune to be called landlords. If your Excellency will inquire into the character of the holdings which come within the operations of the Trust, I can with the utmost sense of responsibility and emphasis, assure your Excellency that you will be convinced that nearly 90 per cent. of the property owners are poor middle class people who have got their ancient holdings or residential houses. To an ordinary Englishman the idea is that the landlord is a rich man rolling in wealth, a millionaire who has made money during recent years, or some big zamindar, but here, my Lord, as I have said 90 per cent. of the people who come within the operations of the Improvement Trust are poor people, small traders, many of them clerks in mercantile or Government offices or poor bhadroloks. My friend Sir Rajendra Nath Mukherjee will, I am sure, corroborate my statement. These are the generality of people who come under the operations of the Trust, but those who own houses in the big commercial area do not care a farthing for the Improvement Trust because they are in an area where the Trust has no terror for them. I think, my Lord, having regard to the widespread discontent that is prevailing in the city this 15 per cent. statutory allowance should not be withheld. Suppose there is a dwelling-house valued at Rs. 10,000; if that house is acquired by the Trust, the owner of the house, if he is fortunate to secure a suitable house,—which is rarely the case—will have to pay 3 per cent. as stamp duty and Rs. 300 as lawyer's charges; the cost for search, conveyance of title, etc., will bring the total to Rs. 600. Then he will have to seek temporary accommodation elsewhere, and for this he will have to pay no less than Rs. 50 or Rs. 60 per month. It will be at least six months before he can expect to get another house, and in many cases it takes more than a year to do so; many people do not get houses at all for a very long time. The amount of rent annually will amount to Rs. $60 \times 12 =$ Rs. 720 and this in addition to other incidental expenses amounts to a total of Rs. 1,320. But what, after all, will this 15 per cent. of Rs. 10,000 amount to—it would be only Rs. 1,500; if the cost of removal and repair and refitting of the house is taken into consideration practically more than this amount goes in meeting these different expenses, and moreover it is a compulsory acquisition. If I want to sell my house to a private person I will sit tight; people will come and negotiate; I will say unless you pay me the amount I ask I will not part with my house, and even if you agree to pay what I want, I must get another house before I can sell it. That is not the case when the Trust acquires my house. A notice comes from the Collector that here is the valuation, take it, and quit the house, otherwise you will be chucked out by force. That is the position of the Indian residents in Calcutta who are British subjects, and I appeal to Your Excellency to inquire into these details and give relief to the poor British Indian subjects who are placed under your care. Now that the Improvement Trust has recommended, and their recommendation is backed by the Chairman, I hope that this 15 per cent. allowance will not be withheld. I pray that legislation at an early date be introduced. I know that there are other matters in connection with the Improvement Trust in regard to which legislation will be taken up. My Lord, the Government wheels move very slowly, but if Government so minds it, they can modify this particular section and can give relief to thousands of people under Your Excellency's care in the twinkling of an eye. Here we have no quarrel, we are not scrambling for power that will have to be referred to Parliament and where there will be great deliberation. This matter has been thoroughly discussed and considered by responsible officers and by the members of the Trust. Therefore, Sir, when such a recommendation has been made by such a responsible body, and having regard to the deep discontent which is prevailing in the city, I hope Your Excellency will be pleased to do this act of grace, mercy and justice to the people of Calcutta. I do not know what reply I shall receive from the opposite side, but I await it with great trepidation."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I do not propose to take up much of the time of this Council because the salient points as to the necessity for amending the Improvement Trust Act in the matter of the percentage on the market value, which is a feature of the General Acquisition Act of India, have been put forward by my friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. But I wish to add my voice in support of his contention, because it is just possible that the Council might think that as I have some personal experience in these matters and being older in age than Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, I should know something of the conditions which operate on the unfortunate owner of a property whose land is compulsorily acquired by the Act. It is said that all that the man whose property is taken is entitled to is the market value of the property and he ought not to complain if he gets a fair price for the property. Now, Sir, those who say this are persons who live a detached life, and living a detached life has its value and advantages. They are generally the members of the Indian Civil Service, and it is no derogation to say of that service that they do not hold any immovable property in the city of Calcutta. Sir John Peter Grant, a former Lieutenant-Governor, as inheritor of his father's estate, held some property in Calcutta, but as a rule the members of the Civil Service do not possess such property here, that being so, they are not in a position to feel what the men whose property is taken away compulsorily do, when he is offered the market value of the property and is told that he ought to be satisfied with that. My Lord, land is being compulsorily acquired in India for a long time, I do not know what the conditions were under the Bengal Regulation of 1824, or the India Act VI of 1857. I have not worked under this Act, but I claim some acquaintance with the operation of the Act as it was passed in 1870 (Act X of 1870) in the Viceroy's Council in which an active part was taken by the then Home Member, Sir John Strachey, and Sir James Stephen, Law Member. It was considered by the Government that under the Act of 1857 the compensation given to the owners was much in excess of the price of these properties, and, therefore, they wanted to lay down certain principles which have been referred to by my friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur and laid down under sections 22 and 23 of the Land Acquisition Act. The Indian legislature of 1870 lays down that the owner will get the market value and they define market value in a particular way. They say that in consideration of the great agitation which has been raised at that time against the proposed repeal of that Act of 1857 and that as the agitation is due to a feeling that no justice would be done to the parties from whom the properties will be compulsorily acquired, we will not only pay the market value, but we will follow the example of the English courts. We will adopt the English practice of giving a solatium over and above the price of the property and that solatium in England has always been from a very long time 10 per cent. of the price of the property; that was to console the man whose land was acquired against his will. My Lord, you will see that this provision for paying a 15 per cent. allowance over the market value was not in response to an appeal by those who had agitated against the passing of the Act of 1857. In order to satisfy that there would be no danger in the operation of the proposed Act and that justice would be done, justice which not only concerns in paying the owner the proper price but in soothing his feeling by paying for his inconvenience and trouble caused by the compulsion and this solatium was fixed at 15 per cent. of the market value. Sir John Strachey, than whom few men who have come out to this country, took a sounder view of the state of things economical or political, and Sir James FitzStephen, who had a European reputation as a jurist before he came out to this country and who after retirement from India became a Judge of one of the Divisions of the High Court in England, considered that the extra payment of 15 per cent. on the market value was a just and proper thing. It was also politically expedient. But it remained for the Bengal Government of 1911 to accede to the suggestion that it would save much money in working out the Improvement Act if you paid people less than what they were entitled to. It comes to that, because, as my friend to my left (Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur) has pointed out, it is not sufficient compensation to pay a man whose property may be valued at Rs. 10,000, Rs. 10,000 and ask him to walk out of the house. He has to find a suitable property to invest this sum of Rs. 10,000, and if he was living on the property which was taken away from him he would find it difficult to adjust himself to the new environment and any amount which you pay him as the market value will not satisfy him; he will remain discontented. I think, Sir, we ought not to legislate in a way which is politically inexpedient and gives rise to discontent. It is unwise to go on in this way. We have a consensus of opinion. Barring the Civil Service whose views are put forward by Government, all merchants, Indian and European, members of the Calcutta Corporation, lawyers and also some propertyed men have protested against this taking away of the solatium of 15 per cent. and I think it is not mere conscience which compels them to make this protest. It is most suicidal to go on in this fashion and to create discontent. After all if you have to go by precedent you have here up to the year 1911 been paying this 15 per cent. on the market value of every property, whether in the city or outside, and whether for an improvement or for any other public purpose. People think that Government ought to give this 15 per cent. if their property is taken away compulsorily. As regards the valuation business, I do not know the state of things for the last four or five years but I will refer to things which occurred about the year 1915. The Chairman thought that no Calcutta man should be appointed, and they imported a person from London to value Calcutta properties. He had as much knowledge of the value of Calcutta property as the man in the moon and the members of the Improvement Trust were not permitted to meddle with the work of the valuation and a brick-maker in a well known firm in Calcutta was put in to assist the valuer. That is the way in which the people have been treated in Calcutta, and one thing is clear that the Valuation Department only knew that where a man was entitled to Rs. 30,000, they would give him Rs. 15,000 and if the man has courage to go up to the Improvement Tribunal....."

[At this stage the Hon'ble Member had to conclude his remarks, he having reached the time-limit.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

"My Lord, I am glad to be in a position to meet the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur rather more than half-way in the resolution which he has laid before the Council. The Rai Bahadur in the latter part of his speech laid stress on the urgent importance of Government undertaking legislation at a very early date for the amendment of the Improvement Trust Act, and I am glad to assure him that steps will be taken very speedily in this direction. He has informed the Council that a report was presented some time ago to the Government of Bengal by the Board of Trustees in which they recommended that certain amendments of the Act should be made.

Mr. Goode.

The matter was considered by the local Government and an officer was put on special duty to draft a rough Bill on the lines of the amendments which were forwarded to Government by the Improvement Trust. The other legislation which the Municipal Department had in hand during the last two years has prevented any Bill being laid before this House, but I can assure the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur that Government intend at a very early date to bring the rough draft Bill which has been prepared into a better shape so that it might be laid before the Council. In view of the fact that Government are prepared very soon to undertake legislation, I hope that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur may be induced to think that it is somewhat inadvisable to urge this House to come to a decision on the insufficient grounds which this discussion has afforded upon matters of principle which must shortly be considered both by the public and by the Corporation of Calcutta and by the Board of Trustees. I hope that on the assurance which I am now authorized to give him that Government will undertake legislation at an early date that he will be induced to think that the immediate decision of principle at this stage is somewhat unnecessary. I am able to go even further. I am authorized to state that the Government of Bengal propose to meet the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur more than half-way even upon the matter of principle and in the Bill which will later on be introduced in this Council, the local Government, subject to a reservation to which I shall refer shortly, propose that this 15 per cent. additional compensation should be awarded in the case of all street schemes, although not in general improvement schemes. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur is well aware what a considerable concession this involves. I do not know whether he will on the assurance that I have given be prepared to allow this resolution to be dropped, and I am, therefore, compelled, though very briefly, to deal with the actual principle which he has raised and to explain why Government are not prepared to undertake legislation with a view to giving 15 per cent. compensation in every case of acquisition which the Trust may make. In the course of this discussion some reference has been made to the precedent afforded by the Indian Land Acquisition Act, and also to the precedent which exists at Home. I do not want to revive the old controversy which is fresh in the memories of many members of this Council, but I cannot refrain from reminding the Council that as was stated by Mr. Bompas in a previous debate the precedent on which the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act was based is a truer precedent than the one which Hon'ble Rai Bahadur has cited—I mean the Bombay Improvement Trust Act. There you had a recent case of legislation dealing precisely with the same problem which Calcutta presented and as Mr. Bompas in 1911 pointed out the legislature was justified in regarding that that was a real precedent and not the Indian Land Acquisition Act which was quoted by the opposition at that time. Nor do I admit a precedent which the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur has drawn from English practice. I am well aware that it has been the practice in the English courts since the enactment of the Land Acquisition Act of 1845 to allow what came to be termed a solatium which, as the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur has pointed out, has crystallized into a 10 per cent. additional allowance. But there has been more recent legislation than 1885, namely, the Housing of the Working Classes Act of 1890 and the Town Planning Act of 1899. Both these Acts and several other Acts which I can cite recognize that in the case of certain public improvements it was unjust that the community should be saddled with this occasional burden although it might rightly be allowed in the case of certain other schemes. In the case of improving or sweeping away insanitary property it was expressly forbidden that the courts should award this solatium. But the English precedent did not stop there. I would bring to the notice of the Hon'ble Members a more recent decision which an English body of some authority has given us on this point. In 1917 an unofficial committee was appointed by the Home Government to consider the whole question of law and practice relating to the acquisition of land for public purposes. It was recognized by the Home Government that after-war problems must involve a certain work of reconstruction and that the elaborate methods of acquisition and the excessive prices which, in many cases, local authorities are compelled to pay must be revised and corrected, and this Committee in 1918—the Rai Bahadur will kindly note that my authority is a very recent one—came to the decision that any additional solatium to compensate for the compulsory nature of public acquisition was an unnecessary burden upon the community. I will quote the words of the committee. After having examined not merely expert witnesses but also representatives of the various local authorities in England and Scotland they said :—

Mr. Goode.

‘Nearly all the witnesses who have given evidence before us are in favour of abolishing the customary allowance for compulsory purchase, and we think that there is a growing consensus of opinion that it is an unwarranted addition to the cost of public undertakings We think, therefore, that no allowance for the compulsory acquisition of land should be added to the market value.’

Now, my Lord, as I have suggested already it is unnecessary for me to attempt to defend the entire principle enunciated in the report from which I have just quoted, because the Local Government have already decided to make a considerable step towards meeting the position taken up by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur. But it was necessary in explaining the reason for our not accepting the resolution in full to refer to this pronouncement which I submit must carry great weight. It may be that I shall be met by the ‘fur-coat’ argument that English analogies have no reference to Indian conditions, but I submit that so recent a pronouncement given by a body comprising so many leading Home experts must carry great weight even in India and as applied to Indian conditions. As it happens the present law and practice in Calcutta are actually in advance of the opinion which has prevailed in England during the last 50 years, and it does seem a somewhat retrograde step to ask this House after an hour's discussion to discard a principle which is now thoroughly endorsed by the best authorities, and I would, therefore, urge that this Council should decide that whatever the ultimate decision might be upon this important principle, it is inadvisable to pronounce a hasty judgment upon it now.

I need not refer seriatim to the arguments which have been adduced by the Hon'ble Members. It is urged that the invidious distinction between the acquisition of land by the Improvement Trust and by the Municipal Corporation in itself condemns these provisions, but I think that argument loses much of its force when we remember that the Trust was created for a special purpose and that all these arguments were laid before the Council and met, as I think, when the Bill was passed in 1911. A further argument is drawn from mufassal practice. It is urged that if the mufassalte is entitled to compensation why should the Calcuttante be mulcted of what he considers his right. I think I may here cite the distinction which is often drawn in the English courts between ‘onerous’ and ‘beneficial’ acquisition. In the case of land being acquired for the purpose of making a square the benefits immediately enjoyed by the surrounding residents are obvious, but in the case of land being acquired in the mufassal, for instance, to construct a Police Inspector's quarters the transaction might be said to be onerous because the benefit is spread over the whole thana or district and that particular neighbourhood does not obtain any immediate or manifest advantage from the action. However, as I have already stated, I do not wish at this stage to enter into the various arguments which have been cited at any great length. I would base my case mainly upon the fact that Government proposes at an early date to legislate and that it is inadvisable that the House should now come to a hasty decision upon an important principle which must thoroughly be discussed by this Council in the near future.

As regards the distinction which Government proposes to make between street schemes and improvement schemes, I may say a word. The Council are aware that a general improvement scheme is initiated to improve and abolish insanitary conditions, whereas street schemes although they may be initiated to remedy defective ventilation, etc., are more particularly intended to provide better means of communication. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur may ask how Government can logically draw a distinction between the acquisition of lands for these different purposes. I may say that as a matter of fact the improvement schemes which the Calcutta Trust has up to the present undertaken are mainly street schemes. In fact the only general improvement scheme which the Trust has executed is scheme No. 1, known as the Surtibagan scheme. The Rai Bahadur then may probably feel that in accepting this half loaf he is standing on very safe ground, because, as a matter of fact, it has been found that the Corporation of Calcutta has shown no alacrity to represent insanitary conditions to the Trust and to press the Trust to undertake schemes of general improvement, so the actual position will possibly be very little affected by the fact that Government does not accept the whole motion. I spoke of a reservation in stating that the Government of Bengal was prepared to give the 15 per cent. additional compensation in the case of street schemes. The reservation is this: certain Members of this Council will probably remember Mr. Bompas' argument on this subject.

I have very little more to say. Some Members of this Council may remember that at the time when this Bill was discussed in 1911 Mr. Bompas stated that the Government of India, who were financing the improvement of Calcutta to the extent of Rs. 50 lakhs, had clearly stated that their contribution and their position would have to be revised if they understood that the Legislature proposed to give this Rs. 50 lakhs to the landlords as compensation. This Council will agree that the local Government are not in a position immediately to undertake to promise that the payment of compensation in the case of street schemes should be inserted in the Bill. It will be necessary to consult the Government of India and obtain their views on the subject. But, subject to their consent, the local Government intend, as I have already informed this Council, to introduce a Bill at an early date which will provide for the payment of an additional 15 per cent. compensation in the case of acquisition made for street schemes. In view of the action which Government propose to take, I would urge that the Council should decline to be forced into any decision now upon this important question of principle."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have followed with very great attention the reply of the Hon'ble Mr. Goode. In the first place, when he began to speak he seemed to raise rather high hopes in my mind when he said that he was glad to be in a position to meet me more than half-way, and gave me an assurance that legislation would be taken up at an early date. My Lord, in the first place, as far as I have been able to understand him, it is an indefinite assurance. I do not quite follow what he meant by an early date—it may be this year, next year, or it may be three years hence, and in the meantime the present Act will go on. Then, my Lord, as far as I have been able to follow him, I understand that Government are prepared, subject to the approval of the Government of India, to restore the 15 per cent. statutory allowance in street schemes. Whatever the majority of Government may think in this matter—I am sure Mr. Goode is speaking as the mouthpiece of Government—there is some difference between street schemes and general improvement schemes in regard to procedure and scope. But so far as the acquisition of property is concerned, there is not very much difference. In a general or in a street scheme not only the land required for the carrying out of the improvement is acquired but also surplus land on both sides of the road extending to 100 or 200 feet in depth is taken and in such cases all the houses situated within the area come within the limit of acquisition. A chart has been prepared showing 1st and 2nd class houses by Dr. Crake, the Health Officer placed on special duty, although we find that the chart is not in all places quite correct. However, that is a separate matter. But what I understand is that in street schemes 15 per cent. would be allowed but in general improvement schemes the whole area is declared for acquisition but is not actually acquired, that is to say, the properties lying on the road line are acquired and the rest of the properties are reserved to form building sites and are either re-leased to the former owner or by agreement to the owner who holds a major portion at a certain value fixed by the Trust. That is also the procedure followed in street schemes. What is the difference then? Here you pay 15 per cent. and there you do not pay 15 per cent. The case of general improvement schemes and that of street schemes is almost the same because both are designed to improve the sanitary condition, and I think therefore that additional compensation should also be paid in the case of general improvement schemes. That is the recommendation of the Trust. Much has been said about the recent report of the Home Government regarding additional solatium. I have not seen it but this much I can say that the conditions of India and England are very different. It may be said that you wish to follow the western example. You do so when it suits your purpose, but when it does not, you do not cite the western precedent. I may say that the conditions in the west are quite different. In your country you can easily, without any compunction, remove one family from one quarter to another. But here in this country there is considerable weeping and beating of breasts and shedding of tears. There is a great feeling for clinging to ancestral homes and therefore there is great difference between the conditions in England and those prevailing here.

The British Government have reigned in India for more than 150 years and therefore they ought to know that these things have to be done very tenderly. I do not think that the example of Great Britain should be applied here. There the war conditions have put everything topsy turvy. The Hon'ble Mr. Goode has cited the Bombay Improvement; but why should we go so far as Bombay. I do not think that as the people there live in chauls, flats and tenements they have so much clinging to their ancestral homes. It seems anomalous that whereas 15 per cent. compensation will be paid for lands even in an insanitary condition outside the limits of the Calcutta Municipality, the same will not be paid for lands in Calcutta. For lands acquired by the Calcutta Municipality the solatium is paid; whereas, it is not paid when the lands are acquired by the Calcutta Improvement Trust.

Mr. Goode has also referred to the mufassal. What is mufassal to-day will be included in Calcutta to-morrow or within a few years. I believe that in the near future, the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Improvement Trust will be extended to Cossipore-Chitpur, Maniktola and Tollyganj. At present the people in those places get the 15 per cent. allowance for compulsory acquisition; but when the Act will be extended to those areas two years hence, they will be denied their compensation. These people are poor; and is it just to deny them their solatium?

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode has stated that an early decision will be arrived at in this matter. I would like to have some assurance as to when it will be. I quite understand that the Bill will be fully discussed in Council, but before I decide to withdraw this resolution I must know when legislation is likely to be introduced."

Mr. Goode; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

“My Lord, it is proposed that the draft Bill will be brought in its final shape while Government are at Dacca, and steps will be taken to obtain the consent of the higher authorities to the introduction of the Bill. As I have said, the Bill will be introduced at an early date; but I am unable to give any fixed date.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“On second consideration I beg to withdraw this resolution.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government do take into consideration the amendment of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, with a view to provide that in cases of applications for exemption surplus land under section 78 of that Act, an appeal may be allowed to the Improvement Trust Tribunal or any other competent court of law in the event of any dispute arising between the owner and the Board as regards the sum in consideration of which the acquisition may be abandoned.

He said :—

“My Lord, this is also a motion which perhaps I may explain briefly in a few words. Under section 78 of the Calcutta Improvement Act the surplus land which is taken on both sides of the road can be exempted on payment of a fee if not required for the execution of the scheme. My Lord, it stands thus: the Board assumes the present value of the property and also estimates its future value; then, whatever the difference, less 20 per cent., or in the case of dwelling houses 33 per cent., is demanded from the owner of the property as fee for exempting the premises from acquisition. If the party agrees to pay that sum then his property is exempted; if not, his property is acquired and he has to leave his holding. When this section was inserted it was inserted in a very benevolent mood. The Government of India thought that having regard to the feelings of the people of this country—their deep rooted attachment to their property—they should be allowed to retain their property on payment of a fee not exceeding half the future value of the property. That was the despatch of the Government of India on the subject. I read it last night and I have read it this morning, if I am incorrect I may be informed by the Hon'ble Member opposite. Now, my Lord, the position is this: the Trust practically acquires the property and sells this property to the owner and the purchase price and future value are both assessed by the Trust. There is no appeal against this valuation. The Trust is in a dominant position and is the master of the situation. The Trust has forcibly got possession of a man's property and, although Government very generously allowed the owner to retain the property, practically he is entirely in the hands of the Trust, which is in a dominating position, that is to say, the Trust may say either pay this or get away. Though the valuation may be excessive the owner has no power to test that valuation. It is therefore suggested that where there is a difference, i.e., where a party thinks that the present value has been underrated and the future value overstated, he may have an opportunity to go to a court of law, and as I have said here the Tribunal is the court. Mr. Bompas in his speech in the Council during the discussions in 1911 stated that the Tribunal would be an expert body of valuers and I think, therefore, Sir, that a third impartial party like the Tribunal ought to be allowed to arbitrate between the Trust and the party. That is the principle which was urged on that occasion most strenuously by the non-official members of this Council, but unfortunately, as is always the case, that was not accepted. It cannot be said that the Trust is infallible. As a matter of fact the last Administration Report will show that out of 60 cases referred to the Tribunal from the Collector's award, in 48 cases the Tribunal have increased the valuation by nearly a lakh of rupees and that shows that no one is infallible. Here, not the Collector, but the Board's officers are practically the masters of the situation, whatever valuation they will fix will be final. They practically buy your land at Rs. 500 a cottah, they sell at Rs. 20,000 a cottah. Would you pay the difference in order to get back your land? The party says no, you have valued it at Rs. 500 I do not agree. The Trust will say if you are not prepared to accept our valuation go away, we will have it acquired by the Collector. Then the situation is this: the Trust know the people's passion for clinging to their ancestral dwellings—and it is no exaggeration to say that their hearts bleed when they are told to leave their holdings. The British administration is such that there is appeal in every case but here there is no appeal. Within the closed doors of the Trust the man is told, will you pay this or not; if not, leave your land and go away. That is a situation very distressing to the people and, therefore, I have suggested that where the party is not satisfied with the valuation of the Trust, he may be allowed an appeal to the Tribunal and this concession will be welcomed by every man. Then, my Lord, why not grant this remedy to the people. The Trust is not an infallible body as I have shown by quotation that in many instances the valuation of the Trust and the Collector was enhanced. Sir Rajendra Nath Mukherjee who is here will perhaps bear me out. We selected a big piece of land in Beadon Row for a re-housing scheme valued at Rs. 2,500 a cottah. Before it was declared for acquisition we were informed later that somebody had taken it at Rs. 4,000 a cottah. If it had been declared for acquisition the owner would have got only Rs. 2,500 a cottah, however much he might have talked and cried before the Collector; but fortunately for him before the acquisition notice was issued—he sold it at Rs. 4,000 a cottah. That shows the difference between the valuation of the Trust Officers and the market rate; that was a bonâ fide purchase in which P. C. Kumar, a well known name, is the purchaser. Then, my Lord, there is no expert valuer on the Trust. To give another illustration: in the Marcus Square extension scheme the value of the structure according to the Trust estimate was Rs. 40,000; the Collector's award was Rs. 80,000. That shows again the difference between the Trust valuation and the Collector's valuation. I do not at all mean to say that the Trust values deliberately at a low figure, but there is always the chance of injustice being done; in some cases it may be a little more and in some cases less. Here we are not secure even in our ancestral holdings under British rule and we can at any moment be held by the neck and turned out. If a property owner has a right of appeal he has some consolation and that is the reason why I have moved this resolution. I hope it will be accepted. If there is an appeal there is a safeguard against the executive authority fixing an arbitrary fee; it will be a wholesome check upon the Executive if they know that the man may go and file an appeal. I respectfully commend this to Your Excellency's attention, and I am sure that these are the feelings of the people of Calcutta—people who are law-abiding and whose grievances have been expressed in public and in the press. My Lord, there is deep discontent in the city and I feel it my duty to bring it to the notice of Your Excellency."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur ; Mr. Goode.

"My Lord, when I came to this Council and intimated that I intended to say a few words on this resolution, I was of the feeling that an appeal from the order of a public body to a higher tribunal, whatever may be its advantage, has also its disadvantages and that I might not see eye to eye with my friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. But having heard my friend's reference to the cases where the so-called expert valuers of the Improvement Trust have tried to do injustice to owners of properties, I think on a balance of convenience the experiment might be tried of having the matter reviewed by a tribunal which is constituted under the Improvement Trust Act and supported with the money of the Improvement Trust. If any appeal has to be preferred to any authority, I think the Improvement Trust tribunal will be the fit authority. I myself do not share with my friend to my right (Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur) in the idea that as our people are accustomed to go from one court to another, therefore, that there should be an appeal in a matter like this. I think in a matter like this the first authority should be a strong one, an authority with full knowledge and a sense of doing justice to house-owners. Some reference has been made to the Land Acquisition Deputy Collector. But where there have been Civil Service men they are generally liberal and inclined to be just. It is not a feeling which I express with reference to reports but from personal knowledge extending over a considerable number of years. In the beginning, if he has no experience he is apt to make mistakes, but as he acquires knowledge of the valuation of property he tries to be just and he has always the courage of his conviction and is not afraid lest the authority behind his back frowns at him, but a Deputy Collector unfortunately labours under a disadvantage. I know that if the latter officer were not dependent entirely on the good books of his superior for his promotion he would offer a higher price and be more just to the house-owners.

Well, Sir, I will refer to a matter which I know. It is a compliment to the Indian Civil Service Land Acquisition Collector, but the reverse of it to the expert valuer of the Improvement Trust. When they began their operations they acted as one without the necessary knowledge of the subject. As regards a tenanted house, the best way of assessing it is to pay a certain number of years' rent, and in that case, there will be no dispute, but they thought that they could reduce the price and they accordingly proposed something for the land and something for the structures and of course they put a very low value on the land and a very low value on the structures. In a certain case the expert valuer of the Trust estimated the building property to be 70 years old which was actually not even 30 years old and so he valued it low on that basis. The Land Acquisition Collector, Mr. Peterson, thought that the property was undervalued and he made a reference to the Improvement Trust recommending an increase as he was satisfied that the property was not so old. When the case went before the Trust Tribunal the expert valuer gave his evidence to the effect that the building was 70 years old, but the court disbelieved him and the court believed the story of the owner. The Improvement Trust has not taken any notice of the conduct of their staff, and I doubt very much whether a proceeding of that kind would not be a premium on carelessness. I therefore think that the staff which values the property should be improved and there should be a more efficient staff imbued with the spirit not to do any injustice by lowering the estimate where it ought to be estimated high."

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

"My Lord, in listening to the speeches of the Hon'ble Mover and the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur I have looked in vain for any recognition of the fact that the whole essence of this question lies in the difficulty of determining the future value of any property. The exemption fee-system is briefly this: the Improvement Trust in making a street finds that a certain piece of land is not actually required for the execution of the scheme, although it proposes nevertheless to acquire that land with the idea of recovering some of the improved value which the improvement scheme has produced. Instead, however, of the Trust at once acquiring that land the owner is in a position under the Act to ask the Trust to fix a fee on payment of which the Trust will abandon the acquisition. This in fact is a short-cut towards the acquisition of the land and its subsequent re-sale on the pre-emption principle to the original owner of the land. Instead of the Trust acquiring the land and subsequently reselling it, it confers with the original owner and accepts a fee representing the improved value or some part of the enhancement of the value which the improvement has caused. Now, the whole difficulty is to ascertain what the future value of that property will be, and I think that point has been somewhat neglected by the Hon'ble Mover in his speech. Obviously the ascertainment of the future value bears no relation or very little relation to the ascertaining of the present value. One is a matter of scientific computation helped by experience but the ascertainment of the future value is based largely on a guess or a prophecy. Now, I would ask the Hon'ble Mover—how can you ask for a judicial determination in the matter of a guess or prophecy? It may be that one expert may be able to give a more accurate guess than another expert. The expert who has had more experience may be able after discounting the factors of special circumstances to approximate more nearly in his guess to the future value of a property; but nevertheless in the last resort his estimate remains a guess and he might be hard put to it to give reasons for the faith that is within him in making that estimate. Generally speaking, I would say that the respect which we attach to any estimate of any future value is based mainly on our respect for the expert and not on his arguments. In view of this fact—a very vital one in this discussion—I cannot conceive how the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur can ask this Council to assent to the principle that there should be an appeal to a court of law from the guess of an expert. He has suggested that the Tribunal is itself an expert body. It may be that the promoters of the Improvement Trust Act did originally intend that the Tribunal should be an expert body, but it cannot be said that the present Tribunal is composed of experts and it seems to me that it will be absurd to ask such a body to sit in judgment upon the guess—not upon the well-founded judgment—of an expert, as to the future value of properties. That is why it has been so often suggested that the whole exemption fee-system resolves itself into bargaining or negotiation. The Rai Bahadur may suggest that the unfortunate owner of the property is at present given Hobson's choice. The Trust says if you will not accept the valuation which our expert has made then we shall acquire your property. I hope, however, that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur will not adopt so cynical an attitude towards this body. I think it is inevitable that a body such as the Trust can never attempt in this indirect way to frustrate the obvious intention of the law and I feel therefore that the Rai Bahadur will not contend that any person coming before the Improvement Trust receives anything but fair and impartial consideration of his case. I was suggesting that it was a matter of negotiation between the two parties. The owner of the land assessed finds that it is worth to him so much to retain this property. The Trust has already decided that if they acquire the land for re-sale they will make so much profit. Between the two factors, viz., the profit which the Trust assumes it will make and the future value of the property as computed by its original owner between these some compromise has to be reached. This system of negotiation for a compromise is not a matter for judicial determination and I contend most strongly that it is quite out of place to lay these uncertain factors before a court of law. The Rai Bahadur suggests that the Improvement Trust is not infallible, that it may make mistakes and that it is therefore advisable to have another authority to check its errors. I do not suggest for a moment that its mistakes may not be numerous but I do contend that its mistakes are any rate made in good faith, and I do not admit the dismay, consternation and the discontent which the Rai Bahadur will have us believe prevail in Calcutta at present in regard to the present method of assessment. I have sat in many committees of the Corporation on which the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur was himself present. I have watched and seen the considerate and reasonable manner in which the Corporation has discussed with owners of properties what fee may fairly be fixed in order that they might secure redemption from acquisition, and I see no reason for thinking that the same fair treatment does not prevail in the Improvement Trust Exemption Committee. But there is a further safeguard to the owner of the property. If he decides not to pay the fee which the Trust may fix he has still not yet lost his property. The land may be put up to auction and the original owner may then enjoy the right of pre-emption. He is then in a better position to determine whether the future value estimated by the Trust is fair or not. Again, if he considers that the offer of the Trust is not a good enough one, and if he thinks that he will lose on the transaction he can refuse to pay the fee and the land may be acquired and put up to auction. I think the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur will on reflection admit that the Trust, as a statutory body, will exercise its power in a reasonable way and will not impose exorbitant fees with the hope and intention that the party may refuse to pay them, the property remaining in the hands of the Trust. In view of these facts I think that this House will refuse to accept the principle which the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has urged upon them. But I will also invite the attention of the House to the fact that this Bill will shortly be amended and that the whole question of recoupment is likely to receive treatment on broad lines and it is quite possible that the Government of Bengal may decide on some other method of recoupment whether betterment or frontage rate which will be more equitable and more easily worked than the present system. I would, therefore, urge even more strongly than when speaking on the previous motion that it is premature to discuss the question of principle at this stage."

Mr. Goode.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened with very great attention to the Hon'ble Mr. Goode's reply. As far as I have been able to follow him he has admitted what I mentioned to the Council that the fee is based on the difference between the assumed present value and future value. It is a very short cut—this acquisition and the subsequent sale to the owner—acquiring at the Trust's own valuation and selling at their own estimate of future value. I say, my Lord, that it is not fair that the party should not be given an opportunity to go to a third party but be compelled to accept the terms of the Trust who are interested in the matter. I do not say that they are interested in the way that they are bent upon doing an injustice to the owner. But all the same the Trust is interested, and I think there should be an appeal to the Tribunal. Owing to the benevolence of the Legislature, the Board have to offer their surplus land to the party of course at their own valuation. The Government of India in their despatch to the Secretary of State recognized the love and attachment of the people of India to their holdings. And why should they be deprived of their holdings by an interested party however well intentioned that party may be? That is my point. Then, Mr. Goode has said that the difficulty lies as regards future valuation. He asks how can the Tribunal ascertain future valuation; the members of the Board are human and the Tribunal also are human. I may quote from Mr. Bompas who said in this connection that experts in land valuation were procurable and it was desirable to appoint a Tribunal for the trial of such cases which should be an expert body—it was intended to be a court of experts. That was in reference to the opposition of the Council at the time to the creation of a Tribunal. Mr. Bompas fought hard for the Tribunal. He said it would be an expert body and that the people would be benefited ^{than a High Court} and that the Tribunal would command ~~and~~ ^{as} to-morrow a Civilian. He asked and that the Tribunal must or anybody be afraid of going to experts who Judge who might ~~not~~ ^{know} all the facts. In England, I find from Mr. Bompas' as well ~~whom~~ ^{from} Mr. Basu's speech, you have got an arbitrator appointed by the Local Government Board. Then, why should you not leave matters to be decided by arbitrators? Let them judge whether the present valuation is fair and future valuation reasonable. Nothing is lost thereby and the party is pleased. In the debate on the Improvement Bill Mr. Bompas had to admit that the party had a right to say that somebody else must decide between the Trust and the claimant when they differed. Therefore, I think, that there is some reason and some ground for the demand that I now make on behalf of the people of Calcutta. Then, Mr. Goode has referred to pre-emption. Mr. Goode knows very well all about it. He has been a very very sympathetic Chairman of the Corporation, I do not say this in flattery. But I ask, is it fair to talk about pre-emption when you take away the right of redeeming the property? My Lord, I would explain what pre-emption is. The holding is acquired outright, the road is made or the improvement is completed, three or four years elapse and before the property not taken up for the roadway is put into auction the owner is asked, do you want this now? His house was there and if he had been granted exemption, he would have continued to live in his holding, and would have been allowed a rebate of not less than 20 per cent. ; he could have made the fee a charge on the property instead of paying it in a lump sum. All these advantages count for nothing at the time of pre-emption when he has to pay down the whole amount in cash without any rebate, not to speak of the distress caused by the compulsory removal in the interval. Is that fair, my Lord? This point was debated in this Council and the justice of the case was fully pressed at the time by the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha, Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu, Mr. Apear and others, and I find from the proceedings that the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan voted on the popular side. But, my Lord, everything was washed away as there was a solid official phalanx that day even as there is to-day. I do not want to take up more time, but I would make a fervent appeal that this matter should be taken into the careful consideration of Government as there is a great feeling of discontent in the city over it."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee, consisting of representatives of the Corporation of Calcutta, the Calcutta Port Commissioners and the Calcutta Improvement Trust, and representatives of other interests concerned, be appointed to report on the present condition of the Port Commissioners' lands in Calcutta lying north of Howrah Bridge, and to suggest the most suitable and effective methods for improving the sanitary condition of such lands and for developing them to the best advantage by structural or other alterations.

He said :—

" My Lord, in moving this resolution I should like to give a brief history of the Port Trust lands north of the Howrah Bridge. Originally the formation of the Strand Bank was partly the result of alluvial deposit and was assisted largely by the municipality depositing for many years the sweepings of the town. When Strand Road was constructed some of the prominent landholders of Calcutta parted with their right over a considerable portion of the riverside land for purposes of public utility, and the Government of Lord Dalhousie stated that it was proposed 'to keep the land between Strand Road and the river in such a condition as to be both ornamental and helpful to the town and useful at once for the purposes of commerce and recreation. The design of the most noble the Governor of Bengal is that the land in question should be used permanently and exclusively for purposes of public utility connected with the trade, traffic, health and the convenience of the community in furtherance of which design, roads, ghâts, wharfs and the like might be made, but no elevated buildings were in contemplation.'

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

In 1862 when the Calcutta Port Trust were made Trustees for the first time in connection with the property, then it was proposed that the land should be utilized for the reduction of port dues. Sir Ashley Eden (then Mr. Eden) spoke as follows :—

'As to the proposition of making over the river bank for the relief of the port dues, he considered it a most selfish one He confirmed what had fallen from an Hon'ble Member regarding the interest of the original pottadars and added : It was certain that neither Lord Dalhousie nor the pottadars in compromising all disputes ever intended the bank to be devoted to the reduction of the port dues. If the bank belonged to the public, it belonged to the whole of the public and should be applied for their benefit.'

The representative of the Chamber of Commerce agreed with the contention that the river bank belongs to the entire community.

For about 47 years this property has been in the hands of the Port Trust, and what is its condition ? If Your Excellency would pay a surprise visit you would be astonished to see that it is in an abominable condition and is a permanent menace to the health of the city. It is a conglomeration of huts, godowns, etc., in insanitary and undrained condition, cattle are tethered in innumerable numbers on public roads and passes, and the whole area is kept in such a way that it is a source of perpetual nuisance to the city. The present Health Officer (Dr. Crake) District Health Officer in charge of the northern part of the city, reported that the state of affairs existing here was really scandalous. The Corporation for the last 15 or 20 years have been asking the Port Commissioners, as if on their knees—they are such a powerful body—to effect improvements ; but every time a request is made, they meet practically with a rebuff. However, in 1909 a Conference was held between the representatives of the Corporation and those of the Port Commissioners regarding the widening of Strand Bank which is just on the riverside and the Strand Road which starts from the corner of Harrison Road. The Conference was attended by Mr. Payne ; I was one of the members, and Sir Frederick Dumayne prepared a plan showing that the whole area would be admirably improved by providing a 70-feet roadway with 40 feet side-roads and with a river bank road of 40 feet in width ; this would have admirably opened out the area. I have got the extract from the note of Sir Frederick Dumayne ; it is this : a 75-feet road in the middle, 40 feet on the western side, and 40 feet on the eastern side. Then many of the existing buildings and huts would be removed ; new buildings and even warehouses would be constructed and there would be ample space for ventilation and the whole area would be put in a tidy condition. We were enamoured of it and we thought that Sir Frederick Dumayne's proposal would materialize. I was expecting it to materialize every day, but I do not know what has happened to it. I fear that when Sir Frederick Dumayne left this country it was sent in the same boat with him and was dropped into the English Channel ; it has not since seen the light of day. If Your Excellency would drive over the area you will find that between the Ferry Ghât and Jagannath Ghât a huge four-storied warehouse has been built not only projecting over the 60 feet roadway, but covering nearly the whole roadway, and affording only a subterranean passage, thus light and air are absolutely shut out. That passage is obstructed by rows of bullock carts—a teeming number of them—which are loading and unloading. On the north side there is a range of warehouses and on the east side there is a platform and there are warehouses on the first and third floor and a sloping staircase. The carts stand there loading and unloading at all hours of the day and therefore that road, which is always blocked up, is in an abominably filthy condition. People have anyhow to crawl through that passage in order to get to Howrah Bridge. A body of businessmen is keeping this area in this abominable condition. If the Port Commissioners dared to do this in the southern part of the town they would have been wiped off the face of the earth, but they are doing this with impunity in the northern part. The Corporation asked them to provide proper accommodation for carts and cattle and to pave all the passages over which there is heavy traffic. The Port Commissioners said: ‘you had better build the stable or let the Government contribute, we cannot pay anything’. The other day they wanted to give a piece of land to the Corporation at the extreme north of Baghbazar on which it was proposed that the Corporation should construct a cattle-shed at a cost of about Rs. 3 lakhs, but the Port Commissioners would not pay a single pice. That is their justice; they are a powerful body, I do not know whether they are under the ægis of Government, but that is how they treat the Corporation. A few weeks ago the General Committee decided that it was not the business of the Corporation to provide stables for carts and cattle serving in the Port Trust area. If the Port Commissioners mean to let the carters continue the nuisance it will be a source of danger to the health of the residents of the northern part of the town. Everything continues in its pristine glory, my Lord. Sometime ago I solicited Your Excellency’s predecessor, Lord Carmichael, to pay a visit to the northern quarter. He expressed his willingness, if he could find time, to arrange a visit to that quarter. If Your Excellency will pay a surprise visit—for if previous intimation is given of Your Excellency’s visit, the officers will cover up the whole area with a red carpet—I am sure I will be able to show that not a word of mine is exaggerated as regards the condition of affairs there. The question of a river promenade was raised by Sir Francis Stewart and Mr. Bompas, but what to speak of a river promenade! The whole area is full of all sorts of refuse and the smell of dung is unbearable there. Such being the condition of things, I respectfully move that a committee be appointed consisting of representatives of the Port Commissioners, the Calcutta Corporation, and the Improvement Trust and of other local bodies and such other persons as the Government may think fit to report on the present condition of the Strand Bank Press and to suggest what suitable methods for effecting sanitary and structural improvement should be adopted.”

Mr. Cumming.

The Hon’ble Mr. Cumming said :—

“My Lord, the object which the Hon’ble Member has in view is, as he has stated in his resolution, the improvement of the sanitary condition of these lands and their development to the best advantage. The Port Commissioners and the Government are quite at one with him in this desire. He has portrayed the Port Commissioners as a powerful body absolutely impervious to any suggestion for improvement. This I do not consider to be a true picture. He has given an account of the lands which I might amplify; but I shall not take up the time of this Council beyond saying that these lands were the result of agreements between Government and the Port Commissioners at various times between 1874 and 1877. The Hon’ble Member no doubt is correct in quoting the original idea with which such lands were transferred : they were for the purpose of public utility connected with the trade, traffic, health and convenience of the community. I do not think that the Port Commissioners at the present moment would be prepared to say that they have had a very definite policy in the past regarding such lands, but it is only right to realize the difficulties which beset their path.

In 1908 a scheme was prepared for the development of such lands, but at the time of the Port Facilities Committee in 1913 some portions of the scheme had to be revised or abandoned. Then, later on in 1913, some new factors had come into existence in which there are, to some extent, still uncertain quantities. There are two main facts regarding any general scheme for the improvement of areas to the north of the Howrah Bridge which must be considered. First of all, there is the very important proposal about an inland harbour in connection with the Grand Trunk Canal scheme ; and, secondly, there is the question of a Delivery Depot in connection with the King George's New Docks. These and other difficulties which I might enumerate have impressed the Port Commissioners and they realize that an entirely new scheme for the present moment would be difficult to prepare.

Now, the proposal made by the Hon'ble Mover has been anticipated to some extent. The Improvement Trust addressed the Government on the subject and suggested that it would be better to re-examine the whole question of this land, and if there were no scheme, to have one prepared ; and recently we saw in the press that the Calcutta Municipality had formed a somewhat similar opinion. On receipt of this communication the first action of Government was to find exactly the size and area of these lands and the terms under which they were held. Indeed, I was prepared on behalf of Government to address the Commissioners on the subject just about the time the notice of the Hon'ble Member's resolution was received. The intention of Government is still the same ; and it is to address the Port Commissioners asking them to prepare a comprehensive scheme as far as they can to remedy the outstanding intrinsic defects ; and, before they finally submit their proposals to Government, to consult the Calcutta Corporation and the Improvement Trust. That obviously will meet to a very great extent the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view in asking that a joint committee consisting of these three bodies proposed be formed. Moreover, it may be in the recollection of members of this Council that in answer to a question this morning an intimation was made of the intention of Government to put on the statute book at an early date legislation regarding a Central Port Health authority in Calcutta ; and obviously such an authority, if created, would have something to say regarding these various areas. These being the facts, my Lord, I submit that in view of the action which Government have already determined to take and are proposing to take the proposal in the Hon'ble Member's resolution is, if I may say so, premature, if not unnecessary. The Hon'ble Member will probably consider that the action which the Government will take will meet the object which he has in view more expeditiously. I would ask him to reconsider whether he would pursue the resolution or withdraw it."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened to the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming's reply and if I have followed him aright, he said that the Government had already addressed the Port Commissioners on the subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon. I did not say that ; I said that the Government were going to address the Port Commissioners."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (continuing) said :—

“I now understand, my Lord, that the Government are going to ask the Port Commissioners to submit their proposals for the improvement of this area in consultation with the Calcutta Corporation and the Improvement Trust. If I understand the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming correctly I think he said something about the Central Port Health authority. However, what I understand generally is that my motion will be met to some extent, in an indirect way; that is to say, that Government will ask the Port Commissioners to prepare their scheme in consultation with the Corporation and the Improvement. My motion is that Government should appoint a committee. Instead of doing that, as it would perhaps be rather like superseding the Port Commissioners, Government are doing it in an indirect way. The Port Commissioners are not like the Burdwan or Chinsura municipalities which can be superseded. I am glad to hear that Government are going to take some action in the matter. However, if the evils which I have brought to the notice of Your Excellency are removed within a reasonable time I shall be quite content. My Lord, I would like to have some assurance that this will be done expeditiously. I want to know what time the Port Commissioners will take in submitting their scheme in consultation with the Improvement Trust and the Corporation, and I shall be glad if Government will give us a hint that this will be done within a reasonable time, otherwise the insanitary condition of the northern part of the town will continue to the great detriment of the residents there. With these observations, my Lord, I beg to withdraw my resolution.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

[The discussion of the resolutions left over from the previous day was resumed.]

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 15 TO 18.

The President said :—

" Items 15, 16, 17 and 18 raise substantially the same question and there need not be four separate discussions on the same matter. The discussion therefore will all take place on the first of these four motions standing on the paper, namely No 15. If it is desired after the discussion is concluded I shall be prepared to put each motion in turn from the chair."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in view of the present rise in the prices of food-stuffs, a committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to consider the remedial measures already taken, or in contemplation by the Government, and to advise what further steps (if any) should be taken to alleviate the present distress.

He said :—

" Last February when we had a discussion about the high prices of cloth and food-stuffs on the motion of our indefatigable friend the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler was kind enough to explain to the Council the orders of the Government of India, and assured us that both the Local Government and the Food Commissioner were watching the circumstances as regards export trade. As regards import trade he admitted that the prices of wheat, gram and pulses were unfortunately very high, and attributed them to the failure of crops and the decrease in the purchasing power of money.

Subsequently matters became very acute, the price of rice in particular became alarmingly high, the coarsest rice selling at Rs. 8 per maund or so. Government have recently taken steps to reduce exports, and to permit the imports of Burma rice into Bengal. It would be interesting to know how far the exports of rice and other necessities of life to foreign countries have been curtailed, and in case any quantities are still exported out of India, whether such exports cannot be stopped altogether. I feel bound to point out that there is a feeling in certain quarters that the curtailment of exports to foreign countries has not gone as far as it should go, having regard to our own needs, and the prior claims of the people. In this connection, my Lord, I desire to draw attention to certain articles published in the Bengalee by an enthusiastic student of Indian economics, Babu Kshitish Chandra Neogy. From these articles I find that rice was exported from the port of Calcutta, according to Mr. Neogy, to the extent of 15,23,000 maunds in 1918-19, 19,000 in 1917-18, and 1,79,100 in 1916-17. Mr. Neogy had also shown that the daily average consumption of rice in the Province was eight mittaks only. In nine months from April 1st, 1918, to December 1918, the export of rice was four and three-fourths crores of maunds. Bengal imported the smallest quantity and exported the largest quantity during the last six years. The result was that the net quantity available for consumption was only 177 million maunds as against 239 and 229 million maunds during the preceding two years. Even under ordinary conditions, the quantity available was barely sufficient. With a decrease of imports, increase of exports, and with a growing population replenished yearly by large numbers of immigrants, deficiency was more serious than was apparent through Census figures. These were facts which required looking into by a Committee.

I do not know whether these figures will be challenged, but they have been carefully compiled by a very capable student of economics. However that may be, the broad fact remains and cannot be gainsaid that prices of all kinds of foodstuffs are still extraordinarily high, and it is necessary to consider what other steps should be taken to alleviate the present distress which is undoubted and which is much more acute than people in favourable stations in life perhaps realise. It is no comfort to be told that the present high prices in India are part of a world wide economic movement. It may also be mentioned here that on a rough calculation based on Mr. Neogy's figures, we find that during last year, excluding export and including import, there was available only 8 chitaks of rice per head for the population. Eight chitaks of rice, my Lord, is hardly adequate even for one meal a day. Taking facts as they are, I submit it is incumbent upon Government to take all possible steps to ensure that people have enough to live upon at reasonable rates, having regard to their chronic poverty and the present purchasing power of the rupee. I refuse to believe that the problem is beyond the resources of Government, or that a satisfactory remedy cannot be found if Government and representatives of the people confer together. Various suggestions have been made by different people. The Corporation of Calcutta have suggested a substantial reduction in the extra-provincial or maritime exports, arrangements for concerted purchase for other Provinces, allotments of Burma rice for Bengal and reduction of freight on rice from Burma. In this connection I may mention that I have just received a note from a big rice-merchant of the city, Babu Amulyadhane Addy. He says that on the 15th May last, Burma rice was selling at Rs. 7 in Calcutta, Rs. 6-6 in Cawnpore and Rs. 5-15 in Bombay. He asserts that the Director of Civil Supplies has failed in making a fair distribution of rice. The Government of India have declared that rice is only exported to foreign lands for the consumption of the Indian population abroad. But Mr. Addy points out that even this year rice has been exported to Sweden where there are no Indian settlers. Mr. Addy suggests as a remedial measure a prohibitive duty instead of the present system of control. Mr. K. L. Datta, a renowned officer of the Finance Department, now retired, stated that in the most favourable years, considering the want of the population, not more than 2 per cent. of the produce could safely be exported out of India and that in unfavourable years not a single grain could be sent out of India without detriment to the population. I am not an expert, my Lord, but I may say this that the present topic is agitating the different sections of the community—educated and uneducated, rich and poor. For my part I believe that Government have already taken action on certain lines, but it is possible that discussion in a small committee will bring out other suggestions. The problem is to render available a sufficient quantity of the main necessities of life, regulate their distribution and arrange for their sale at cheap prices either through official or voluntary agencies. To be effective, remedies must be fairly comprehensive, and it will be necessary to ensure that relief actually reaches the people for whose benefit it is intended. The matter is one which affects the daily lives of the people and a thorough comprehension of their wants and difficulties is essential to organising successful relief measures. This is essentially a matter in which Government and the people should work together in mutual co-operation and trust. A mixed committee of officials and non-officials would be in an infinitely better position to advise Government and to engender confidence in the people in the beneficent intentions of Government. I may say that there is nothing new in this idea of having a committee to advise Government. In the discussion in the Corporation Mr. Rhodes suggested it to license recognised dealers. Last year when the price of cotton goods went up an advisory committee was appointed and did useful work. Although the scope of work of the committee for which I move would be much larger. Government may rest assured that it will prove at least as useful, and the need for such a committee is no less."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, for the last few months the economic situation in the country has been most serious, causing the greatest suffering to the people. Since I had sent my resolution I find that representations have been sent to Government from various public bodies, for instance, from the Calcutta Corporation, from the Darjeeling Tea Planters Association asking Government to take steps to reduce the price of rice. Government have not been unmindful of these representations. Some communiqués have been issued by Government to ascertain the exact situation and also for the control of rice. It is generally believed by the people of this country that the present serious situation has been brought about by the seeming apathy on the part of Government and that efforts of Government have been, as stated by the Englishman, only spasmodic.

I think Sir Henry Wheeler may remember that I wanted to move a resolution asking Government to take action to reduce the high price of food-stuffs some time probably in December last and that I discussed the question with him. He was pleased to point out to me the inter-provincial character of the question and he informed me that he would place my resolution in the hands of the Commissioner of Food-stuffs who was expected to come to Calcutta within the next few days. I therefore did not move my resolution. I find however that in February last my hon'ble friend Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved a resolution about the high price of food-stuff and cloth. In reply to that resolution Sir Henry Wheeler on behalf of Government was pleased to reply as follows :—

"The Government of India made it clear at the outset that in respect of rice Bengal would not be allowed to close down export so as to keep all available stocks within its borders, and while shortly afterwards first in the case of the United Provinces and the Punjab and a little later in the case of all provinces, they allowed Local Governments to prohibit the export of food-grains, other than wheat and rice, from their jurisdictions except under certificate, they definitely said that they would not allow the powers thus conferred to be so exercised as to apply an absolute and uncontrolled embargo upon all exports of food-stuffs. We were then told that subsequent to the 25th January last the Government of India modified their policy in one material respect, and, while leaving wheat, rice and grain to be regulated by this special Commissioner, withdrew the powers of local Governments to impose restrictions on the movement of food-grains outside their provinces."

Here we have got no doubt some of the obstacles which stood in the way of your Lordship's Government to interfere with the export of rice either inter-provincially or outside India. But the next passage which I am going to quote shows the attitude of the Local Government in the matter.

Sir Henry Wheeler was pleased to say, "From 1911 prices rose steadily till 1913, and kept on a fairly high level through 1914 and 1915, rising even higher between September and December of the latter year. At the end of 1915 prices came down considerably and kept fairly steady till the end of 1916. They then fell again and steadied on approximately the same level until about October 1917. Then we have a big drop nearly down to the level of 1911, and while recently prices have risen again, they are not yet up to the level of 1913 or 1915. In the face of that record of prices I submit that it will be impossible to go to the Government of India and say we want to close down the export of rice from Bengal. All that we can do, we are doing. We are watching the traffic in rice, seeing how much goes out of the province, and keeping the Food-stuffs Commissioner informed of the facts. He is also watching circumstances in Bengal and other provinces, but beyond that, for the moment, we cannot very well go. That is as regards our export trade.' We learn that your Lordship's Government did not like to go up to the Government of India in February last because the prices had not risen up to the level of 1913 or 1915. I think the price of ordinary rice went up in 1913 and in 1915 for a short time. It was about Rs. 6 per maund. The same rice is now being sold at more than Rs. 8 per maund. Export of rice from Bengal to foreign countries has been, however, going on pretty merrily—overseas, not for the purpose of human consumption, but mostly for starching yarn and weaving operations and for the purpose of distillation. Rice is being exported even to Egypt and to Sweden where there is no Indian population to eat rice for whose benefit God alone knows though the Government of India distinctly informed the public by a Press communiqué that rice was being exported for Indians living in foreign countries. It appears from the Trade Return of Calcutta for April 1918 to March 1919 published under the authority of the Governor General in Council that whereas in 1917, 17,92,055 maunds and in 1918, 20,19,392 maunds of rice were exported from Calcutta by sea, within the three months of January, February and March 1919, 53,70,526 maunds of rice were exported overseas, i.e., Bengal exported nearly double the quantity of rice in the first three months of this year of what it did in the first two previous years. The meaning of these figures I would ask your Lordship to consider. They mean that the staple food of the country has been exported most recklessly without the slightest regard for the food of the people. It is no wonder that the poor are on the very precipice of starvation. The Government cannot say that the Indian Press has been silent on the question. Nor can it say that the representatives of the people in your Lordship's Council have not brought to the notice of Government the grave situation in the country. But it does not seem that their representations have had much effect on Government. Sir Henry Wheeler was no doubt pleased to say in February last that the attitude of Government would be one of watching. But unfortunately this policy of simple watching and seeing has brought about an unheard-of state of things in the country.

It is our firm conviction that if your Lordship's Government had taken timely action in this matter, things would not have taken this serious turn.

Various suggestions have been made to bring down the price of rice in this province. The subject has been discussed threadbare in the Calcutta Corporation and the Chairman of that body has already addressed your Lordship's Government on the subject. I have already said that the Darjeeling Tea Planters' Association have also submitted a representation. They all submit that the export of rice from Bengal ought to be put a stop to at once on the principle that the people must have sufficient to feed them before any Government would allow exportation and that measures should be taken for the import of Burma rice to this country. The last communiqué by Government on the subject of high price of rice has been published in the daily papers of the 16th June. We find there 'that the pronounced rise which began last April has been the subject of careful and minute examination. It is within the knowledge of the public that the control of rice is under the direction of the Government of India.' The public, however, will not be satisfied with this statement. Why were not proper steps taken in the beginning of January or even in February last to put a stop to the large export of rice from Bengal? Why was the attitude of Government simply one of watchfulness? Was the Government of India approached in proper time to avert this present serious situation? Why were some of the sister provinces successful in their endeavours? In the Punjab the price of wheat came down in the course of a single day by notification in April last.

Balu S. N. Ray.

Various suggestions were made in the course of the debate on this question in the Calcutta Corporation. I would add a few of my own for the consideration of your Lordship's Government. They are :—

- (1) All export of rice overseas to be absolutely stopped.
- (2) Burma rice to be imported in sufficient quantities for Bengal.
- (3) Freight from Rangoon to Calcutta to be reduced.
- (4) Burma rice to be carried by railways and steamers at concession rates.
- (5) Wholesale and retail price of Burma rice to be fixed.
- (6) Cheap grain stores to be opened in towns and villages.
- (7) Burma rice to be made available at fixed prices—if necessary at lower than cost price at stores to be opened at every thana and at the head-quarters of select rural co-operative societies and select union committees ; co-operation of municipalities, district and local boards to be secured for the purpose.
- (8) That the Director of Civil Supplies be assisted by a committee of gentlemen who are in the rice trade and one or two officials, and one or two independent non-official gentlemen.

This high price of the staple food of the country is ascribed by some to failure of crop last year in Bengal, but it is well known that the failure was only partial and was not of such a character that the people would have been obliged to starve or would have been obliged to purchase at about Rs. 8 or Rs. 9 per maund. There have been larger failures to our knowledge, but prices have never risen so high. The general impression is that if Government had taken timely action there would not have been this dire distress in the land. In this country where a great deal depends upon the action of Government it is the general opinion that timely intervention on the part of your Lordship's Government would have averted this critical situation. The means which the Government intend to adopt to reduce the price of rice as appears from the communiqué of the 16th June will not, we are afraid, grapple the situation properly. I think it would serve no useful purpose if a limited quantity of Burma rice were only imported to Bengal. Burma rice should be freely imported to Bengal so that it may compete freely with the rice in stock in the hands of the dealers in rice in this country. This and the measures already proposed by me will, I have every reason to believe if carried out, tend to reduce the price of rice. In this connection I have consulted some of the influential rice merchants of Calcutta. Let me quote from one of the letters received by me on the subject :—

High prices of rice in Bengal.

Causes of this may be outlined as follows :—

(1) Shortage of crops all over India being the chief cause. Bengal, Bihar and Orissa yielded about 68 per cent. of the normal. Rise in prices is greatly due to this.

(2) Large quantity of boiled rice (this being the only food for Bengal) was drawn for different provinces from Bengal—

- (a) Bombay drew something like 3 to 4 lakhs bags from Calcutta nearly all boiled rice without the sanction of Bombay or Calcutta Director of Civil Supplies. These consignments were under Military certificates, and the fact can be verified from railway books. Bombay does not consume any boiled rice, then why such large quantities were drawn.

Babu S. N. Ray.

- (b) Berar also drew fairly large quantity of boiled rice from Calcutta while a fairly large quantity of Burma rice was being allotted to that province. This province also drew under Military certificates.
- (c) Madras and Colombo drew largest quantity of boiled rice and are still drawing. These parts get large quantity of Burma rice and can be still increased rather than to draw from a depleted province like Bengal.
- (d) Tea gardens and coal-fields should have arranged for their supplies through Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, for Burma rice from Chittagong for tea gardens and from Calcutta for coal-fields.

This method would have relieved much pressure in the Bengal districts.

The Military priority certificates have been playing a very prominent part since the last 4 to 5 months in drawing boiled rice. These Military certificates, if properly investigated by a mixed commission of officials and non-officials, will reveal much. The Military Department never required boiled rice, and priority certificates were granted to persons who were never contractors to the Military Department. Places to which these goods were consigned never had any Military Depôt or a station. This traffic was carried on to benefit some body and made big inroads into the boiled rice stocks of Calcutta and the districts.

To bring down prices in Calcutta and districts.

(1) It is difficult to do much at this stage, yet an effort can be made in the following directions :—

- (a) To stop totally all despatches of boiled rice to up-country, Madras and Colombo. Similar orders should be passed to all Bengal districts for up-country despatches. Paddy might be allowed to be imported to Calcutta to supply mills who produce boiled rice for town consumption.
- (b) At present Director of Civil Supplies permits about 30,000 tons monthly of Burma rice to meet up-country demand. Out of this, say, 25 per cent. or 7,500 tons monthly of boiled Burma rice if it can be imported, it would affect the Calcutta market and lower the present prices. Boiled Burma rice should be imported at controlled prices and sold out here at different Calcutta centres at a small profit under municipal control. At present Rangoon raw rice is sold on this system, but it is not taken in much as town consumes generally boiled rice.

There are other articles of food of the people of Bengal besides rice which have also gone up in price, viz., pulses, mustard oil and wheat. I think these are governed by inter-provincial rules and I need hardly say that Government will be pleased to take such early steps as may be necessary to reduce their price. While not in favour of advocating the export of rice from Bengal to the other provinces of India I think it is not good policy to prevent the export of rice to those provinces upon which we have to depend upon for some of our own articles of food, such as wheat, pulses, etc. We are, however, opposed to the export of rice out of India.

Whenever the produce of a country exceeds the want of the people the supplies may be freely exported, that is to say, any food-stuff in excess of the requirements of the people can be exported into any foreign country that is in need of such food-stuff. This principle safeguards the inhabitants of the country where the special article of food is produced and any violation of this reasonable principle must produce discontent in the country from which the foodstuff of the people is allowed to be exported without any check.

I shall now deal with the question of the high price of cloth. We know that a resolution was moved in this Council by my hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazlul Haq, to appoint a committee for recommending to Government to take such steps as that Committee may suggest for the reduction of the acute distress prevailing in the country owing to the high prices of cloth. That was in July 1918. That resolution was accepted by your Lordship's Government. The Committee was constituted, the Committee sat and the Committee made certain recommendations. We have from the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler at that very time. The Government of India in their communiqué of the 24th August last announced their intention of attempting the manufacture of standardised cloth for the assistance of the very poor, that a Cotton Committee was appointed on the 1st October 1918 and that Committee issued some 1,700 licenses and that owing to this and other causes the market fell. We are told, however, that since that time the attitude of your Lordship's Government has been one of watching the course of trade and of getting the best information as regards the probabilities of the situation so as to be able to decide from time to time whether or not to take further action. There was no doubt a fall in the market but still the price of cloth remained more than double the original price. But within a short time the prices again rose though not to the price of September 1918. But as far as we see no attempt has been made to introduce standardised cloth in the market for the very poor, although the provinces of Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab and the United Provinces have all undertaken to supply the same.

The generality of the people of this province are as poor as the generality of the people of the other province. Bengal is not a manufacturing country. The Bangalakshmi Mill cannot supply the cloth required by even one single sub-division of a district of this province. Still nothing has been done. Is it out of deference to any vested interest? Reduction even by 4 annas for a piece of cloth to a poor man means a great deal to him. It means the cost of salt which is one of his necessities for at least a month. People naturally become discontented when they see the other provinces enjoy a benefit and that on account of the action taken by their Government and your Lordship's Government have been merely watching the course of events. Whether by the introduction of standardised cloth or by any other possible means the price of ordinary cloth used by the masses of the people may be reduced it is for the Government to consider. We can simply lay our grievances and make suggestions.

My Lord, last year when there was an abnormal rise in the price of cloth there were hāt-looting cases all over the province. The price of rice however was very moderate then—less than it had been for the last two or three years. People could therefore fight with the then state of things. But things have assumed a different aspect at the present moment. There has been abnormal rise in the price of rice and every other foodstuff, whereas the price of cloth retains almost the same abnormal high price. The pinch has been great. Never has there been in the history of the country such an abnormal rise in the prices of every necessary article of life. The people have become almost helpless. We have got rice in our own country, but we cannot get it. Trades' unfeeling train has been carrying away the same without let or hindrance. It is high time for Government intervention in an active way."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I rise to speak on this motion. But at the outset I may say that I do not associate myself with the recommendation that a committee should be appointed to consider the remedial measures already taken or about to be taken. The object which made me give notice of this resolution was to draw the attention of your Excellency's Government to the state of affairs in the country caused by the scarcity of food-grains and the rise in the price of other necessary commodities of life. I know, my Lord, that the situation is very grave all over the province, but I have confined my resolution to the Burdwan Division and I have done so advisedly because in the first place I can speak of the Burdwan Division with some amount of personal knowledge; and in the second place I wanted to bring to the notice of your Excellency's Government some peculiar circumstances. I may say unfortunate circumstances under which we, the people of Burdwan, suffer.

Your Excellency is aware of the fact that practically since the year 1913, large tracts of arable lands in the Burdwan Division have been flooded by the rivers Damoodar and Ajai and there have practically been no crops to speak of in that area. The area is sufficiently large; it is about 250 square miles on the southern portion and an equal area on the northern side. Since then, however, steps have been taken by the Department of Public Works to mitigate the effects of the floods; but these attempts have not been successful. Although we hope to get good crops from a portion of these areas in the near future yet our hopes have not yet been realised. I have been assured by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, speaking on the financial resolutions, that the provision made by Government for the prevention of the flood of the Ajai was such as to prevent any damage by anything less than super-excessive floods; and we earnestly hope and trust that such will be the case. My Lord, the present circumstances are that a large portion of the agricultural population have had no crops for nearly three or four years and the situation is therefore very grave and acute. Consequently I feel it my duty to bring to the notice of your Excellency's Council the fact that when the permanent settlement was made in the Burdwan Division almost all the portion of the arable lands in the Division were under cultivation; and naturally the assessment of revenue was very high; and the zamindars in spite of the permanent settlement have had no appreciable increment of their income or their rentals. However, in other places, where lands have since the days of the permanent settlement been brought under cultivation, the zamindars are now getting rents from their tenants for those lands for which no assessment were made at the time of the permanent settlement. For these reasons, the zamindars in the Burdwan Division are as poor as the cultivators; they are not even so well off as they have to pay a large amount of revenue and get very little profit out of their lands, and are not in a position to help their tenants. So, the only help we can expect at the present moment is from the Government; and I think, my Lord, that it will serve no purpose by detaining the Council by recapitulating all the various things that have been referred to by the previous speakers and the literature that has appeared in the Press and elsewhere on this question. What I would submit to your Excellency's Council is that some steps might be taken to relieve the agricultural population and the poor raiyats from the present distress. If a reference be made to the registration records, it will be found that a large number of holdings owned by agriculturists are being transferred often to money-lenders. These agriculturists find it impossible either to borrow money or to obtain food-grains on credit and they are therefore obliged to alienate their cultivable land and in some cases even their homestead lands, in order to provide themselves and their families with food and other necessities of life. This is a serious state of things, but it was more so some time ago. The best course in such circumstances to get the help of the co-operative societies. Whoever may be at fault, at any rate, the co-operative societies are not very popular in my part of the province. I do not blame anybody; but that is a fact; and even granting that they were popular, there is no time at the present moment to establish co-operative societies to relieve immediately the sufferings of the people in great distress. In those portions of the Burdwan Division, which had good crops in the previous years and which had not suffered from the floods, the agriculturists had some stock of rice and paddy; and this was due primarily to the fact that they could not sell their paddy owing to the difficulties in export and transport by railway. But all of a sudden towards the end of last year somehow or other the transit of goods was made more easy, and merchants from Calcutta went to the various centres of Burdwan and Hooghly and offered good prices for the rice; and the agriculturist, who required money badly to pay off their rents and purchase other necessities of life, sold all their stock they had in their possession being afraid that the price of rice would go down. These agriculturists and jotedars, who generally have sufficient stock of rice not only for their own consumption for years but also for sale, are now practically without any victuals. Therefore it is necessary that some relief should be brought to their doors. Fortunately, for us, my Lord, at the present moment, we have in the district of Burdwan a very sympathetic and an exceptionally able and experienced administrator as District Officer; and if your Excellency's Government place sufficient funds at his disposal, he will be able to afford help to the people under his charge. Fortunately the same may be said of the other District Officers in my division; there are very able and experienced District Officers in almost all the districts of the Burdwan Division. I would therefore appeal to your Excellency's Government that sufficient means may be placed at their disposal to relieve the distress of the people and that the further transfer of agricultural holdings and homestead lands of agriculturists to money-lenders may be stopped, as that will materially affect the prosperity of the agricultural population. I do not know what measures are necessary and I cannot venture to make suggestions; but various suggestions have been made not only by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur and my friend to my right, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray but also by various public bodies and the press; and your Excellency's Government will be in a position to decide what measures should be adopted. With these words, I beg to support the resolution so far as it relates to the relief of distress of the poor but not to institute an inquiry into the matter."

The Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji said:—

"My Lord, in the midst of the world-wide rejoicings and jubilation consequent on the long-looked-for descent upon this earth of the Angel of Peace after the most sanguinary conflict which the world has ever witnessed, and to which history can hardly furnish a parallel, it would, I fear, be out of place and painfully discordant were we to join the chorus of wail that rises at this hour from one end of this vast Indian continent to the other by reason of the extreme suffering and want created by the not merely abnormal, but unprecedented, rise in prices of food-grains and cloths—the two indispensable and ultimate necessities of human existence. But the times are such, and the exigencies of the situation are so stern and unrelenting that it is impossible for Government to assume a laissez-faire attitude, and for the public to accept the inevitable, and merely sit and brood over the chronic want and sufferings on all sides with the impassiveness of a Buddhist idol. India has had the misfortune to be rather a constant prey to scarcity and famine. The absence of a few bountiful showers of rain, all in good time, and, as its result, a failure, all round, of the winter paddy crop in Bengal or the spring crops of wheat, barley, etc., in Bihar, and we have the wolves of famine let loose upon the land. In dire emergencies, I would rather say, catastrophes of this kind, what Government generally do consists in making provision for work, supplying food for the labourers, and prohibiting the export of food-grains. It takes some months, sometimes more than a twelvemonth, for normal conditions to return. With the harvesting of the next paddy crops the prices of food-grains, which go up by leaps and bounds on these calamitous occasions, resume their normal figures; and improved facilities of railway communication and the promptness with which relief measures are undertaken have in recent years succeeded in considerably taking the sting out of the sufferings which such cataclysms bring in their train. Common though are dearths, scarcities and even famines in India thanks to the benevolent policy of Government, their kaleidoscopic appearance on, and disappearance from, its horizon, because meteoric, have ceased to have a lasting effect on its economic conditions. But the steady rise in the prices of foodstuffs and cloths during the last decade, culminating in their present fabulous figures, has, while enriching a fortunate class of adventurous capitalists, brought the general mass of population to the brink of starvation and raggedness, nay, even nudity. During the first half of the thirteen years from 1906 to 1919 the prices of commodities continued as follows :—

				Rs. A. P.
Rice	4	0	0 per maund
Dal	4	8	0 „
Flour	5	9	0 „
Ghee	40	0	0 „
Mustard oil	15	0	0 „
Coke	0	5	0 „
Kerosine oil	0	1	6 per bottle
Manchester cloth	1	8	0 per pair

But after a little more than the four most eventful years of the great War the prices of those very articles stand as follows to-day :—

				Rs. A. P.
Rice	9	0	0 per maund.
Dal or pulses	12	8	0 „
Flour	12	0	0 „
Salt	4	0	0 „
Ghee	90	0	0 „
Sugar	22	0	0 „
Milk	12	0	0 „
Mustard oil	40	0	0 „
Coke	0	10	0 „
Kerosine oil	0	3	6 per bottle.
Manchester cloth, coarse quality	5	0	0 per pair.

When we look upon this picture and on that what do we find? We find that the price of every common article of food and clothing has, during the last five or six years, steadily increased till it has assumed proportions out of all keeping with the average earnings of a member of the bhadralok class, not to say of the common artisan or the labouring classes generally. And even at those prices we are getting, in the language of the poet, chalk and alum and plaster for bread. One cannot have prevision enough to forecast the economic future of this country; neither can one be so far blinded by pessimism as to despair of finding a sovereign remedy capable of successfully coping with the situation. The tide in the market has been so steadily and so surely rising that fears are, not without some show of reason, entertained by people whose faith in kismet is proverbially strong, that there is no authority potent enough to be able to pass the word of command: 'Thus far shalt thou go, and no further.'

It is at this juncture, my Lord, that we naturally seek the aid of writers on political economy. According to the most rational view of the acutest thinker among them the most plausible case for artificially cheapening a commodity is that of food. The desirableness, he adds, of the object is in this case undeniable. Fortunately for the people, Governments in European countries have studied to reduce the occasional high price in times of emergency. They have done so, and have insisted upon the richer classes diminishing their own consumption, on the ground that if those classes buy and consume their usual quantity of food, and content themselves with giving money, they do no good. The country cannot be too grateful to Government for condescending to adopt such direct measures at the cost of the State as the importation of rice from Burma; but rice is not the only article of food of which the price has gone up beyond all reckoning. And the only remedy under the present most trying circumstances lies in opening depôts at District and Sub-divisional head-quarters and in large towns for the sale at moderate and controlled prices of the few articles of daily consumption. This course has, we understand, been adopted in Bihar, and we trust your Excellency's Government will pursue a similar course, and lead the van in the humanitarian work of averting a dire catastrophe which stares the whole country in the face. No one but a visionary would dream of a return of the good old days of Shaista Khan, when rice sold at eight maunds the rupee. We can nevertheless expect to see the passing of an ordinance prohibiting, for the nonce, the export of food-grains and the production of artificial dearth by what is known as monopoly.

In these circumstances and at this grave crisis the Province looks up to your Excellency's Government for such benevolent measures as may afford relief to the distressed millions committed to your charge. It is the world competition that has been their ruin—world-competition and all that it stands for. Few and simple are their wants—a handful of rice to appease their hunger and a strip of cloth to hide their nakedness.

In supporting the resolutions so opportunely moved by my friends, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, and three other Hon'ble members, I beg respectfully to commend them for final adoption to the sympathetic consideration of the Hon'ble members of this Council."

The Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray said :—

"My Lord, the distress prevailing in our country has already assumed such a widespread and acute character that prompt and bold action is urgently necessary on the part of the authorities. Since the first alarm was given by a scanty monsoon last year, we have witnessed a sorry spectacle of inaction in Bengal, except in certain areas where serious famine conditions prevail. The control of rice traffic is no doubt under the Government of India, yet it is difficult to say that the provincial Government have discharged their share of the responsibility with credit.

The first tangible sign of activity was the attempt to take a census of rice-stocks in Bengal in November last, which, though admitted to be disappointing and defective, appears to have been sufficient for the purpose of persuading the authorities that Bengal had surplus stocks of rice. As these census figures have not been published, we are not in a position to say now far this conclusion was justified. But it is perhaps this optimism of the local authorities that has led the Food-stuffs Commissioner to encourage export of rice in so large quantities from our province, with the result we all know. Even in February last, the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler ignored that our enormous exports contributed in any way to the distress. He said, 'Nothing that we can do will remedy the factors making for high prices, namely, the failure of the crops due to a deficient monsoon and the decrease in the purchasing power of money.' But the blunder of the authorities in ignoring the third and a potent factor, namely, large exports to foreign countries, which was wholly preventable, has at last been indirectly admitted by the recent decision to cut down export, after it is too late.

Mr. Irwin.

My Lord, the non-official Indian members of this Council made repeated attempts to make your Lordship's Government recognise the seriousness of the situation, and suggested for their consideration several measures of general relief which have been tried with success elsewhere. But the authorities put forward very many excuses for their policy of drift and treated these suggestions with the usual disregard. In reply to a question of mine the Government refused to suggest to the District Boards and Municipalities the desirability of opening cheap grain stores, a step which has been taken in some other provinces and several Native States to relieve the general tension. And when later, I moved a resolution in connection with the financial statement recommending that a certain sum should be placed at the disposal of the District Boards and Municipalities for enabling them to open cheap grain shops, I was told that it would lead to interference with trade, and further that the amount suggested would be insufficient for the purpose. But this latter difficulty does not seem to have been altogether insurmountable, because the Government could easily increase the grant if so disposed.

My Lord, it is a pity that your Lordship's Government should have underestimated the gravity of the situation, and failed to appreciate the difficulties of the people committed to their care. In February last, a graph was exhibited in this Council showing the course of prices during the past few years for the purpose of consoling us with the thought that the prices of rice had not at that time reached the level of 1913 or 1915. This procedure betrayed a lamentable want of acquaintance with the circumstances of the people which have been so seriously affected by the long prevalence of war prices all round. The authorities ought to have known better than to institute any comparison between the circumstances of the people in 1913 or even 1915, with those of 1918-19. The phenomenal rise in the price of cloth and other commodities has long exhausted the resources of the people, and the present scarcity of foodstuffs is indeed the proverbial last straw.

My Lord, we must tender our thanks to Government for their recent communiqué whatever it may lead to. But in order that any measures may be effective, they should be taken early, and in close co-operation with the people themselves. It is necessary that in such critical moments, the representatives of the people should have a potent voice in determining the course of action to be followed. I therefore support the proposal for the appointment of a committee to go into the whole question."

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

"My Lord, in connection with this resolution I should like to say that I have it on excellent authority that about two months ago there were no less than 225,000 maunds of rice consigned to Bihar and Orissa accumulated at three stations on the Darjeeling-Kishanganj Branch Line, and the General Manager of the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway himself told me that the Eastern Bengal Railway could not take over more than 4,000 maunds per diem. Thus it would take from 50 to 60 days to move the whole amount. Meanwhile some of the rice was rotting and some actually growing out of the bags whilst we in Darjeeling were crying out for supplies.

On top of this it is reported that the Food Controller of Bihar and Orissa purchased another 1,300 maunds at Matigara, a large bazar in the Darjeeling district and actually situated behind the stations at which the first mentioned quantity was lying rotting for want of transport. My Lord, I will not waste the time of the Council with any comment upon this."

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“ My Lord, I do not propose to say anything about the export or import from outside India, as I know that Government have been doing all that can possibly be done. That owing to the paucity of supply there has been great suffering amongst the people for want of foodstuff is admitted on all hands. It is a question of demand and supply, and if the supply can be added by outside import, i.e., importing rice from Rangoon, that can be done by all means, and Government will see of course how far the export from India can be controlled. But there are other difficulties within the province. I understand statistics are being collected as to what amount of supply there is in the country and how far we can depend upon it. We see from the newspaper reports that in every district of Bengal the supply is not sufficient. One precautionary measure should be taken in regard to the capitalists—the rice-dealers and the money-lenders. As in the case of jute, the jute-dealers gained much and as in the case of cloth the Marwaris made enormous profit, so in the case of rice the rice dealers and money-lenders are storing the paddy with a view to selling it at a high price in the market and thereby making considerable profit. In my district, Rajshahi, which is a paddy-growing district, this difficulty is felt there, and I telegraphed to Government to take immediate steps to control the supply and I also approached the District Magistrate on the subject. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming was kind enough to pay a visit there recently and I also brought to his notice what could be done in that direction. In collecting the statistics great care should be taken to see how far the supply is available for general consumption and how far it is being stored by the capitalists—money-lenders. The cultivating class is entirely in the hands of the money-lenders during the rainy season. I know in my district paddy is being sold to the cultivators at Rs. 5 a maund and upon that interest is being charged by the money-lenders at 25 per cent. and that when paddy will be harvested in December and January the money-lenders will realize the whole thing, i.e., the money value and the cultivators will have to sell the paddy, when it will be harvested, at a very cheap rate, and the result will be that they will have to pay more than cent. per cent. for the help they are now getting from the money-lenders. In fact for taking a maund of paddy they will have to pay more than Rs. 6 and perhaps at the harvest season for one maund of paddy they will have to pay nearly 3 maunds of paddy. I suggested to the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming that co-operative credit stores might be started and that loans might be granted freely. It has perhaps been brought to your Excellency's notice that in Naogaon the Co-operative Credit system has been started under Government patronage, and the middlemen and brokers have been done away with. A store-house has been built in every district, and ganja is being supplied direct therefrom and by this considerable profit has accrued to the ganja cultivators. We see almost all the necessities of life are very dear, and it is certain that the purchasing value of money has decreased. How that can be increased it is for the Government to devise means. If the purchasing value can be increased it can be done only by Government, and all we can do by private agency is to advise the creation of co-operative credit societies and also the grant of agricultural and other loans. In the case of cloth and other things I think the arrangement that has been done at Naogaon for ganja can be easily done. Instead of supplying cloth to the market through the middlemen the mills can be encouraged to send supplies direct to every district store-house and the people may buy from there. So jute can be stored under co-operative system and it can be exported or supplied at a high price so that the dealers may not suffer on account of the low price. On the one hand the supply of money may be increased and on another the supply of necessities may be increased. The rice dealers are now purchasing paddy and controlling the price. If side co-operative societies can purchase with the help of Government or they can raise money amongst themselves or can borrow from Government or from other Co-operative or Central Bank

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

they can also purchase paddy and rice and can supply them at cost price. In my district when I first approached the Magistrate I was told that if there were any capitalist he could be helped in getting facilities for importing rice from outside, and fortunately I secured the services of a Marwari gentleman who offered to purchase ten thousand maunds of rice and to sell it at cost price in the market and then I approached Government to help him in securing paddy from outside but unfortunately nothing has yet been done. I think much can be done if the cultivators can be supplied with money under the co-operative credit system and I believe by this means they will be relieved to a great extent from the highhanded dealings of the money lenders. I am grateful to Government for the State help in Rajshahi on account of the flood, but something should be done for at least three or four months till the aus paddy grows during which the cultivating classes will be obliged to borrow money at high interest. If the market can be controlled as suggested I think much relief can be given. Of course I am not in favour of an inquiry by a committee. I think a conference may be held in which the matter may be discussed and means devised as to how possibly help can be rendered to the sufferers. In that way a committee can render some help, but immediate action is necessary. Within two or three months the ar paddy will grow and I think the cultivators will be much relieved of the distress if something is done immediately. With these remarks I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, after all that has been said it is hardly necessary for me to take up the time of the Council by any lengthy remarks of mine, but having given notice of a similar resolution I feel that I ought to say a few words just to associate myself with what has fallen from my hon'ble friends as regards the necessity and the extreme urgency of devising some measures to afford relief to the people in the distressed areas. My Lord, I will content myself with making only a few brief remarks. It is quite conceivable that the cultivators as a class, having very little resisting power, would fall a ready victim to famine or be subject to dire distress in case crops fail or for some reason or other. I do not know, but this is my information, that it is not merely the cultivators but also the poorer middle class people who have been very hard hit during the present distress. A little consideration and rough calculation will give members of this Council an idea of the distress that has been prevailing amongst the middle class people of this Presidency. Having regard to the fact that it is not merely rice but also other necessities of life that have gone up in price, it can be easily calculated that it requires at least Rs. 8 or Rs. 10 a month for an individual to keep body and soul together. Let us take the case of a family consisting of one man, his wife and two children. The figures work up to Rs. 40 a month in order that this family should live just from hand to mouth. Add to this the medical charges, the prices of cloth and other necessities which are very high, and it would be quite clear that the earning member of the family must have an income of at least Rs. 50 a month in order to be able to get on somehow. Fifty rupees a month is an income which very few people in this Presidency can be said to possess. Therefore one can conceive of the distressful condition that these people have been reduced to with the high prices that is now raging not merely of rice but of other necessities of life too. There have been authentic cases reported in which it is said that the heads of families feeling the distress and unable to provide sufficient means for their families have committed suicide. There are six such cases reported in the issue of the Sanjibani of the 26th June last over the signature of the President and the Secretary of the Ramkrishna Mission from the district of Bakarganj in a place called Bharakati about 14 miles from the district headquarters and from one or two villages round about and within a radius of three miles from the Brahmanbaria subdivision of the Tippera district. There can be no doubt that these cases are authentic cases and I have reasons to believe that these cases are not very rare. It must therefore be admitted on all hands that the situation is certainly a very grave one and calls for some immediate help in order that relief may be granted to the people. The only question to be considered is one of ways and means. My resolution suggests that exports should be controlled and that greater facility should be given to imports, and I also suggested that Government might take such other steps as may be thought proper. My hon'ble friend, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, has suggested the formation of a committee. I did not myself think that a committee should be formed. I am rather inclined to think that something should be done immediately and that deliberations of committees only entail delay. But if a committee be formed for taking immediate steps I would not object to the formation of a committee in view of the fact that the deliberation of the committee might enable us to co-ordinate the different points of view. Before I sit down I wish to say just a few words by way of an appeal to the Hon'ble Member who is in charge of the department. There is a well-known Sanskrit proverb that Kings see with their ears. That is to say that Kings do not generally see things with their eyes but depend on the report of others. If those who are interested would see with their own eyes the distress which is prevailing, no speech would be necessary on the part of the non-official members to convince the authorities that something should be done immediately. Every day is precious. We do not know, but there may be hundreds dying or at the point of death even at the present moment. I was told the other day of the case of a Hindu widow who would not certainly go out of her house to beg for alms. She was suffering from various diseases brought up by insufficiency of food and she was actually without food for three days. At the end of that time she was given two seers of rice but there was no body to cook for her. Some kindly persons came to cook for her and gave her a little to eat. After taking a morsel or so she became unconscious and it was with great difficulty that she regained consciousness after a full day. This is what is happening, and although I know that this problem is of an extremely complicated character involving world problems and our relation with other countries, I cannot believe that the ingenuity of the British Government cannot find a solution however difficult it may be. If Your Excellency will pardon me I consider it something of a disgrace to the British administration that famine condition should be almost normal in a land which is otherwise so bountifully supplied by nature. We know that just a century ago rice used to sell at 8 maunds per rupee. Even during the time of the much maligned Serajudoulla rice used to sell at 6 maunds per rupee. Now 150 years later, rice is selling at the rate of Rs. 10 a maund. There is no doubt that the population has increased but along with that it must be remembered that many waste lands have been brought under cultivation. There can be no doubt that there are greater facilities for exports and imports too. But there must be some cause which is to be found out and which really accounts for this extraordinary rise in prices. The price has risen sixty times and it cannot be explained by saying that the population has increased. The problem is one which demands immediate solution and the most earnest consideration and I beg that the Hon'ble member will take this matter into immediate consideration and afford relief to the famine-stricken population."

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"I am afraid I cannot contribute much to the discussion. But I may say at the outset that I do not agree with the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that Government should be pleased to appoint a committee to consider the situation. Committees would be of not much use at this moment.

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

Government cannot do much at headquarters, it has got to depend on its District Officers, and I believe they are trying to do their best. After all we must remember that the local Government has not much power to deal with the situation. Questions of fiscal policy and of export and import and of currency have to be dealt with by the Imperial Government at Simla. All that this Government can do is to inform the Supreme Government that the situation is such as may lead to something dire if it is not remedied now and it can only suggest some measures to alleviate the distress by stopping for instance, the export of food grains and of cloth and cotton. Some of us were born at a time when the theories of Cobden and of Bright had swayed the field and we were brought up in the economical theories of those days—economical theories which were preached to the world by John Stuart Mill—and I well remember that the Government of Bengal in 1865 failed in its duty by sticking to these theories. The people of certain parts of Orissa and Midnapore died like flies and I also remember that in the year 1884 the then Lieutenant-Governor of the province, Sir George Campbell, warned the Supreme Government that unless the export of rice was stopped, the Bihar famine could not be stopped. Sir George Campbell was somewhat in advance of his time and the Viceroy of the day, Lord Northbrook, a thorough free trader, would not listen to the proposal. He took measures and succeeded in alleviating the famine to an extent that not a single person was allowed to die of starvation. But this he was able to do after an expenditure of public money to a very enormous extent. Stories are told that shiploads of rice used to come up the river Hooghly from Burma to Calcutta and shiploads of rice to go down the river Hooghly to foreign countries because of the theories of the Supreme Government that we should not interfere with free trade. I believe, My Lord, that the course of events in the world has led the people in England to revise their theories and we in this country, I mean the people of this country, who have always been conservative in their ideas have found at least in some cases support from the Government, and it was much to be wished that the Government should push its ideas for the interference of free trade in preventing export for some period of the necessities of life in order to protect its own people. We have been told in the communiqué of the Government issued in the middle of June by the Supreme Government that the export of rice is being allowed to countries where there are Indians who require rice for their subsistence. But I was not aware of the fact, as was stated to-day by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Ray, that for that reason rice is being exported to Egypt and Sweden. I can well imagine that there may be a dozen or so Indian Mahomedans in Egypt, but I was trying to find out whether there are any Indians in Sweden. I recollect, however, that Mr. Har Dyal who has abandoned India and who is now issuing pamphlets and letters from Stockholm, requires rice for his sustenance. But the Indian Government is under no obligation to export rice to Sweden for his health and comfort. There may be other reasons for sending rice to Sweden and if that country requires rice for commercial purposes such as the preparation of starch or the manufacture of spirits, I think these operations might be stopped for some time, and we might put some obstruction in its way. I do not think that our international relations will be disturbed if we stop the export of rice to Sweden. We might look with an indulgent eye if the Indian Government placed an embargo on the export of rice to Egypt.

Then, as regards export of rice to other countries, I think that it is presumptuous on my part to say—and I do not pretend to have studied the subject thoroughly—but supposing we say that we require rice for our own subsistence, we cannot spare it, would it be an outrageous thing for the people of the neighbouring countries to say that we look for that food for our own subsistence and we must have it even if you have to deny it for yourselves? I do not think we should be doing a very outrageous thing if we stopped the export. We have not reached that condition of life which would make us obliged to undergo that amount of sacrifice and help our neighbouring countries. It may be that there are people of our kith and kin there, but they must look to the resources of the country where they have chosen to go.

As regards cloth I am sorry, My Lord, that I have not for the moment the figures, but they could be gathered from the last publication of the Government on the trade of India. I remember to have seen the figures, and I think the figures for 1917-18 showed that if we could only stop the export of cotton and cotton fabrics and if the port of Bombay were shut out against Japan, China and Africa, the situation would be eased in no time. Our relation with China and Japan is very friendly, but that is no reason—and I also know that Japan by her exports to this country during the time of war has helped us a great deal—why we should approach the point of nudity by exporting cotton and cotton fabrics to these countries. Indian cotton goes to Japan for manufacturing purposes, comes back here and is sold in the Calcutta market. That is a state of things which should not be encouraged and a very large proportion of mill products of Bombay go to China and Japan. If that is stopped, all the mill products will come to Bengal and it will ease the situation to some extent.”

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said —

“My Lord, I beg to associate myself with the observations of the previous speakers. The rise of the price of rice, cloth and other necessities of life is the subject of anxious thought by all who live in Bengal. I brought it to the notice of Your Excellency's Council and moved a resolution on the subject at a meeting of the Council held on the 19th February last, so I shall avoid repetition now. On that occasion Sir Henry Wheeler's reply was a lengthy one relating to the burning economical question of the day. My Lord, what is to be done now. Every body looks to Your Excellency's Government for help and intervention. At the present moment there is a cause of apprehension of actual scarcity, not to speak of famine if the prices of foodstuffs are allowed to increase so rapidly. What is the solution of the problem regarding the sufferings of the poor, specially the persons on small fixed income? Your Excellency's Government can find out the remedy if the responsible members of Your Excellency's Council are determined to take effective steps out of genuine sympathy for the people. It will be interesting to quote a few lines from the District Gazetteer of Hooghly published by the Government of Bengal. The table below will give sufficient indication of the rise in the prices of food grains, the prices being shown in seers per rupee —

Average of years	Rice (Calcutta)	Wheat	Gram
	seers.	seers	seers
1793-1813 (21 years)	... 40.00	50.50	50.50
1861-1865 (5 ”)	... 21.00	21.4	22.71
1866-1870 (5 ”)	... 20.84	21.86	17.14
1871-1875 (5 ”)	... 16.94	14.61	18.74
1876-1880 (5 ”)	... 14.40	13.89	15.43
1881-1885 (5 ”)	... 16.59	15.57	18.37
1886-1890 (5 ”)	... 14.86	13.95	17.46
1891-1895 (5 ”)	... 11.86	12.95	15.04
1896-1900 (5 ”)	... 10.95	10.97	12.59
1901-1905 (5 ”)	... 9.98	10.31	12.64
1906-1907 (2 ”)	... 7.40	8.50	9.46

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

These figures show that during the last half century prices have been enhanced three-fold. If further proof be needed of the change which has taken place, it will be sufficient to mention that after the famine of 1866, in which the average price of rice for the year rose to 12'86 seers per rupee, the Collector reported that if the price of ordinary rice were to rise as high as 13 seers per rupee soon after the winter harvest, it should be considered as a warning of approaching famine; and in his opinion, Government relief operations would become necessary when the price of inferior rice rose beyond 12 seers a rupee. During 1906 and 1907, however the average price of common rice was less than 7 or 7½ seers per rupee without any relief measures being deemed necessary.

Such interesting account may be found in every District Gazetteer of Bengal. Now, rice of coarse quality is selling 5 to 6 seers per rupee in almost all the districts of Bengal.

From the Estimates of Area and Yield of the Principal Crops in India, published by the Director of Statistics to the Government of India, I find that in Bengal as well as India area under cultivation for rice and yield of rice have been increasing since 1914-15. It is an admitted fact that export is responsible for the shortage of food-grains in Bengal. This fact was proved by Sir George Campbell, the popular Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, when famine broke out in Bengal and Bihar in 1873 and 1874 and when average price of rice was 11'82—28'55 seers per rupee.

Immediate steps should be taken by Your Excellency's Government for establishing shops for the sale of rice and other food-grains in every village or group of villages under the supervision of President of the Panchayet, members of the District or Local Boards, Circle Officers, Deputy Collectors and the Collector of the district at a cheaper price. The District Magistrates and Subdivisional Officers should be authorised by Your Excellency's Government to take over at an early date all stocks in possession of dealers who are suspected of hoarding food-grains and selling them at a prohibitive price. My Lord, there are other suggestions which have been made to this Council. Every one who is present here in this Council will have the candour to admit that the situation is very acute. My submission is that there ought to be co-operation between the people and the officials of Government. The people ought to approach the officials and submit their schemes in order to give immediate effective steps to relieve the distress which is prevailing here.

My Lord, I submit that there ought to be concrete propositions in which we can deal with this very important question in issue before the Council. If the suggestions of non-official members of Council are accepted, by the Hon'ble Executive Member of Your Excellency's Council, I believe we can be of some use to the agriculturists and middle class people. When I was coming to the Council Chamber, I was beseeched by a large number of people to represent to Your Excellency that the situation is very grave in the mofussil. I am perfectly aware of the distress and I am sure Your Excellency's Government is also aware of the fact. The question is what practical effective steps should immediately be taken for the purpose of alleviating the distress. That being so, the question, as the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has stated, can be solved by the British statesmanship and British ingenuity. My earnest appeal is that something ought to be done to relieve the present distress.

On various previous occasions, I represented to the Council about the scarcity of cloth. I wish I could give Your Excellency a vivid picture of the distress prevailing in the country. With these words, I beg to support the resolution."

Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

“Your Excellency, it is no easy task to portray in proper perspective the lights and shades of this complicated problem ; and therefore I must crave the indulgence of the Council while I sketch at some length the main factors in the problem, and indicate the direction in which, and the extent to which, a solution is possible. There is, I am afraid, some ignorance, and if I may say so, also some prejudice on the subject. Almost all the Hon'ble Members who have spoken to-day have practically forgotten that the British Empire has been involved in a colossal war. It is a problem, because the rise in the price of foodstuffs and the necessities of life generally has been the subject of serious solicitude on the part of the Provincial Governments in India and of the Imperial Government ; and further it is complicated, because there are so many factors, some fairly obvious, some not so obvious, some almost intangible, which govern the problem.

At the outset, I should like to say that Government are far from insensible, as has been suggested in certain quarters—though the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur was anxious not to associate himself with the sentiment—to the serious effect which this great rise in the price of the main staple, namely, rice in this province has had on the poorer classes generally and on those of the middle classes on small fixed incomes. Indeed, I should like to take this opportunity of expressing, on behalf of the Government of Bengal, an appreciation of the patience and philosophy with which this serious invasion in the domestic economy of the people has been faced.

In the second place, I should like to premise that Government fully realise the importance which members of this Council assign to the necessity of appealing to Government to do everything possible to alleviate preventible suffering ; and to-day no fewer than four resolutions have been tabled for the purpose of the discussion of measures for that end. The remarks of my Hon'ble colleague, Sir Henry Wheeler, at the discussion in February last have already been repeated and I need not recapitulate them. Suffice it to say that after the discussion in February last in this Council there has undoubtedly been a further increase, both sudden and serious, which cannot but result in hardship all over the province. The mean provincial rate has become higher than at any time during the war. There was also a public discussion in the Calcutta Corporation, with which Hon'ble members are fully acquainted, and as the result of which the Bengal Government were requested to address the Government of India on the difficulties of the present situation as regards the price of rice and other foodstuffs and to suggest the need of taking measures whereby the existing prices might be reduced by such means as might be devised under the circumstances. Before, however, receipt of this resolution of the Corporation, the Government of Bengal had already taken action for the purpose of representing the position in this province and for the purpose of obtaining some amelioration by the reductions in exports and by the increase in imports, which by the way forms the subject matter of the fourth of these resolutions. The Government of India, I am glad to say, met the Bengal Government in this matter, as was publicly stated in a communiqué which was issued on the 14th June. It so happened that shortly before that, the Government of India had issued another communiqué regarding another subject, namely, the export of grains from India generally to foreign countries : and there was a discussion in the Press not only on these two communiqués but on the reply of the Bengal Government to the Corporation. Possibly there has been some misapprehension in the minds of the public as to the exact purport of these various announcements.

These four resolutions refer to rice and other necessities of life and to cloth : but the most important element is the increase in the price of rice. It is the question of the day. I shall confine my remarks therefore to this subject. There is too great a tendency to consider the problem as a purely local problem. I shall explain, to the best of my ability, the various factors which govern the situation. There are no fewer than three main categories : first, universal, that is to say, world-wide factors ; secondly, all-India factors ; and thirdly, provincial or Bengal factors.

First of all, we may consider universal factors. I fully agree with the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution that it is no consolation to tell the people who have to pay more for their food that there are such ; but it would be foolish to ignore them. It was emphasised by Sir Henry Wheeler in February last that increase in price was not solely a provincial matter, nor even an all-India question. This was also emphasised in reply to a question at the meeting of the 27th March 1919. It was then said that many factors were involved, including supplies, monsoon and labour conditions, freight and tonnage. Now these factors were obviously more than local and concerned the world generally. It requires more time than I have at my disposal to deal adequately with all possible world-wide causes ; but there are two which are obvious and outside the control of this Government. There is in the first place the amount of shipping available in the world ; and secondly, the existence of credit currency throughout the world. As regards the former, the tonnage of the British Empire is one-fifth less than it was at the outbreak of war ; while much of it is still absorbed in purposes connected with the war and foreign to the ordinary course of trade in which it would be otherwise engaged. As regards the latter, a leading professor of political economy has stated publicly that the cause of the general and rapid rise of prices is the immense creation of credit currency in all the principal countries of the world through the measures taken to finance the war, now happily at an end. It may be shortly stated that the paper currency of all the belligerent countries has been increased nearly six-fold, and has been principally employed to pay for articles of an unproductive nature. Here, in India, as calculated by the professor, the increase in the circulation of currency notes has been 135 per cent. ; and the increase in the number of rupees in circulation has been 33 per cent. and if the two be taken together, the total circulation in India has increased by 53 per cent. India has been in a peculiar position during this great war. India became the cheapest source for many raw materials, while imports fell off for various obvious reasons, and the result was an enormous balance of trade in favour of India. In order to meet this enormous increase, recourse had to be had to a similar enormous expansion of paper currency. Here then we have in the inflation of currency a worldwide cause for the increase of prices, affecting the whole of India with the rest of the world. I place on the table a comparative statement showing the rise of prices of foodstuffs in all the important countries in the world.

Mr. Cumming.

I am indebted for this to the courtesy of the Director of Statistics with the Government of India. This I leave to Hon'ble members to study for themselves. The rise in India is the least in the world with the exception of South Africa and Australasia, while the rise of prices of food in Great Britain has been nearly double that in India. These are two very significant facts to be deduced from these figures. It is not my province on the present occasion to deal with the suggestions that have been made to correct the situation, whether in the nature of export duties or alteration of the rate of exchange. All I wish to maintain before this Council is that there are very serious limitations to the power of the Local Government in dealing with causes acting outside its borders.

Turning now to the second category of factors, viz., the all-India factors, we find that they centre round the monsoon conditions of the last two or three years. It is known that there was an extensive and premature cessation of last monsoon in September last; and the rice crop of India and Burma was consequently 34 per cent. less than that of the previous year, while in addition to that there was a failure of other food crops. We find that five districts in the United Provinces, four districts in the Bombay Presidency, two districts in the Central Provinces, one district in the Madras Presidency and one in Bengal are under regular famine relief; while in many other districts throughout India in which scarcity conditions prevail, assistance is being given of various kinds. In areas in which there is only one winter crop, no relief can be expected until next cold weather; while in the other districts in which a spring or autumn crop is reaped, the alleviation will not be such as to bring about instant relief. Let us hope that through Providence there will be a good monsoon this year. In our own province, the prospects of the aus or autumn paddy crop are on the whole fair. There are however tracts in India in which, but for outside assistance from other provinces more fortunately situated, the people would starve; for it is not only a matter of giving the people money wherewithal to purchase food, but it is also necessary to provide food for them to purchase. We have on the western edge of Bengal, the province of Bihar and Orissa, in which the failure of the winter crop was very much more severe than in Bengal; the crop was only half of the previous year; and, unless the people of Bihar receive foodstuffs from without, their position will be critical. On the other side, we have Assam; and the Assam Administration has recently proposed to make a working arrangement with this Government regarding the conditions under which supplies from Assam may enter Bengal. That province is also in a difficult situation, though its prices are lower than in Bengal; and it is relevant to note, when the suggestion is offered, that Bengal should refuse to export to other provinces, that Assam too is apprehensive as to the quantities of paddy which Bengal is taking from it. Again, rice is not the only food-grain, and for other food-grains Bengal is largely dependent on outside, namely, from the up-country districts. If Bengal were to be permitted to adopt the policy of the absolute prohibition of export outside its limits, it is obvious that other provinces would speedily seek to retaliate. Suppose we stopped the export of rice to Bombay, Bombay might easily refuse to give us any cotton. What would Hon'ble Members then say?

In November last year, an attempt was made to obtain an approximation of the extent to which the different provinces of India were deficit or surplus provinces. From that examination, one factor stood forth that, notwithstanding the bad harvest of 1918-19, Bengal and Burma would have to be considered as surplus provinces. Hon'ble Members of Council are aware that a Food-stuffs Commissioner for all-India was appointed in October last year. His control covers wheat, rice and gram. His representatives are the Directors of Civil Supplies in all the provinces. As stated in the recent communiqué of the Bengal Government the general principle which is being adopted is that supplies of rice are being directed from the provinces in which stocks are still available to those provinces in which, but for outside help, actual shortage of food is feared. This, therefore, must be remembered that the problem of food and of prices is an all-India problem which must be dealt with, if at all, by means of central control. It should not be overlooked that even as regards prices, generally speaking, Bengal is not so badly off as Bihar, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces or Bombay, that is to say, the price in the dearest district in Bengal is still less than that in the dearest district in any of these four provinces.

Another consideration in connection with all-India factors is the amount of Indian food-stuffs exported out of the whole country. It is not true, as is alleged, that there has been a recent increase. On that point, the actual facts as recently stated by the Government of India—though the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray refuses to accept this statement—may be repeated, namely, that since December last all exports of food supplies are prohibited except under license, and then only in respect of shipment to certain countries with a considerable Indian population which in the past have depended on India as the nearest source of supply. I shall deal with the matter of exports in greater detail when discussing local, that is to say, Bengal factors, which I shall now proceed to do. Moreover, the absolute total shows a great decrease: in April 1919 the total export was one-fifth of that in April 1918.

In the case of Bengal, it should be re-emphasised that the world-wide and all-India factors still hold good; but there are obviously other factors of local importance. The first is regarding the actual monsoon conditions of the last two years. In 1917, the monsoon was favourable and it resulted in one of the finest rice crops in Bengal on record. This has been of inestimable advantage in compensating for the failure of the following year. The cheap rice of 1917 was of great assistance to the poorer classes who live on their earnings; but obviously it was of corresponding disadvantage to the agriculturists who received less money for their produce. Then followed 1918, when, as I have stated, Bengal participated in the precipitate failure of the monsoon. The final forecast of the rice crop of 1918-19 was 72 per cent. that is to say hardly three-fourths of the normal crop, and at the nearest approximation may be taken as 19 crores of maunds. In November 1918 orders were issued to ascertain by means of a census what was the stock of rice available in the province, including unhusked paddy which was converted into rice at the rate of 62½ per cent. That census gave Government some material; but as it was the first of its kind, difficulties were encountered and some of the district estimates were patently incorrect. They showed for instance in one district that it had not enough for a week's consumption; and, as that district is not yet starving, there was an obviously something wrong somewhere, either on the part of the dealers who furnished the information or in the subsequent collation of the figures. A further census was ordered at the end of May last to be taken on the 15th June. The figures are at present under scrutiny; but as far as they have been examined they give reasonable grounds for holding that there is not yet a provincial shortage in Bengal. Now, it is not true, as has been asserted, that in Bengal in normal years there is a deficit. There is a considerable, though not a very great, surplus in normal years.

Further local factors are exports from and imports into the province. Now the Bengal Government have by means of a continuous close survey over all the relevant features of a constantly changing situation kept the Government of India regularly informed; but have recognised that the Government of India were in a much better position to judge of the respective needs of all the provinces than the local Governments. When the time seemed ripe, a representation was made to the Government of India regarding the allotments for exports of rice from Bengal, both to other provinces in India and overseas and regarding the imports from Burma. As a result of this representation, the Government of India have reviewed the situation and have materially decreased the monthly allotment made for exports of rice by rail to other provinces. An allotment of Burma rice was made to Bengal via Calcutta, while arrangements were made for the import of rice from Akyab in Burma to Chittagong in Eastern Bengal for the use of Eastern Bengal and Assam. The general effect of the control of supplies has been the stabilising of prices; and, indeed, the Bengal Government have always realised that there was a better chance of stabilisation if there was a sufficient fluidity in the movement of stocks whether inside or outside the province. The advent of the monsoon, the census of stocks and the recent reductions in exports have tended to check the rise in prices. In this week's crop report, Hon'ble Members will find it stated that the average price of common rice is now showing a slight tendency to fall. At the same time, one must never lose sight of the fact that supplies alone are not the ultimate cause of the prices now prevailing, although obviously they are a factor of great importance.

Before passing on from this head and dealing with other measures of relief within the province that have been either adopted or suggested, I should like to controvert certain allegations that have been made as to the prevailing factors. First of all, it has been alleged that the rice crop in Burma this year was a bumper one. This unfortunately is not true. Far from it being a bumper crop, the average outturn of the whole province was 88 per cent. of the normal, as against 95 per cent. in the previous year; and the surplus available for export was less than 2 million tons of clean rice. This is the surplus for which the greater part of India has been clamouring.

The next allegation is that there has been an improper diversion from Bengal of rice to foreign countries by sea. It is true that there has been an increase in export by sea to Madras since January last, but this has been to feed Indian fellow subjects in another province. As this was sea-export, it was not covered by the licenses issued regarding railway transport. These unlicensed exports by sea are however being brought under control. But, as regards exports to other countries overseas, the most important recipient is Ceylon, which usually obtains its rice from the southern districts of Madras; but at present that Presidency is not in a position to supply its own requirements, still less to meet those of others. Even in Ceylon, notwithstanding this assistance, the shortage of rice is creating an anxious situation. After that, the exports from Bengal are to colonies of Indians in Natal, Mauritius, the Red Sea and the West Indies; the volume of these exports has been carefully rationed; and the grand total in 1918-19 was less than half of what the normal annual export to such foreign countries was before the war. It is not true, as has been alleged, that Bengal is improperly diverting its food-stuffs for purposes other than human consumption. I mention this because there have been several assertions to the contrary, and indeed there has been a ridiculous rumour in the Mymensingh district that 6 crores of maunds of rice have been sent to Europe for the manufacture of alcohol.

A further allegation has been made that no Burma rice has been allowed to be consumed in Bengal. It is not quite clear what inference is sought to be drawn from this allegation. It is not unreasonable to imagine that the innuendo is that Bengal is being unfairly treated. Now, it is quite correct that there are imports of rice from Rangoon into Calcutta which are reserved for other provinces. Those allotments have, however, been made after careful consideration. It is, however, incorrect to allege that no Burma rice has come into Bengal for purely Bengal consumption. On the contrary, there has been a steady increase in imports from Akyab into Chittagong. The total in February was double that of January; in April three-fold that of January and in May fourteen-fold that of January. The question of further imports into Chittagong from other ports in Burma is also under consideration.

Mr. Cumming.

There are other allegations which have been made which, if I had time, I should be glad to refute; but let it suffice on the present occasion to deal with these three instances of inaccuracy.

Let us now consider, in view of these factors, universal, all-India and local, what Government should endeavour to do to maintain prices so far as these are governed by supply. It is the accepted duty of Government to protect the people within the limit of their capacity. In India, there is not only an acceptance of official control but a desire for the same. If that be conceded, then what policy should Government adopt? There are practically only two alternatives—one alternative is to allow one province to starve and another province to continue in tolerable comfort; and the other alternative is to make the best use of the food available for the greatest good of the greatest number. However some people may write or think about stopping all exports from Bengal, I do not believe that any person who is aware of the facts and has examined them with any sense of responsibility would hesitate for a moment between the two alternatives. It is the second alternative which the Government of Bengal have deliberately adopted, and the Bengal Government have, as far as possible, while safeguarding the interests of the province, been loyal to the policy of the Supreme Government.

There are however certain devices which have been suggested in addition to an equitable division of the supplies available. The one which is mentioned first of all by some advisers is the fixation of prices for the different kinds of rice. It sounds so easy, and yet it is so supremely difficult to enforce, unless the source of supply is also subject to control. Now, this is the case in the matter of Burma rice imported into Calcutta under license. The supply is subject to control and such rice can only be sold subject to certain maximum wholesale rates; otherwise, the importers will not be allowed to get ships to bring the rice here; and steps have also been taken to regularise the retail rates. In this manner, one of the proposals about the control of Burma rice made this morning has been met. On the other hand, the case of Bengal rice is entirely different; chiefly because it is really impracticable to control the source of supply. Indeed, I may say that, whatever success may have been achieved elsewhere in small areas with specific articles of food, both the Local Government and the Government of India are satisfied that the fixing of prices for all kinds of food stuffs in Bengal, even if resort were had to the rules under the Defence of India Act, is not practical politics.

Another device (and it is a measure of self-help which the Bengal Government welcome, just as the Bombay Government have done lately, and would gladly see extended up to the limit to which Government can obtain an allotment of Burma rice for Bengal) is one which has been adopted in other provinces, namely, that local bodies, such as District Boards and Municipalities, should obtain supplies of the cheaper Burma rice, and thereby cause grain to be sold in what are known as cheap grain shops. The Director of Civil Supplies has been in consultation with the District Officers regarding the requirements of different bodies. So far only a few local bodies have asked to be supplied with comparatively small amounts.

Furthermore, in the city of Calcutta, this method has been adopted by the Corporation; and six shops for the sale of Burma rice were opened on the 17th June. The daily sales have averaged the comparatively small total of 72 maunds; but it must be noted that all the shop expenses are borne by the merchants who forego all profit.

Mr. Cumming.

The Darjeeling Planters have acted co-operatively and obtained, on behalf of their large immigrant coolie population, an allotment from the Director of Civil Supplies of Burma rice. The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin did not draw the attention of the Council to this fact. But, as regards the incident to which he did draw attention, it is a matter under the jurisdiction of the Bihar and Orissa Government which deals with the district of Purneah where this incident took place. The Collector of Bankura, where famine has been declared, procured an allotment for his district. It is urged that Burma rice should still be freely imported into Bengal. It is, however, a significant fact that, when there is, as there is at present, a considerable supply of Burma rice in Calcutta, no one in Bengal is prepared to take it up in any appreciable quantity because the demand is so weak. The reason why Bengal rice-eaters have an objection to consuming Burma rice is known better to the Indian members of this Council than to one who is not an Indian by race.

The Foodstuffs Commissioner, at the special request of this Government, has been endeavouring to meet a point which was raised this morning, namely, to prevent the artificial inflation of the price of Bengal rice through unnecessary competition amongst upcountry buyers from other provinces.

Then, as regards the question of freight from Rangoon, about which comments have been made in the Press, there have been already two reductions since the freight was first fixed, the last being an equivalent of 2 annas per maund on the cost price landed in Bengal; and indeed the Rangoon-Calcutta freights compare very favourably with the rates at present prevailing throughout the world.

Finally, in order to meet to some extent the increased cost of living, Government have increased the emoluments of the lower-paid among its own servants; both in the case of menials, and, as stated in a communiqué issued within the last few days, in the case of Government servants of the lower ranks.

These, then, are various forms of action which have been taken, or are being taken, to check the rise in the price of rice and to alleviate distress.

The present position appears to be that there is still a supply of rice in Bengal sufficient to carry on until the next harvest, even after giving reasonable support to the less favoured provinces. Moreover, the high prices are not altogether an unmixed evil; for some portion of the increase has been received by the agriculturists; and later reports show that the agriculturists are alive to this advantage in disposing of their stocks at their appreciated prices. That being so, I would ask the people not to give way to panic; but, on the other hand, it stands to reason that Government will not tolerate in special circumstances like the present anything like deliberate holding up of supplies for the purpose of cornering the market; and the officers of Government will not hesitate to take action if such instances are disclosed. Both in the city of Bombay and in certain districts of Bihar and Orissa, powers have been taken under Ordinance IX of 1914 to seize stocks.

I have left to the last the suggestion of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that a Committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to consider the remedial measures already taken or in contemplation by Government, and to devise what further steps, if any, should be taken to alleviate the present distress. I notice with surprise that only one Hon'ble Member wholeheartedly supported this motion. The Hon'ble mover no doubt thinks that his proposal would allay public feeling in the matter. I can say personally that I am always accessible to any member of the public in this matter and prepared to discuss matters and receive suggestions. But I venture to suggest to the Hon'ble Member that as long as the present organisation under the Foodstuffs Commissioner exists, it is not possible to act otherwise than through those officers who are his representatives in the provinces, namely, the Directors of Civil Supplies. That being so, I also suggest to the Members of the Council that there is little that a committee of the nature proposed could ascertain in the way of facts beyond the salient facts which I have endeavoured to describe. As regards policy, it is, as I have stated, a matter for the Imperial Government ; but I also say deliberately that the local Director of Civil Supplies is, in his capacity as executant of that policy, at present in close touch with the importing and distributing agencies of the trade.

This, My Lord, is the attitude of Government. They are not insensible to the sufferings of their lieges, and appreciate the seriousness of the situation. They are not omnipotent, but they have taken and will continue to take such action as lies within the power of a provincial Government to deal with the situation, so many of the ingredients of which are entirely beyond their control. In the circumstances, Government are not prepared to accept the first resolution ; but on the definite understanding that the action of Government is limited by the various extra-provincial factors which I have endeavoured to narrate and also by the execution of the policy of the Government of India the Local Government will accept the second, third and fourth resolutions.

My Lord, I have finished. I apologise for having taken so much time of this Council, but the fact that no fewer than four resolutions were the subject of reply is my excuse."

[The Council was at this stage adjourned for lunch.]

[The Council re-assembled after lunch.]

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I am much obliged to the Hon'ble Member for his giving so much valuable information on the subject. That the subject is agitating the public mind is evidenced from the fact that a number of resolutions on the same question appear in the agenda paper and therefore the reply that has been given to us and the information that has been supplied to us will be very interesting to the public at large.

I will confine myself to the resolution which I have moved. My Lord, I do not know whether I have made myself perfectly clear. I recognise that Government are in their own way doing everything that they possibly could do under the circumstances, but there is an impression abroad and it is confirmed by the observations made here by some of the Members of the Council that more might be done in this direction and that the various suggestions which are made by the outside public from time to time should be more fully considered by Government. My object in moving for an advisory committee is not to hamper the Government or to restrict their action in any way, but as I said to establish a sort of common ground where the public might meet the Government and exchange their views on the subject. It will be purely an advisory committee and if the suggestion seems to be practicable I think the Government may very well consider whether it harmonises with the principle laid down by the Government of India and, if necessary, to address the Government of India on the subject for the modification of their instructions. It is with this view that my resolution has been moved. The Hon'ble Member has said that he is always accessible and that anybody may approach him and speak to him on the subject. We all know that the Government from the Governor downwards is accessible to the public, but that is not the point. What I want is that Government should discuss this subject with the representatives of the public. Discussion by an individual officer with an individual member of the public is quite a different thing. Various suggestions have been made by the various members of the Council, but I venture to think that it will shorten discussion if we have a sort of a committee appointed to discuss the whole matter with Government. Otherwise I am afraid that other suggestions will be made in other meetings of Council and the discussion will never cease, whereas if a committee is appointed the work will be much better done and the various suggestions could be considered. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has referred to several points to one or two of which I shall make a reference. It has been stated that we are better off here than the people in the other parts of the world and that we are importing rice from another province, namely, Burma. At a Corporation debate it was stated that the freight from Burma is still very high and it can conveniently be reduced. If this is done, rice will be sold at a much cheaper rate than it is sold now. Moreover it is not understood why Burma rice should be selling somewhere between Rs. 6-8 and Rs. 7 in Calcutta whereas it is selling at Rs. 5-11 in Bombay. There is another point in regard to this which I should like to mention and which has already been mentioned in Capital. At present the entire carrying business from Rangoon to India is done by the British India Steam Navigation Company. No other company is allowed to do the carrying except the Nippon Yusen Kaisha which is so allowed because it has connection with the British India Steam Navigation Company. This Company alone should not be allowed to make good war losses at the expense of the Indian poor. If other companies were allowed it would perhaps have the effect of lowering the freight and with it the price of rice. I have been specially asked by a mercantile gentleman of Bombay to draw the attention of the Council to it. Something should be done in regard to it. I quite recognise the force of the point that if we stop exports the other provinces might also follow suit. That is not of course the policy which has hitherto been followed. When Madras wanted rice we gave them and when Bengal wanted rice Burma supplied. What I mean is this—why export rice to places where there are no Indian population and where it is not wanted for the purpose of food. Why send rice to Sweden where there is no colony of Indians? Why export rice to other places where it is used for the manufacture of alcohol, etc.? Government are in possession of more facts than we are, and it is for this purpose that we want an informal discussion in a committee. There is a growing volume of public opinion about the matter and that is why I have suggested the formation of an advisory committee, which is not, I may say, my own suggestion, but a suggestion made by a European member in the Corporation."

Resolution No. 15 was then put and lost.

The following three resolutions standing in the names of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, respectively, were then put and agreed to :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that early steps be taken by the Government for the reduction of the high prices of rice and other necessary articles of food, and also of cloth, in Bengal."

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in view of the fact that there is a scarcity of food grains in the Burdwan division and that the prices of foodstuffs and other necessary commodities of life have risen abnormally high, steps be taken for the relief of the distress of the people, particularly of the poorer classes in rural areas."

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that measures be taken at once by the Government to bring down the prices of rice and other necessities of life to normal rates, either by controlling exports or facilitating imports, or by such other means as may appear to the Government to be fit and proper."

Babu S. N. Ray.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government be pleased to take up the question of the improvement of the pay and prospects and terms and conditions of service of the Subordinate Civil (Executive) Service in Bengal as early as may be practicable.

He said :—

“I am certain nobody knows better than the Government of the good work efficiently done by the members of the Subordinate Civil Service inasmuch as these public servants work direct under what I may term the executive Government of the country. Formerly the members of this service were generally recruited from those who were not successful in securing a place among those who were successful in the competitive examination for the Provincial Executive Service. For some time past, however, the matter of recruitment for the service has quite changed and we now have the same sort of test for both the services, only those who are in a position to canvass hard can enter the Provincial Executive Services whereas those who are not in a position to do so have to rest satisfied with appointment in the Subordinate Civil Service. It not unfrequently happens that better qualified men are nominated by Government for the Subordinate Civil Service.

I need hardly say that in education, social position and other qualifications they are now not inferior to those who are fortunate enough to be nominated for the other service. Formerly the test before and after appointment was not the same. Now they have to undergo the same examination before and after appointment and have to perform almost the same work whether as Judicial or as Revenue officers. I know a sub-deputy collector as land acquisition deputy collector had to do the same work as a deputy collector on a pay of Rs. 700 or 800. I need hardly say that the distinction between the two services is at the present moment only as regards their pay and prospects. A sub-deputy collector reaches his first grade of Rs. 250 ordinarily in 15 or 16 years at least, that is, when he passes his 40th year and is considered not legible for promotion. The age limit bars the way to further promotion. Even when he is promoted to the Provincial Service his prospects do not generally appreciably improve, the pay of the 1st grade sub-deputy collectors being Rs. 250, the pay of the last grade of deputy collectors is Rs. 250. A first grade sub-deputy collector when he is appointed in the Provincial Service becomes a probationary deputy collector and is put at the bottom of the list of probationary officers. It takes a good long time for him to rise to the grade of Rs. 300. There are very few who can hope to rise to the grade of Rs. 400.

As a result of keeping the two services separate Government have been obliged to take recourse to certain anomalous procedure. Take for instance, a sub-deputy collector is liable to be dismissed even without any formal judicial or departmental enquiry. A sub-deputy collector is even not a gazetted officer. This fact affects a sub-deputy collector in regard to his travelling, halting and other allowances as well as his leave and pension. But he has all the same to perform all the duties of a gazetted officer.

I need hardly say and it is a well known fact that the pay of sub-deputy collectors is quite inadequate. A police inspector begins with a pay of Rs. 150, an excise inspector on Rs. 125. They get special rate of travelling allowance, whereas these hardworked officers of Government have to begin with a pay of Rs. 100.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

It is unnecessary for me to quote at length the large number of opinions given on this service by some of the distinguished members of the Indian Civil Service. The Hon'ble Mr. Stephenson stated before the Public Services Commission: 'The class of men who enters the Subordinate Service differs very little from the Provincial Service recruits.' Sir William Duke said 'I admit the officers appointed in recent years have very often been of much the same class as those who entered the Provincial Service.'

The Public Services Commission did not consider the Subordinate Service as it was not within the scope of their enquiry. They however recommended that members 'of services recruited from the ordinary graduate class' should start on an initial pay of Rs. 250 which in 15 years would rise to Rs. 450 by triennial increments of Rs. 40 after which it would rise to Rs. 500 by a triennial increment of Rs. 50 beyond which there would be selection grades and this is the words of one of the members of the Commission 'should be regulated as the minimum which shall be granted'. In the Report on the Indian Constitutional Reforms we find the following recommendation:—

'Again a number of grades do not now receive provincial status although their officers are recruited on uniform qualifications for the whole province and may be liable for service in any part of the province. From this point of view, such classes as the naib tahsildar (the same as sub-deputy collectors), the sub-assistant surgeon, and the like, may be conveniently placed ad hoc in the provincial division.'

I understand recently a representation has been submitted to Your Lordship's Government by some sub-deputy collectors. I need hardly say that the representation will be duly considered on its merits. For my part I think it is time that the Provincial Executive Service and the Subordinate Executive Service should be amalgamated. The Government should at least generously consider the position of these worthy officers whose claims are in no way inferior to the higher public servants. When they perform the same duties as those who enjoy higher emoluments it is but just, reasonable and proper that the Government should as regards pay and prospects treat them with the same even hand it has always distinguished the British Government in their treatment of those who serve the public cause with heart and soul."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said:—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I cannot support the resolution which has just been moved by my friend the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, not because I do not sympathise with the sub-deputy collectors who are a set of hard-worked officers; but the reason why I oppose this resolution is that the time is not opportune to consider the question of the pay and prospects of the Subordinate Service individually as a class only, because great administrative changes are imminent and the question of the pay and prospects of the various services will be considered. There are other classes of public servants of the same category as the sub-deputy collectors, I mean the excise inspectors and other subordinate officers of Government. If any class of public servants require any amelioration in their condition, in my humble opinion it is the ministerial officers of the Collectors' and Magistrates' offices and of the District Courts in the mofussil, who are so ill paid that they find it extremely difficult to make their both ends meet. When the whole matter of public services will be considered as a general question, it is not fair to say that the question of the pay and prospects of sub-deputy collectors should be taken up separately. I agree however with the hon'ble mover that, as the sub-deputy collectors do the same class of work as deputy collectors, there should be only one class of officers, but as long as they are in the Subordinate Service their case should be taken up together with that of other services. In my humble opinion, however, the case of the ministerial officers should be taken up before the case of the Subordinate Service is taken up."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I do not understand why this resolution is opposed by my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem. It is a very anomalous thing that although these officers are made to do the same kind of work, there should be any distinction between the two services. The lowness of pay has a very demoralising effect upon the service. The sub-deputy collectors on Rs. 100 have to maintain the dignity of a hakim ; and it can be easily imagined that it is an utter impossibility. In point of education, social status, and departmental examination, there is no distinction ; but distinction is only in the pay and prospects. They begin on Rs. 100 and rise up to Rs. 250 ; and that is very inadequate in view of the fact that they are made to do the same kind of work as the deputy collectors who begin with an initial pay of Rs. 250. It is urged by my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, that the distinction should be abolished and that there should be the same scale of pay and the same prospects ; but as long as they are in the Subordinate Service their case should not be considered separately. I fail to understand the sequence of their observation. But I heartily support the resolution and urge that the question should be taken up as early as possible. I may submit that before the Public Services Commission, several members of the Indian Civil Service urged that there should not be any distinction between the two services and that there should be the same kind of pay and prospects for the Subordinate and Provincial Services as a whole. That is a very reasonable view, and when the case of other services, or rather the case of persons for whom there is not so much urgency is considered, I do not see any reason why the case of these hard-working officers should not be taken up as early as possible. With these observations, I join in supporting this resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I beg to support this resolution. At the last Dacca session, the matter was the subject-matter of discussion ; and I do not like to trouble the Council by repeating the arguments which I then advanced. In educational qualifications and in responsibility, the sub-deputy collectors are of the same status as the Deputy Collectors and I cannot persuade myself as to why there should be any difference between these two classes. My humble submission to the Council is that the Provincial Service and the Subordinate Services should be amalgamated into one."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"My Lord, all that this resolution asks us to do is to take up, as early as may be practicable, the question of the improvement of the pay and prospects and terms and conditions of service of the Subordinate Civil Service. That Government is quite prepared to undertake to do ; and, indeed, as I shall show, quite apart from this resolution, action of this kind will in any case be forced upon us at an early date. I should have been very glad this hot afternoon if I could sit down after merely undertaking to accept the resolution on behalf of Government, but in the course of the discussion to-day and in the representations which have been referred to in this discussion, certain claims have been put forward on behalf of the Subordinate Civil

Mr. Kerr.

Service. I might call them extravagant claims ; at any rate, they are claims which Government could not accept without qualification. It would only give rise to false hopes, if I passed these claims by without saying anything about them, and I will, therefore, give as briefly as possible, a history of the service and an account of the functions which it is called upon to perform.

The Subordinate Civil Service was created in 1873 in order to perform revenue and executive work which had previously been done expensively and not always efficiently by temporary establishments. Its members were to be employed mainly on out-door duties in the interior of the districts as executive agents to help District and Subdivisional Officers in administering the various departments under their charge. It was laid down that they should only be vested sparingly with magisterial powers. In 1892, nearly 20 years later in Sir Charles Elliot's time, the position was reconsidered. It was found that, owing to force of circumstances and the exigencies of the administration, it had been necessary to vest these officers with minor magisterial powers, that is the powers of Magistrates of the second and third class, and it was decided that it was good policy to utilise these officers on magisterial work of this kind. It was decided that they should constitute a class similar in powers and responsibility to deputy collectors but inferior in dignity. Then, in 1902, when a reorganisation of the service took place, a further statement was made. It was said that in subdivisions sub-deputy collectors were wanted to relieve the Subdivisional Officers of treasury and office routine, petty cases and local enquiries. They had come to be regarded to a great extent as second officers in subdivisions, and their employment in a heavy subdivision did much to stave off the necessity of stationing there a second officer of the superior service. These remarks are still true to-day except for some slight development in the matter of magisterial powers which has taken place during the last 8 or 9 years. In 1911, Government decided to vest a limited number of sub-deputy collectors with first class powers, who from their standing and ability were likely to be promoted within two or three years to the rank of deputy collectors. In 1916, owing to the absence on war service of a number of the members of the Indian Civil Service and also of the Provincial Service, Government agreed to relax these restrictions temporarily, and vested a limited number of sub-deputy collectors with first class powers, who had exercised second class powers for some time and had shown themselves thoroughly fit for higher powers. This is a very brief and condensed account of the history of the service, but it serves to explain the nature of the duties on which Government decided to employ these officers and on which they are still employed. I have only to add that in the early days of the service, sub-deputy collectors like deputy collectors, were recruited mainly by competitive examination. In 1905, this examination was abolished, and the possession of an University degree was made an indispensable qualification for both services. Since 1892 sub-deputy collectors have had to pass the same departmental examination as the deputy collectors. It must, therefore, be admitted that the claim made to-day and elsewhere that these officers are very much of the same class, and are drawn from the same rank of society and possess the same educational qualifications as deputy collectors, has some force. The other claim, however, that these officers are employed on similar duties cannot be accepted without very considerable qualification. Even if it could, there is one general consideration which must not be overlooked. We have to look to the practical aspect of the case. It does not seem to me that the fact that we can get for the Subordinate Service officers of the same rank, of the same social standing and possessing the same educational qualifications as deputy collectors can be accepted as a conclusive argument for levelling up the lower service to the same standard of pay and prospects as the higher. It might equally well be argued that the pay of the superior service is unnecessarily high ; and from the purely economic point of view of supply and demand, there is no doubt that such a view could be theoretically justified in this province. There are four main services in this province for which the graduate qualification is prescribed, namely, the Provincial Executive Service, the Provincial Police Service, the Excise Department and the Subordinate Civil Service; of these, the Subordinate Civil Service, I need hardly say, is the least well-paid. For all these four services, there are about 30 to 40 posts to fill up every year; and we have about 400 to 500 candidates asking for posts in these services. During the last four years it has been my business to go through the papers of these young men, and I have interviewed most of them personally; I have no hesitation in saying that the great majority of them would be quite willing to take the Subordinate Service if they could get nothing better. They are in fact willing to take service in posts offering much worse prospects than even the Subordinate Service. Amongst the settlement kanungos, who are temporary employés, with no pensionary prospects, nearly half at present consist of graduates, and the proportion of graduates is rising. In the Subordinate Police Service during the last three years, on an average, more than 50 graduates have been appointed each year to posts as sub-inspectors of police. I quite realise that the economic consideration is not the only one which has to be taken into account. Government cannot afford to employ sweated labour in the public service, particularly in the higher ranks. But, at the same time, the economic consideration is an important one and cannot be disregarded. Facts being as they are, so long as we can get a plentiful supply of qualified candidates for posts as sub-deputy collectors on the existing terms, some regard must be paid to the ever increasing calls on the provincial finances in dealing with demands for increase of pay.

I now turn to the old argument which has been used that the work of the Subordinate Service and the Provincial Service is practically identical, and in regard to this a few hard facts will be more useful than any general argument. At the present moment, our present cadre of sub-deputy collectors consists of 221 officers, excluding the probationers who were recruited the other day to fill posts as circle officers. Out of these 221 officers, there are 95 employed on general duty; and of these 33 are employed at district headquarters and 62 at subdivisions. The 33 employed at headquarters include some 26 officers who are vested with first class magisterial powers under the orders issued in 1916, which I have already mentioned, and I admit that these officers do very much the same work as the ordinary deputy collectors at headquarters; but the position with regard to the 62 officers in subdivisions is very different; they are definitely in a position of subordination to the Subdivisional Officer who is usually a deputy collector or a young civilian; the Subdivisional Officer disposes of all the important work leaving only minor cases for his sub-deputy collector. The sub-deputy collector is usually also employed on sub-treasury and routine work and performs minor and miscellaneous functions. Out of these 95 officers, 62 are therefore employed definitely on work which is of an inferior and less responsible nature than that of the ordinary deputy collector. Then, we have 46 officers employed on settlement work. It was my good fortune to serve in the Settlement Department myself for nearly 7 years, and I should be the last person to under-rate the value of the good work which sub-deputy collectors do in the Settlement Department. I learnt the elements of settlement work myself from a sub-deputy collector. At the same time, even in the Settlement Department, these sub-deputy collectors are not employed on superior posts of supervision and control which are held by deputy collectors and junior civilians. Then, again, there are the 22 sub-deputy collectors employed in Government and Wards Estates, and speaking generally they are employed in the smaller and less important estates while the more important and bigger estates are held by deputy collectors and other officers. Forty of the existing sub-deputy collectors are employed as circle officers; these are new posts in which deputy collectors are never employed, and I do not expect they ever will be employed. In this connection, it is important to note that we have recently received sanction to recruit 234 more sub-deputy collectors who will eventually be employed as circle officers under the Village Self-Government Act which was passed in the Council the other day. I say, therefore, that in existing circumstances the number of sub-deputy collectors who are employed on work which could be described as in any way approaching in importance and responsibility to that of deputy collectors is very small, probably not more than 30 or 40 out of the existing cadre of sub-deputy collectors, and it will be a much smaller proportion when the 200 new circle officers' posts are added.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Roy said a good deal about the disabilities of sub-deputy collectors. I admit that they are in the matter of pay not on the same footing as the deputy collectors, but I think the Hon'ble Member went beyond the mark in suggesting—and I think he did—that sub-deputy collectors are liable to be dismissed without enquiry; that is most emphatically not the case. A sub-deputy collector cannot be dismissed except under the orders of Government, and under the rules which apply to all officers a full enquiry must be made and charges framed and the officer afforded the fullest opportunity of explaining his case before any punishment can be inflicted on him. So far as that particular disability is concerned, I think the Council will agree that there is not very much in it.

As I have stated, on financial and practical grounds, I cannot hold out any hopes that the Provincial and Subordinate Services will be amalgamated but as I began by saying, Government are perfectly prepared to do what the resolution asks and to take into consideration the improvement of the pay and prospects of the Subordinate Service. The question of promotion from the Subordinate Service to the Provincial Service is already under the consideration of Government in connection with the resolution which we issued about the Provincial Service on the 25th March last. The replies to that resolution have come in and the case will shortly be submitted to Government. That is one matter which will be taken up almost immediately. The next point is that the increase in the cadre of sub-deputy collectors, owing to the creation of the new posts of circle officers, will necessitate an examination of the whole grading of the Subordinate Service; if we recruit a considerable number of these officers in the next 5 or 7 years there will be a hopeless block in promotion unless we alter the grading. Personally I am inclined to think that a time scale will be needed, but that is a matter which Government has not yet considered. A third point is a question, which has been kept pending for some time till after the end of the war and the report of the Public Services Commission regarding the adequacy of the existing cadre of the Provincial Service for the work it has been doing. During the war, the cadre of the Provincial Civil Service was quite inadequate, and the mere fact that so many sub-deputy collectors had to be vested with first class powers is a sufficient proof of that. Whether the cadre will be adequate when normal conditions are restored, is a matter on which I should hesitate to express an opinion at present. At any rate, the matter has got to be examined, and this examination may suggest some means of differentiating between the Provincial and Subordinate Services on more satisfactory lines than exist at present. Government are therefore prepared to take this question of the Subordinate Service into consideration; but I must warn the Council that it is impossible to promise any definite date at present. The case must wait until the case of the Provincial Service is decided, and the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has pointed out some other difficulties which will also require consideration in this connection. It must therefore be clearly understood that Government reserve a free hand as to the changes which will be adopted and the time when they will be adopted. Subject to these remarks, Government are prepared to accept the resolution."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I have to say a few words because from the tenour of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr's reply I find that Government are prepared to accept partially my resolution.

My friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has said that the time is not opportune for moving this resolution : but I think that this is exactly the time when I ought to bring forward this resolution, because the Government is now considering the question of improving the pay and prospects of the Judicial Service, the pay and prospects of the Police Service and of other services.

From the observations of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, it appears that he admits that the members of the Subordinate Service possess the same educational qualifications and are drawn from the same status of society. It has been said that recruitment to this service is regulated by the law of supply and demand. That is so. It has also been said in considering the pay and prospects of the members of the Subordinate Civil Service we must also take into consideration the economic aspect of the case which cannot be disregarded. But I think Government should also take into consideration the fact as mentioned by my Hon'ble friend, Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, that the lowness of pay has a demoralising effect. If you give a man good pay of course he is sure to work with contentment and you will get very good work from him. But if a man be really a competent man and has got the same educational qualifications as the others he naturally aspires to have the same status in the service as his brother officers. Government should also take into consideration that the cost of living has increased immensely of late and that a gentleman who could well afford to live on Rs. 100 a month cannot now live on less than Rs. 150 a month at least. So it is time that Government should consider all these matters and the sooner the claims of the members of the Subordinate Civil Service are considered by Your Excellency's Government the better.”

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Police Courts in Calcutta be located in one and the same building in some central part in the city.

He said :—

“ My Lord, this is the second occasion on which I have ventured to bring forward this proposal for the location of the Police Courts in one central part and building in the city. On the last occasion I was assured by Mr. Lyon speaking on behalf of Government that this system of holding the Police Courts in different parts of the city was more or less of an experimental character and that Government must abide by the result of that experiment. Four years have elapsed since then and we do not find any indication on the part of Government to state the result of the experiment as to whether it has been successful or otherwise. So far as the public are concerned I can assure Your Excellency's Government that there is still the same feeling of dissatisfaction with the arrangement as it existed in 1913-14 when I first moved my resolution. My Lord, this practice of holding the Police Courts in some central part of the city is almost as old as the institution of Courts of recently received sanction to recruit 234 more sub-deputy collectors who will eventually be employed as circle officers under the Village Self-Government Act which was passed in the Council the other day. I say, therefore, that in existing circumstances the number of sub-deputy collectors who are employed on work which could be described as in any way approaching in importance and responsibility to that of deputy collectors is very small, probably not more than 30 or 40 out of the existing cadre of sub-deputy collectors, and it will be a much smaller proportion when the 200 new circle officers' posts are added.

Mr. Kerr.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

submit that it has not. I still maintain that with the partition there has been an ineffective supervision of the subordinate Courts by the Chief Presidency Magistrate. Formerly the Chief Presidency Magistrate kept a daily watch on the files of the cases and exercised a certain amount of control over the Magistrates subordinate to him. Now he has practically lost touch with the Magistrates (stipendiary and honorary) in the Northern Division Court. A flying visit once a month or even less to the Northern Division Court is certainly not effective supervision. In the interests of efficiency it is highly desirable that the other Presidency Magistrates should be under the close administrative supervision of the Chief Presidency Magistrate at Bankshall Street.

The next point, my Lord, which I submit for the consideration of this Council is this: that on account of the unequal distribution of work it happens that one Magistrate in Jorabagan, for instance, finds time hanging heavy on him while another has to work up to 5 to 6 p.m. And I myself have seen certain other Magistrates leave the Court at 3 in the afternoon. This is due to unequal distribution of work. All these prove my statement that the experiment has not proved successful, on the contrary it has proved a failure. Therefore, I think that Government should now redeem their pledge and there ought to be a reversal of the present system. As regards the distribution of work I shall quote the following observation which I have taken the liberty to collect from an unofficial report :—

‘The Jorabagan Court is within a stone’s throw from the First Division Port Police, yet all cases arising within its jurisdiction are tried at Bankshall Street. A dinghi manji arrested at Bichali Ghat, Bagh Bazar, is taken all the way to Bankshall Street although the Jorabagan Court is far nearer. All motor-car cases arising in any part of Calcutta are now heard in the Bankshall Street Court. What is the good of having a partition of the courts, if cases arising within the jurisdiction of one are tried in another.

In several matters (e.g., the Press Act, the Extradition Act and so forth) the Chief Presidency Magistrate exercises exclusive jurisdiction, and the people of the Northern Division have, in consequence, to go to the Jorabagan Court for one purpose and to Bankshall Street Court for another purpose. This double-court arrangement leads neither to the convenience of the public nor to a prompt despatch of business nor to the efficiency of the court.’

Therefore I submit that the time has come when the Police Courts should be located in one and the same building and that the present system be done away with.

With these words I commend the resolution for the acceptance of the House.”

The Hon’ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said—

“My Lord, it is my misfortune this time to oppose my Hon’ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. He has ably advocated the cause which he has taken up, and those interested are very fortunate in having one of the ablest men in the province for their spokesman. But I am sorry that in spite of his eloquence I am still unconvinced that the facts justify his proposal. He says that the experiment has proved a failure and that a city like Calcutta, which has grown very much in recent years, all the Police Courts should be located in one and the same place. I believe that in other Presidency towns the Police Courts are located in different quarters and no complaint has been heard about that arrangement. And so far as I know I do not think there is much dissatisfaction in Calcutta either. But of course there is dissatisfaction among the members of the legal profession practising in the Police Courts. It would be very convenient to them to have all the courts in one and the same building. My Hon'ble friend has said that owing to the pleaders being distributed between the two courts, the litigants have to pay higher fees. But so far as I know the race of pleaders is so prolific that the supply is always greater than the demand. Therefore that argument does not hold good. In such a case the result will be that a particular set of pleaders will get all the cases and the others will have to starve. My friend has also stated that a good deal of inconvenience is felt by the witnesses in going from one court to another. Why should they go from one court to another unless they are professional set of witnesses? It is not usual for a case to be partly tried at Jorabagan and partly at Bankshall Street. My Hon'ble friend has cited the case of a dīngī mānjī. But that sort of thing might be remedied and that remedy does not lie in the placing of all the Police Courts in one building. A good deal has been made out of the fact that there was only one court in those days. That was certainly the case. But my Hon'ble friend forgets that in those days there were only two stipendiary Magistrates and a limited number of Honorary Magistrates. But since then the work has grown up in geometrical proportion and there are now four stipendiary Magistrates and a large number of Honorary Magistrates. And certainly it is necessary therefore that the buildings should be separate. It has been said that litigants find it inconvenient and expensive to find lawyers of their choice. In the mofussil, too, lawyers from Calcutta are appointed to conduct cases by the parties. And if that argument holds good, then all the courts in the Presidency should be brought into one place. If the courts are brought into one place litigation will increase and the number of touts will increase also, and the people will be robbed not only by touts but by others as well. So far as I have been able to ascertain, the public do not desire it, but members of the legal profession practising in the Police Courts and specially those who are at the top of the profession. And they have found a very able advocate to plead their cause in the Council. With these words, my Lord, I oppose the resolution."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

'My Lord, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has once more brought up the question of putting all the Police Courts in Calcutta in a central place and in one building. The resolution is not a new matter and has, if I may say so, an interesting history. In December 1915 the same Hon'ble Member moved a similar and almost identical resolution which was opposed by Government and the resolution was lost. As the members of this Council are aware, up to the end of 1913 the Calcutta Police Courts were located at Lalbazar. It had long been recognised that the accommodation at Lalbazar was both inadequate and inconvenient and after a good deal of discussion three courts were established and called the suburban, the central and the northern courts. When the Hon'ble Member moved his resolution in December, 1915, on behalf of Government it was stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon that the Kyd Street Court was about to be abolished as there was not sufficient work for it at the time. This was given effect to from the 25th April, 1916. Since that time there have been two police courts—one located at Bankshall Street and the other at Jorabagan. At first the Chief and the Fourth Magistrates used to sit at Bankshall Street and the Second and Third Magistrates at Jorabagan, each court having in addition a number of Honorary Magistrates. In the beginning of 1918 however this arrangement was slightly altered and in the rules published under section 21 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure it was definitely laid down that the Chief and the Second Magistrates should ordinarily sit at the southern and northern courts respectively, the other Magistrates being assigned to these courts in such a manner as the Chief Presidency Magistrate may think fit. In actual practice

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

at present the Chief and the Third Magistrates sit at Bankshall Street and the Second and the Fourth at Jorabagan. The arguments which the Hon'ble Maulvi put forward in favour of his resolution in 1915 were that the courts at Lalbazar were split up and located at different places to meet some urgent requirements of the police and the physical congestion was a secondary consideration—an argument which did not merit serious consideration at the time and does not do so at the present moment, for as everybody is sufficiently aware, the accommodation at Lalbazar was anything but satisfactory not only to the Magistrates but also to the pleaders, witnesses and parties and in fact to everybody concerned. Since then new buildings at Lalbazar have been put up for the use of the Calcutta Police. Here I may mention that it was not true that the Lalbazar building was abandoned for the police—purely for putting up new buildings, for the police but it was done so because the Bankshall building came back to us from the Government of India and we thought it economical to use it as a Police Court. So that side of the question should not be lost sight of. The second argument then put forward by the Hon'ble Maulvi has no longer any force as the Kyd Street Court has been abolished for over three years. The third argument then put forward by the Hon'ble Maulvi was that the courts being at a distance from one another, the Chief Presidency Magistrate could not exercise proper supervision—a charge which he has brought against Government again to-day. Literally this may be true, but it does not necessarily follow that for that reason the work of supervision has been slackened because it must be remembered that the Second Presidency Magistrate has been entrusted with a considerable amount of work which the Chief Presidency Magistrate used to do in the trial of cases and therefore the latter is able to devote more time to the supervision work. I shall, however in connection with this look into the question which the Hon'ble Maulvi has brought forward to-day about the division of labour or about the question that all cases have got to go to the Chief Presidency Magistrate who delegates his powers and distributes the cases. If of course any better arrangement can be made in regard to the disposal of such cases, I can assure the Hon'ble Member that that will be looked into. I find therefore that the Hon'ble Maulvi has more or less gone over his trodden ground of 1915. He asks very naturally that as Mr. Lyon in reply to his resolution said that this was going to be an experimental measure, for some indication as to the policy of Government regarding these courts. On this point I shall have to say something later on. Meanwhile of course he has also brought against us the charge and he has said that not only the non-recurring charges have been heavy but recurring charges have gone up. Well, I think it must be apparent to every member here that if we are to have more than one court there must be necessarily an increase both in the recurring and non-recurring charges. The arguments that litigants cannot have lawyers of their choice except at a higher cost regarding which the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has spoken very strongly, all I can say is that this argument cannot possibly carry the same force to-day as it did in 1915, for in the first place the courts have been split up for more than five years. Then again it can be argued with a good deal of justification that as the number of pleaders and lawyers in Calcutta are by no means inadequate, it may reasonably be expected that a sufficient number of competent lawyers have now gathered round the southern courts if, in spite of this fact, litigants occasionally want to take lawyers from the Bankshall Street court and have to pay extra expenses, then, in the words of the Hon'ble Mover, they must pay for that luxury. I am afraid it cannot be helped, for I am sure such cases cannot be many and are rather more than counterbalanced by the fact that in a large number of cases the litigants are benefited by the disposal of their cases much nearer their homes—a thing which evidently however does not appeal to my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq and sometimes perhaps even without the assistance of lawyers practising at the local court. Moreover I shall soon give the figures of the number of cases tried by these two courts from which I am firmly convinced that it would be by far the wisest course to leave things as they are at present, and I am sure that matters will completely adjust themselves in the course of a few years, for there cannot be the slightest doubt that the system in vogue is a considerable improvement on the old system of one central court. So far as the litigants are concerned, however, I am sure nobody will argue that it would be more convenient for the inhabitants of the northern portion of the city to come to Lalbazar or Bankshall or some such place instead of going to Jorabagan. The only strong argument, therefore, in favour of centralisation of all the courts at one place is that it will foster the growth of a strong Bar, but, my Lord, I venture to think that the Bar of Calcutta is more than strong and that it does not need any such further strengthening if that were possible by the centralisation of the Police Courts in one building. Then, my Lord, the questions of buildings and building sites in Calcutta even for the Government is by no means an easy one. Already the Bankshall Street building has been condemned and the Government has got seriously to consider as to where the southern court can be temporarily located until a new building is completed. Perhaps my friend will bring forward this as an argument in favour of having one central court and may say that as the Government has to erect a new building why not huddle them all together. To this my reply would be that apart from the question whether such a course would be economical or not we have got to see the convenience of the litigants themselves and from the figures which I shall soon give it will be apparent that it would be a great injustice to the litigants if Government were again to decide upon a central building with all the courts concentrated in it. In 1915 it was stated on behalf of Government that the arrangements then in force were experimental. At that time it was fully proved that the northern court was a success, and from the figures which I have in my hand I can say that the southern court has also been success. Therefore, it seems to me that the time has perhaps come when on behalf of Government I should definitely state what the policy of Government is in this matter.

In the first place there is nothing to show that the present arrangement are not working satisfactorily. Apart from the consideration of accommodation and perhaps the convenience of certain members of the Bar, it is a distinct advantage to bring justice nearer the people, for if against this argument of mine it were adduced that more the courts the more the litigants as has been done this morning by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, my reply is that human nature being what it is, litigation will go on and will continue to exist whether there is one court or more. Now, my Lord, let me give some figures which will show that although the work of the northern court may not be equal to that of the southern court, there has been a steady growth of work in the southern court from 1915-17, though there was some falling off again last year, but the decrease in the northern area was perceptibly less than in the southern. The number of serious cases in the northern area was much higher than that in the southern area except in 1915. In short, the figures to my mind are a conclusive proof that the object in view in having a new court in the northern area has been attained and that the work done in that area has justified its existence. In the years 1917 and 1918, the total number of cases in the northern court was 37,934 and 32,561, respectively. The total number for that period in the southern court was 45,886 and 35,616. If, therefore, there is a reversion to the central system it would mean that the parties and witnesses in all these cases would have to make a journey to Bankshall Street instead of having their cases tried in their own neighbourhood. It would also involve backward and forward journeys for the police officers between the Jorabagan and the central court, thus meaning considerable inconvenience as well as waste of public money.

Then, again, from the financial aspect it would be extremely difficult to find a suitable site for a large Central Police Court, the cost of acquiring land for such a building being in itself enormous. But what I think is the most important of all to remember is that numerically the petty cases are really the most important, and the nearer to the homes of the parties these could be disposed of the better. And from this point of view quite an arguable case for greater decentralisation could be made out instead of the plea to return to the old system of centralisation for which to my mind there is no justification, either on the ground of convenience to the public or of economy of State funds.

Moreover, when two police districts were made for Calcutta—the north town and the south town—the division was so made that the jurisdiction of the Magistrates and of the executive police officers should coincide. From this point of view too, my Lord, there is no reason to disturb the present arrangement. Under all these circumstances, my Lord, I contend that the Government would not be justified in accepting the recommendation of the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution and I trust to the good sense of the Council to throw out the motion before us."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, in view of the very full and exhaustive statement that has been made by the Hon'ble Member speaking on behalf of Government I would not have troubled this Council with any reply but for the fact that my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, has made certain remarks which I cannot certainly pass without comment. He has sought to create a diversion this afternoon in favour of Government by offering opposition to two very popular resolutions simply, as I take it, for the sake of opposition itself. He has delivered two speeches; the first of which is, I may say with the utmost respect, of a more or less incoherent character, and the second couched in the language of vehemence. The second speech exemplifies, to my mind, the danger of a layman trying to dabble with matters of which he has got a hazy and vague idea.

To begin with, he has mentioned that in Bombay there are Police Courts located in different parts of the city. May I ask him what parallel can be drawn from the conditions of Bombay to those existing in Calcutta when we do not know that the Police Courts of Bombay were located in one and the same building previously, but was followed by subsequent divisions and located in different parts of the city; so that we may have some data for a comparison of the circumstances. As far as I know, the Bombay system can supply no data to judge whether the present system is better than that of having Police Courts in one and the same building in the city. Calcutta people can offer some opinion because they have been accustomed to two different conditions. My friend said that this resolution has been brought forward in the interests of the members of the legal profession. May I ask him what do the members of the legal profession lose if really the courts are split up into two or into 100 parts? The pleaders are put to some inconvenience by having to go from one court to another. Is he so simple as not to know that it is not the pleader but it is the client who has to pay for conveyance? I would like my friend's going to a pleader to engage him on professional business and taking him from his ordinary place to another place, asking him to pay his own gharry hire: I would like to know whether it is the pleader or my friend who has to pay.

Then, my Lord, he said that my statement about witnesses being engaged in one court but being required at another, cannot be accepted for the simple reason that the witnesses are not professional witnesses who can be required for examination at two different cases simultaneously. My friend does not know that there are two classes of witnesses ; first I leave aside the professional witnesses, but amongst honest witnesses there are two classes : first, those who can depose as to facts and the other class called expert witnesses. There are, for instance, witnesses who are required to prove previous convictions, medical witnesses and so forth and they have got to appear in one case sometimes at Jorabagan and in another case at Bankshall Street : but this my friend does not know as he has no business with courts. My Lord, I say with the utmost respect because he does not belong to the class of witnesses, or as he has had not to appear as a witness or as complainant ; he has not had the occasion to complain of or to infringe the law. Then, as regards pleaders raising their fees, a visit to Jorabagan or Bankshall Street will show whether they have or have not raised their fees. I have been told that, with the large influx of pleaders into courts every year and that great manufactory, the Calcutta University, turning out graduates in law every year, the supply is always going to outstrip the demand. Although hundreds and hundreds of the pleaders may be struggling for existence, those who have made their mark in the profession always dictate their own terms. There may be 200 enrolled, but those who have made their mark, i.e., those whose services are sought after will always charge high, sometimes fancy, fees, although there may be a hundred who may be struggling for existence in these courts. So, the mere fact that there is a large influx every year does not, as a matter of fact, go to reduce the fees which are exacted by pleaders. I do not mean pleaders who are of no consequence to the profession but those who have made their mark as pleaders.

As regards the convenience of the litigants, my own idea is that it is inconvenient to the litigants to have the courts located in different parts of the city ; but if Government have made an enquiry and are satisfied that the present arrangement is to the convenience of the litigants, I have got absolutely nothing to say. But I feel convinced that the greater the number of courts the greater is the advantage to members of the profession to which I have the honour to belong. I would like to see courts spring up in every conceivable quarter of Calcutta so that the members of my profession may spread themselves out conveniently, because I know that as soon as a court is started the number of cases go up. The experience of the last five years show that the number of cases in the two courts is very much higher than what it was and the rate of increase is very high ; but if, in spite of this, Government think that it is for the convenience of litigants that the courts should be situated in different parts of the city, I have got nothing to say.

As regards the financial aspects that it has been convenient to locate the courts in one big building my idea is that the Bankshall Street building which has been condemned as a very old building might be dismantled and out of the surplus which we get from the receipts of the Police Courts spread over a number of years a very big building might be erected : that is a matter entirely for the Government to consider. I do still hope that the time will come when the Government of its own motion will decide that a reversion to the old state of things is for the convenience of the public ; and although I have doubts whether they will accept my proposal, I hope that all this discussion has not been in vain ; and I have placed certain facts before the Government which, I hope, in future will be taken into consideration."

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 21.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the permission granted to the medical practitioners who failed in one or two subjects in the Final Licentiate Examination of the State Medical Faculty in November, 1916, to appear at the same examination to be held in November, 1919, be extended to all those who were permitted under the transitory provision to appear at the said examination previously.

He said :—

“ This is the fourth occasion on which a proposal has been made for concessions to a certain class of medical practitioners and I am afraid the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler might think that we are inducing him in a moment of weak good nature to concede certain privileges to which ordinarily these people are not entitled. On the last occasion he told us that the path of concessions is always of slippery character and once we start going down the path we do not know where we come to. But there are certain considerations which might weigh with the Hon'ble Member with regard to the particular class of medical practitioners, and for these reasons I have ventured to bring forward this resolution. On the last occasion a similar resolution was moved by my friend the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali, but that resolution was of a much wider scope than the present one as in my resolution I am asking for this concession for those medical practitioners who have been granted permission previously but could not get through the examination either because they failed in one or two subjects or could not appear at the examination for failure of getting timely notice. My Lord, so far as the first class of medical practitioner is concerned those who failed to pass the examination by only a narrow margin of marks I submit that in their case I cannot say anything except on purely humanitarian grounds. It has been ascertained that they are mostly men who work in distant places, in tea gardens and other estates and whose employers have given them notice to leave their services unless they can produce a certificate of pass. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler remarked on that occasion that it does not very much matter whether a medical practitioner gets a certificate or not because he can always practise as a private practitioner, and so long as he possesses a certificate it is enough to enable him to carry on the profession. It is well known, however, that a medical practitioner who possesses a certificate like the one for which we are contending for this class of practitioners always commands a much higher market value than the one who possesses none and the latter want to improve their prospects by procuring this certificate. As regards the other class, that is, those who did not get timely notice, an enquiry will show that there were people who got notice very late and so late that they could not appear at the examination. Since one examination is going to be held it would be an act of mercy if they are allowed to appear at it. Let them take their chance : if they pass they get a certificate, and that is what they ask for but if they fail they have got themselves to blame. It is not a resolution for which I can say anything except the argumentum ad hominem, but I hope it is a case in which that mercy should be exercised. I believe, my Lord, there is a large volume of public opinion in favour of this resolution and I do not, therefore, wish to take more time of the Council. The matter has been discussed on three occasions already, and there is nothing new to say. All that I wish to say is that this resolution is of a simpler character than any of the resolutions that have been moved previously.”

Khan Sahib Aman Ali; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali said :—

"My Lord, in supporting this resolution, I will only say a few words because on the last occasion I spoke at some length on the necessity of having qualified doctors. It is an undeniable fact that this province is in urgent need of qualified doctors, and on account of want of doctors the people in every district are suffering from various diseases. If the proposal embodied in the resolution be accepted, it will in no way interfere with the prestige and finance of Government. It will be a favour to a large number of doctors who are not qualified under the law but who have studied medicine for five years at least. With these words, I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to take up much time of the Council in supporting this resolution. It seems to be a reasonable request and that request is that those who were permitted to appear at the previous examination but for some reason or other could not appear, might be given another opportunity of qualifying themselves. I do not see that there is any objection to this proposal, and I hope that the concession will be granted. With these few words, I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, like the last resolution that has been moved by the Hon'ble Member, this is a matter which on more than one previous occasion has occupied the attention of the Council. There is therefore not much new that can be said about it, and I will be as brief as possible in my remarks. These resolutions have centred round the examination of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal. That was an examination instituted in connection with the legislation undertaken in Bengal for the registration of medical degrees, and the advantage of passing the Faculty Examination was that it conferred a registrable degree. The examination was meant for people who had undergone a specified training; but in recognition, primarily, of the position of those who were already in practice, a transitory clause was enacted which for two years after the constitution of the Faculty enabled men to go up for the examination who had not gone through the prescribed course of tuition. That period elapsed at the examination of November 1916. The object of all the different resolutions which have been moved in this connection from time to time has been, in various ways, to enable men to go up for that examination or obtain a registrable qualification, who would not otherwise be entitled to do so. This is the fourth resolution of the kind which has come up.

In January 1918, the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri asked us to admit to the examination the Belgachia students of the year 1913 and those who failed for the first time in one or two subjects in the examination held in November 1916. Mr. Donald, on behalf of Government, opposed that motion; but the Council expressed an opinion in favour of it, and in consideration of that opinion, and also being desirous of meeting it to the extent which they thought legitimate, Government did allow the men who failed in one or two subjects at that examination, to go up—not only for one more examination as was originally asked for, but for four more examinations, and in fact there will still be an examination in November 1919 open to these men. Therefore, I would emphasise that we have already provided for the case of those who were originally permitted to appear but who failed in one or two subjects.

The next occasion was September 1918, when we had the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray's resolution asking us to recognise the Belgachia

Sir Henry Wheeler.

Institution as one which could confer registrable degrees. I explained then why we could not accept his proposal, but the Council said that we ought to do so. On further examination, however, we were confirmed in the view that there was no possible justification for such a course, and we were therefore unable to accede to the request.

In January last, the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali asked us to admit to the examination of May 1919 all passed students of non-recognised medical schools. I explained then why we could not do so, and that proposal was lost without a division.

Now, we are asked to admit to the next examination to be held in November all those who were previously permitted to appear under the transitory provisions but for one reason or another have hitherto failed to pass. Such men would seem to be, firstly, those who, having obtained permission, for one reason or another omitted to appear; their number seems to be very small, and I cannot see that they deserve much consideration. And secondly, those who, having appeared, failed to satisfy the examiners. But if they only failed in one or two subjects they can already go up again, so the resolution really presses the case only of those who failed in three or four subjects, it being remembered that the total number of subjects is only four, while under the ordinary regulations of the Faculty a man is not allowed to go up again if he has failed in three subjects or more. The number of men for whom we are asked to make this special concession seems to be 41 who failed in three subjects, and 49 who failed in four subjects, at the examination of November 1916, and we are asked to allow this special concession for men who after four chances have practically demonstrated that their knowledge of medical practice was of the slightest. I have been told by the examiners that some of the men who appeared had no more chance of passing any reasonable medical examination than a child in the street. That is what we are asked to do.

I have previously explained what the object of our medical legislation was, and I do not want to re-traverse that ground. I would again emphasise that the discussions about it originated in 1908, and the two relevant Bills only passed into law in 1914 in Bengal, and in 1916 in the Imperial Council. Therefore everybody had ample notice of what the position was going to be. The object of our law is merely this—to give a definite status to men who have a definite qualification, and to prevent men who have not that qualification from assuming that status. It is further to the advantage of the medical profession in the province that the standard of the Faculty Examination should be maintained. If we, out of good nature, allow men to go up for the examination who have not passed through a reasonable course of medical training, we derogate from the value of the status enjoyed by all those who have passed the examination. I would again emphasise that the status conferred by medical degrees is one dependent upon a reasonable medical training, and not upon the mere passing of an examination, especially if that is to be achieved after the fourth or fifth effort and after an exhibition of almost entire ignorance of the subject.

Why then, when the object of our legislation seems to be so palpably justified, is it that we have these persistent attempts to get us to admit men who are not qualified under the rules and concessions that we have given? The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq denies the charge, but I really cannot see that there is any more argument in favour of this course than that of weak good nature. When I spoke on the last occasion I went through in detail the concessions given under the transitory clause. I explained that we began with concessions; we extended them once, and we extended them again on the motion of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, and we have now arrived at the utmost limit that we thought was justifiable. We are now asked to do more than the Council was asked to do in 1918 and which we eventually accepted, although we did not think it justifiable. In asking us to do this now the Council is not altogether logical; that is to say, in January 1918 we were asked to do something which we did do: in July 1919, for no particular reason whatever. We are asked to go a great deal further, and it is difficult to answer the query, when are we to arrive at finality in this matter? Suppose we accept this resolution and allow those who failed in three or four subjects to go up again—what is going to happen? Most of them will fail; it is almost certain that they will fail. And then we will be told that these poor men have not had much time to prepare for the examination, that if they are given a little more time to brush up their knowledge, they will pass; and that they should therefore be allowed to go up again in 1920. The whole policy becomes one of endless weak concession. I maintain that the legislation has been reasonable in its initiation, it has been interpreted in a reasonable way, and it has been marked by concessions which were, if anything, generous, and on these grounds, Sir, we are not prepared to make this further extension which is now asked for."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I have not got to add much to what I have already said because as I have said in moving this resolution that this question has been threshed out on three occasions. It has been said that most of the students who appeared or were permitted to appear at the previous examinations failed practically in all the subjects. If there are any such I cannot contend that their case deserves much sympathy, but there is the case of others who were given permission but could not at all appear by reason of the fact that they lived at distant places and could not get timely notice. So far as they are concerned I have submitted already and I again respectfully submit that their case deserves some consideration. At any rate the second class medical practitioners can be differentiated from the first class. The Hon'ble Member has put a query that if this concession is granted where are we going to stop. I do not know if any undertaking on my part will be of any practical effect, but I can assure him that if this resolution is accepted I do not think that Government will be troubled with any request of this character in future—very likely this will be the last. On three occasions we were met with unqualified negative and on this the fourth occasion our proposal may be accepted on the condition that we shall not come again with a similar request to Government. Of course it will not be res judicata, and the new Council will not be bound by what is happening in this Council. We can give this undertaking if the Hon'ble Member accepts the resolution. I have already said that I have not got a very strong case, but I leave it to the Hon'ble Member's mercy. It is a question which touches their livelihood and on this consideration they should be allowed to take their chance. I submit that a case has been made out for the acceptance of the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 22.

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee be appointed, consisting of two officials and two non-officials, with instructions to make a thorough inquiry into the conditions existing at the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools at Kurseong, and to recommend such steps (if any) as may be deemed advisable in order to place both the schools on a more satisfactory basis.

Mr. Irwin.

He said :—

“My Lord, I am afraid this resolution will not arouse much interest as it does not personally affect the majority, nevertheless it is a serious one for a considerable community all over India.

It is a question, my Lord, which has occupied my attention for a long time past, as, according to reliable reports, the state of affairs in these two schools has steadily been going from bad to worse for some years, so much so that I consider it would be better to close them altogether unless a great improvement is effected ; at the same time I have been loath to worry Government unnecessarily and hoped that steps would have been taken to remedy matters.

At length hoping to draw the attention of the authorities to it with the least possible waste of time or undue emphasis, I asked a series of questions in this Council in April last.

As, however, the answers given to these questions were, in my opinion, unsatisfactory and as nothing was being done, as far as I could gather, to place the schools on a sounder footing, I felt constrained to take more decisive steps as indicated by the resolution I have quoted.

I may say at once that since giving notice of this resolution I have had a long discussion with the Acting Director of Public Instruction on the matter.

I gave him an outline of what I proposed to say at this meeting with the different items to which I wished to draw special attention, and I think I am correct in saying that he fully agreed with me that not only are the conditions existing at both schools unsatisfactory but that every item I mentioned required revision and reorganisation.

This admission has naturally simplified my task considerably and enabled me to curtail what I should have otherwise been constrained to say in support of my resolution. I shall therefore be as brief as I possibly can.

In the first place, I contend that both schools are and have been for years past, considerably understaffed, the consequence being that the teachers are overworked and the pupils do not receive the attention and tuition they and their parents have a right to expect ; moreover owing also to this fact, i.e., the paucity of teachers, the Head Master or Mistress, respectively, is obliged to undertake duties, which should be relegated to a subordinate, greatly to the detriment of his or her legitimate work.

Again I allege that the staffs of both schools are very considerably underpaid for the duties expected of them. Several of the teachers after giving more than twenty of the best years of their lives in the service are at present drawing miserably inadequate salaries and have proportionately miserable pensions to look forward to when superannuated. I strongly urge that both salaries and pensions should be enhanced without delay, and as regards pensions I think, my Lord, that this enhancement should be retrospective from the date of the commencement of the War, owing to the heavy extra expense entailed by it. This may be unusual, but the whole circumstances are unusual and it would be only ordinary justice.

Then again I consider the constant changes which have occurred in the headships of both schools during the last few years cannot fail to be prejudicial and point to something radically wrong with the supreme administration.

Also the custom of keeping teachers in an acting capacity indefinitely, sometimes for years, as has occurred in several instances, at both schools is utterly wrong and highly detrimental. Can it be expected that teachers under these circumstances can take the same interest in their duties, as if they were on the permanent staff?

Mr. Dunn.

Finally as regards the allowances for board to the teachers and the feeding of the pupils, I contend that the amounts sanctioned are at the present time wholly inadequate.

Some years ago an epidemic of beri-beri broke out in the Victoria School and an inquiry was held by the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal.

After a searching investigation he traced the attack to the mal-nutrition of the patients and insisted on an increase in the monthly allowance, which, after considerable references to various authorities and discussion, was at length sanctioned.

That was in pre-war days and, as every one knows, since then prices for almost everything has increased by from 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. and at present there seems little prospect of any decrease. I regret to say, I understand it is a fact that this extra allowance demanded by the Sanitary Commissioner, sanctioned at that time and drawn ever since, has just lately been withdrawn. I think this needs no comment.

I consider that the whole organisation of the administration of these schools is thoroughly unsound.

These are the only two Government schools existing in the Province for European and Anglo-Indian children and they are administered by the Educational Department on precisely similar lines to that adopted for Indian schools. I think I may say without giving offence to anyone, that owing to the varied customs and conditions prevalent amongst the different races, similar organisations are unsuitable and totally different systems should be adopted for Anglo-Indian and Indian schools respectively.

The control of these two schools should in my opinion be vested in a body of Governors similar to that of the St. Paul's School at Darjeeling and the Head Master or Mistress respectively should be similar.

As regards the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools I contend that the heads (Master and Mistress respectively) are not endowed with sufficient authority to deal with their subordinates. The Master or Mistress, as the case may be, discovers grave breaches of duty or abuse of power, but has no authority to deal adequately with the offenders as would be the case in a similar school in the United Kingdom, but has to refer the matter to an Inspector with headquarters several hundred miles away, and by the time the offence is investigated, by lapse of time, it has been almost condoned and the Head Master's or Mistress's authority undermined and set at naught.

My Lord, I will not detain the Council longer. I trust I have said sufficient to justify my request for an inquiry and will therefore commend my resolution to the favourable consideration of Your Excellency's Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, the resolution which the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin has just put before us is one of great interest and importance. The schools to which he refers were founded some 20 years ago for the children of the subordinate officers in Government service—the children of the domiciled community. These schools are entirely run by Government and they are the only Government schools of their class in Bengal. For that reason alone, I think it is extremely desirable that we should be able to meet any criticism that may be raised in any discussion concerning their efficiency. Some weeks ago I had the opportunity of seeing both the institutions and I regret to say that in the main I must accept the detailed criticism which the Hon'ble Member has put before us. These schools are not as they should be. It is, I think, unnecessary for me to deal here in detail with the various points which the Hon'ble Member has raised. He has spoken of the understating of these institutions, the manner in which the Head Master and the Head Mistress are being overworked, the under-payment of the staff, the frequent changes on the staff, the meagre fooding allowances for the children and the inadequacy of accommodation in both the schools. These defects are almost entirely due to the fact that the Dow Hill and Victoria Schools have outgrown their original organization. They were founded, as I have already said, some 20 years ago. At that time they were schools of a very inferior grade—by that I mean inferior from the scholastic point of view. They have since developed into high schools of considerable importance, and I regret to say that they are still staffed by members of the Subordinate Educational Service—a service which does not admit of the adequate recruitment of Europeans for this peculiar kind of work. Now I feel it my duty to point out that the Education Department has for long been aware of the general position at Kurseong. I have gone into old papers and there are many documents dating from the year 1913. In 1913 the position was carefully described by the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell. In 1914 and 1915 the position was again described, the condition of affairs was carefully examined by the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon, and in the case of the Girls' School the institution was carefully inspected. In 1916 a lengthy and comprehensive report was submitted to the authorities on the general position of both the institutions. I need hardly point out that in the last few years the Education Department has scarcely been in a position to find money for any serious kind of reform and the recommendations made by the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell have been inevitably held up mainly for lack of funds. To remedy this state of affairs the Hon'ble Member suggests the formation of a committee consisting of two official and two non-official members. I would point out, however, that all such a committee can do is to re-examine facts which are already known and to put on record conditions which have been already described. Committees as a rule are very useful for much discussion and for the creation of more literature, but I can assure you, Sir, that literature connected with these two schools is already much too ponderous and extremely complicated. What we require is not a committee but action of a very definite and a very speedy character. I am glad to be able to report that up to date action of a certain kind has been taken. As a result of my own inspection held a few weeks ago in Kurseong I have been able to remind the administration of the reports already forwarded connected with these schools; and I am able to point out what are the greatest needs of these schools. The first and the greatest need is that the staff should be somewhat better paid and that the allowances sanctioned for the food supplies of children should be kept up to their original standard. As regards the first, proposals are already before the Financial Department and the Hon'ble Member, and I have reason to believe that these proposals will be sanctioned almost immediately. As regards the second—the food allowance—I am glad to be able to state to the Hon'ble Member that I have been able to establish these allowances on their original rates, and any further money required will receive very careful and very speedy consideration. As regards the next main step which must be taken, namely, the complete reorganisation of these institutions, this will involve nothing less than the abolition of the Subordinate Educational posts in the two schools and the creation of a number of posts on a graded and incremental pay. That question is under consideration and I hope in a few days all the necessary documents will be forwarded to the General Department. For these reasons I contend that no Committee of enquiry is necessary at this stage. All the facts are known: the lines on which we should proceed have not only been laid down, as I have already pointed out, but a certain amount of action on these lines has already been taken. I think therefore that the intention of the Hon'ble Member will be better realised if he leaves the matter now in the hands of the Education Department."

Mr. Irwin.

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

"My Lord, I think the Hon'ble Member has made a slight mistake in saying that these schools were founded only 20 years ago. I believe I am right in saying that it is more than 30 years since they were founded."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

With reference to the Committee asked for, the Hon'ble Member has said that these facts are already known ; from this I understand that they are also admitted. After hearing what the Acting Director of Public Instruction has said, I beg leave to withdraw my resolution as I have no wish to have it said that I have delayed reform or embarrassed Government. At the same time I must say that it is with some reluctance that I ask this permission, as what I may almost call, the scandalous state of things to which I have drawn attention has been prevalent for a long time past and I sincerely trust that Government will expedite the proposed improvements as much as possible and further that what I have said with reference to the feeding of the pupils and the enhancement of the salaries and pensions of the teachers, with retrospective effect, will have the careful consideration of the authorities, having in view the considerable increase of prices of all the necessaries of life which has taken place in the last few years.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 23.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that in view of the Barabazar Improvement Schemes which are at present under consideration by the Calcutta Improvement Trust, a member of the Marwari community be appointed at an early date on the Board of Trustees for the improvement of Calcutta, and that the Marwari Association and the Marwari Chamber of Commerce be called upon to submit names of suitable persons for the consideration of the Government.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the Calcutta Improvement Trust published their Barabazar scheme about two months ago. In Barabazar there is a large number of Marwari traders and there is a Marwari Chamber of Commerce, although like the Bengal Chamber of Commerce they have not the right to return a member either to the Corporation or to the Council or to the Improvement Trust. Government have kept the right of choosing members in their own hands for the protection of minorities. The Marwari community, taking the entire population of Calcutta, is in a minority, but having regard to the importance of the Barabazar improvement scheme and the Marwari interests affected thereby I think on the present occasion Government may assign one seat to the Marwari community. It may be said that Government have already filled up the four seats they had in their hands, but it is well known that when the exigencies of the situation require it, Government somehow or other manage to provide room. I think that having regard to the fact that Government have got at present four nominees on the Trust and have recently appointed as a member of the Trust an official who has at present no interest in the affairs of the Trust, Government might provide for one member for the time being to represent the Marwari community. It may be said that the Board has the power of co-opting members in connection with particular schemes ; but it is the practice to co-opt such members in the sub-committee and not on the Board. When objections are heard to any particular scheme members are co-opted from the localities concerned and some members of the Marwari community have no doubt been co-opted in connection with some schemes in the sub-committee. My Lord, it is not the sub-committee which is the final authority but it is the Board ; and the presence of a member of the Marwari community on the Board, Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

when the report of the sub-committee will come up before that body, will no doubt be a great help to the Board. I think therefore that Government might see their way to accept my motion. The late Sir Edward Baker at one time in reply to an address presented by the Marwari Association said that when the interests of that community were affected, Government would no doubt nominate a member on the Improvement Trust. The time has now come when the Barabazar scheme will be considered by the Board and I submit that Government might see their way to appoint a member of the Marwari community on the Board."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the proposal put forward by my friend the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. It is a very modest proposal; structural improvements are contemplated on a very large scale in the areas around Barabazar and as my friend has said a large proportion of that area is peopled by Marwaris. Formerly these people hailing mostly from Rajputana had not given much evidence of education in Western knowledge; and Government never thought at least of appointing a member of this community on such civic bodies as the Corporation and the Improvement Trust, but of late the Marwaris are rapidly making up this deficiency, and this deficiency is also supplemented by their energy and business habits in acquiring money. They are now a very prosperous community; and it is right that they should be taken notice of and not eschewed. I think, therefore, that some room might be made as suggested by my friend the Mover of this resolution. As I gather from the tenour of this speech, when the Improvement Trust will extend their operations, as is contemplated, over the Barabazar area, it will be time enough to put on the Trust a gentleman interested in that area and I think some room might be made by asking the holder of a seat recently appointed to retire for some time. That is what I gather my friend's meaning to be; but whatever course Government might be pleased to adopt I think there should be some recognition of the interests of the Marwari community in the Barabazar scheme."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I can very well sympathise with the desire of the Marwari community to have from among them a member on the Improvement Trust when the Barabazar scheme comes up. But I must confess, my Lord, that the arguments put forward by the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution or the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur who has followed him, have not convinced me of the necessity of putting a Marwari gentleman on the Board. It has been said by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that it is a practice with Government that whenever any special measures come up experts are put in the Council. I do not know, my Lord, if in connection with the Barabazar scheme a Marwari gentleman of the locality interested in the scheme could be termed as an expert and for that purpose whether the mover of this resolution would be justified in asking the Government to remove one of the nominated members of the Trust in order to make room for a Marwari gentleman.

Then, my Lord, we have heard the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur mentioning that the Marwari community is an influential body. I do not challenge this, but, my Lord, I thought yesterday when speaking on the motion for the withdrawal of the Municipal Bill both the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur and Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur were advocates against special electorates and this is a question more or less of pleading for a special community on the Trust. I frankly admit I am unable to follow such contradictory arguments. My Lord, whilst I do not wish in any way to belittle the importance of the vested interest that the Marwari community have in Calcutta what I do feel, however, is this: that the Government would not be justified for the reasons given by the

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Rai Bahadur to remove a nominated member from the Trust in order to make room for a Marwari gentleman. Under section 4 of the Act it is laid down that the Board shall consist of 11 trustees, viz., a Chairman, the Chairman of the Corporation, three other members of the Corporation, a member of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce and four other persons; and these four are those that are nominated by the Government. As I have already said there is no vacancy at present; and according to the wording of the Act we cannot appoint 12 members. But when the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said that members could be co-opted only for sitting on the sub-committee, I think he must have overlooked section 19, which says that the Board may associate with themselves in such manner and for such period as may be prescribed by rules made under so and so any persons whose assistance they may desire in carrying out any of the provisions of the Act. So I think the best thing for him would be to get the Improvement Trust to appoint a Marwari gentleman to act as a co-opted member on the Board and not on the sub-committee so that the difficulty he apprehends could easily be got over. If, of course, on the other hand the Rai Bahadur feels so keenly for the Marwari community to be represented he might perhaps be sporting enough to make room by retiring as a member of the Corporation and to allow a Marwari gentleman to come in his place. But I do not think that the Government would be justified in removing one of the nominated members from the Improvement Trust. For all these reasons, I am unable to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I am quite aware of the provision which has been referred to by the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan. But the difficulty is that it is so difficult to persuade a masterful person like Mr. Bompas to co-opt a Marwari gentleman on the Board. If we could do that, there would not have been any necessity for moving this resolution.

Then, my Lord, the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan used an unhappy expression 'remove.' I never meant that a Government nominee should be removed, but what I meant was that, as I know from experience in the Council, Government might, in view of the requirements of the situation, make some arrangements by which some room might be made for a member of the Marwari community. Quite recently there has been a member nominated by the Government. Government have got four nominations and they always look to the interests of the minority, that is the reason why the suggestion had been made.

As regards the graceful suggestion made by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur that if I am so keen for the representation of the Marwari community, I might retire in favour of a Marwari member. I do not know whether it is the voice of somebody behind the Hon'ble Member which prompted the suggestion. However that may be, I know that nothing would give some persons greater pleasure than to see me out of the Board. But I have this satisfaction that people want me to be there."

The motion was then put and lost.

(i) Are the Government aware that before the present post-graduate scheme was in operation, he used to teach M A students of Physics and many of them passed with high degrees and some of them are now professors in Government colleges ?

(j) Are the Government also aware that he is an outside examiner in M. Sc. Physics in the post-graduate scheme of the University; and that though he has been the Principal of a large Government college since 1897, he has, all the time he has been Principal, been doing the work of a full-time professor owing to the fact that Government did not sanction any additional posts?

(k) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the reply of the Hon'ble Mr. H. Sharp in the Imperial Legislative Council to the Hon'ble Mr. Suba Rao Pantulu's resolution on the Public Services Commission on the 17th March, 1911, in which he stated that an Indian officer held the administrative post of a Principal of a first grade Government college and he mentioned Rai Kumudnikant Banerji Bahadur as that officer?

(l) Is it also a fact that he was the only Indian at that time holding an administrative post in the Education Department in the whole of British India?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) This is not correct. There never was any proposal for including all posts of Principals in the Indian Educational Service, but in 1907, the Government of Bengal, as it was then constituted, proposed that the Principals of the Hooghly, Krishnagar and Ravenshaw Colleges should be Indian Educational Service officers. As regards Inspectorships, in 1904 the then Government of Bengal proposed that all Commissioners' divisions should be in charge of well trained European Inspectors in the Indian Educational Service.

(b) In 1912, in connection with some breaches of discipline which occurred among the students of the Rajshahi College, it was proposed that the Rai Bahadur should be transferred to the Krishnagar College, but as the post of Principal of the Rajshahi College was in the Provincial Educational Service cadre while that of the Krishnagar College was in the Indian Educational Service, it was suggested that the two posts should be interchanged. Government did not accept the proposal.

(c) In 1908, in sanctioning certain proposals in connection with the educational services in Eastern Bengal and Assam, Lord Morley entirely agreed with Sir Lancelot Hare's recommendation that the Rajshahi College should be wholly manned with highly-qualified Indian officers recruited in India. Lord Morley did not accept any such general principle as suggested in the question.

(d) Owing to the successful administration of the College.

(e) The question of including the post of Principal of the Rajshahi College in the Indian Educational Service never arose, because the College was well administered. At Hooghly and Krishnagar the old arrangement under which the Principal was a Provincial Educational Service officer did not work well, and at Chittagong the post was so included in connection with the raising of the status of the College.

(f) A statement is laid on the table.

(g) Yes.

(h) Yes.

(i) The Rai Bahadur used to teach M.A. students of Physics, but Government have no definite information on the other points.

(j) Government believe it is true that he is an outside examiner in M.Sc. Physics in the post-graduate scheme of the University and that he has practically been doing the same amount of work as is usually done by a professor in a college. In 1917, however, the Presidency College Committee recommended that Principals should take an active part in the instruction of the students, and an inquiry was accordingly made into the question of relieving the Principals of the larger Government colleges outside Calcutta of a portion of their administrative duties. Bursars were appointed in some colleges. The Rai Bahadur did not think a Bursar was necessary for Rajshahi College, but proposed that a steward and assistant librarian should be appointed. Government did not approve this proposal. It was found that the Rai Bahadur was doing 13 hours' teaching work a week, but he was opposed to the idea of the Principal being relieved of any of this work.

(k) Yes.

(l) Government have no information.

(l) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any steps are being taken by the school authorities to teach scientific agriculture to sons of zamindars, who are reading in the said school?

(m) If not, are the Government considering the advisability of requiring the school authorities to make the necessary arrangements in this connection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) and (b) The Hastings House property has been placed at the disposal of the Government of Bengal for the accommodation of the experimental public school for a period of 5 years from July 1915 on the following conditions:—

- (1) The building shall be kept in repair by the Public Works Department at the expense of the school authorities
- (2) The school authorities shall pay all municipal taxes leviable in respect of the property.
- (3) No permanent structure shall be erected on the estate without the previous consent of the Government of India
- (4) At the end of the 5 years the property shall be returned to the Government of India in the state in which it was when it was made over.

The Government of Bengal have recently asked for sanction to the continuance of these arrangements up till 1922

(c) and (d) In 1913 a memorial was received praying for the establishment of a residential school for Indian boys on the lines of an English public school. A list of the names of some of the most prominent supporters of this proposal is laid on the table

(b) Is it also a fact that few members of the first grade of munsifs get the benefit of the grade owing to the paucity of officers in that grade?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of increasing the strength of that grade from 25 to 50?

(d) With reference to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler's announcement on behalf of the Government in the course of the last budget debate that the first instalment of a scheme for the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service, costing over five lakhs of rupees, had been forwarded to the Government of India for sanction and that Rs. 1,25,000 had been set apart in this year's budget for giving effect to the scheme after sanction was received, will the Government be pleased to state whether the sanction of the Government of India has since been received?

(e) If not, are the Government in a position to state approximately when it may be expected?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Graham:—

(a) Nearly all the munsifs of the first grade are now officiating as subordinate judges and since the creation of that grade some of the officers of that grade have always officiated as subordinate judges.

(b) This portion of the question is not understood.

(c) In view of the possibility of the adoption of a time scale, Government do not propose to alter the grading of the service at present.

(d) The proposals of the Local Government for the reorganisation of the service are still under the consideration of the Government of India, but they have recently sanctioned as a temporary measure an increase in the pay of the lower grade of munsifs from Rs. 200 to Rs. 250 a month.

(b) What further steps are possible to be taken and when are they proposed to be taken?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) and (b) The Act came into force on the 1st February, 1919. Since then after carefully considering the whole matter, Government have authorised Head Masters of high or middle schools and Madrassahs in Calcutta, under section 4 of the Act to seize or destroy any tobacco, pipes or cigarette papers found in the possession of boys under 16 years of age attending their respective schools whom they find smoking in any street or public place. (b) What other steps are proposed to be taken under the Act and when?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) and (b) Commissioners of Divisions have been asked to report after consultation with district officers and district boards in what districts or parts of districts the Act should be extended and from what date, and what local areas should be declared unions. They have also been asked to make some definite proposals regarding the formation of circles. Meanwhile rules are being framed under section 101 of the Act so that they may be put into force when union boards are created.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the case of a student, who was going to Puri in the last week of June, and who was crushed to death as a result of the overcrowding in the Bengal-Nagpur Railway train at the Howrah railway station?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps were taken by the railway authority or by the police to cope with the situation caused by the rush of passengers for Puri during the last Rathajatra festival?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"(a) It is reported that a young Bengali collapsed from heat stroke on No. 9 platform at the Howrah station on the 26th June. The platform police inspector procured ice and rendered all assistance in his power. The man was then sent in an ambulance to the hospital, but died from heart failure before he arrived there. He was not crushed to death. There was not an unusually large number of passengers on the day in question, and the rush to Puri did not set in till two days later.

(b) Additional police were deputed for platform work at Howrah, Rishra, Serampore and Guptipara railway stations from the 28th June till the 7th July to deal with the rush of traffic in connection with the Rath Jatra festival."

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to give effect to the recommendations of the Public Services Commission regarding the revised scale of pay and prospects of the Civil Assistant Surgeons?

(b) Is it a fact that a large number of Civil Assistant Surgeons have petitioned the Government praying for an early consideration of these recommendations and, if so, what orders have been passed on their petition?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian Medical Service officers and also Military Assistant Surgeons have been granted a substantial increment of salary?

(d) At the time of granting these increases, was any proposal before the Government to increase the salaries of Assistant Surgeons?

(e) If not, are the Government contemplating taking up the question now?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

(a) The question of the pay and prospects of civil assistant surgeons has recently been examined by the Medical Services Committee appointed by the Government of India. The report of that Committee has recently been received by this Government and is under consideration.

(b) No such petitions have been received by Government, but the Surgeon-General is considering certain petitions from civil assistant surgeons which have been submitted to him.

(c) What is the maximum pay which a Head Constable may, in the ordinary course, expect to reach, according to the new scale?

(d) Have the salaries of the Sergeants of the Provincial Police Force been raised; if so, what is the percentage of increase and what is the total yearly additional expenditure involved?

(e) Is it proposed to utilize any portion of the amount provided in the Provincial Police Budget for 1919-20 for raising the pay of the Head Constables towards meeting the expenditure on account of raising the pay of the Sergeants? If so, how much and why?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr.—

“(a) (b) and (c) A scheme for the revision of the pay of Head Constables of the Bengal Police is under the consideration of the Secretary of State. Pending receipt of his orders, Government are not prepared to publish the details of the scheme.

(d) The salaries of Sergeants in the Bengal Police have been raised with effect from the 1st June 1919 from Rs. 100— $\frac{1}{2}$ —125 to Rs. 125— $\frac{1}{2}$ —150. The increase is 21 per cent, and the annual expenditure involved is Rs. 15,600, of which Rs. 2,100 will be borne by the East Indian Railway Company.

(e) As stated in the communiqué recently issued on this subject, a provision of Rs. 2,17,260 was made in the budget for 1919-20 on account of the cost of the scheme for the revision of the pay of Head Constables, on the assumption that the scheme would be brought into force on the 1st April. As the scheme has not yet been sanctioned, there will be considerable savings under this head, and it has been decided to meet from the savings the cost during the current year of the increase of the Sergeants' pay, which will not exceed Rs. 10,000.”

(d) How much cloth has been distributed to the destitutes, males and females, respectively, up to June, 1919, in each of the villages in the said district?

(e) Are the Resolutions No. 3—99—2, dated Calcutta, the 25th March, 1905, and No. 13—356—10, dated Simla, the 21st August, 1906, respectively, by the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture, Land Revenue, on the subject of the suspension and remission of land revenue and cess, in force in the Presidency of Bengal?

(f) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of urging on the Collector of Bankura to give effect to the resolutions referred to above without further delay?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Yes. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reports on the famine in Bankura published weekly in the Calcutta Gazette.

(b) Yes.

(c) On account of the resumption of agricultural operations the numbers of relief works, consisting in the excavation of tanks or reservoirs and the construction or repair of roads, rose from 51 in the beginning of June to 76 in the second week of July the number has fallen to 62 at the beginning of August.

The question, however, indicates some misunderstanding of the measures adopted for relief in Bankura. By far the majority of the population relieved are not on relief works, but receive gratuitous relief.

(d) Since the beginning of the relief operations and up to the end of June last, 8,182 pieces of cloth were distributed. It is not possible to give the figures village by village.

(e) Yes.

(f) The Collector cannot give effect to the resolutions unless the proprietors and tenure holders of Bankura make them really effective by suspending the collection of, or remitting, the rents of the actual cultivators. Moreover, the Collector is aware of the policy enunciated in the resolutions. The answer to the particular question is, therefore, in the negative, but the Collector's attention will be again drawn to the matter."

Survey schools

Mainamati.

(a) Is it a fact that many of the passed students of the Dacca survey class have found it impossible to join the second year class at Mainamati?

(b) How many students have passed from the first year class at Dacca, and how many of them have joined the Mainamati School for further studies?

(c) Is it a fact that the course of study at Dacca does not strictly correspond and lead up to the second year course at Mainamati, the two being based on different systems of grouping of subjects and different standards?

(d) What are the reasons for not opening the second year survey class at Dacca?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) Yes. The reason is that the 2nd year class at Mainamati is recruited from students from Dacca and three other schools as well as the passed students of the 1st year class. It is expected that there will be more vacancies from next year owing to the closing of the 1st year class there.

(b) Eighteen students passed from the 1st year class at Dacca; 9 students were admitted from Dacca.

(c) No the course at Dacca leads up to the 2nd year course at Mainamati, being almost the same as the 1st year course at the latter school, but with some minor additions, viz., a little engineering and estimating.

(d) Government decided that it was desirable in the interests of survey education to centralise the higher training at Mainamati, where the terrain is much more suitable than at Dacca for a thorough training in practical surveying."

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“ Two statements are laid on the table—

- (i) showing the number of pupils attending weaving schools and the numbers passed out during the last three years, and
 (ii) expenditure on the upkeep of the schools since their establishment.

Practically all the pupils attending these schools are drawn from the weaving community.”

Industrial and technical schools for females independent of missionary control.

(a) How many industrial and technical schools for girls and women are there in the Presidency which are not under the control of missionaries?

(b) In view of the difficulties of the mission workers to reach the Hindu and Moslem zenana ladies, are the Government considering the desirability of devising a scheme of industrial and technical education for zenana women, independent of missionary influence?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) There are, strictly speaking, no technical classes or schools for girls in the Presidency which are not under missionary control. There are, however, industrial classes which make and sell plain needlework attached to the following:—

- (1) Mahila Silpa Samiti, Calcutta.
- (2) Hari Silpa Samiti, Calcutta;
- (3) Hindu Orphanage, Calcutta; and
- (4) Widows' Home at Wari, Dacca

These are privately managed samities and institutions, of which the last two receive grants from Government amounting to Rs. 42 a month in the case of the Hindu Orphanage, Calcutta, and Rs. 77 a month in the case of the Widows' Home at Wari. The Mahila Silpa Samiti was at one time aided by the Department but in 1915 the grant was withdrawn as it was badly managed and its work was unsatisfactory.

(b) It is reported that there is no real demand for technical instruction amongst zenana ladies and in any case it is a kind of undertaking which must depend largely upon local workers and missionaries. It is not proposed therefore to devise any scheme such as that referred to. But Government would be prepared to consider favourably the question of making grants to institutions such as those mentioned above, provided they are based upon local support and do satisfactory work.”

Raising of the pay of typists serving under heads of departments attached to the Bengal Secretariat.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is in contemplation to raise the grade pay of the typists serving under heads of departments attached to the Secretariat (e.g., the offices of the Director of Public Instruction, the Inspector-General of Police and the Bengali Translator to Government and others)?

(b) Are the Government aware that the typists in these departments feel that they have a just grievance in being deprived of the increment which was sanctioned for Secretariat typists last year?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) No.

(b) The typists in the office of the Director of Public Instruction submitted a memorial on the subject recently which was rejected.

There has always been some differentiation between the Secretariat and the offices of Heads of Departments in the matter of pay.”

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement containing the number of boarders, day-boys and day-boarders in each of the forms of the Hastings School, Alipore, according to their religion, nationality and caste during each of the years from 1915 to the period ending 31st March, 1919, and also the occupation or profession of their guardians?

(c) Is it a fact that the Hastings School is under the immediate supervision of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal?

(d) If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether the general rule No. 13, regarding corporal punishment, framed by the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, with special reference to high schools, as published on page 168 of the Rules and Orders of the Education Department of Bengal, 4th edition, is in force in the Hastings School?

(e) If not, what is the general practice regarding the infliction of corporal punishment to the boys of the said school?

(f) Is it a fact that a boy in Form V is authorised by the school authorities to inflict corporal punishment to other boys of the said school in the case of any breach of discipline, especially during the hours of games?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any ground for apprehension as regards the abolition or amalgamation of this school with some other institution?

(h) Is this school meant for the sons of rich men only?

(i) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reason why a considerable amount of provincial revenue is applied to make up the financial deficiency of the said school?

(j) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they are taking to improve the financial condition of the said school?

(k) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps the members of the Advisory Committee are taking to make the institution self-supporting as far as possible?

(l) Will the Government be also pleased to state whether the members of the Advisory Committee ever attempted to raise sufficient funds from among the leaders of Indian society, whose sons are benefited, with a view to the creation of endowments for the said school?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) A statement showing the income and expenditure on the school is laid on the table.

(b) Statements giving the required information so far as is possible are laid on the table.

(c) and (d) The reply is in the affirmative.

- (e) The question does not arise.
 (f) The school prefect is made responsible for the general discipline but is not permitted to inflict corporal punishment.

(g) This Government has recommended that the school should be kept on an experimental basis until the end of 1922. Whether it will be made permanent or not will depend on the amount of public support it receives.

(h) and (i) It is true that there has been an impression that the school is meant for the sons of rich men only, but that is not correct, although fees must necessarily be high in a school of this kind. In the opinion of the Director of Public Instruction the education imparted in this school is "immeasurably superior" to that given in any other school in the Presidency, and though Government recognises that such a school must ultimately be either self-supporting or liberally aided by private benefactions, it believes that the expenditure at present incurred while the school is in the experimental stage, is amply justified.

(j) It is proposed to make the school more popular by the adoption of the following measures :—

- (1) The development of the day side of the school
- (2) Improvement of the facilities for science teaching
- (3) Appointment of two more European masters.
- (4) Provision, if it is found practicable, of separate messing arrangements for sons of orthodox Hindus.
- (5) The offer of concessionary rates of fees for sons of Government servants.

No final decision has been reached on the last point. A proposal to introduce separate messing arrangements for the orthodox is under discussion

(k) The members of the Advisory Committee and others have offered five scholarships for competition. Government are consulting them as to the measures necessary to make the school more popular.

(l) The reply is in the negative. The school is still being continued on an experimental basis, but the question of a permanent endowment is one which will have to be considered."

Pollution of Tolly's Nullah from discharges of Russa Distillery.

(a) Are the Government aware of the fact that the water of the Adi Ganga (Tolly's Nullah) is considered sacred by the Hindus, and that pilgrims who visit the temple in Kalighat from various parts of India drink this water?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of urging on the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, and the local authorities, the necessity for the prevention of the pollution of the said water with foul and objectionable discharges from the Russa Distillery in the district of the 24 Parganas?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) and (b) The reply is in the affirmative. The Sanitary Commissioner recently inspected the distillery and his proposals are now under consideration.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“ The chief difficulty in introducing the boy-scout movement into schools arises from the lack of trained scout-masters. A Governing Body entirely independent of Government has been constituted to guide and control the movement. The boy-scout movement at Home is inspired by the idea of spontaneity in which the value of individual effort and initiative is recognized and the idea of discipline to which the boy-scout voluntarily submits. State control clashes with these ideas, and Government, while anxious that the movement shall be encouraged under the competent guidance and control which now exist, are not prepared to take any active part in its expansion unless concrete proposals are made by the Governing Body. Government are now, in consultation with that body, considering how far it can assist in the training of scout-masters. At present two school troops have been formed in Calcutta in addition to troops drawn from territorial areas in the city.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“ (i) Copies of the Circular orders are laid on the Library table

(ii) A statement is laid on the table, but it is not possible to say what percentage of the public works cess receipts was spent on these works as district boards do not keep a separate account of expenditure out of these receipts

The Subordinate Educational Service.

Is it a fact that on account of the stringency imposed by the War a number of posts in the higher grades of the Subordinate Educational Service have been abolished and replaced by the same number of posts in lower grades causing a depreciation in the average pay of the service and reduction in the number of promotions from lower grades? If so, how long do the Government intend to continue this arrangement?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"It is a fact that owing to the financial stringency caused by the war, appointments in the Subordinate Educational Service were not (until the middle of 1918) made strictly in accordance with the approved actuarial scale. The grading of the service is somewhat uneven, but the whole question will be looked into in connection with the reorganisation of the Subordinate Service."

10.

Is it a fact that the average age of officers in classes I to IV of the Subordinate Educational Service is at present much lower than what it was before the partition of Bengal owing to the first appointment of young men (mostly lecturers and demonstrators) in the higher grades, and the number of retiring officers in the higher grades, in proportion to the total strength of the service, becoming gradually less and less, and that as a result of this the promotion of officers in the lower grades remains blocked for a long time?

The Subordinate Educational Service.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"As entries of age in the Subordinate Educational Service list were not made till 1915 it is not possible to state whether the average age is now much lower than what it was before the partition, but it is true that first appointments of young men to higher grades have been made in many cases. This is due to the fact that it has been necessary to recruit men with adequate qualifications from outside the grades to fill the posts of lecturers in colleges owing to extended affiliation. The whole question of grading and promotion will be looked into when the service is reorganised."

11.

Are the Government aware that there is a widespread feeling of discontent among the teachers of Government high schools on account of the delay in the utilization of the grant of Rs 3,09,876 for improving the staff and increasing the pay of teachers of Government high schools, and particularly for the deflection of nearly two years' grant for other purposes?

Improvement of the staff and increase of pay of teachers in Government High Schools.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. There was no deflection of the amount earmarked for improving the staff and increasing the pay of Government high school teachers."

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what progress, if any, has been made towards the reorganization of the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service, about which assurances were given by Sir S. P. Sinha (now Lord Sinha) in the Bengal Council of the 20th November, 1917?

Reorganization of the Subordinate and Lower Subordinate Educational Service.

(b) Is it a fact that a large number of officers in the Lower Subordinate Educational Service, and also outside the graded service, have submitted petitions for the increment of their pay and improvement of their prospects? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what action has been taken thereon? Can these officers expect any relief before the coming Pujas?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of granting bonuses to low-paid educational officers from the unutilized amount of the Rs. 9 lakhs Imperial grant for two years?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) As explained by Lord Sinha in the speech referred to, the pay and grades of the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service cannot be fixed until the pay of the Provincial Educational Service and the grades thereof are fixed. The question of the reorganisation of the higher services of the Education Department is now under the consideration of the Secretary of State in connection with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. Till orders on this question are passed no scheme for the improvement of the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service can be elaborated.

(b) Petitions from the clerks in the office of the Librarian, Bengal Library, and in that of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, praying for the grant of increments or allowances in view of the high prices at present prevailing, were submitted to Government. In view of the recent orders of Government passed by the Financial Department sanctioning war allowance to officers of Government drawing salaries of over Rs. 12 but not more than Rs. 50, no further concession is at present practicable.”

With reference to the following extract from the West Quinquennial Report on education in India, namely:—

Improvement of the lot of teachers in Government
schools.

“Except for the grant of local allowances to Head Masters and Head Mistresses and to Assistant Head Masters and Assistant Head Mistresses mentioned in paragraph 21 above, the quinquennium has seen no improvement in the lot of the teachers in Government schools. A revised scheme for the improvement of secondary education in the Presidency of Bengal was submitted to the Government of India in August, 1916. This was merely an amalgamation and adaptation of the proposals which were submitted in 1908 to the Government of India at their request by the Government of Bengal and the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam.”

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the papers containing the “proposals” referred to above, and to state how far they have materialized?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“Government regret they are unable to lay on the table the papers containing their latest proposals for the improvement of pay and prospects of secondary school teachers as the receipt of the Government of India's sanction is still awaited. This Government have asked that sanction should be given to these proposals with effect from the 1st April, 1919.”

(1) how many students applied for admission into the Calcutta Medical College this year and how many of them have been actually admitted?

(2) among the applicants admitted and those rejected how many were—

(i) B.Sc.'s with Honours;

(ii) B.Sc.'s;

(iii) I.Sc.'s, 1st Division;

(iv) I.Sc.'s, 2nd Division;

(v) I.Sc.'s, 3rd Division; and

(vi) I.A.'s?

(b) Is it a fact that a notice was hung up at the Calcutta Medical College this year that students appearing at the I.Sc. Examination held in 1919 would not be admitted and a post-card notice was actually issued to this effect to applicants who had appeared at the I.Sc. Examination, 1919?

(c) Is it a fact that notwithstanding such notice many of the applicants who have passed the I.Sc. Examination, even in the 3rd Division, have been admitted?

(d) Is it a fact that students of very inferior merit have been preferred to those possessing far superior educational qualifications?

(e) Is there any principle on which the selection of applicants for admission into the Medical College is based?

(f) What weight is given to educational qualifications?

(c) No. Only one candidate in the third division, who had passed with the triple combination of Physics, Chemistry and Botany was admitted.

Number of internees set at liberty.

Will the Government be pleased to state the number of internees who have been set at liberty during the last twelve months and the number of those who are still under detention?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“ The number of persons interned under the Defence of India Act, who have been released from its restrictions during the twelve months commencing from the 1st August, 1918, is 423. The number of persons detained under the Defence of India Act on the 31st July, 1919, including those in home domicile, is 342. Of these 119 have been ordered to be released as soon as they have furnished the usual security.”

Control of the price of rice in certain districts.

Are the Government considering the desirability of taking action under the Articles of Commerce Ordinance, 1914 (IX of 1914), read with the provisions of the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act, 1915 (I of 1915), for controlling the price of rice in the districts of Tippera, Chittagong and Noakhali?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The attention of all the local officers, including the District Officers of the three districts in question, has been drawn to the fact that action can be taken under the ordinance to authorise Collectors to take possession of stocks of rice, if there be ground of holding that such stocks are being unreasonably held from the markets, and certain districts have been subject to special attention. Government, however, are not prepared to announce the district in which further action under the ordinance may be taken.”

Rice
consumption.

(a) Have the Government any idea as to the average quantity of rice and other food grains required under normal circumstances, for consumption per head of the population in Bengal, as compared with the quantity of food grains so required in the other provinces in India?

(b) What quantities of food grains per head of the population were actually available for consumption in Bengal during each of the last five years, as compared with the respective quantities so available in the other provinces during the corresponding periods?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ (a) Government have no reason to suppose that the average quantity of food grains required for consumption per head in Bengal is either greater or less than the average quantity so required in other provinces. It has been estimated that one-fifth of a ton of food grains is required per head per annum for the population throughout India, including provision for seed grain and cattle; but there is ground for believing that this is an over-estimate.

(b) Government are not prepared to give an estimate of the quantities of food grains available per head during the last five years in the various provinces, since owing to the different degrees of accuracy attributable to the data upon which such estimates have to be based in each province the figures would be altogether misleading.”

18.

(a) Was the decision of the Food-stuffs Commissioner, or the Government of India, to treat Bengal as a "surplus province" and to allow export of rice therefrom to the other provinces and foreign countries, arrived at in consultation with the Government of Bengal?

(b) If so, when was the said decision come to, and upon what expression of opinion on the part of the Local Government or the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal?

(c) What were the materials before the Local Government or the Director of Civil Supplies when such consultation took place, to show that Bengal held surplus stocks of rice?

(d) Was any regard paid to the statistics of the last few years showing how the net supply of rice in Bengal per head of the population stood in comparison with the minimum requirement for consumption, and to the failure of the crops last year as also to the diminished imports of 1918-19?

(e) How often, and on what dates, since the above decision of the Food-stuffs Commissioner, have the Government of Bengal intimated to the Food-stuffs Commissioner their opinion on the rice position in Bengal?

(f) Did the Local Government in any of these communications advocate reduction in exports from Bengal? If so, on what dates?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a), (b) and (c) The question assumes that on some definite date it was decided by the Government of India or the Foodstuffs Commissioner to treat Bengal as a surplus province. The Government of Bengal are not in a position to answer the question on behalf of the Government of India or the Foodstuffs Commissioner; but they understand that no definite date can be assigned to such a decision. On his appointment the Foodstuffs Commissioner found Bengal actually exporting rice and he proceeded to regulate those exports. The Government of Bengal were not formally consulted; but they submitted their views, when comment was necessary. It has already been explained in Council that as a result of the census of rice stocks held in November last and on a consideration of all the facts regarding the situation, Government were satisfied that Bengal could not be treated as a deficit Province.

(d) Yes

(e) and (f) The Government of Bengal do not correspond officially with the Foodstuffs Commissioner. They have, however, on various occasions and in different ways, intimated their opinion to the Government of India and the Foodstuffs Commissioner; and, as the result of a representation made to the Government of India in May last, the allotments for export of rice from Bengal have been reduced progressively each month."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

19.

(a) In what relation, in point of administrative control and supervision, does the Director of Civil Supplies stand towards the Local Government and the Food-stuffs Commissioner, respectively?

Duties of the Director of Civil Supplies.

(b) Is it the case that the Director of Civil Supplies has practically no function to discharge, even as an agent of the Food-stuffs Commissioner, in regard to the export of rice from Bengal?

(c) If not, what are his duties and powers in this behalf?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) The Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, is under the direct orders of the Foodstuffs Commissioner in all that concerns (1) the working of the system for the control of the inter-provincial movements of foodstuffs and (2) the licensing of imports of rice from Burma, its wholesale prices in Calcutta, and its distribution among the various provinces. He is responsible to the Local Government as regards the control of movements of foodstuffs and other commodities within the province.

(b) and (c) It is not the case. His general duties as agent of the Foodstuffs Commissioner for the control over the export of rice from Bengal are—

- (1) to hold up certificates issued by the Director of Civil Supplies of any other province for quantities of rice in excess of the allotment made to that province;
- (2) to inform other Directors from what districts it is advisable or otherwise for them to draw supplies and watch that excessive demands are not concentrated upon any particular district at any one time;
- (3) to collect statistics as to the movements of rice within and from the province and investigate any cases in which it appears that uncertificated export has taken place; and
- (4) to watch the general position and report to the Foodstuffs Commissioner when any new restriction on export appears necessary.

On behalf of this Government—

- (a) to take steps to prevent competitive purchase by certificate-holders;
- (b) to discourage movements of rice within the province which appear to be intended to facilitate export to other provinces and which threaten to result in denuding particular areas; and
- (c) to watch the position on behalf of the Local Government and to keep the Local Government fully informed regarding the situation."

Control over the export of rice.

With reference to the statement made in answer to my unstarred question No. 46 (a) of the 3rd July last, to the effect that exports are controlled by the Food stuffs Commissioner, will the Government be pleased to state—

- (i) what local agency, if any, is there in Bengal through which the Commissioner exercises such control,
- (ii) on what advice, if at all, of the Local Government or other authorities is such control exercised,
- (iii) the exact nature of such control, and
- (iv) the practical effect of the same during the period of the last six months in Bengal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(i) Exports by rail to other provinces are controlled by the Foodstuffs Commissioner through the Director of Civil Supplies [vide the reply to the Hon'ble Member's question No. 19 (c)]. Exports by sea to other provinces or to foreign countries are, it is understood, controlled through the Collector of Customs.

(ii) and (iii) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the replies to his questions No. 18 and No. 19 (c).

(iv) The practical effect of the control has been to restrict exports materially and to steady prices within the province.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

21.

(a) What are the formalities which an exporter in Bengal has to observe before he can be allowed to actually export rice either to any foreign country, or to any province in India? Export of rice.

(b) At what stage, if at all, are the Local Government or any other local authority consulted before such export is permitted?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) As regards export by sea, it is understood that no person is allowed to export unless he obtains a license from the Collector of Customs.

As regards the export by rail of Bengal rice or uncontrolled Burma rice, his proper course is to arrange with some person in a province to which an allotment of rice has been made by the Foodstuffs Commissioner to obtain a priority certificate in which his name is entered as the consignor.

(b) This Government do not intervene at any stage in such cases. The Director of Civil Supplies is in a position to express an opinion when certificates issued by other Directors are received by him for countersignature.”

22.

(a) In the matter of inter-provincial movement of rice, what precise functions has the local Director of Civil Supplies to perform in regard to a priority certificate granted by an importing province? Export of rice.

(b) Has such certificate to be countersigned by the local Director?

(c) If so, is such countersignature given as a matter of course? If not, in what manner, and to what extent, is the local Director permitted to vary the certificate; and upon what considerations and facts generally is such variation made?

(d) On how many occasions and to what extent on each such occasion, has the local Director exercised his powers of such variation, if any?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) The countersignature of the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, is required to every such certificate issued by the Director of Civil Supplies in any other province.

(c) No; countersignature is not given as a matter of course. Certificates have never been altered by the Director of Civil Supplies in order to facilitate countersignature which would otherwise be refused: they are sometimes altered for other reasons at the request of, or by agreement with, the issuing

Director of Civil Supplies on behalf of the latter, subject to considerations of the inconvenience which may thereby be caused to the railway authorities.

(d) This question cannot be answered without undue labour and expenditure."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

Export of rice.

(a) Is the carrying capacity of the railways taken into consideration before exports of rice are permitted?

(b) Is it a fact that, within the province of Bengal, rice has remained accumulated at certain railway stations in large quantities for a considerable time, for want of adequate facilities of transport, and has thus been wasted to a great extent?

(c) Have the Government received any reports to this effect from any quarter at any time?

(d) If not, are the Government considering the desirability of making inquiries from all railway stations regarding this matter?

(e) Is there any truth in the statement that export has often been allowed under military permits for really non-military purposes and to destinations without any military stations.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) It is understood that the Foodstuffs Commissioner takes the carrying capacity of railways into account when he fixes the monthly allotment of rice to be exported from this province.

(b) It is a fact that rice has accumulated at certain stations as suggested for want of adequate facilities for uncontrolled transport; the whole of it could have been moved with ease under control if it had been considered advisable to allow certain areas to be drained of their stocks of rice by speculators. The risk that some of it might be spoilt was deliberately accepted.

(c) Yes

(d) No.

(e) Government are aware that such allegations have been made; but are not in a position to state whether they are correct."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

Licensed importers of Burma rice.

(a) Who are the licensed importers of Burma rice in Bengal?

(b) Is it a fact that only nominees of the district officers are permitted to import Burma rice from Calcutta and Chittagong into the mufassal?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to publish the names of all such nominees?

(d) How can such nomination be secured?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) The Bengal Government are not prepared to publish the names of the licensed importers.

(b) Uncontrolled Burma rice may be moved freely from Calcutta and Chittagong into districts in Bengal. Controlled Burma rice from Calcutta can only be obtained by nominees of district officers.

(c) Government are not prepared to publish the names of such nominees : they are of interest only in the districts concerned where the information is readily available to persons interested.

(d) Persons desiring nomination should apply to the local district or sub-divisional officer stating the amount required, and the general arrangements which they propose to make : they must be prepared to give adequate guarantees that they will sell at a price fixed by the district officer."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

25.

Will the Government be pleased to state the various rates at which Burma rice can be sold at the head-quarters of the different district towns in Bengal? Rates of Burma rice.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"A reply will be given at the next meeting of Council."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

26.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing how the recent census of rice-stock in Bengal was carried out, together with the results thereof? Census of rice-stock in Bengal.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"A copy of the instructions of Government contained in their circular No. 1-T. R. of the 28th May, 1919, is laid on the table. The general result is that there need be little apprehension of any deficiency of stocks of rice in Bengal."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

27.

(a) With reference to the statement in a recent Press Communiqué denying that rice exported to foreign countries is utilized for non-food purposes, such as wine and starch, will the Government be pleased to state upon what materials has the said statement been made, so far as the case of export to Europe is concerned? Alleged export of rice for non-food purposes.

(b) Are the Government aware of the statement made in Mr. K. L. Dutt's report on the prices inquiry, that distillation and manufacture of starch are among the uses to which rice exported to Europe is put?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) The facts were verified by a reference to the Director of Statistics.

(b) Yes. The statement in Mr. K. L. Dutt's report, which refers to normal pre-war days and not to the present abnormal situation, runs as follows:—

'A considerable portion of the surplus of India, as a whole, is usually exported to Europe, where it is used for food and for the manufacture of spirits and starch, and has to compete with rice of other countries and with a number of other grains, namely, oats, ye and maize, and even with beet and potatoes.'

Establishment of a waterways division for the Eastern Bengal
areas.

(a) Are the Government considering the desirability of establishing a waterways division for the Eastern Bengal areas, making Dacca the headquarters?

(b) If that is not immediately possible, are the Government considering the desirability of posting at least a Sub-Engineer at Dacca to continue the work of the improvement of rivers and khals, commenced by Rai S. N. Banerjee Bahadur

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) and (b) The question has already been receiving the attention of the Local Government. Should any of the projects investigated by Rai Sailendra Nath Banerjee Bahadur mature, then the execution of the same will be entrusted either to the existing permanent staff of the Public Works Department or, should it be found necessary, to the staff of a special division created for the purpose. The maintenance of such projects will, it is hoped, form the nucleus of a permanent waterways division. In the circumstances the desirability of posting a Sub-Engineer, as is suggested, does not arise.”

Enhancement of the parcel rates of the India General

River Steam

(a) Are the Government aware that of late the Steamer Companies, viz., India General Steam Navigation and River Steam Navigation, have greatly enhanced the parcel rates over their portion of the journey and that in consequence the charge between Calcutta and Dacca is Rs. 3-5 now in place of Rs. 2 formerly?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking such steps as may be necessary to relieve the hardships caused by the rise in rates?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) The subjoined table compares the rates at present in force as compared with the previous rates:—

				PARCEL NOT EXCEEDING—
				10 srs.	20 srs.	30 srs.	40 srs.
				Rs. A.	Rs. A.	Rs. A.	Rs. A.

31.

(a) Are the Government aware that the people at Dacca are put to great inconvenience by the level crossing on the Nawabpur road being constantly closed due to shunting and passing of trains?

Trouble caused to the public by the constant closing to traffic of the level crossing on the Nawabpur road, Dacca.

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of removing this inconvenience either by constructing an overbridge or by any other way that the Government may think fit and proper?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) It is recognised that road traffic must be inconvenienced to some extent by the level crossing on the Nawabpur Road at Dacca and it has been ascertained that the Eastern Bengal Railway authorities are considering schemes for substituting an overbridge crossing.

(b) The site and design of an overbridge must however necessarily depend on the design adopted for the general remodelling of the station yard which the Railway authorities also have under consideration."

(a) Are the Government aware

(ii) that the female passengers are put to great inconvenience for want of proper accommodation and often are obliged to remain outside the room exposing themselves to the inclemency of the weather?

Inadequacy of the waiting room for female passengers at Dacca railway station.

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of remedying this evil either by constructing two separate rooms or by extending the existing one?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) It is understood that the Eastern Bengal Railway authorities recognise that the present waiting-room accommodation provided for intermediate and third class female passengers in Dacca railway station is insufficient.

(b) A proposal is under consideration to convert the existing third class female waiting-room into a room for intermediate class female passengers and to construct a new room having double the accommodation for the use of third class females."

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether it is in contemplation to remove the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt to Chetla along with the press?

(c) If the answer be in the affirmative, have the Government considered the serious inconvenience likely to be caused to the public by the removal of the Book Depôt from the heart of the metropolis to an out of the way place in a suburb?

(d) Are the Government aware of the adverse effect on the cash sale of Government publications on account of such removal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) Yes

(c) and (d) It is not anticipated that any serious inconvenience will be caused to the public by the removal of the Book Depôt to Chetla. The cash sales amount on an average to Rs. 72 per day, and the average number of purchasers is about 17 a day. Practice of laying statements on the library table of the Bengal Legislative Council

(a) Are the Government aware of the fact that the complete answers containing statements to unstarred questions, Nos. 35, 36 and 37, asked at the last meeting of the Council have not as yet been supplied to the questioner in spite of several reminders duly sent on the subject?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps they are taking in the matter?

- (c) Are the Government considering the advisability of—
- (i) laying such statements on the Council table in future and not placing them on the library table,
 - (ii) publishing them in the Proceedings of the Council, and
 - (iii) furnishing a printed or typed copy of the complete answer to an unstarred question, containing the statements, to the questioner on the very day of the Council meeting in accordance with the Council Rules?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) and (b) The Hon'ble Member was supplied with copies of these statements on the 30th July 1919. The reason for the delay was that the statements were very lengthy and took some time in printing.

(c) (i), (ii) and (iii) In view of the extra expense involved in printing lengthy and voluminous statements, it has been the settled practice of the Council for some time past ordinarily to lay on the table, and to print in the Proceedings of the Council, only such statements as are of reasonable length.

When the answer to a question refers to lengthy reports or communiqués which have already been published in some form or other, the Hon'ble Member is usually furnished with a copy thereof, and copies are also placed on the library table and in the Press Room in Writers' Buildings.

In the case of lengthy reports, which are only of interest to a limited number of persons, the practice is to show the Hon'ble Member concerned the statement in original, and to place a copy on the library table. This was done in the present case on the day of the Council meeting.

There is precedent in other Councils for the practice set out above, and His Excellency the President sees no reason for making a change.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) It is not possible to give the information required by the Hon'ble Member in the manner asked for by him. The following information is placed before the Council regarding certain of the cases noticed by Government in the press:—

(1) RANGPUR DISTRICT—Alleged death by suicide on account of starvation of one Okimon Mai, wife of one Barika Sheikh of Hitampur police station Mithapukur. Barika Sheikh is a labourer. On the 14th June 1919 he brought home a jack fruit and gave it to his wife to serve him with at the time of breaking his roja. The fruit was carried away by a jackal. On account of this her husband, who it appears, was unkind to her, abused her. She took the abuse to heart and committed suicide by hanging herself with a rope.

(2) BAKARGANJ DISTRICT—(i) Alleged suicide from hunger by one Anaraddi of Salia, police-station Banaripara.—This man committed suicide to escape disgrace and a criminal prosecution for misappropriating the proceeds obtained from the sale of a bullock.

(ii) Alleged death from starvation of a son of one Mafezuddi of Dosatina police-station Jhalakati. This child, aged 4 years, died of fever attended with diarrhoea.

(iii) Alleged death by suicide by hanging of a Moslem couple of Darpara owing to hunger.—No one in the village has committed suicide for many months past. The panchayat of the village denies the allegation in toto.

(3) Dacca DISTRICT—Alleged death from starvation of one Lal Mohan Rishi, of Pangaon, at Wari, Dacca. The man was a beggar. It is reported that he died of diarrhoea contracted through eating jack fruit.

(4) MYMENSINGH DISTRICT—Alleged deaths from starvation in Astagram.—Four such deaths were reported by chaukidars. The subdivisional officer of Kishoreganj made personal inquiries and found that three died from fever and the fourth from small-pox.

(5) BIRBHUM DISTRICT—Alleged deaths from starvation.—Inquiries have been made throughout the district, and so far as can be ascertained there have been no deaths from starvation in the district.

(6) NADIA DISTRICT—(i) Alleged death from starvation of one Bidhu Muchini of village Ghurni.—She was an old leper, aged about 60 years. She had been suffering for several years past. She died of leprosy. It is reported that her death could not be due to starvation as she was the recipient of public charity till the end.

(ii) Alleged death from starvation of one Maji Sheikh of village Shonda.—This man was a carpenter by profession and was addicted to opium and chandu smoking. For some time past he had been suffering from fever and dysentery and died of it.

(iii) Alleged death from starvation of one Pakri Sheikh of village Shonda.—No trace could be found of anybody of this name in the village and no one of that name died there recently.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government will have no objection to publishing, once a quarter, while the present high prices continue, a statement of deaths which have been ascertained to be due to starvation or to have been accelerated by privation.

(e) In view of the answer to (d) requires no reply.

(a) Is it a fact that a security of Rs. 2,000 has been demanded under the Press Act by the District Magistrate of Dacca from the present printer and publisher of the East newspaper and keeper of the East Bengal Press where the said newspaper is printed? Demand of security from the newspaper the East

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the circumstances in which the above demand has been made?

(c) When was the East established, what is the present number of its subscribers, what is approximately the value of the assets of the paper and the printing press, and were these particulars taken into consideration before the aforesaid order was made? Were the conductors heard by the District Magistrate before he issued the said order?

(d) Has any application been made to the authorities against the said order, if so, with what result?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:

" (a) and (b) The paper has recently changed hands, and it consequently became necessary for the new keeper of the press and the new publisher to make declarations under sections 4 and 5 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867. The keeper of the press and the publisher thereupon became liable to deposit security under sections 3 (1) and 8 (1) of the Indian Press Act, 1910 and the District Magistrate of Dacca, seeing no reason for exemption, fixed the amount at Rs. 1,000 in the case of each.

(c) The date of the establishment of the paper is not known, but it was before the passing of the Press Act. It is reported that there are at present 62 subscribers. The District Magistrate, before passing orders granted an interview to the person chiefly associated with the new management of the paper. No information is available regarding the other particulars mentioned in the question.

(d) No such application has been received either by the District Magistrate or by Government."

Steamers running without lights at night on certain routes

(a) Are the Government aware that the steamers of the following lines are often run in the night without proper lights in the rooms allotted to the different classes of passengers, namely:—

(i) the line of steamers running from Dacca to Manikganj and from there to Elashin; and

(ii) the line of steamers running from Tarpasa to Madaripur and from there in various directions, including Barisal

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of holding an inquiry into the matter and, if necessary, of issuing instructions to the Steamer Company to make the necessary improvement?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:

“(a) Only sufficient deck lights are provided for passengers to see their way about the after-decks, companion ways and alley ways. Passengers occupying cabins are entitled to a light and any failure to provide such a light would be taken up at once, if reported to any of the Companies' officers. While vessels are under-way no lights are allowed on the forward deck as this would be prejudicial to safe navigation.

(b) Government do not consider it necessary to hold any inquiry into the matter.”

Primary education in municipal areas.

(a) Are the Government aware of the decision of the Government of Bombay to contribute half the total actual cost, per annum, of primary education, whether voluntary or compulsory, in municipal areas?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of making more liberal grants in the case of those municipalities which may desire to introduce compulsion but are prevented from doing so in consequence of financial difficulty?

(c) Are the Government aware of the programme of the Government of Bombay to provide, during the current year, about 500 schools in villages which have a population of one thousand and over and which were till recently without any school, and about one hundred more schools in villages having a population of 500 and above, which also had no schools?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Under the rules framed by the Government of Bombay, under the Bombay Primary Education Act 1 of 1918, that Government is to bear one-half of the actual expenditure incurred by a municipality for providing free and compulsory primary education in a given year except in special cases where Government may decide to make larger grants.

(b) Commissioners of Divisions and the Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation have been asked to submit returns and programmes for providing primary education for all children aged 6 to 11 likely to attend voluntarily, also for all boys between the ages 6 to 10 together with an estimate of cost for each of these programmes and a statement of the methods by which the cost can be met. The question of making grants to municipalities, who may desire to introduce compulsion but are prevented from doing so in consequence of financial difficulties, will be considered on receipt of these statements. Under section 17 of the Primary Education Act the municipal commissioners may levy an educational cess with the sanction of Government if the combined contributions from Government and the municipality are not sufficient to cover the expenses.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a recent case in the Calcutta Police Court in which two employees of the Indian Subordinate Medical Department attached to the Indian Station Hospital at Alipore were prosecuted at the instance of Rajendra Prasad Barma of the Mochipara thana for an alleged incident of the 4th March last?

Prosecution of two employees of the Indian Station Hospital at Alipore.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the facts and circumstances of the case?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"(a) and (b) The two persons referred to were arrested in Bow Bazar Street at midnight on the 4th March on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and quarrelling with a woman of the town. They were released on their own recognisances and were eventually acquitted by the Magistrate. They subsequently represented that they had gone to the Mochipara police station to telephone for an ambulance to remove a cholera case, and that they had been abused and ill-treated by the sub-inspector and compelled by threats to sign a blank paper. An article relating to the case also appeared in a vernacular newspaper, in which it was alleged that the sub-inspector was in the habit of drinking. An inquiry has been held by the Deputy Commissioner of Police in charge of the South District, who found that there was no reason to believe that the sub-inspector was drunk, and that the evidence regarding ill-treatment was discrepant and unreliable. He thought it was probable that one or both of the men was under the influence of liquor, but that the arrest was unnecessary as they were not incapable of taking care of themselves. The Deputy Commissioner also found that one of the two men had actually used the telephone before his arrest. The sub-inspector has been censured for making an unnecessary arrest in a petty case and for having submitted an inaccurate report regarding the arrest."

Move of Under-Secretaries and Officers of Government to Darjeeling and Dacca.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the period spent by each Under-Secretary at Darjeeling during the last three years and the period they were entitled to remain there under standing orders?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"(a) Under-Secretaries are permitted to be in Darjeeling for eight weeks in the year, while Government are in residence there, but the period may be extended with the sanction of Government when necessary in the interests of the work Under-Secretaries do not ordinarily accompany the Government to Dacca. Owing to the increase of urgent and confidential work since the outbreak of the war, the Political Under-Secretary has accompanied the Chief Secretary both to Darjeeling and to Dacca and has remained at those places during the whole of the Chief Secretary's stay there.

The Secretariat staff taken to Darjeeling and Dacca and the periods for which they remain at those places vary with the requirements of the work from time to time. The greater part of the staff remains in Calcutta throughout the year.

(f) By the abolition of the Arts courses with Chemistry the first year class has fallen into two distinct divisions of Arts and Science students. The latter all study Physics, for which there is laboratory accommodation for only 60 students. The maximum number of students in the first year class has, therefore, been fixed at 180, 100 reading for the Intermediate Examination in Arts and 80 reading for the Intermediate Examination in Science

(g) In 1918 certain courses were removed from the list of those admissible to students at Dacca College

(h) On general educational grounds it was considered by the Principal, with the advice of the staff, to be inexpedient to allow students who had no interest in Science to take up Chemistry for the Intermediate Examination without any other Science subject and with the sole object of securing a higher aggregate of marks in the Examination. The discontinuance of the courses has also had the very desirable effect of simplifying the time-table and thus reducing the time spent in the College by students in waiting between lectures.

The climate of Comilla.

(a) Are the Government aware that the climate of Comilla has deteriorated very considerably during the last five years and that it is steadily deteriorating from year to year?

(b) Are the Government aware of the opinion that has been expressed that the introduction of water-works is essentially necessary to improve the sanitation of the town?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of making an inquiry as to what steps are necessary to retain the old sanitary condition of the town?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The statistics available do not support the view that the health of Comilla has deteriorated very considerably during the last five years. In spite of the outbreak of influenza in 1918 there was an increase of little more than 1,000 admissions at the dispensary and the recorded death-rate for the year was less than half that of the town population of Bengal taken as a whole.

(c) No."

(a) Are the Government aware of a memorial, dated the 13th May, 1919, addressed to the Conservator of Forests, Bengal, by certain forest contractors and sardars of Darjeeling regarding the circumstances in which the monopoly of the charcoal supply in Darjeeling has been given to one Mr. Freer, and containing grave allegations against Mr. Baker, Deputy Conservator of Forests? Charcoal supply in Darjeeling

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what inquiries, if any, have been made into the said allegations and the result thereof?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:

" (a) Yes.

(b) Inquiries have been made through the Conservator of Forests, and Mr. Baker has been given permission to prosecute the memorialists for the defamatory statements contained in the petition "

In regard to the question of the spread of education among women, will the Government be pleased to state whether any attempt was made to recruit female teachers for girls and women from the orthodox Hindu community? Spread of education among women.
If so, when were these steps taken, and with what result?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

" In 1908 a training school for Hindu widows was started in Calcutta. Sixteen stipends of Rs. 10 each are awarded annually at this school and there is a proposal for increasing the number. Orthodox Hindus were at first very reluctant to enter this school, but it is reported that this reluctance is rapidly disappearing. There is also a training class attached to the Eden High School for girls, which is at present attended by 6 students of the orthodox Hindu community. Since 1910, 19 orthodox Hindu teachers have passed out of this class and 15 others had partial training. The difficulty has been that such orthodox Hindu teachers as come for training are generally not qualified for admission into the class. If young enough they are admitted into high school classes until they have reached the requisite standard for training.

Inspectresses of schools insist upon the employment of trained teachers when such are available, and it is reported that no trained teacher has any difficulty in securing employment."

The case of sub-inspector, Dakshina
Ranjan Ghosh

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a suit in the court of the Munsif of Jamalpur (Mymensingh) in which a Marwari trader has recently succeeded in recovering, together with damages an amount from sub-inspector Dakshina Ranjan Ghosh, which the former had to pay to the latter as the price for his release from arrest in connection with a criminal case in which another Marwari bearing the same name was 'wanted'?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the circumstances of the said suit, together with the findings arrived at by the Munsif, and whether any departmental action is contemplated to be taken against the said sub-inspector?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) A copy of the Munsif's judgment is placed on the library table. The defendant sub-inspector has appealed against the decision. The question of departmental action will be considered after the appeal is disposed of."

Medical
school children.

(a) In view of the good results obtained by medical inspection of school children in the Punjab, Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, and Assam, as stated in the Bureau of Education's publication on Indian education in 1917-18, page 7, are the Government considering the desirability of introducing a system of medical inspection of school children in Bengal?

(b) How many first-aid classes are there in the high schools of the Presidency?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) The Government of India have been addressed for the creation of a post of Deputy Sanitary Commissioner as an experimental measure for five years to inspect school buildings and hostels from the sanitary and hygienic point of view. He will also be in charge of the medical inspection of school children, make special studies of the diseases to which children are particularly liable and suggest suitable measures for their prevention.

(b) There are 18 such classes in the high schools of the Presidency at the moment. Classes in other schools are being started."

THE CALCUTTA CRUELTY TO ANIMALS BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to cruelty to animals in Calcutta.

He said :—

“My Lord, the object of this Bill will probably command the approval of all of us and I, therefore, merely propose to indicate briefly how it was that this legislation has come to be undertaken, and to draw attention to the more important changes which the measure will effect.

Legislation on the subject of cruelty to animals is, of course, not a new thing. In fact, it is of sufficient age to have got into somewhat of a tangle, and at the present moment in Bengal the matter is regulated by five Acts, three of the Bengal Council and two of the Government of India Council, the oldest of which dates back to 1869. In consequence, there is a certain amount of over-lapping, there is the difficulty of reference to more than one measure, and there are possible difficulties of interpretation owing to the different wordings of the different Acts. That reason alone would have justified us in attempting the consolidation which the present Bill seeks to achieve, but it was not wholly or, in fact, primarily, on that account that this legislation was initiated. Its origin is to be sought about the year 1915, and it will be seen, therefore, that it has taken some time to elaborate it. About 1915 various remarks in reports, etc., gave rise to the impression that the administration of the Acts possibly left something to be desired, and that the effective control of cruelty might perhaps be improved. The Government of that date remitted the consideration of the matter to a small conference, over which the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Becheroff presided, and on which there were several gentlemen interested in the subject, among them, I think, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. That conference held various meetings, and submitted a report, which dealt with some matters of administration, with which we are not now concerned, but also contained some definite recommendations for the amendment of the law. The principal of these were as follows. The committee thought that the law might be made more effective on the subject of overloading—the driving of animals with excessive loads—and they contemplated a system of weigh-bridge stations at various places to which carts could be taken, if suspected to be overloaded, and weighed; in the event of the load proving to be excessive it was suggested that the excess burden should be taken off the cart and kept until the owner came and took it away. The justification of the proposal is obvious; it is no relief to a wretched weary animal to send it along the rest of its journey with an excessive load.

Another recommendation had reference to the working of unfit animals, and the appointment was proposed of veterinary inspectors with power to send such animals to an infirmary to be detained there until the veterinary officer in charge was satisfied that the animal was fit to be discharged. For this, I think, the justification is equally clear; if an animal is to derive any good from being sent to an infirmary, it should be detained there until it is cured.

In the next proposal it was sought to make the liability of owners and contractors wider in respect of the driving of unfit animals and the working of overloaded animals, the implication being that these were the people who were, in fact, deriving pecuniary benefit from the act of cruelty.

Lastly, they desired to see the law on the subject of the objectionable practice of phuka made more stringent.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

These were their proposals, and after they had been discussed with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and various other authorities a Bill was drawn up. That Bill was again referred to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to the Calcutta Corporation and to the European Association, which had taken an interest in the subject, and after their replies had been received and considered, the Bill was put into final form and ultimately went through the different stages of sanction by the Government of India and reference to the Secretary of State prior to its introduction to-day. That, Sir, is the history of the measure and although I have already mentioned its principal clauses I will run shortly through the detailed clauses themselves drawing attention to one or two points of interest.

In the first place, the Act will only apply immediately to Calcutta, although, hereafter, if need be, it may be extended to other areas.

In clause 5 which defines various kinds of cruelty, we propose two small changes, viz., to make it an offence to keep an animal in a position involving unnecessary pain or suffering, and, again, to declare the infliction of the suffering of thirst to be a form of cruelty.

Clause 6, as regards overloading, and clause 11, as regards the working of unfit animals, deal with the matter to which I have already referred, viz., the extended liability of traders, carriers and contractors, or those employed by them, for acts of cruelty done to animals belonging to them or in their use.

Clause 7 deals with the phuka process.

Then we come to a series of clauses—14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, in particular—which have reference to the system of weigh-bridges which I have outlined, and the taking of over-loaded carts to them; also the unloading of excess loads and the keeping of them at the weigh-bridgestation until the owners remove them; while, incidentally, provision is made for the power to dispose of excess loads as unclaimed property under certain conditions. Clause 25 has reference to infirmaries and allows an animal to be kept there until it is declared fit for work.

Clause 26 is of importance, and gives power to direct the destruction of animals whose sufferings are so great as to justify that step, or if unfit for work owing to old age or incurable disease, while sub-clause (3) gives power to a police officer to kill an injured or a diseased animal on a certificate of a veterinary inspector. That follows an English statute, and it is a power which is both merciful and humane.

In clause 30 we have the usual rule making authority conferred, and in clause 31 a power of delegation is given to any person or local authority. Incidental to that, in clause 36, the right is given to local authorities of expending their funds on matters connected with the administration of the Act.

Those, Sir, are the main clauses of the Bill, and I think the justification for most of them is fairly clear on their face. The Bill I now seek permission to introduce will be circulated in the ordinary course, and we hope to get in opinions at the beginning of the cold weather when it will be referred to a Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTIONS

(under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest).

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a qualified Indian be appointed as the Director of Agriculture for Bengal at an early opportunity.

He said :—

“My Lord, I have carefully gone through the resolution No. 631 T.—R., dated the 7th June, 1919, by Your Excellency's Government on the subject of ‘certain aspects of the Organization and Policy of the Agricultural Department in Bengal’, as published in the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 11th June last. I was present at the University Institute, Calcutta, on the 28th March, 1919, when Mr. G. S. Dutt, I.C.S., Collector of the District of Birbhum, delivered an instructive lecture based on practical experience on the subject of a ‘Practical Scheme of Agricultural Organization and Rural Reconstruction in Bengal’. The object of my moving this resolution is for the successful administration of the Agricultural Department. The question as to the selection of the proper man to fill up the post of the Director of Agriculture for Bengal, therefore, requires a very careful consideration of Your Excellency's Council. It has been rightly held by some eminent members of the Royal Commission on the Public Services in India that ‘Agricultural education in India cannot reach the highest stage of development until Indian agriculture has been thoroughly studied and surveyed by competent scientific experts’. As the Indian Civil Service does not connote any special training in Indian agriculture, a very large majority of the members of this service, excepting in the case of one or two Indians, are not trained experts in agriculture; but it is a matter of surprise that the Directorship of Agriculture was for a long time reserved for the European members of the Indian Civil Service. It is, however, a matter of satisfaction to note that the Indian Civil Service supplied a most useful body of public servants. The Indian Civil Service was mainly organized to supply higher officers in the executive and judicial departments of the State and the schedule to the Statute of 1861 clearly indicates the classes of posts to be specially reserved for the Indian Civil Service. It was in 1866, that is to say, just after the conclusion of the labours in connection with the Bengal and Orissa Famine Commission, that the policy of having a special department to watch over the interests of agriculture was first mooted. In 1870 Lord Mayo took up this matter chiefly in relation to the improvement of the supply of cotton from India and in 1871 the first Agricultural Department was created. In Lord Mayo's opinion the work of the new department was ‘to take cognizance of all matters affecting the practical improvement and development of the agricultural resources of the country’.

The Provincial Government that took early steps in the matter and rendered valuable assistance to the raiyats was that of the North-Western Provinces, where in 1875, Sir John Strachey, the then Lieutenant-Governor, strongly advocated the utilization of Court of Wards' Estates and Government khas mahals for purposes of investigation and the employment of them as ‘Model Farms’, and for finding out the real condition of the cultivating classes. His Honour took a keen personal interest in redressing the grievances of the raiyats and succeeded in improving their financial position and made them happier during his successful administration of the province. Under His Honour's careful supervision, the Director of Agriculture made local investigations in every district, personally collected accurate information as to the liability of each district to famine, made thorough inquiry into agricultural practices of raiyats in the different districts of the province as a preliminary to agricultural improvement, and thus, in every way he made agriculture the business of his life, and he considered its practical improvement the chief duty of his office.

The Department of Agriculture in a province like Bengal is one of the public services in which the unique advantages of employing indigenous agency, to the fullest possible extent, in preference to foreign elements, are now freely admitted. With the facilities for technical training at Pusa, it should be possible to meet all the requirements of the Department of Agriculture. The time has now come when Your Excellency's Government should carefully consider the question of appointing a qualified Indian as the Director of Agriculture for Bengal for the following amongst other reasons :—

The Director of Agriculture for Bengal will have to effect agricultural improvements in Indian soil, and, therefore, he must be a man who has devoted the best portion of his life to learn Indian, and not English agriculture, and this can never be taught at an institution like Cirencester, Dowton or elsewhere. Merely going through an agricultural course of training, such as is provided at any of the institutions referred to above, with practical experience for a year or so in a European farm, does not constitute a man a practical agriculturist suitable for Bengal. Again, there are further difficulties regarding language as spoken by the raiyats and also in the matter of furlough and the consequent changes in tenure of the Director's office.

The arguments hitherto advanced in favour of the employment of European experts for the scientific development of Indian agriculture are not convincing and the experiment has conspicuously failed to meet the desired effect. He may have a knowledge of English agriculture which, if he desires to apply in the case of illiterate raiyats of Bengal, without carefully studying the existing practices and actual conditions of Indian agriculture in the various districts of the province, and also having regard to the market value of the agricultural produce and the economic condition of the raiyats, he will but repeat some of the gravest blunders which have made the people of Bengal doubt the possibility of improving Indian agriculture at all through European agency at the head of the administration where the Director's opinion is considered as the guiding principle of the Department.

With these few remarks, I move this resolution for the consideration of Your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I yield to none either in my anxiety or my desire to see my countrymen occupying places of trust and honour and responsibility under the Government and being an agriculturist myself I, at any rate, take a good deal of interest in the agriculture of the country, but I regret to say that I cannot agree with the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution that an Indian, a qualified Indian, be appointed as Director of Agriculture at an early date. My reasons are, in the first place, we, the Indians of the liberal school, have always claimed a place of honour as a matter of right on the grounds of equality and we have always pleaded that there should be no distinction of race or colour, class or creed, when the question of the appointment of Indians comes up, and it will be inconsistent on our part to demand that the question of race or colour should be one of the items of qualification for any post under the Government. This is a minor matter. The real question is that the Department of Agriculture forms one of the most important departments of Government. Agriculture is primarily the chief mainstay of the people, and it should be fostered, developed and improved as much as possible. I am afraid that at the present moment agricultural education is practically nil in this country. The education of my countrymen in that branch has not been sufficient enough to make us demand that an Indian be appointed as a Director of Agriculture. My friend has said that English experts with their experience of foreign lands, as for instance, England, come and try to introduce scientific agriculture into this country and have failed. I do not know what experiments were made, but this much I can say, that it is generally wondered how European and American agriculturists can produce a larger quantity of crops from an area of land than we can do. We believe this system of scientific training and scientific agriculture which is in practice and in vogue in other countries is being looked into, and we are anxiously waiting for the day when such systems will be introduced in this country. Our education on these lines has not been sufficient, and as a consequence we are faced with famine every year. Of course, there are other causes for famine and scarcity in this country than the growth of agriculture, but if we can introduce scientific agricultural methods and improve upon them, then we shall be able to a great extent to remove distress and make famines rare in spite of the disadvantages under which the country is suffering. I, therefore, think, my Lord, that the question of the appointment of the Director of Agriculture should be left entirely to experienced experts who would be able to introduce what has been termed a 'scientific system of agriculture' in this country. But at the same time I hope and trust that Your Excellency's Government will devote much greater attention to this department than has been done in the past."

Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mover has given a general account of the history of the Agricultural Department; but I am sorry to say that in enunciating the principles which have governed our policy in that department, I do not think that he has stated them in their proper light, and indeed, much of what he has said in favour of his resolution is quite irrelevant to the immediate point at issue, viz., that an Indian should be appointed at an early date in place of a European. Now, what are the general principles which should apply to the appointment of a Director of Agriculture in any province, and in the second place, what are the considerations which exist with reference to the present incumbent in Bengal? As regards the general principles, the Secretary of State, about 13 years ago, in 1906, at the time when the Agricultural Department was in an incipient state, laid down that members of the Indian Civil Service should be appointed for the initial organization of the department; but the Secretary of State looked forward to the time when the agricultural service would be able, like other services, to provide its own chief. A year later, in 1911, the dictum that officers of the Agricultural Department should receive a full opportunity of proving their fitness for the post was enunciated by the Government of India, and this dictum was emphasized by the Local Government in 1916 when Mr. Milligan, a member of the Imperial Agricultural Department, who had special experience, both in the Punjab and at Pusa, apart from his personal qualifications, was appointed to the post of Director of Agriculture in Bengal. Finally, in the report of the Public Services Commission to which the Hon'ble Mover has alluded, published in 1916, it was further stated that the object to be kept steadily in view was to reduce to a minimum the number of experts appointed in England and to train indigenous talent so as to enable the department to depend on its own resources for the recruitment of the agricultural staff in the higher branches.

Now, Sir, from what I have stated, two principles emerge : (1) that indigenous talent should be used to the utmost extent possible for the Imperial Agricultural Department, and (2) that that department should ultimately supply its own chief. The complete application of these two principles would obviously in time produce an Indian Director of Agriculture, which is the object which the Hon'ble Member himself has in view.

Now, as regards the particular circumstances relating to the appointment in Bengal, what are the facts? The facts are that Mr. Milligan, who, as I have said, was appointed first in 1916, after a series of officers of the Indian Civil Service, as Director, was compelled to take leave on account of ill health. At the time of the budget debate in April last I expressed the regret of Government that they were temporarily losing the services of this officer by reason of his ill health. Now, Mr. Milligan is still the permanent Director; and there is no intention at present of removing him from that post. It is hoped that he may return reinvigorated after a period of rest. I can scarcely think the Hon'ble Member desires that this officer should be ejected from the appointment. He has urged that European experts fail on account of their ignorance of the language, of the soil and of the conditions of agriculture in this country. I do not think that this attack can be made on the present incumbent. It is further alleged that the appointment of an expert has conspicuously failed. The other Hon'ble Member who addressed the Council did not support him on that particular point, but I think I am justified in putting the following very brief statement before the Council in this connection. By the distribution of improved varieties of rice and jute, which are particularly due to the energies and administrative ability of Mr. Milligan, the province has already benefited to the extent of 40 lakhs of rupees owing to the improved value of the crops produced; and, if the present system which is in vogue is continued for a reasonably further period, it is anticipated that the net income of the cultivators of rice and jute in Bengal from this source alone will be increased by no less than 12 crores of rupees. Moreover, when it was suggested, or rather, when it was rumoured, that Mr. Milligan was likely to return from this province to the Imperial Department at Pusa, towards the end of 1917, several of the Indian non-official members of this Council inquired as to the truth of this rumour and as to the cause of Mr. Milligan's relinquishment of the post; and they at the same time expressed great disappointment at the prospect of losing an officer who had, in a short space of time, made himself fully acquainted with the agricultural needs of this Presidency. I put that fact against the allegation made by the Hon'ble Member that the appointment of European experts has conspicuously failed. This view appeared in the shape of a resolution which was tabled for the meeting of the Council in January 1918 that measures be taken to place the services of this officer permanently at the disposal of this Government. The Hon'ble Mover who desired to move that resolution did not, however, proceed with it, as he said there was a difference of opinion on the subject. I take it that the difference of opinion is that which is represented to-day by the views of the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and the Hon'ble Mover. In the Budget debate of April last it will be remembered that I said that Mr. Milligan's appointment had been hailed with acclamation when it was made, and that I had heard golden opinions about his work from many quarters. I am in a position to say that the Agricultural Department in this Presidency has taken a large step forward within the last two years; and this is in a high degree due to the technical advice and administrative ability of the present permanent incumbent. These are the facts regarding the present incumbent. Then what of the future, regarding which I have stated that the result of the complete application of the several principles would be the appointment of an Indian Director of Agriculture? Regarding the future, when ultimately the question of a successor to Mr. Milligan becomes a live issue, it will—I doubt not, and I advise the Council that it should—be made by the selection of the best man available for the post irrespective of racial considerations. The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has also stated that that is the principle which should govern at the present time an appointment of this nature. In this view, my Lord, I am not prepared to recommend to the Council to accept the Hon'ble Mover's resolution."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said —

"My Lord, I have listened to the statements which have been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming. The reason which persuaded me to come to the Council for the appointment of an Indian expert is simply this and nothing more than this—that an Indian being a native of the soil can understand agricultural business better than a foreigner. I am fully aware of the fact that Government are spending large sums of money for the improvement of agriculture and I am also aware of the fact that efforts are being made for the purpose of making the raiyats of this country happier, but, my Lord, we join issues here. Is the department so very successful as it ought to be under European agency? That is a matter for the consideration of the members of the Council. I am an Indian and, therefore, I have a partiality for Indians. I come forward simply on the ground that an Indian is expected to do something in this agricultural country. The principles which have been enunciated by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming are principles which admit no doubt of consideration. On one side, it may be argued that here is an European agency who have got full scientific education and consequently such agency may be employed for the purpose of utilizing the principles of agriculture. On the other hand, it may be argued that the Indians who have been in the land since their birth know more of Indian agriculture than a foreigner is expected to do. In such circumstances, my Lord, it is for consideration whether those principles which have been enunciated by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming can be engrafted now. I submit for the consideration of the Council that the arguments which I have put forward before the Council may not be lost sight of.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abdul Kasem has said that he does not appreciate the arguments which I put forward. I respectfully differ from him. But the simple issue is whether a qualified Indian or in other words a qualified expert is expected to manage agricultural business in a better way than an European. I am grateful to the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming for telling me that in future this matter will be considered by Government. But I have put forward this resolution in the hope that it would be accepted by Government and that early steps may be taken for the appointment of an Indian as Director of Agriculture. If Your Excellency's Government consider that Indians are not fit to manage the agricultural business, and if they say that they are incompetent men by whose appointment agricultural business would suffer, I would respectfully ask, my Lord, who is practically managing the agricultural business now? If an inquiry is to be made—and the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming is fully aware of the fact—it will be found that it is Indian officers who are managing the agricultural business in this Presidency, and I, therefore, propose that the Head of the Department should be a practical Indian agriculturist.

With these submissions I press the resolution for the consideration of the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a fully equipped Agricultural College, to be finally incorporated with the proposed Dacca University, be established at Dacca at once.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the questions raised by this recommendation are of such an important character that I do not think I need say more than a very few words in commending this resolution to the acceptance of Your Excellency's Government and this Council. This is the second occasion on which I have ventured to draw the attention of Your Excellency's Government to the fact that although there happens to be in the vicinity of Dacca an agricultural farm which has admittedly been carrying on experiments quite satisfactorily from the point of view even of an expert, no attempt has yet been made to co-ordinate the results of these experiments and to give the students who resort to this experimental farm for purposes of study and learning the art of agriculture, any further lectures or courses of study so far as that branch of the education is concerned. On the former occasion when this question was discussed in this Council I was told in so many words that the question of the establishment of an agricultural college at Dacca must be kept in abeyance till the whole question of the reform of the University of Calcutta had been threshed out by the University Commission and the recommendations of that Commission had been considered by Government. The report of the Commission is now out and I would venture to submit that the recommendations of this Commission themselves support very strongly the case for the establishment of an agricultural college at Dacca.

To begin with, I take the liberty to read a few sentences from the report of the Calcutta University Commission, Vol. III, Part I, Chapter XXV. I am reading from page 112 :—

‘ The supreme economic importance of agriculture in Bengal may be realized from the fact that out of a total population of 46 millions, 35 millions are dependent on it as a means of livelihood.

Yet at present there is not a single institution in the province giving agricultural education ; the term does not even figure in the last Quinquennial Review of Education in Bengal.’

The report goes on to say :—

‘ An agricultural conference was held in 1888 which urged the necessity of educating teachers of the required kind, and a Government resolution of the same year placed on the Agricultural and Educational Departments in every province the obligation to work out a practical scheme of agricultural education. * * * Among the conclusions of the resolution of 1897 were the following :—

The agricultural degrees, diplomas, or certificates should be placed upon the same footing as corresponding literary or science degrees, etc., in qualifying for admission to Government appointments, and more particularly those connected with land revenue administration.

That the diploma should eventually be compulsory in the case of certain appointments, e.g., of agricultural teachers in training schools, assistants to the Director of Agriculture, etc.’

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

In paragraph 6 at page 121 of the same report we read as follows :—

‘The Universities Commission of 1902 expressed the view that in a country like India, which is mainly agricultural, it would appear that agricultural teaching, both ordinary and superior, should be considered as essential. They considered that a higher course in agriculture should consist of practical and theoretical teaching in the sciences underlying or connected with scientific agriculture, accompanied by practical training on experimental farms, and that students who had completed a course of this kind in the colleges and passed an appropriate examination for a diploma at the end of their theoretical instruction should then be drafted on to a farm controlled by experts, and undergo subsequent training for a year or more in actual farm work.’

Then following on that resolution—there was a resolution of 1904—the Government of India in a despatch to the Secretary of State at the end of 1905 defined in greater detail their general policy of which the salient points have been summed up as follows :—

‘There was to be established in each important province an agricultural college and a research station, adequately equipped with laboratories and class rooms to which was to be attached a farm of suitable size.’

Then, my Lord, the Calcutta University Commission remarks :—

‘The policy sketched out in the preceding paragraphs has, for various reasons, not been carried out fully either in regard to the Imperial Institute at Pusa, or in any province, least of all in Bengal.’

The result has been that the new developments left Bengal entirely without any agricultural college. I take the liberty of reading a few more passages from the University Commission’s report. I read from page 127 :—

‘The classes at Sibpur were closed in 1909 in view of the decision to establish an agricultural college at Sabour in Bihar, then forming part of the province of Bengal. The Sabour College was not opened till 1910. But under the territorial readjustment of 1912 Sabour ceased to be within the limits of Bengal and the college is now under the control of the Department of Agriculture of Bihar and Orissa, although it continues to admit students from Bengal and is under the same management as when it was the agricultural college of Bengal. The proportion of the students admissible into the Sabour College annually from the provinces of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and Assam are 20, 17, and 3, respectively. The number of students from Bengal actually admitted in recent years have been as follows :—

1913-14	2
1914-15	4
1915-16	9
1916-17	11
1917-18	4

A considerable proportion of the Bengal Sabour students are stated in recent years of the Bengal Department of Agriculture to have obtained Government appointments.’

Under the Patna University Act (1917), section 11, no Indian University other than Patna can admit any educational institution in the province of Bihar and Orissa to any privilege whatever, and under this provision, therefore, Universities of Bengal would be presumably debarred from recognizing any courses at Sabour as forming part of a course in agriculture.

Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur.

My Lord, these quotations from the report of the Calcutta University Commission themselves make it manifest that so far as agricultural education is concerned we have not got within the limits of this Presidency any agricultural college or university, and supposing we are going to have a University at Dacca, it cannot claim the privilege of recognizing or conferring degrees on the students of Bengal who may resort to Sabour for purposes of study. So far as higher agricultural education is concerned, the students of Bengal find one of the avenues of education absolutely shut to themselves. In these circumstances it is only natural that the people of Bengal should insist that so far as this province is concerned, suitable arrangements for agricultural education should be made at an early date. The question then arises, if there is to be an agricultural college, where can that be most suitably located? We can think of Sibpur and its surroundings and we can think of Rangpur with its agricultural farms and we can also think of Dacca with an experimental farm at Manipur. So far as Sibpur is concerned I would say that for the western districts of the Presidency, i.e., for the students who belong to the west of the Ganges there ought to be some sort of arrangement for giving higher agricultural education; but for the students coming from the eastern districts an agricultural college at Dacca should, I think, be of immense advantage to them. I have already submitted that the experimental farm at Manipur possesses natural advantages for the purpose of agricultural education and that there are thousands of acres of land around where experiments can be carried on with the utmost efficiency and utmost regard to the requirements of higher agricultural teaching. In these circumstances and with all these natural advantages at hand I submit to Your Excellency that it is high time that an agricultural college should at once be started at Dacca and in the near future when we hope to have the Dacca University the agricultural college can be incorporated with that University, which will give the Dacca University a high status among the Universities. With these few observations I would strongly commend this resolution to the acceptance of Your Excellency's Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I beg to support the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul Haq. In the year 1917, I urged upon this Council the necessity of establishing an agricultural college and a medical college at Dacca, eventually to form part of the Dacca University. The then Member in charge said in reply that there was hardly any demand for an agricultural college here, as no zamindar responded to the call made upon them on this behalf. Since then I have consulted many zamindars, specially of the Mymensingh district. Though they agreed as to the usefulness of agricultural education, they did not like to avail themselves of such training. Their reluctance is due to want of any future prospect in the Government services, besides the zamindars have little or no land in their khas possession upon which to fall back for agricultural experiment. But the case is different with the jotedars and middle class men. The former will be directly benefited by agricultural training and for the latter it will open a new avenue. Owing to overcrowding of all learned professions the middle class people are in sore need of new departments in which they may try to earn their livelihood.

The Government have already started agricultural stores in every district and agricultural officers have been appointed. The time is not distant when every subdivision will require such an officer. Every district, nay, every subdivision, will welcome an experimental farm at its headquarters. An institution in Dacca will remove a great want for training qualified men to take up such works. The nearest agricultural institution is at Sabour in Bihar, a long way off, and also the separation of Bihar from Bengal has made it imperatively necessary to establish an agricultural institution in this province which is pre-eminently an agricultural province; and Dacca already possessing the headquarters of the Agricultural Department with its excellent farm is the fit place for such an institution.

Even in western civilized countries the agriculturists are loathe to adopt scientific methods, and for this reason the Governments there adopt all sorts of means to try experiments as near as possible to the agriculturists' fields. In India, where agriculture is thousands and thousands of years old, it is the more difficult to induce the cultivators to adopt modern scientific methods. It is, therefore, not to be surprised at if people from Bengal, specially from Eastern Bengal, do not go to an institution at Sabour far away from their homes. With the existing staff at Dacca, with a few additions, a less ambitious institution can be started without making any heavy outlay.

It is proposed to introduce agricultural subjects in the primary courses too. The demand for teachers with agricultural training will grow day by day. So, both for the recruitment of agricultural officers as well as teachers such an institution is required. But if, in view of immediate establishment of the proposed Medical College first in the Dacca University, which is no doubt a greater necessity, the idea of starting an agricultural institution be put off for some time, I would beg to suggest that a number of stipends be established to enable young men to avail themselves of the same for prosecuting their studies at Sabour or any other agricultural institution. If a few appointments are guaranteed in the beginning it is hoped that competent students will be forthcoming to go up for this purpose."

The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Maulvi Aman Ali said :—

"My Lord, though Eastern Bengal is an agricultural country, its present production is not equal to the requirements of the people and so some sort of scientific education in agriculture is very essential and the establishment of an agricultural college at Dacca which is the central place is most desirable. The Hon'ble Mover of the resolution has dealt with the matter in its various aspects and so I do not like to waste the time of the Council in any other way than merely giving my full support to the resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, although I anticipate some practical difficulties I desire to give the principles of this resolution my whole-hearted support. There is commendable impetuosity of my Hon'ble friend, the mover, on the part to get everything done at once. But a serious difficulty—is that the recommendations of the Commission which in detail are awaiting the consideration of the Government and the educational authorities,—must take some time to digest. There would also be the difficulty of having the teaching recognized by degrees so long as Dacca has not its own University and Faculty of Commerce. The Government of India is not immediately giving its assent to the suggestions of the Calcutta University for the creation of an Industrial Faculty and it may be a question whether on the whole there may not be a Central Industrial Teaching organization with affiliated colleges in the different provinces. And then there is the paramount question of finance. My Lord, these are aspects of the case which no doubt the Hon'ble Member-in-charge will deal with and I need not labour them. For present purposes and for giving the support that I desire to give to the principles of this resolution, I desire to call attention to the recognition by the Universities Commission of the absolute and supreme need of adding importance to the agricultural side of University education. With regard to the principle of those recommendations there can be no difference of opinion, though in attempting to give effect to them, Your Excellency's Government will have to consider in detail the administrative side of the question. I congratulate Your Excellency on the prospects of your being the Chancellor of two Universities—an honour which no ruler of an Indian province is likely to have soon, though the United Provinces have two Universities and may soon have a third. Though it may not be Your Excellency's fortune to be the Chancellor of more than two Universities, I hope the time is not distant when, with the pronouncement of the Universities Commission pursued to its legitimate conclusion, this province will have more than two Universities at no distant a date, for the country fully needs them. My Lord, even in the earlier days, when feeling ran high, I was always for Dacca having a University of its own and working out its own educational salvation. The educational enthusiasm of Dacca, of which I have abundant never ceasing evidence every time I am here, fully justifies its having the prominence that this resolution desires to give it pending the adoption of the Dacca University scheme. Even, I hope my friend from the West will not quarrel with me if, for the moment, I take upon myself to say that the Western districts will be content to let Dacca have the first place with regard to a proposal of this kind. We have our Medical College, we have the biggest Law College of the province, we have the Engineering College and I do not think the West will be so grasping as to want the agricultural college also when Dacca so badly wants developing.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has referred us to the deliberation of 1888 and 1902. Ever since then we have been awaiting for our agricultural advancement, I can quite realize what the difficulties have been in the way of those who had the handling of that proposition. At Government expense, promising scholars were sent to England and came out fully equipped as agricultural experts, and, with their agricultural training, they enter the High Court and Arts Colleges or fill various posts in various branches of Your Excellency's Government, Judicial and Executive. This was an encouraging experiment, although not followed by encouraging results, for the field of practical work appeared to be limited. Government cannot, therefore, be blamed in making its pace too slow. But there have been later developments and impelled by force of public opinion it was my good fortune to bring forward before the University a comprehensive scheme for Agricultural, Industrial and Technological training. Although there was considerable initial opposition it finally died away and the Senate of the University whole-heartedly accepted my proposal and submitted them to the Government of India. The University Commission had been appointed, in the meantime, and the Government of India naturally said that, before dealing with the recommendations that have been sent up as a whole by the University, they will have to wait for the recommendation of the Commission. Those recommendations are, what I always anticipated, they could not help to be, and the views of the University have been supported by the Commission. There is nothing now in our way to give early effect to those recommendations, and when the time for that comes, I do hope that Dacca shall be the first choice. Its resources have been indicated—resources that may, to a certain extent, be present in the Western districts—but resources which are certainly not inferior to those of the Western districts. I hope, my Lord, some day the facilities for travelling to Dacca will be expedited—a resolution appears in the agenda paper on the table to-day for that purpose. When that comes the Western districts will not have much to complain of. Everybody cannot have an agricultural college or a medical college brought to the front door of his house and Western Bengal will gladly come to the East for a time for its agricultural training. In connection with this question and the proposals of the University for an agricultural scheme, although hardly arising out of this question, I desire to associate myself fully with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

in reply to the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur. At one time we viewed with dismay the likelihood of Mr. Milligan being transferred from the province; and I was one of those who did not hesitate to give vent to that feeling. I hope Mr. Milligan will return soon with renewed vigour and take charge of his department and Your Excellency's Government will have at their disposal assistance which will be of the utmost importance in giving effect to this scheme. References have been made to Sabour and Pusa. I myself have not been able to realize why the number of students from Bengal has been so small there—the difficulty of having a suitable career may be one of the reasons. The difficulty of curriculum may be another. The Pusa Institute is essentially a Research Institute. In the college what we are thinking of, it ought to be something different, something more suited to the requirements of the province, something more suited to the openings and the careers at the end of the college training. We have to decide whether we want to train up agricultural experts or practical agriculturists or merely land stewards and zamindari managers or potential members of the Agricultural Department. These are questions of more than detail which will have to be thought out very carefully. I am afraid, therefore, some time must elapse before the scheme can be materialized; but whenever that may be, I hope Dacca will have the preference. Some of our friends are good enough to show their partiality for Dacca by sending in resolutions without taking care to attend the Dacca Session of the Council for 'luscious fields' elsewhere detain them. I do not doubt that Western Bengal representatives who have come will support this resolution in the proper spirit."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, after all that has been said in regard to this resolution, I do not think I should be justified in detaining the Council by any lengthy remarks of my own. I would only like to say that we, the people of Western Bengal, desire it as much as my Hon'ble friend, the mover, that an agricultural college should be established at Dacca. The conveniences for an agricultural college at Dacca are many and we will only be too glad to avail ourselves of the opportunity which would be afforded by that college for an agricultural training. I may say, Sir, that the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari anticipated difficulties in carrying out the scheme, but I anticipate a sympathetic reply from the Government. What I hope and trust is that Your Excellency's Government will take the matter up in earnest and try to expedite it and give a sympathetic consideration. As I have said before, the question of agriculture is a very important one. It has been remarked that the prospect of the students of the agricultural college does not seem to be very bright and attractive so that students would not come. I think that is not entirely correct, though not much wrong. The Collector of Birbhum, of whom reference has been made by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur has started a network of agricultural societies in his district and those societies are now trying to obtain expert opinion, paying fees, and if an agricultural college is established, the passed students from that college may, in addition to their being employed by the Government of the territorial magnet, also earn a decent livelihood by private practice. Formerly mining students used to appear though there could be no private practice for them so far as mining was concerned, but I know that two at least of our Indian Mining Engineers are commanding a good practice by giving expert opinion to Indian mine owners in my part of the province. So I do not think that there will be any difficulty in providing occupation for graduates of the agricultural college if it is formed. My Lord, notice has been given of two other resolutions for to-day's meeting—I understand they will not be taken up to-day—about removing the difficulties in the way of our students who have failed to gain admission into the colleges. Much of this difficulty will be removed

Mr. Cumming.

if agricultural colleges are established in larger numbers. I think it is more important to have a larger number of agricultural, industrial and medical colleges than to have additional classes in our arts and science colleges, whether Government or private. No less an authority than Sir Profullya Chandra Roy has said that it is desirable that avenues of employment should be opened out for our young men through more professional and technical colleges. Before I sit down, I have only one remark to make. The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has said that Western Bengal will be content if an agricultural college is established at Dacca, because it has its medical college and engineering college. I only wish to say that Western Bengal people hope and trust that in the near future Dacca will have a medical college of its own because the Calcutta Medical College cannot provide sufficient accommodation for the growing number of students and that Dacca will have its own engineering college too."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, the object of the Hon'ble Mover's resolution is to obtain facilities for higher agricultural education at Dacca. Government, I may say at once, are prepared to meet him in this respect; but, as I shall explain presently, on different lines from those advocated by him. The Hon'ble Maulvi has correctly said that the Bengal Government are now awaiting the report of the Calcutta University Commission. This report is in the hands of the public, and he has read out various extracts from the same. But I doubt if the Council have gathered from these extracts what are the salient principles underlying this subject.

The proposal of the Hon'ble Mover is the establishment of an agricultural college at Dacca to be finally incorporated with the proposed Dacca University. In connection with a proposal of this nature two sets of considerations have to be examined; first, the principles underlying the imparting of agricultural education of a University character in any province and, secondly, the particular considerations affecting Bengal.

First of all, as regards the principles underlying the institution of an agricultural college, the discussion has been, as the University Commission has pointed out, protracted and voluminous; but we need only consider the recommendations of general application which have been made within recent years. At the conference on agricultural education at Pusa in 1916 the issue was whether agricultural colleges should provide merely suitable candidates for service in the agricultural department or whether they should aim at providing a liberal and scientific education in agriculture which should be as complete as possible. The conference resolved that, while as an absolute proposition they were in favour of providing in agricultural colleges such a liberal education, they were not convinced that in the case of all the provincial colleges this was a practical ideal or one which local conditions rendered desirable. At a similar conference held in the succeeding year, 1917, at Simla, this view was modified to this extent that the local Governments should be left to work out their collegiate courses with reference to local conditions; and they considered that each of the principal provinces of India should have its own agricultural college so soon as the agricultural development of the province justified that step. Later on in the same year, 1917, the Board of Agriculture in India, held at Poona, accepted this last statement and added that the question of affiliation of such colleges should be left to the decision of the Government concerned.

Mr. Cumming.

Now, the object of an agricultural college has been considered on more than one occasion by the Government of India and the Provincial Department. An agricultural college may be held to have the following purposes :—

- (a) firstly, to prepare qualified officers for the different branches of the Agricultural Department ;
- (b) secondly, to give instruction in agricultural practice to those of the landed classes who wish to improve their own property, and to provide the landed classes with land agents or managers ; and
- (c) thirdly, to give opportunities for research.

The Public Services Commission were informed that certain existing agricultural colleges had failed in their purpose ; and the Commission recommended in 1916 that the staff should be adequate for the instruction up to the standard required for the Provincial Agricultural Service and also for the effective prosecution of research.

The latest advice on the subject is that contained in the report of the Calcutta University Commission, which has quite recently been placed in the hands of the public. From the chapters on agricultural education Hon'ble Members will learn that many counter-balancing factors have to be considered, and that the subject is fraught with many and grave difficulties—difficulties which are quite unsuspected by those who merely take as a premise that agriculture is the fundamental industry in the province. One of the chief difficulties is that, notwithstanding the demand for higher agricultural education in the abstract, there is, apart from the limited demand for higher appointments in the Government Agricultural Department, hardly any effective demand by members of the public for the employment of those who have already taken diplomas in agriculture. The Commission have made recommendations through which I trust it will be possible to supply not only high theoretical instruction but also real practical training, which is so much to be desiderated. The link between these two kinds of instruction is essential. I have had instances within the last year of the failure of that link, in cases from England and from America. One youth had received theoretical instruction in an English college, but admitted that he had evaded the practical training and that he knew nothing practical. Again, from America, I have learnt how the authorities of certain American institutions, with mistaken kindness for the Indian student, have let the student off all practical training. Such students return to India full of the lore of text-books ; but unsuited for either public or private employment in India. In any new development in India we should not neglect this warning.

I now turn in the second place to those considerations which are specially applicable to Bengal. While, on the one hand, there is a legitimate demand from the educated classes for higher agricultural education, yet it is a fact that in practice the zamindars of Bengal have so far not insisted on a specialized knowledge of agriculture as a qualification for managerships in their estates, nor is it the general habit to employ agricultural experts to improve the methods of agriculture practised by their tenants. If, as the Hon'ble Abul Kasem indicates, there is a change in this respect, no one will be more pleased than the members of Government. For practical purposes at present young men from Bengal join agricultural colleges for the purpose of obtaining Government employment. The college at Sabour in Bhagalpur district was created in 1910 when Bihar and Bengal were under one administration, and the site was selected, as I have personal reason to know, in order to cater for the wants of the two areas and at a site where land, typical of both the Western districts and the Eastern districts, was available. In view of these facts I do not think the criticism which says that there is no provision for agricultural education in Bengal is quite fair. Up till quite recently Sabour has been more than sufficient to meet the wants of the two provinces. In the five years from 1914 to 1919 the number of Bengali students at Sabour has varied from 13 to 32, and in the present year there are 26 Bengal students in the first year class. A certain stimulus has been given by the recent creation of certain appointments in Bengal under the name of district agricultural officers. But all the districts in Bengal have now been provided with such officers; while the power of the Imperial Department and the Provincial Department to absorb new recruits is limited. The Bengal Government have hitherto been unwilling to create a supply that was apparently greater than the demand and add to the total of what the University Commission style 'disappointed unemployables'. The Bengal Government, however, recognize two main facts,—that provincial patriotism desires a college of its own after the separation of the Bihar territory and that Bengal has felt that some effort should be made to get the educated classes to take up agriculture as an occupation. Government were also aware that the matter was being examined very fully by the Calcutta University Commission. The conditions of the problem imply, as I have already indicated, that the instruction must be practical. Government, therefore, in anticipation of the report of the Commission tentatively considered the establishment of an institution which would be devoted to the technical and practical training of persons who have already received a good general education; the main object being to turn out thoroughly practical agriculturists. In so doing not only would recruits be provided for the Agricultural Department, but a training would be offered to those desirous of taking up work on the land or of acquiring a knowledge of agricultural practice as well as to those desirous of following up agricultural research in a scientific fashion. If such an institution were created, it was proposed to style it an 'agricultural institute'. The more important of the subjects to be taught would be tillage, plant selection, agricultural engineering, use of labour—saving equipment, the care of animals, and so on.

Now, it has to be considered in connection with such an institute what relation it should have with the University; and it will be seen from the report of the University Commission that such an institution will meet the proposals which have been made by that body. The main proposal of the Commission in connection with agricultural education is that after a student has taken the degree of Bachelor of Science with a revised curriculum he should proceed for a period of training to an agricultural institute, at which he would receive an adequate diploma indicating that he had received the special training proposed to be given at such an institute; and finally, that such a student who takes the degree of Bachelor of Science plus the diploma of the institute should be qualified for the degree of Bachelor of Agriculture under the University. This, then, is the general idea.—theoretical training under the University, combined with specialized practical training under the Department of Agriculture, the combination of the two being considered a qualification for the degree of Bachelor of Agriculture. This proposal, however, naturally depends, as the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has correctly pointed out, upon a detailed examination of the proposals of the University Commission by Government; and it will be clear to Hon'ble Members that if the general lines are followed such an agricultural institute, though not actually incorporated with the University as the Hon'ble Mover requests, will at any rate be practically related to it. In view, then, of these recommendations, Government are prepared to accept the resolution of the Hon'ble Member with certain modifications, both in view of the recommendations of the University Commission and of the interests of Bengal. The word 'institute' in the resolution should be substituted for the word 'college'; and, in view of the fact that the Calcutta University Commission's Report has still to be considered in detail, the words 'to be finally incorporated with the proposed Dacca University' might be omitted. The resolution might possibly be expressed in the following form :—

'This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a fully equipped agricultural institute be established at Dacca.'

If the Hon'ble Member would modify the terms of the resolution to this effect Government would be prepared to accept it. I should like to add that plans for such an institution at Dacca are under preparation and that the first steps have already been taken towards the financing of the acquisition of the site required."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, in view of what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member in charge, I rise to say a few words, not so much with the intention of adding to what I have already said in support of this resolution, but to take this opportunity of offering my heartfelt thanks to the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari and to the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem for all the good things that they have been pleased to say about Dacca. Most unfortunately, and by an irony of fate, the district of Dacca seems to be practically unrepresented in this Council. The four members of the Dacca Division come from districts outside Dacca and I, therefore, take this opportunity of offering to my friends who have been good enough to recognize the claims of Dacca as the Eastern capital of this Presidency the thanks of the people of this town as well as the district, and for the ready recognition which they have shown to the claims of this city and this district.

As regards the resolution itself, may I ask the Hon'ble Member to consider if the words 'at an early date' could be added to the resolution? I can quite understand, my Lord, that with the preparations that have already been made for the establishment of an agricultural institute in Dacca things would progress soon enough, but at the same time we cannot forget, and I say it with the utmost deference, that the wheels of Government move very slowly and that sometimes hope deferred makes the heart very sick. Things have taken place, as far as the Dacca University is concerned, which make it absolutely necessary that some encouraging words at any rate should be added to the resolution in order to show that all possible steps will be taken for establishing the proposed agricultural institute in this town. I suggest the words 'at an early date' in place of the words 'at once'. 'At once' may be too precipitate as pointed out by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, but 'at an early date' is vague enough to include anything between lethargy and actual action. My Lord, in these circumstances may I ask the Hon'ble Member to consider whether these words should be added. At the same time I may say that I am not very particular about the phrase so long as the principle of the resolution is accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, I have pleasure in saying that the Government will be prepared to accept the resolution in the following form as suggested by me and as further amended by the Hon'ble Mover, viz.,—

'That this Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a fully equipped agricultural institute be established at Dacca at an early date.'

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

I need hardly repeat, my Lord, that an earnest of this has already been given.

Plans for such an institution are already in preparation, and steps have already been taken for the financing of the acquisition of the site required."

The motion was then put in the altered form and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur to move the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee be appointed, consisting of officials and non-officials, with instructions to make an inquiry into the working of the Hastings School, Alipore, with a view—

- (i) to determine the syllabus of studies for the different classes or "Forms", in accordance with the regulations of a recognized University ;
- (ii) to satisfy other requirements for its immediate affiliation to a recognized University ;
- (iii) to consider the question of the reduction of its school-fees in the case of day-scholars, from Rs. 28 per month to a lower figure ; and
- (iv) to recommend such steps as may be deemed advisable to place the school on a more satisfactory basis.

He said :—

"My Lord, the Hastings School has been in existence for full four years. I have carefully gone through the printed reports of this institution up to 1917-18 ; further report is not available at present. From these reports, I quote the following lines for the information of Your Excellency's Council :—

' * * There lies the important question of how best the school may fulfil its task of giving to India men who, by reason of their established social position, may be fit to direct the aspirations of their own community, or to play a useful part in the control and development of the natural resources of their country.'

' * * It cannot be said that the school attracts a really representative body of pupils, and this fact must be carefully borne in mind in examining the statement showing the numbers of boys in the school * * * ; nor can these numbers be reckoned as indicative of the possible growth of the school, for until the school can cater for the needs of the orthodox communities it will fail to draw from a very large and important section of Indian society.'

' * * There is at present no provision for science, but it is hoped that the experimental work which is to be done in Physiology and in Physical Geography, may be a useful preliminary training in scientific method. Until systematic science teaching is established here the school course will always be incomplete, and for this reason no effort should be spared to equip and maintain a school laboratory. Art teaching required to be put on a better footing, which might best be accomplished if a well-qualified man from the Government School of Art could be spared as a special visiting master for this branch of work.'

' * * It is difficult to find the real reason for the deficiency of the numbers below the estimated level * * * it may partly be due to some measure of disinclination on the part of the Indian parent to sever himself from the usual courses of education which have been established longer in the Presidency, and finally, it may be that the number of those who desire this form of education has been somewhat overestimated.'

' * * The want of a first class mathematician is at present very greatly felt.'

' * * So long as this (i.e., provision for science laboratories) remains unprovided for the school course must necessarily be incomplete, and further, this may always be adduced as an excuse for the deficiency in number * * * There should be more boys in the lower school, for until we can rely upon these forms being filled there is no adequate guarantee for the future success of the school.'

' * * In the absence of any trust funds, the school must always be supported, in part, by Provincial revenues.'

' * * The need, however, of a definite provision throughout the school for systematic science teaching, still remains a matter of some urgency ; for had this training been available at the school, it is very probable that some of those boys who left during the year under report (i.e. in 1917-18) would have remained in the school. In all cases these boys left in order to obtain facilities for the study of science. I will, therefore, again record my opinion that there is the greatest need for the establishment in the school of a science laboratory under the charge of a well qualified science graduate.'

The school is not affiliated to the University of Calcutta or to any of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge.

The tuition-fee in the Presidency College is Rs. 12 per month and the school-fee in the upper classes of the Hare and Hindu Schools, the premier schools of Bengal, are Rs. 5 per month. There is a surplus annual income of some thousands of rupees from these collegiate schools. In order to make the Hastings School a self-supporting one, the question of the reduction of its fees in the case of day-scholars from Rs. 28 per month to a lower figure should be carefully considered.

The appointment of a committee on the lines suggested in the resolution is urgently needed to examine facts up-to-date and find ways and means for the proper solution of the intricate problem connected with the management of the Hastings School.

With these few remarks, I move this resolution for the careful consideration of Your Excellency's Council."

Mr. Altaf Ali, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali said :—

My Lord, as a member of the Advisory Committee of the Hastings House School, I feel it my duty to oppose this resolution. In doing so, I must first of all assure my Hon'ble friend that I have no intention of withholding any information regarding the internal management of the school. Let us see what my friend really wants. First of all, he wants a committee consisting of officials and non-officials to be appointed to inquire into the working of the school. I am not quite sure if my friend really wants a committee consisting of officials and non-officials, or if he has said so because whenever a committee is asked to be appointed, a similar request is made. I am not quite sure if my friend knows that a small Advisory Committee to govern the school exists at the present time, and this committee consists entirely of non-officials. My Lord, the points regarding the syllabus and affiliation that my friend, the mover of this resolution, has raised, are such that the Advisory Committee is required to deal with in the usual course and which the committee after due and careful deliberation fixed. If my friend, whether he has any personal interest in the school by way of relations reading at the school or whether he takes only a general interest in an institution of this kind, has any suggestion to make at any time to the members of the committee they will be very gratefully accepted and they will do their best to apply them for the future administration of the school. As a matter of fact, they are always open to any suggestions from the public which will lead to the better administration of the school. The purport of my friend's resolution is the determination of facts that legitimately belong to the Advisory Committee and to the Department of Education in Bengal. If my friend thinks that the committee is not doing their work properly, or that they are incapable of doing so, I, for one, will be prepared to withdraw, in favour of men who take more interest in the school than we have hitherto done, and I am sure my colleagues will do the same. With these few words, I oppose this resolution."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, it is not possible for me on behalf of Government to accept this resolution. I am glad, however, that an opportunity has been given to enable Government to explain the position of the Hastings House School, and also to mention to the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution the present position there, and it is possible that after hearing what I have to say on the subject, the Hon'ble gentleman may decide to withdraw his resolution. What I could gather from what the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur has said in connection with the resolution, that, apart from the fact that he is not satisfied with the syllabus and the general management of the school, he wants that the teaching of science should be properly and at an early date introduced in this school, and for this purpose he would advocate the cumbrous procedure of an unwieldy committee to go into the question. I should have thought, my Lord, that that would have been the last thing to suggest in a matter of this kind. But, Sir, it is not my business to discuss as to whether or not a committee is the most suitable form for an inquiry of this nature. What I have got to convince the mover of this resolution is that an inquiry is not necessary. With regard to the first portion of the resolution in which he deals with the syllabus of studies and the question of affiliation of the school, I am glad to inform the Hon'ble Member that the Government have recently, on the advice of the Director of Public Instruction, come practically to the same conclusion at which he himself has evidently arrived. Let me briefly state the purpose and objects with which this school was established. A deputation of influential gentlemen approached the Government of India in 1913 with a scheme for the establishment of a residential school for Indian boys to be run on the lines of an English public school. Among the members of this deputation were gentlemen who could well afford to send their boys to English public schools, and who had no scruples about sending their boys to England, therefore these gentlemen, it must be clearly understood and it must be clear to the Hon'ble Mover himself, were actuated by the best of motives in approaching Government, viz., to see whether it was possible to establish in Calcutta a school in the nature of an English public school for the benefit of those Indian gentlemen who are not prepared or are not able to send their boys for such an education to England. The Government of India had previously outlined some such proposal and the Local Government naturally, therefore, welcomed the deputation's proposal to found a well-equipped and well-supported school which, breaking away from many traditional ideas by which Indian schools have been hampered and circumscribed, should seek to mould these boys upon the English public school pattern, to turn out boys with good academic qualifications, and to develop character and promote that valuable esprit de corps which is too often lamentably deficient in many of our Indian schools. It was recognized that such an ideal would cost money and that such a school must necessarily be restricted to those parents who could afford to pay reasonably high fees. My Lord, I do not think that we can be blind to the fact that even to-day education of this kind in Bengal is ridiculously cheap, but on the other hand one recognizes that the heavy outlay the middle classes in England incur for the education of their sons, would often be beyond the means of the bhadralog in Bengal. I think the Hon'ble Mover will probably agree that many Bengali gentlemen would be willing to incur a larger outlay on the education of their children if they were satisfied that the education provided were worth the money. Many of us, moreover, do still desire to see if a school of this nature could possibly thrive in Bengal, and it was really because a number of such influential men wanted that such an experiment should be made, that the Local Government of the time thought it worthy of consideration and worth experiment. That was how the Hastings House School came to be started in 1915, the sanction of the Secretary of State being granted to pursue the experiment for a period of five years. I may at once admit that those who moved Government for the establishment of this school,—and among them I myself was one,—and the Government are somewhat disappointed at the support which the institution has so far received. The Hastings House School will accommodate about 100 pupils, i.e., 50 boarders and 50 day-scholars. The school opened as I said in 1915 with only 10 boys on the rolls and towards the end of the year the number had risen to 20 and for the last two or three years there have been about 30 pupils among whom some 12 to 14 have been day-scholars. It was recognized at the time that the fees must be high, and they were fixed at Rs. 100 per mensem for boarders plus Rs. 5 for sports, stationery, medical attendance, etc., and in the case of day-scholars at Rs. 25 per mensem with an additional Rs. 2-8 per month for sports, and stationery. I may say that there were some who thought that the fees should be still higher, had it been so they would still have been considerably less than those paid by English parents for their boys at some of the English schools. The present expenditure of the school amounts to Rs. 55,000 and the sum recovered from fees comes to Rs. 38,000, leaving a deficit of Rs. 17,000 which is borne by the Local Government. The deficit in 1915 was over Rs. 20,000 and in 1916-17 little over Rs. 17,000 and the same for 1917-18. Now, of course, one may ask whether Government are justified in expending this amount out of their revenues from public funds for the education of the sons of gentlemen who can in most cases afford to pay higher fees or in some cases could afford to send their sons to England. The whole question has received the very anxious consideration of Government from this point of view and I am glad to have the opportunity of explaining the Government's position to the Hon'ble Member. I think no one will deny that the high school education at present provided in Bengal suffers from many limitations and many defects. It would be superfluous for me to attempt to enlarge upon a matter of such common knowledge, especially as many of the members of this Council have probably read extracts from the University Commission's report which deals exhaustively with this subject and which is now before the public. I may, therefore, at once say that the Government are conscious that the present system has failed, but they realize that a considerable service to education might be done if at least one model institution conducted on broad and liberal lines could be established. As regards the virtual restriction to the sons of the well-to-do which the high rate of fees must cause, Government felt that many of the students who pass through the doors of such an institution may ultimately become some of the prominent leaders in Bengal and it felt justified on political grounds as well in providing these boys with a more liberal education, calculated to train the character, no less the mind, than is supplied in many other schools in the Presidency. It was hoped at the time that the advantages of such an education would be readily grasped and that the need for such an institution would be recognized and that all the available accommodation would easily be filled. That unhappily has not yet been our experience; Government may perhaps have some justification in contending that the experiment has failed and that in the interest of economy they should close the school and cut its losses. Well, my Lord, as I myself admitted, Government themselves are apparently not satisfied with the present state of the school, but whilst admitting it Government are not prepared to cry peccavi. The whole question has received, as I have stated, the most anxious consideration of Government, and Government have come to the conclusion that the causes of the present failure of the institution are probably due to the following, viz., (a) The scale of fees which presses too severely on a number of families who can afford the facilities offered by the school; (b) That many persons in Calcutta who can well afford to pay the fees and who recognize the solid advantages which the school offers, prefer that their sons should live at home and attend the school as day-boarders. In the present circumstances, the number of day-scholars is only limited to one-third; (c) Many parents are disappointed that the recruitment of English school masters, trained in and thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the public school system in England has been delayed owing to the war. Finally, the lack of professors for science teaching has undoubtedly been a distinct stumbling block to the progress of the scheme. Then, of course, the absence of separate messing arrangements for orthodox Hindus has perhaps kept out a certain number. The curriculum or studies with its failure to provide for matriculation examination has been the subject of a certain amount of criticism and the non-affiliation of the school to the University has also caused some misgiving. Referring, therefore, to the latter part of the Hon'ble Member's resolution, I would frankly admit on behalf of Government that steps must be taken to place the school on a more satisfactory basis, and I may state at once that Government have arrived at the following conclusion, viz., that a properly-equipped science laboratory should be immediately provided, suitable rooms are already available, and the capital cost for equipment will amount only to Rs. 3,000; it is anticipated that the recurring cost will be recovered. Government propose to go ahead with this. The limitation on the number of day-scholars will be modified; of the total number of pupils that can be received (which I have said was 100) no less than half the number should be day-scholars. The Government of India have already been approached with a proposal to extend the period of experiment up to 1922. Pending sanction of the Secretary of State to this proposal Government are unable to take steps to recruit two additional English masters, who were sanctioned in the original scheme. Of course, if the sanction is received, which we hope will be the case, we shall set about securing these additional members of the staff. Government has already invited several leading associations in the Presidency on the question of separate messing arrangements for the orthodox, and if there is any reason to believe that the school will thereby be rendered accessible to boys whose parents at present stand aloof, Government will make such provision in this direction as the accommodation at Hastings House allows.

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

I turn now to the proposal of the Hon'ble Member to revise the syllabus of studies and to take steps to have the school recognized by some University by which I presume he means the Calcutta University. I may state that when the school was founded one of the many problems to be considered was to arrive at some decision upon the educational policy to be pursued. It was hoped that a certain percentage of pupils would on leaving the school proceed to a University. It was probable that some of them might graduate first at an Indian University while it was certain that some of the boys would not go to England at all. Government of course had no statistics to guide them in this matter but after careful consideration they decided that the senior Cambridge local examination would perhaps for sometime most satisfactorily serve the purposes of a school final examination. The Cambridge test provides a suitable academic standard while at the same time it has the advantage of having been held not only in England but also in India. Moreover, it secures for successful candidates certain exemptions from University preliminary examinations. Accordingly the junior and senior Cambridge local examinations were made the intrinsic part of the school curriculum. As a matter of fact, however, it has been found that many parents view with some misgivings the elimination of the Matriculation examination and that they are anxious lest its non-recognition by the University may subsequently hamper or check the University career of their sons. The whole question, as I have said, has been carefully considered by Government and they have recently resolved that the Matriculation examination should be taken in class IV upper or V lower and that the boys who pass the Cambridge senior and are of an age to remain at the school should go on for study for even the Cambridge higher certificate or the Intermediate examination in Arts or Science of the Calcutta University. It is also proposed that in future all subjects except English and Mathematics should be taught through the medium of the vernacular in the lower school. The Hon'ble Mover has asked that a committee should be appointed to make recommendations on these various matters; but I think he will see now that a good deal of what he had in mind has already been taken up by Government and that therefore the necessity of a committee no longer arises. The Hon'ble Mr. Altaf Ali seems to be very free about his movements and desires in wishing to withdraw from the committee and asking others to follow suit, but I wish to point out that a strong advisory committee does exist and that is a committee which is appointed by and to advise Government and it is not open to Mr. Altaf Ali to make such quick changes. If the Hon'ble Member after hearing what I have said to-day and after coming to know that some of his proposals have already been accepted by Government would like to bring this matter to the notice of the school authorities, I would advise him writing to the President of this committee and I think that under all these circumstances he would be well advised to await further developments and to withdraw his resolution regarding the appointment of a committee of the kind which he has in mind.

My Lord, on behalf of Government I am sorry I am unable to accept the resolution as it stands."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I had not the least idea of intervening in this debate for the very good reason that I know very little about the Hastings House School. Although I was one of the original signatories demanding the establishment of this institution, I have had no opportunities of knowing anything about it. I have, however, wished it well and am sorry to gather both from official and non-official statements here that it is not doing well.

My Lord, there are other reasons, however, why I cannot let the speech of the Hon'ble Member in charge go unnoticed. I may frankly state that nothing more is painful to me than to have to differ from the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan upon whom I have always looked as one who is a leader among his class who has also the good of the people at heart. I do not now raise the question as to whether Government should spend largely out of public revenue on the education of the people who can afford to spend all that is needed, or whether so called political reasons such as the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur has indicated should rule the situation ; that is a question for Government to consider for the country will prefer to have its own leaders and not wait for those that the Hastings House will be supposed to breed. There is one other matter however which requires attention. My Lord, if I heard the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan aright, I heard him say that education in this country is ridiculously cheap. I desire to protest against that assertion—an assertion which has been freely made by people who know nothing of the country—but which from the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, Member-in-charge of the Education Department of Your Excellency's Government, comes as a surprise to me, a painful surprise. I shall be glad to be told by the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur that I did not hear him aright and, if so, I apologise to him."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan ; Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari ; President.

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"May I rise to a point of order. I think the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari seems to forget the subject matter of the resolution. We are discussing the question of the appointment of a committee to inquire into the working of the Hastings School and when I said that education in this country is ridiculously cheap I meant education for people who aspire for the kind of education as received in a public school of this nature in Bengal. I did not for a moment refer to the average education that is imparted to the people in the country."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari (continuing) said :—

"That is satisfactory so far but does not go the whole way. Therefore my complaint and objection still hold good. The statement would seem to imply that those of us, in the lower middle classes, who have so far sought to avail themselves of the facilities provided by the Hastings School are not as badly off as they are described to be. If the Hastings House teaching is of the right public school type it should be within the reach of the poorest day scholar, though he need not aspire to the luxurious residential arrangements. This morning I received a visit from a gentleman who had absolutely broken down in educating his sons. It may be said that he had no business to attempt this if he could not afford it. May I remind the Council, my Lord, of what is after all a commonplace. The best of our men have come from the class who can ill-afford to have any education, far less of the kind given by the Hastings School. I do not wish to refer to the somewhat unreasoning outcry about the question of the raising of fees as an evidence that education is not ridiculously cheap. That should be considered elsewhere."

The President said :—

"Order, order. Might I draw the attention of the Hon'ble Member to the resolution which is under discussion. The resolution relates to the appointment of a committee to inquire into the working of the Hastings School, Alipore ; but that does not permit the Hon'ble Member to cover the whole ground of education generally."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"I was trying to meet and protest against the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur's reasoning. But having regard to Your Excellency's ruling, I do not wish to pursue the point further."

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, I have listened to the statements which have been made by the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan and I can say this that in moving this resolution I thought that it was in the interest of the public that an inquiry should be made in this connection. No one denies the encouraging ideal on the part of those who established this school, but what is the result. If the school was on a firm basis as was thought at the time when it was founded, perhaps I would not have come to the Council with grievances like this. But as the Chairman of the institution has said in his report that the Provincial revenues are attacked and as the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur has also explained that there would be a deficit every year so an appeal is made to Your Excellency's Government. I have referred to the several passages from the report. These are not mine but these are quotations from the educational authorities in charge of the institution. If you look to the laboratory, it is in a very bad condition : if you look to the number of boys, it is very discouraging. All these speak affirmatively that the institution is on a very low level and the high ideals of those who established the school have not been achieved. Our children—the children of the middle classes—receive their education in the middle schools but if the Hastings School is not established on broad and encouraging lines, what is the good of having such an institution. My Lord I have therefore thought it proper when I moved the resolution to bring these facts to the notice of the Council and the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur assures me that Government have taken action in the way which is indicated in this resolution and that instructions have been issued to the Director of Public Instruction and further than that notice has been taken of the several grievances. I submit that I have no other alternative than to withdraw the resolution with Your Excellency's permission on the assurance which has been given by the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Before I sit down I have one word to say, namely, I have no personal motive in bringing this matter to the notice of the Council. I have no sons, no children, nothing of the kind. I have moved the resolution in the interest of the public and the public alone. If there is waste of public revenues on schools like these one cannot but bring it to the notice of Your Excellency's Government and the Council. I have come forward with a grievance which I have substantiated by reference to the report. My Lord, I do not wish to say anything more, but as I have already said I have no other alternative left but to withdraw the resolution on the assurance of the Hon'ble Member in charge.”

The motion was then by leave of the President withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 7 AND 8.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur was to have moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate arrangements be made by Government for opening additional sections of classes in all Government colleges in Bengal, for the accommodation of those successful students who have been refused admission into colleges for want of accommodation.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray was to have moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee be appointed to inquire into the difficulties of students in securing admission to colleges and other educational institutions in Bengal, and to recommend suitable measures for providing adequate facilities for their studies.

President ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The President said :—

“I understand that it has not been possible to secure the information necessary to deal with resolutions 7 and 8 to-day and I have, therefore, agreed to their being postponed until the meeting of the Council on the 3rd September.”

The resolutions were then postponed till the meeting of the Council of the 3rd September, 1919.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, in the absence of Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray, moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to inquire into the methods followed by the authorities in the matter of selection of candidates for admission into the Calcutta Medical College at the beginning of the current session.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“At the request of my Hon'ble friend who is absent to-day, I beg leave to move this resolution which stands in his name. I may say at once, my Lord, that, although I was asked to move this resolution by a letter which I received from the Hon'ble Mover, I confess I do not know really the grounds on which he thought it fit to bring forward this resolution. I may, however, state here that there is a considerable feeling in this country that boys do really find difficulties in the way of their admission into the Medical College. These difficulties are of varied character ; and I think that, in the interests of all concerned, it would be better if some enquiry be made in order that these grievances might be redressed. I do not wish to take up the time of the Council further. With this object in view, I beg to commend it for the consideration of the Council.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“Sir, I was interested to note that the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, in addition to the bountiful contributions he has made to the bill of fare of the present session, was also equal to the task of serving up the leavings of absentees, but my interest is somewhat discounted by his very candid admission that he does not know why this resolution was put forward, unless as a means of ventilating a vague sense of grievance. However, I am not sorry that he has undertaken the task, in so far as from the two questions that have been answered to-day and from this resolution it would seem that there is a certain amount of misapprehension about our position in regard to this matter, which a statement of the facts may perhaps dispel.

I may say at once that the Local Government are not prepared to accept the resolution, and they base that opinion mainly on two grounds. In the first place the question of selecting students for admission to the College is essentially the function of the Principal, and it would be absolutely detrimental to the authority of the Principal to delegate that power to a committee or to request a committee to revise his orders. The position of the Principal in the matter is definitely laid down in the rules. The second main ground is that there is nothing that requires investigation by a committee, as I am in a position to explain the considerations which weigh in the admission of students, and after having examined the account given by the Principal as to his procedure in making a choice, we are of opinion that he acted reasonably and justifiably in the lines that he adopted.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

First of all it is as well to remind the Council what the rules governing admission are. We are concerned here with what are called the 'regular' classes, and the minimum qualification for admission to these classes is the I. Sc. pass of the Calcutta University. This is worth emphasising, as I imagine that the grievance underlying these questions and this resolution is that men of inferior educational qualifications have been taken in—that is, I. Sc.'s have been taken in—while B. Sc.'s were available and were not chosen. So long, however, as the rule definitely recognises the I. Sc. as a qualification, the claims of men so qualified cannot be disregarded. Apart from that, we have it in the rules that while preference for admission is usually given to candidates who have superior qualifications, yet the final selection lies entirely with the Principal, that is to say, the responsibility is that of the Principal. We then have it laid down that one-fourth of the total number admitted shall be Muhammadans. That is a condition which, I take it commends itself fully to the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. Next, 12 candidates are nominated by the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Bihar and Orissa, and 6 by Assam. In addition, the Bihar and Orissa Government nominates 6 scholars who must possess the I. Sc. qualification.

These are the rules, and I have here an account from Lt.-Col. Deare of the way in which he exercised his discretion on the last occasion, and it is on that account that I base my subsequent remarks. In the first place, he observes that the method of selection was precisely that which was followed in previous years, and that every application-letter was opened and every candidate selected by himself. That again is worth emphasising, as in connection with questions of this kind there is often a vague rumour that students got admitted because they pay a rupee to a clerk here or eight annas to a chaprasi there. We have it from the Principal that all applications were opened and considered by him personally. He says that the problem with which he was faced was to select for 115 vacancies from 947 candidates. First of all he picked out the 11 Muhammadans, of whom 9 actually joined. Then three lady students were admitted, which left him with 131 vacancies against 933 candidates. And for this he had to choose from one M. Sc., 186 B. Sc.'s, 604 I. Sc.'s and 156 I. A.'s, B. A.'s and I. Sc.'s of other provinces. He first of all washed out the 156 candidates from other provinces as they were not admissible under the rules. When I say 'other provinces' I mean of course provinces other than those covered by the admission rules of the college, which include the jurisdiction of the Calcutta University and the province of Bihar and Orissa. That left him with 791 candidates for 131 vacancies, and he then began to scrutinize the names bearing in mind the following considerations :—

- (1) To select according to seniority of qualification. By seniority he means, I take it, superiority of qualification and priority of dates of taking the same qualification.
- (2) To distribute the vacancies among various districts. That, I think, is quite fair, bearing in mind that we are always hearing complaints that in the public services there are certain districts which are more favoured than others. It is quite fair in principle to let every district in Bengal have a chance.
- (3) To take in candidates especially recommended, and this too is a fair consideration to which weight may reasonably be given.
- (4) To make provision for immediate dependants of assistant surgeons and graduates of the Medical College. This, again, is a matter to which regard may justifiably be paid.

Proceeding on these general lines, he first of all took the one M. Sc. who did not however join. He then took the B. Sc.'s who passed in previous years and 47 B. Sc.'s who passed in 1919. With regard to this matter of B. Sc.'s there is a serious practical difficulty. I understand that the B. Sc.'s, because of their taking certain subjects at that examination, are entitled to admission to the 2nd year class of the Medical College, and it results therefrom that this class tends to become overcrowded. There is also an objection that students who enter that class straightaway do not get what is considered by the College authorities to be an adequate training in anatomy, and on these two grounds it is not possible to admit more than a certain number of B. Sc.'s. We have, however, the definite statement of the Principal that he filled the second year class up to the highest possible limit, and admitted more B. Sc.'s than in previous years. Having got through the B. Sc.'s he turned to the I. Sc.'s, and of them he took 75 who passed in the first division, 17 from the second division and one third division, the proportion in the first division being again higher than in the two previous years. It may be asked why did he take in second and third division men while he had first division men available? In answer to that Colonel Deare has replied that out of the 18 who were not in the first division, 16 were connected with past students and medical practitioners attached to the College, and I do not think that it is unfair that, up to a point, preference should be given to men of that class, the presumption being that the son of a doctor will have a greater hereditary disposition towards the profession of medicine. Educational institutions in other parts of the world do not hesitate to give preference to the sons of fathers who themselves attended those same institutions.

That is the method which the Principal adopted. He has also given details in his report bearing out his geographical argument. I submit that he has dealt with the matter fairly and with due regard to the various arguments which might be used in favour of particular candidates. He has dealt with it satisfactorily, and he has only followed customary methods which are in themselves perfectly reasonable. In these circumstances, there is no case for the appointment of a committee. On examining his account, and having regard to the grievance which, as I say, I imagine to have originated the resolution, it has struck me that we might enquire further as to the possibility of screwing up the entrance qualification, say, from the I.Sc. to the B.Sc., if the argument is that we ought to take men of higher qualifications in preference to others of lower degrees. But how far that would be expedient I cannot say offhand, and I cannot promise more than this, that I am willing to make further enquiries from the Surgeon-General and the Principal of the Medical College on the point. But to the main recommendation in the resolution that a committee be appointed, I am afraid I must return a negative.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“My Lord, having listened to what the Hon'ble Member has just now said and also to the replies that have been given to certain interpellations this morning I confess that no case has been made out for the appointment of a committee. I take it that the authority who can move a resolution has also the right to ask for the withdrawal of it ; and in that view of the matter, I pray that the resolution may be withdrawn.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken immediately for the establishment of a Muhammadan Arts College at Dacca.

Khan Sahib Aman Ali.

He said :—

“I think it would be some relief to the Hon'ble Members when I say that I am extremely anxious to get back to Calcutta as early as possible and that, therefore, I do not wish to detain the Council with any unnecessary remarks on this resolution, especially as it had been before the Council on two previous occasions when there were sufficient discussions on it. The question of a Muhammadan Arts College is one of great importance to the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal and I think it is a matter which has now been definitely considered by Government to be absolutely necessary in fulfilment of the pledge that was given by His Excellency Lord Hardinge on the occasion of his visit to Dacca after the annulment of the partition. The number of Muhammadan students that yearly flock to the various colleges is increasing so rapidly that it has become absolutely necessary that some more colleges should be established in order to take in the students who are coming up in such large numbers, and it has been felt particularly that there should be some special institution where Muhammadan parents could secure for their sons such instructions as would be more suitable for Muhammadan boys. The question of a Muhammadan Arts College for Calcutta has also been considered on more than one occasion and I find in the Report of the Universities Commission—the little that I read of it—that the Commission is of opinion that a sufficiently strong case has been made out for the establishment of a Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta. If that be the condition of things in Calcutta, it is with still greater reason that I urge on your Excellency's Government that the question of a Muhammadan Arts College for Dacca should be taken up at once. On former occasion we were told, and I admit, with sufficient reason, that the whole question should not be finally decided till the Universities Commission has submitted its report. That report has now been submitted; and, as I have already stated, the Commission does recognise the necessity for establishing a Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta. The difficulties of Muhammadan students in getting admission into the existing colleges are at the present moment as keen as ever and, unless steps are taken for the establishment of a college at once, I may say that the road of high education, so far as hundred of Muhammadan students are concerned, will be blocked without any justifiable reason. I do not know what statement the Government is going to make with reference to this resolution. I, however, do not wish to take up the time of the Council any further because if a satisfactory statement is going to be made, it is unnecessary on my part to go into details. For the present I simply put the resolution for consideration.”

The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali said :—

“My Lord, the number of Muhammadan students is now growing very rapidly. I may speak of one college at Chittagong where 95 candidates were registered during a summer vacation. After the college re-opened another 30 students applied for admission. Out of these only 40 boys were admitted. From this it will be seen in what a difficult position the Muhammadan students now are. They have now taken to English education in right earnest and if at this stage, their desire is not fulfilled they would feel it very much and their progress would be very slow. Therefore a special college for Muhammadan students has become an essential necessity. The case I have cited is not an isolated one. If the Government make inquiries, they will find that such a state of things prevails in Comilla, in Dacca and various other places. I know of some of these Muhammadan students being admitted in the Dacca College but there are many who are refused admission simply because there were no seats. These considerations have compelled us to appeal to your Excellency's Government for a college for Muhammadan boys. With these remarks I beg to support the resolution."

Mr. Dunn.

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq has stated that the Calcutta University Commission has recommended the establishment of a Muhammadan Arts College. It will be my business in the course of my reply to explain that that is not altogether an accurate statement of the suggestions made by the Calcutta University Commission in their report. The resolution recommends that steps be taken immediately for the establishment of a Muhammadan Arts College in Dacca. The acceptance of this resolution would presumably lead to the founding of an Arts College staffed by Muhammadan lecturers and attended exclusively by Muhammadans, the institution being affiliated in the meantime to the University of Calcutta and perhaps in the future to the University of Dacca. The proposal is not a new one. It was considered in the deliberations of the Dacca University Committee and it was worked out in detail by the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell in 1915. It will not be out of place to state briefly what his proposals were. Provision had to be made in this proposed Muhammadan College for two sets of students (1) those who would follow the general course leading to the ordinary degrees in arts and (2) those who would read a special course in the department of Islamic studies. The original proposal having got so far there is every reason why the Muhammadan community of Eastern Bengal should be anxious to secure this type of institution. The scheme has long been under consideration, it was carefully discussed by the University Commission and I am glad to say that in the Calcutta University Commission Report every consideration had been given to the educational needs and aspirations of the Muhammadan community in Dacca and in Eastern Bengal. It is almost certain that the problem of Muhammadan education in Eastern Bengal will be solved in a manner much more satisfactory if the proposals of the Calcutta University Commission's Report are accepted in full, and if the resolution now before us be adopted and put into force. At this stage I may be allowed to give the briefest summary of the proposals of the Calcutta University Commission in so far as they deal with the question now at issue. In their report it is stated that a purely Musalman college would seriously limit the educational opportunities of Muhammadan students in Dacca and Eastern Bengal, that in the place of such an institution a University Moslem Hall should be founded. This would not segregate the Musalman from the Hindu students so far as the actual University work is concerned but would enable them to mix with the latter and to join in the general life of the University. This institution would necessitate a large provision for Muhammadans in Intermediate Colleges either in Dacca or in the surrounding mufassal districts and would not prevent the admission of Muhammadan students to other halls in the University if they so desired. When the Moslem Hall is full the question will arise whether a second similar hall should be erected or whether Muhammadan students would join mixed halls.

From these facts, Sir, it is fairly clear what the University Commission had in mind. For all the special purposes of the religious and social life of the Muhammadans ample provision has been made within the new Dacca University as at present outlined, but this provision will be so designed as to enable them to join in the full life of that University, to share in the best lectures and to enjoy the privileges of the best tutorial assistance. By this time it is well known that all Intermediate College work has to be removed from the sphere of University control and attached to high schools and to separate Intermediate Colleges. It is vital, therefore, that in these new institutions the interest of the Muhammadan community should be guarded

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The University Commission have recommended definitely that an Intermediate College for Muhammadans should be founded in Dacca. This scheme is already under the consideration of the Education Department and there is no reason to believe that it will be long delayed. The higher education for Muhammadans runs broadly on two lines. The first is the purely oriental, classical or Islamic course of study for which ample provision will be made in the new University. The second is what is best described as the general course of study in Arts and Science Colleges. I am glad to be able to say that as regards the first, or the purely Islamic side of educational work, Government have already extended the courses of the senior Madrassa in Dacca to intermediate Islamic courses leading to further advanced study in the University when founded. Students have already passed from the senior Madrassa into these intermediate classes and provision is being made for the further encouragement of this work. On the one side therefore of Islamic education we may claim to be well advanced in Dacca, and to have anticipated the founding in the new University of courses of Islamic learning. By the time the University of Dacca is established there will be ready for this course a considerable number of Muhammadan young men. As regards the second or the general course I would point out that provision has already been made in Dacca of a Moslem High School wholly supported by Government. On the basis of this institution it is my intention to suggest to the authorities that an Intermediate College for Muhammadans be founded. Study in advance of the intermediate stage will be taken up in the University but for Muhammadan boys who will take up such study it is imperative that they should anticipate the demand which their later professional or official life will bring and mix with their fellow students of different races and religion on a footing of equality, thus securing the full benefit of University culture and discipline. In conclusion therefore I have to say that everything desired in the resolution under consideration has been anticipated by the Calcutta University Commission's Report, and that this resolution will be best realised by the foundation of a Moslem Hall in the new University, by the alternative courses of instruction on the Islamic and on the modern sides and by the creation of preparatory intermediate colleges, one of which for classical study has already been founded at Dacca, while the other is under immediate consideration. For these reasons I am not prepared to recommend the resolution to the Council."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I find what I rightly anticipated, that the reply of the Government as regards this resolution would be satisfactory. In view of what has been stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Dunn I think, my Lord, I can claim that the Government are prepared to accept the resolution. We have been told that the Intermediate College in Arts is already in contemplation. If that is so, it means that my recommendation that a Muhammadan Arts College at Dacca be established, is accepted. I have purposely refrained from saying that we want a first grade college of arts and if an Intermediate College in Arts is already in contemplation the resolution does not ask for more than what the Government themselves are going to do. I think I ought to say in justice to myself and those of my friends who have been good enough to support my resolution on previous occasions and also to-day, that we never wanted that this Muhammadan College or Moslem Hall, whatever it may be called, should be staffed by Muhammadan professors only and that it should be open only to Muhammadan students, and that non-Moslem students should not be allowed to study there. My Lord, we have no objection to having non-Moslem tutors and professors provided they are fully qualified and we have also no objection in taking in non-Muhammadan students provided that amplest facilities are given to Muhammadan students and that there are not enough Muhammadan candidates seeking admission in the college. This is of course by the way—in order to make clear what we want in regard to an arts college. But I repeat that the recommendation does not ask for more than what the Government are prepared to do and in that view of the matter I think I can fairly claim that the resolution has been accepted by the Government. If there is any objection to the word ‘immediately’ and if the word be considered to be too peremptory, I am prepared to substitute the words ‘at an early date.’

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

“I do not think, my Lord, after what Mr. Dunn has said that there is any need to accept the resolution.”

The President said :—

“I understand that the Hon'ble Maulvi wants to put the resolution to the Council, though he understands that what the Government are willing to do is equivalent to an acceptance of the resolution. On the other hand the Hon'ble Mr. Dunn has said that he cannot accept the resolution, so that Hon'ble Members are put in some difficulty in knowing what their action should be. If the Hon'ble Mr. Dunn could explain, in reply to the Hon'ble Maulvi's contention, that what Government are doing is equivalent to accepting the resolution, then Hon'ble Members would be in a better position to know to what decision they should come to.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

“My Lord, I am sorry if I failed to make my intention perfectly clear to the Hon'ble Member, but it seems to me that if we were to accept the resolution as it at present stands, namely, one which desires to start a Muhammadan Arts College at Dacca, we would be striking at the very root of those principles which the Calcutta University Commission have been at such pains to explain in their lengthy and interesting report. I understand that the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq is in possession of that report. I have tried to explain what the intention of the Commission is with regard to the Muhammadan education at Dacca. Might I, with your permission, recapitulate one or two points. The foundation of a Moslem Hall is recommended for the new University. Work preceding entrance to the Moslem Hall will be carried on in intermediate colleges: one for Muhammadans has to be founded in Dacca and the other in the intermediate classes which I have already made clear, are now in operation in the Dacca Madrassa. This Moslem Hall will provide for the social, religious and racial interests of Muhammadans, but, while carrying on their studies in that particular type of institution in the new University they will have the full benefit of all lectures or all tutorial assistance whether it be given by Europeans or Indians either Muhammadan or Hindu. If that does not fulfil the intention of the present resolution I am afraid I fail to understand exactly what this resolution is intended to convey.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“After what Mr. Dunn has said I find that his remarks fulfil the purpose of my resolution and I, therefore, contend that my resolution has been accepted.”

- The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken immediately for the appointment of qualified and suitable Muhammadans as Professors and Lecturers in Colleges in Bengal.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I must admit that the questions raised by this resolution are of a somewhat delicate character, because it might be construed that if we are going to introduce racial considerations into educational questions, other questions of a controversial character, are bound to arise. Nothing was further from our thoughts than this, and if I have been induced to bring forward this resolution for the consideration of your Excellency's Government it is for the reason that in several instances I have found extremely qualified Muhammadans who have applied for posts of lecturers and professors in colleges have unfortunately been unsuccessful in their efforts to get an appointment. I do not wish to impute to anyone who has got the gift of these appointments in their hands, any motives of a questionable character, but I do say that if the failure of qualified Muhammadans to secure lectureships and professorships had been few and far between, we might have thought that the grievances of unsuccessful candidates were of a more or less sentimental character, but I find that hardly a week passes when we do not get complaints from extremely qualified persons, and we are therefore at a loss to understand how candidates possessing such qualifications can fail to get such appointments. I understand that the Director of Public Instruction has got nothing to do practically with these appointments and that he has delegated his functions to the various managing committees or governing bodies as they are called of the various colleges in the Presidency. I am afraid that on these governing bodies Muhammadans are not properly represented and it may be that non-Muhammadan gentlemen who are serving on these governing bodies fail to appreciate the claims of these Muhammadan candidates properly and it is on this account that these grievances have arisen. If I am correct in my surmise, I think your Excellency's Government might devise some means for the proper representation of Muhammadans on these governing bodies or devise some other means by which these grievances might be removed. The question is of a very simple character, and I do not think I would be justified in taking up the time of this Council by any further remarks.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved by way of amendment, that in the resolution of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, item No. 11 in the List of Business, after the word “Colleges,” in the last line, the following words be inserted, viz:—

“and as Head Masters and Assistant Head Masters and teachers in Government and aided schools.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, it is with a good deal of diffidence that I move not only this amendment, but rise to support the resolution of my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. It will be seen that we, the Muhammadans of this Council, always in season and out of season cry out in one form or another for help in the case of Muhammadans in the Educational service. My friend says he has been induced to give notice of this resolution because he has heard that qualified Muhammadans have applied for appointments as lecturers and professors, and they have failed to secure them. My object in supporting it, when notice of the amendment was given, was due to a different cause. I want that there should be some professors and lecturers in colleges as well as some teachers in high schools, not on the ground of securing employment for Muhammadan graduates, however desirable that may be, but for the purpose of creating in the educational institutions, an atmosphere sympathetic to Muhammadan students reading in that school or college. In a school where there is not a single or sufficient number of Muhammadan teachers the Muhammadan students find themselves like fish out of water and are not generally treated with that consideration or regard for their particular feelings and sentiments as they would be if there was any one on the staff of the educational institution to advise the authorities about them. It is generally the Persian professor or the Persian teacher who is the adviser of the head master or the Principal on all questions affecting the interests of Muhammadan boys. In my humble opinion it is not sufficient and does not at all meet the needs of the student community. The resolution with the amendment reads like a big order on the Government that the professors and lecturers and head masters, assistant head masters and teachers in Government aided schools should be Muhammadans. But we do not mean to say that in every college or each particular college there should be professors and lecturers and teachers who should be Muhammadans. What we suggest is that even if we are not explicit in the resolution, an attempt should be made to provide educational institutions with Muhammadan teachers be they head masters, or assistant head masters or if that is not practicable, simply as teachers in aided and Government schools. That will go a great way to make the position of the Muhammadan students in the schools comfortable and will remove much of their grievances and the sufferings under which they are labouring at the present moment. I do not think that it would serve any good purpose to make any lengthy remarks on this subject but I hope that this resolution will be accepted by your Excellency's Government."

Mr. Dunn.

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, it will probably simplify matters if I deal with the resolution and with the amendment which are substantially the same, together. I would like to preface my remarks by the statement that I am, as far as possible, in the fullest sympathy with both the resolution and the amendment. The first resolution may be taken to mean that an early decision should be made to appoint to colleges in Bengal, Muhammadan professors and lecturers whose qualifications admit of such appointments. The Education Department has already given much thought to this question; and it sympathises with the desire of the Muhammadan community that the number of Muhammadan appointments in the educational service should be increased. Whenever appointments come to be made, the claims of Muhammadans (who have the necessary qualifications) receive most careful attention. It is desirable that most colleges should have, in addition to those who teach the Moslem classics, some Muhammadan members on their staff. This principle has already been recognised. But it is obvious that in the interests of the public at large, and in the interests of the Muhammadans themselves, the demand of any special community for representation cannot be allowed to overpower the claims of efficiency. The standard of education in our colleges must be maintained at as high a level as possible; and so long as this principle is adhered to, the Department of Education is prepared to consider all claims to collegiate posts that Muhammadan candidates may put forward. I am of opinion that had specific cases of hardship been quoted it would have been easier to deal with this resolution and this amendment. I am told by both the Hon'ble Members that the system of appointment in colleges is not altogether satisfactory and the Director of Public Instruction has practically delegated his functions and powers to governing bodies who may be non-Moslem in their constitution and whose sympathies may be antagonistic to the Muhammadan community. That, Sir, is scarcely a fair representation of the facts. It is necessary that responsible bodies such as the managing committees of schools and governing bodies of colleges should be empowered to represent the claims of their selected candidates for important posts, otherwise what would be the use of having governing bodies at all. The proposals of these governing bodies must be carefully considered ; but it is not accurate to say that appointments are made solely on the recommendations of the governing bodies of colleges or managing committees of schools, and wherever possible, subject to the very necessary condition of efficiency, the interests of Muhammadans are being considered. It will appear, therefore, that the intention of this resolution will be best realized if the interests of highly qualified Muhammadan applicants for posts in colleges be left to the care of Government and to the Government Department of Education.

-Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

As regards the amendment, the statement I have already made referring to this resolution will apply with equal force ; but in this connection there are certain difficulties to be faced. It is extremely hard to secure qualified Muhammadans as head masters of schools ; the reason is a very simple one. A Muhammadan who takes a pass degree or better than a pass degree is usually in a position to secure a much better appointment than that of a teacher in a school. I think I am not exaggerating the case when I say that our ablest Muhammadans are not in the ranks of the educational service and still less are they in the ranks of the aided school system. When, therefore, promotions to the higher posts come to be made it frequently happens that the Muhammadans available are inferior to their Hindu fellow teachers. Promotions in this case would be undeserved and would inevitably lead to a serious lowering of standards. These remarks apply to head masterships, and assistant head masterships. As regards teacherships the Department of Education exercises influence through its grant-in-aid rules, and the appointment and dismissal of teachers have to be reported to the Inspectors of Schools and in addition to this it has been ordered that in all aided schools where there is any considerable Muhammadan population, arrangements should be made for teaching of Arabic and Persian. Beyond this it is scarcely possible for the Department of Education to go without causing undue hardship to those already teaching in schools or to such as may apply for posts vacant in aided institutions.

For these reasons, Sir, while I sympathise with the aspirations which have been expressed I am unable to support either the resolution or the amendment."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I was responsible for the remark that the Director of Public Instruction has practically delegated his powers and functions so far as these appointments are concerned to various governing bodies or managing committees of schools and colleges. The Director of Public Instruction has taken exception to that remark but I do not think I need enter into a controversy as regards the correct interpretation of the position as to the appointment of candidates to these various posts. My chief object in saying a few words is to make my position clear so far as my own resolution is concerned. In the first place I wish to assure this Council that it has never been my intention to suggest that the demands of the Muhammadan community or for the matter of that the demands of any other community for a proper representation in the various posts in the Government service can for a moment be permitted to override the higher interests of efficiency. It is for this reason that even in this resolution I have been careful to add the words 'qualified and suitable' and nothing is further from my thoughts than to suggest that merely because it is desirable that Muhammadan teachers and professors should be on the staff of educational institutions that Government should go out into the street and catch hold of every Muhammadan teacher and put him into a post in order to fill up a possible vacancy. I do insist that the first sine qua non for any appointment must be the qualifications according to rules which should be rigidly observed in the case of all candidates whether Muhammadan or non-Muhammadan. My contention is that the claims of a Muhammadan candidate who fulfils the necessary qualifications should be favourably considered even though there may be a non-Muhammadan who is equally qualified. It is thus and thus only that we should be able to secure for these educational institutions something like a reasonable representation of the Muhammadan or any other communities in this Presidency.

Then, my Lord, I have been told that it would serve the interest of my own community best if I were to leave the case of the appointment of Muhammadan teachers and professors to the care of Government and their officers. That we are perfectly prepared to do. I started with the suggestion that the Director of Public Instruction does no longer hold the appointments in his hands and I thought that it is for this reason that the claims of the community would be overlooked. I, therefore, suggested that if these functions are to be delegated to any committee or any governing body, care should also be taken to see that the interests of the various communities are properly represented on these bodies. I have been told, my Lord, that one difficulty in the way of getting suitable Muhammadans for the posts of lecturers and professors lies in the fact that whenever a Muhammadan passes out, he generally gets employment elsewhere. Possibly reference is made to the appointments which are annually made by the Chief Secretary to Government, but I think the Chief Secretary himself will bear me out when I say that there are hundreds of exceptionally meritorious Muhammadan candidates who failed to get admission into the provincial service, either the executive, or the judicial, the police service or the excise and salt. There are several exceedingly fine Muhammadan candidates every year who first of all seek for admission in these services and when they fail, they seek admission into the Education Department, or they flock to the University Law College and add to the number of unsuccessful legal practitioners in this country.

I know of certain Government appointments which are ear-marked for non-Muhammadans. However, with the individual cases of hardship I am not concerned and I have purposely refrained from bringing forward in support of my resolution any case of individual hardship by reason of the fact that the introduction of individual cases in this discussion would import into our speeches something like personalities which ought to find no place in the discussions in the Council. I know of several cases and I hope the Director of Public Instruction will take them from me. I will give the facts of each particular case when I meet him next : but so far as the Council is concerned I do not wish to disclose these particular facts at this stage. I do stand by the resolution as originally put before the Council, and I submit that I have made out some case for its acceptance by the Government. If the Director of Public Instruction does give each individual case, as it comes up, his best consideration and takes proper steps to revise the decisions of these advisory committees with a view to properly representing the various communities on these bodies, the purpose which I had in view in bringing forward this resolution will be served. I understand the Director of Public Instruction to say that care is taken to properly safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans and I have no doubt that this is done. My Lord, in this view of the matter I do not think that it will serve any useful purpose if I delayed the discussion any further. I beg with Your Excellency's permission to withdraw the resolution."

The motion and the amendment were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abdul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council commends to the Governor in Council that suitable provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian be made in schools and colleges in the Presidency in all cases where such provision does not exist at present.

He said :—

"My Lord, as I anticipate a sympathetic and favourable consideration of this resolution by Your Excellency's Government, I do not want to take up the time of the Council by making a speech in support of it. The only thing I would like to say is this. I am aware of the fact that there is a condition in granting aids to schools and colleges that provision should be made for the teaching of Arabic and Persian as has been stated by the Director of Public Instruction just now. But I know of educational institutions where this condition is fulfilled by appointing a Muhammadan gentleman as a Persian and Arabic teacher on a miserable pay who cannot and does not practically discharge the duties for which he is taken. It is simply, I take it, for the purpose of carrying out the order in the letter of the Education Department that this is done. I hope and trust that steps will be taken to see that in all cases arrangements are made for the teaching of Arabic and Persian and for the maintenance of a properly qualified teacher.

With these words, my Lord, I commend the resolution for the consideration of this Council."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose this resolution. My Muhammadan friends will agree with me that they consider Bengal to be their mother country and Bengali their mother tongue. So I am really astonished to see why they should try to move such a resolution as this. It would be necessary if the resolution of my friend be accepted that two extra teachers would have to be appointed in all schools and colleges in Bengal, namely, one for the teaching of Persian and the other for Arabic, for I know as a matter of fact all Persian teachers are not good Arabic scholars and they are not in a position to teach both Arabic and Persian. Then, there is another thing to be taken into consideration. There may be one or two Muhammadan boys in a school, and even in that case to make arrangements for the teaching of Arabic and Persian it will be necessary to employ two teachers. As a matter of fact what is now being done is that in all schools where there is a decent number of Muhammadan boys teachers are appointed to teach Persian and Arabic, and in schools and colleges where there is not a decent number of boys who want to read Arabic and Persian, teachers are not appointed. But the present resolution of my friend is a very large order upon Government and for these reasons I oppose this resolution."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has thought fit to oppose this resolution perhaps under a misconception. He is such an ardent supporter of Muhammadan claims that I was somewhat surprised when he rose to oppose the resolution, but after listening to him I find that he has not been able to adequately grasp the real reason which induced my Hon'ble friend, Maulvi Abul Kasem, to give notice of this resolution. I will, therefore, take the liberty as briefly as possible to explain to him the position of Muhammadan students in the various schools and colleges. I do not think I need waste much time in trying to press the fact that a Muhammadan student like all oriental students considers that any education that he does receive must not be at the sacrifice of any religious training that he ought to receive at the same time. My friend knows very well that although Bengali happens to be the mother tongue, the Muhammadan student has got to read Arabic and Persian in order to be well versed in his religious language and literature. All his religious books and literature are in Arabic and Persian and it would be absurd to expect that a Muhammadan parent would send his boys to an educational institution where there are no facilities for the teaching of these two languages, which they consider almost as sacred languages, for the reason that their religious books are written in these two languages.

My friend has said that the acceptance of this resolution would mean that two extra teachers would have to be maintained at each school and college. Well, if the recommendation contained in this resolution does go to that length, I am prepared to suggest that that course should be accepted. We have been told and we are always told that the Muhammadans are extremely backward in education and that their backwardness is a serious hindrance to the progress of other communities. I admit that the backwardness in education of so large a proportion as 56 per cent. must be a serious hindrance to the progress of the country as a whole and therefore it is not merely in the interests of the Muhammadans alone that the facilities should be given to the Muhammadans in the matter of teaching Arabic and Persian and that every inducement should be given to them to take advantage of the various educational institutions. In this connection I would like to remind my Hon'ble friend about the deputation which waited on Lord Hardinge in 1912, and which went so far as to say that although the special facilities given to Muhammadans would be resented by non-Muhammadans they would be perfectly prepared to accept any suggestion of Government or any steps that might be taken by them in order to provide ample facilities in educational matters. I take it, therefore, that so far as educational problems are concerned our friends ought to give their whole-hearted support to all schemes in furtherance of Muhammadan education in this country. If the acceptance of the resolution involves the appointment of two teachers at an extra cost of say Rs. 50, Rs. 60 or Rs. 100, I submit that the cost will not be too much in consideration of the objects that are to be achieved. The question therefore arises whether the provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian is so very essential and so very necessary. I submit with all the emphasis that I can command that the provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian is necessary for all institutions. If you do not appoint teachers or professors for the teaching of these languages in all schools and colleges how can you expect that students should go and take admission in these institutions. It cannot therefore be argued that no case has been made out for the appointment of Arabic and Persian professors. It may also be argued that there is no demand for such teaching, and to this I should say that provision should first be made for the teaching of these languages and then you may be in a position to see whether there is really any very great demand or not, but you cannot, by making no provision, say that there is no demand for the teaching of these languages. I submit, therefore, my Lord, that provision must be made for the teaching of Arabic and Persian in all schools and colleges and I do not think that any question of expenditure should at all enter into the consideration of this question. For all these reasons I most strongly support the motion which is substantially the same as the next resolution which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"There is an important consideration in connection with this question of which both the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution as well as the gentleman opposing it have lost sight. Although Bengali is the mother tongue of Muhammadans in this province it is not yet reckoned as a classical subject in the University. Unless, therefore, facilities for the teaching of Persian and Arabic are provided in schools and colleges, Muhammadans will be obliged to take Pali or Sanskrit. I do not object to their taking either of these languages from the point of view of scholarship, but it would be a distinct hardship to the community if for want of facilities they were obliged to do so. If we provide for Sanskrit in a province so largely populated by Muhammadans equal facilities should be provided for the Arabic and Persian if they wish to take to them. Therefore to complete educational arrangements, specially from the point of view of Muhammadans, facilities for the teaching of Arabic and Persian will have to be provided for. My Lord, I cannot quite understand Mr. Ray's point of view in opposing this resolution. Of course the money question is always there, but we are trying to improve Muhammadan education which certainly demands that some arrangements should be made. I do not want to be unkind to my Muhammadan friends, and remind them now they did all they could to get rid of the very little Arabic insisted on by the University in connection with Persian. The objection was on the score of the difficulty of Arabic to the Bengalee Musulman. It can hardly be therefore that there will be widespread demand for Arabic as an independent subject. But where there is such a demand I think that every facility should be given for the teaching of Arabic, a subject which ought to be thought of in connection with their religious and other teachings. One cannot, however, agree that every school and college, irrespective of real demand, should have arrangements both for Arabic and Persian."

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem in moving this resolution has stated that what he really desires is an improved quality of instruction rather than the extension of that instruction. But this is a very different thing to the intention of the resolution now before us, that suitable provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian be made in schools and colleges in the Presidency in all cases where such provision does not exist at present. No more comprehensive demand can be made for the teaching of Arabic than that which has been put forward. I feel compelled, therefore, to deal with this resolution as it stands while keeping in mind the corollary which the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem has added to the resolution. Unquestionably it is one that affects deeply the whole Muhammadan community of this Presidency. At present the principle underlying the resolution has been recognized in the fact that suitable provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian is being made in all schools and colleges under Government control. In this case, it is altogether reasonable to suggest that similar provision should be extended to schools other than those under Government management, where the interests of Muhammadan learning appear to have been neglected. If the principle is recognized in Government institutions, then we cannot set it aside in aided institutions. In dealing with the details I shall take each type of institution in turn. Of the 6 Government colleges in the Presidency, all are affiliated in Persian and 4 in

Mr. Dunn.

Arabic up to the pass standard of the B. A. degree. Up to the honours standard, 3 are affiliated in both Arabic and Persian. Of the 13 aided colleges in the Presidency, 4 are affiliated in Persian up to the B. A. pass standard. Of the 13 unaided colleges, 2 are affiliated in Persian and 1 in both Arabic and Persian. Of the whole number of 32 colleges, 13 are affiliated in Persian to the pass standard, 4 to the honours standard, 5 to the pass standard in Arabic, and 3 to the honours standard in Arabic. In calculating the total number of colleges I have omitted the two training colleges for teachers which do not undertake graduate instruction, and such institutions as the Sanskrit College in Calcutta which cannot be expected to teach either Arabic or Persian. It is scarcely possible for the Education Department to bring pressure to bear upon unaided colleges in the Presidency. The controlling authority for such institutions is not the Department of Education but the University of Calcutta ; and to the widespread influence of that institution, I would venture to recommend the resolution of the Hon'ble Member.

As regards schools as distinct from colleges, we have to deal with Government institutions, with aided institutions and with those under private control without the enjoyment of a grant-in-aid. The only Government schools in which no provision is made for Arabic or Persian instruction are the Sanskrit Collegiate School and the Hindu School, but in these institutions no Muhammadans now read. It would not be reasonable, therefore, either to make provision for the teaching of Muhammadan classics in these institutions, or to bring pressure to bear upon them in order to introduce such instruction. I take it, Sir, that the resolution of the Hon'ble Member does not fully cover such institutions as I have described, although it asks for provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian in all cases where such provision does not exist at present. As regards aided institutions, the attitude of the Education Department has been towards the encouragement of the study of Arabic and Persian. Inspectors have been specially instructed to investigate the needs of all schools situated in Muhammadan localities where the teaching of Arabic and Persian has been neglected. In all aided high schools, also, the need for the provision of instruction in the Islamic classics is carefully considered when grants are sanctioned for the first time or when grants come to be renewed.

As regards private schools, their control lies with the University of Calcutta ; but the Education Department has to report on the condition of these institutions for the University. In every case the reports submitted to the Syndicate lay stress upon the need (where the need exists) of Maulvis for the teaching of Arabic and Persian. In conclusion I would state that in Eastern Bengal where the Muhammadan population is large it is safe to say that very few, if any, of the high schools fail to teach one or both of the Muhammadan classical languages. Here at this stage I do not feel myself justified in entering into a discussion on the quality of that instruction. In Western Bengal where conditions are altogether different, there are many schools where no Maulvis are entertained, but in these schools in that area, I have no ground for the belief that a reasonable demand exists for this kind of instruction. Any complaints on this question from local Anjuman and other responsible bodies invariably meet with careful consideration ; and I shall be glad to investigate at any time any specific instances of neglect of Muhammadan interest in schools or colleges that may be brought to my notice. If then the resolution means that Arabic and Persian studies should be introduced in schools and colleges wherever they are desired, I would support it, as my department has already done, without hesitation and with enthusiasm. But if the resolution means that we must thrust Islamic studies upon schools that neither desire nor can make use of them, I am afraid that I cannot recommend its acceptance by this Council."

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, when I moved the resolution I thought that it would be accepted on behalf of the Government and that there would be no discussions over it, but the opposition of my Hon'ble friend, Babu Surendra Nath Ray, came upon me as a surprise. I am sorry to find that he does not see the difficulties of the Muhammadan students in this connection. If he had been able to do so he would certainly have supported the resolution as it stands, as I believe there is no one in this Council more anxious to see Muhammadan boys advance in education than the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray himself. I am told that the resolution, as drafted, was different in spirit from my speech in introducing it to the Council because I am told, that I added a corollary to it by saying that the quality of the education should be improved. By 'suitable provision'—the wording is quite clear—I meant that there must be capable teachers to teach Arabic and Persian and that the teachers must not be any and every Muhammadan caught hold of in the streets and installed in the chair of the Arabic and Persian Professor. As regards the demand for suitable teachers by high schools, I may relate an incident. When the present Director of Public Instruction was in charge of education in the Burdwan Division, the local association approached him on a matter of this kind. He held an inquiry as regards one particular school which used to maintain a Persian teacher on Rs. 30 a month. He held consultations with the authorities and came to the conclusion that the teaching was inefficient and he insisted upon the school authorities appointing a suitable teacher which the school authorities had to do. The result has been that within two years the number of Muhammadan students reading Arabic and Persian in that high school has risen from 10 to 85. This justifies me in saying that, if a proper provision is made for the teaching of these two languages, the number of Muhammadan students would certainly increase in our schools and colleges. It has been said that such provision has been made so far as Eastern Bengal districts are concerned, but if we examine the facts, we find that a good many Muhammadan boys take up Sanskrit as their second language, even in Eastern Bengal. Like the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, I also do not object to Muhammadans taking up Sanskrit for academic distinctions or scholastic studies, but the difficulty is that they take up Sanskrit because the teaching of Arabic and Persian is not efficient and they cannot expect to get through the examinations, and the result is that they are driven to take up Sanskrit. The real object as to why we insist on Muhammadan boys taking up Arabic and Persian studies is not only that our religious books are written in those languages, but for the fact that, without a proper study of Arabic and Persian, a Muhammadan loses in himself the Islamic character and also his position in Muhammadan society. The society demands that a Muhammadan must have the Islamic culture in him which can only be found in these two languages, and he is also expected to know the ancient civilization and the history of his own race which are recorded in these two languages. I think, so far as the objection of my Hon'ble friend, Babu Surendra Nath Ray, is concerned, a sufficient reply has been given to him by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, whose long experience as the Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University has given him opportunities of studying the Muhammadan education problem, and the conclusion he has come to about this matter must commend itself to all interested in Muhammadan education. As my Hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, has stated, the question of the advancement of Muhammadan education is so important that anything that ought to be done in this direction will have to be done not only in the interests of the Muhammadans themselves, but also in the interests of the province at large. We are told that we are handicapping the rest of the province. If that is so—and I admit to a certain extent it is true—then the earliest possible opportunity should be taken to remove this handicap and bring the Muhammadan on a par with Hindus so that the progress of the two communities may be parallel all along. The Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction was kind enough to point out that the profession of the teaching of Arabic and Persian cannot be made in all colleges in Bengal, for instance, it cannot be made in Sanskrit Colleges. But what we meant was that this provision may be made in colleges and schools where there were largely Muhammadan students. The task of getting admission into colleges has already become very difficult and there are two resolutions on the agenda paper to-day asking for provision to be made for candidates who have failed to get admission into colleges. Many colleges refused to take any Muhammadan boys, because, by taking them in they would not only have to refuse admission to Hindu students, but they will also have to take upon themselves the responsibility of making provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian, but, by turning them out, they will be relieved of the responsibility of maintaining a separate staff. Some three or four years back when this difficulty first arose, I suggested, when discussing the Financial Statement, that some provision should be made for helping private institutions and aided colleges with the special object of maintaining Arabic and Persian teachers in order that Muhammadan boys may receive education and may not be refused by any institution on that account. We have been told that, out of 13 colleges, only 4 are affiliated in Arabic pass. That is true. Most of the boys find difficulty in getting admission into colleges and the Muhammadan boys find it more difficult still. I remember the case of a Barisal student who took Arabic for his I. A. examination. He came to Calcutta and tried to get admission into one college which taught Arabic there. He could not get admission. Then he came to Dacca and by the time he came here the class was full and he could not be admitted. He went back to Barisal and ultimately he had to give up his studies altogether. So it must be admitted from the case I have just cited, as also that of Burdwan cited at the beginning of my speech, that, if suitable arrangements are made for the teaching of Persian and Arabic, there will be no lack of students. I may also cite another instance, and it is also perhaps known to the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction, that in the district of Burdwan there was a school in which arrangements were made for the teaching of Arabic and Persian. Unfortunately at that time there was no vacancy in the grants-in-aid list, no grant-in-aid was made to it, and the school had to dispense with the services of the Persian and Arabic teachers. The Secretary and Proprietor, having failed in business, could not pay the cost of keeping them. We tried our best to secure a small grant-in-aid from the Education Department for that school in order that it might keep up its Persian and Arabic classes, but for the reasons stated above, we were unsuccessful, and the result has been that a large number of Muhammadan boys had to be sent away. These are the grounds on which I have brought forward this resolution and I think there will be no harm in accepting it."

Mr. Dunn.

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, I should be extremely unwilling to create the impression from any remarks which I found it necessary to make that my sympathies were not whole-heartedly with the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem in the general intention of his resolution. I think his purpose will be served if the resolution were to be as follows :—

'That provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian be made in schools and colleges in the Presidency in all cases where, owing to the presence of Muhammadan students, such provision is desirable.'

If that resolution be accepted I would like to take this opportunity of promising that, through the agency of my office and the Inspectors, a complete survey will be made of the existing provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian and that such cases as the Hon'ble Member has referred to in the district with which he is connected will be very carefully attended to. The general intention of the resolution is, I take it, clear and with the slight emendation which I have made, it will not only be clear but from the point of view of procedure more acceptable."

The Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"Ordinarily I would not have the right of reply, but having regard to the fact that the next resolution which stands in my name on the same subject cannot now be moved, I beg your Excellency's permission to say these few words. The resolution, as now drafted, by the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction does meet our demand to a very great extent, but I would only ask him to consider—better still to reconsider—words at the end of the resolution which read thus : 'owing to the presence of Muhammadan students, some such provision is desirable'. My Lord, that at once involves an argument that in all cases where there are no Muhammadan students in colleges no provision seems to be necessary. I knew that argument, and it is often hurled at us that where there are no Muhammadans it may be taken for granted that there is no demand for the teaching of Arabic and Persian there. This argument is fallacious. If there are no Muhammadan students I may assure the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction, the absence is due to the fact that there is no provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian. I do not think it is unknown to the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction that there are some very devout Muhammadans whose religious susceptibilities are such that they would rather keep their children uneducated than send them to a school where there is no provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian, I submit that the question should not be left vague depending upon the presence or absence of Muhammadan students alone. I urge that this provision has got to be made. With these few remarks I would suggest that the Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction might be pleased to reconsider his draft."

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"I would amend it again as follows :—

"That suitable provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian be made in schools and colleges in the Presidency in all cases where owing to the presence of Muhammadan students or owing to the demands of the Muhammadan community such provision is desirable."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"I will accept it."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"I also accept it and I am sure it will meet with the approval of those for whom we are speaking to-day."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, we beg to offer our thanks for the kind consideration that has been shown to us."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The following resolution which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq was deemed to be withdrawn :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that suitable provision for the teaching of Arabic and Persian be made in all colleges and schools in Bengal.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved the following Resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the question of improving the status and condition of the Dacca School of Engineering be taken up at an early date.

He said :—

My Lord, the members of this Council are probably aware that the Dacca University Commission Report expressed strongly in favour of incorporating a College of Civil Engineering in the Dacca University. It was at one time contemplated by Government practically to knock down on the head the present Sibpur Engineering College and replace it by an Overseer Class, whereas Dacca was to have a residential well-equipped college for Civil Engineers. I moved a resolution in your Lordship's Council on the 28th February 1914 asking your Lordship's Government to drop the proposal for the abolition of the Sibpur Engineering College. Government did not then give any assurance as regards the retention of the Sibpur Engineering College, but intimated that the question would be considered after the publication of the report of the Public Services Commission. We have, however, now an assurance from the Government that the Sibpur Engineering College will not be abolished nor will its usefulness be curtailed. While opposed to the interference of Government with the usefulness of the Sibpur Engineering College I have never been opposed to have a good Civil Engineering College at Dacca as part of the Dacca University. But after the Report of the Calcutta University Commission I do not think I should be justified in asking for a full-fledged Engineering College at Dacca. But I think the present School of Engineering at Dacca may be made useful in various other ways. It is very doubtful whether during the period of post-war reconstruction in Europe, there will be a supply of Engineers from England to this country, except of a very indifferent type who, having failed to receive employment there, will try to secure employment in this country. We must therefore have an adequate supply of our own in order that we may take the fullest advantage of the opportunities for industrial development which are likely to present themselves in this country.

That the Engineering classes of the School of Engineering at Dacca are popular and that there is not sufficient accommodation for those who want to get admission is quite evident. It is only the other day that the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan was pleased to allow 10 additional boys to be admitted in the Sub-Overseer class and 10 additional boys in the Overseer class and I think he has also directed two additional teachers to be appointed. At present in the Dacca Engineering School boys are taught up to the Overseer or Upper Subordinate class.

In these days when the industrial development is the most important question before the country I think greater attention ought to be paid to the technical studies than to the studies of Arts course and, as a matter of fact, people have come to recognise the utility of such studies. They want to enter the technical department, but they find that they cannot qualify themselves properly for want of proper places of study and training. I ask your Lordship's Government to make the school as it is more satisfactory and to increase its utility so far as possible. I would suggest that there should be a revision of the scheme of technical education, and progressive and continuous course of study should be provided from the first year B class to the Final Overseer class. The Survey courses at Mainamati and at other places should be of the same kind. The Mainamati School staff is of inferior quality. There ought to be better qualified teachers in Dacca as there will not be a full-fledged Civil Engineering College at Dacca at least for the present. Steps may be taken from now for the development of the present School of Engineering. The present arbitrary limit to the admission of boys ought to be done away with.

In Dacca, in the new three years' course curriculum great importance has been given to theory rather than to workshop practice. A number of new subjects, i.e., Sanitary Engineering, Higher Mechanics, Accounts, etc., have been added to the already heavy old four years' course and practice, and practice in four different workshops have to be done in three years. I understand the new course has got no teaching in Physical Science and Chemistry for the Sub-Overseer classes. The general principles of the above subjects are the foundations of technical and industrial education. I am informed that practical survey teaching suffers a great deal as the students are sent in batches for want of accommodation in camp. The number of teachers for teaching theoretical subjects are inadequate. There is also not sufficient accommodation for class rooms even for the Overseer and Sub-Overseer departments, not to speak of the new Survey class.

The want of pioneering and demonstration sections for converting raw material to useful articles of commerce and a suitable course of study and training in the higher technical institutions of the country are the main causes contributing to the failure of industrial development of the country. Industry cannot thrive till the workers are thoroughly trained in demonstration shops just after their full course of education in a technical institution. I think as much practical training as is possible in a School of Engineering ought to be imparted in the Dacca School of Engineering. Considering the importance of the big workshop of the Dacca School of Engineering, it should be put under a highly qualified Foreman Instructor who knows the working and management of a concern like this and whose teaching may be of real help to the students who want to devote their time and energy for the development of the industries of the country.

From the curriculum of study in the Dacca School of Engineering I now pass on to another subject connected with the school. I mean the pay and prospects of the teachers and the administration of the school. In the recently created Calcutta Commercial Institute, the teachers are designated as lecturers and they have a very good initial salary to start with, though they are much junior to the Engineering Institution teachers, the former teaching such subjects as Arithmetic, Geography, Book-keeping and Type-writing. I think some of the teachers of the Dacca School of Engineering possess the qualifications of any ordinary teacher in a second grade college. They are either graduates fully trained or specialists in their own line. They have been entrusted with a course of study the subject of which are much above those prescribed for the I. Sc. examination. The four Assistant Foreman Instructors deserve better emoluments and ought to be accommodated in the school itself.

I think there ought to be a separate Principal for the Dacca School of Engineering. The present Principal is a general department man and cannot possibly understand the nature and wants of a technical school. The Dacca School of Engineering ought to have a governing body to control the internal affairs of the school. These are some of my suggestions.

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

I was quite delighted to see the Dacca School of Engineering this morning. Nearly 200 boys were working in the different workshops. Those who in season and out of season take a delight in stating that the Bengali boys of the bhadralok class were unfit for manual labour or that they think it beneath their dignity to do so and are therefore unfit to be admitted in large numbers to Technical Institutes will do well to come over to the place once and see with their own eyes how zealously and assiduously these boys have taken to the practical part of their work.

One of the grievances of the students is that there is no guaranteed post for the first boy of the Overseer class of this school as there is in the Sibpur Engineering College, though the course of study is the same. This is a matter which the Government will do well to take into consideration.

I need hardly impress upon your Lordship's Government the necessity of removing the present School of Engineering at Dacca and of placing it on a better footing.

We are fully alive to the steps already initiated by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan in this direction, and the country is grateful for the same. The number of students who are coming out from our schools every year is increasing by leaps and bounds. They cannot all expect to take to law. Nor can they all expect to take to medicine. It is therefore necessary that they should take to other professions. A properly equipped Civil Engineering School at Dacca means in addition to the impartation of knowledge of engineering, laying the foundation of industrial development of the country of giving an impetus to the home industries for which Eastern Bengal is a congenial place to thrive."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, the resolution before us to-day has been worded in somewhat indefinite phraseology and I may say that it is wide and does not really say exactly what the line of improvement the Hon'ble Mover has in view, but in his speech he has given us indication as to the kind of improvement which he has in view with regard to the Dacca School of Engineering. I may say at once that I have been taking a certain amount of interest in the School of Engineering, since I came to Dacca; and I am fully convinced that the Government should improve the institution so far as it may be possible to do so. On the other hand I am glad that the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray realises that Dacca, placed as it is, cannot for the present at any rate expect to have a fully-equipped engineering college, and anyone who goes through that portion of the Calcutta University Commission's Report which deals with the University at Dacca must come across the fact that the Commission itself has considered this matter about an engineering college for Dacca and has come to the conclusion that there are certain obvious reasons against its establishment in the near future at any rate.

I now turn to the Dacca School of Engineering. I think when I briefly state and indicate what action Government have already taken to make the school a more efficient and complete school of engineering, and what proposals I have already sanctioned on behalf of Government or are about to sanction that I shall have met the Hon'ble Member's intentions to such an extent that it will not make it necessary for him to press the resolution which he has moved to-day. In the first place now that the Calcutta University Commission Report is out we have got to consider the Dacca University scheme as soon as the Government of India introduce a Bill with regard to the establishment of that University. I have gone into the question of the future site of the school of engineering. Two local gentlemen very kindly gave me exhaustive notes against the site proposed by the Government as well as discussed by the University Commission in their report, namely, the old Secretariat Press of the late Eastern Bengal and Assam Government. I am mentioning these facts to-day because these two gentlemen would no doubt like to know what the Government think of the site that they had in view. I was to have gone to see the place, but unfortunately I got an attack of influenza and, as Major Gourlay came and told me that there were 140 cases of influenza in the vicinity, I thought it best to stay away. Mr. Goode has been to see the place on behalf of Government and also Mr. Dunn, and both of them have reported against the place as being most unsuitable for the engineering school, therefore at present the Government's proposal is to transfer the school to the commodious building which is known as the old Secretariat Press. I have myself seen the building, and I consider that we can adapt it for the engineering school. I may here point out that the University Commission considered the building to be too substantial and magnificent for the purpose; I am afraid I do not agree with them on the point. But this point need not be discussed as the University Commission themselves eventually thought that this was the place where the school of engineering could be removed to. What is important is that this large and growing school should be well-housed, and as this fine building is lying vacant for some years now, I can personally perceive no better use to which it can be put than that of accommodating the Dacca School of Engineering. There are, however, several other matters in connection with the school which will perhaps interest the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution more. A very sound proposal was made some time ago by the Joint Technical Board to appoint a strong expert governing body and to assist the present Headmaster as he is at present fully occupied with the administration of the school. The Hon'ble Mover of this resolution has also advocated that we should go into the question of the governing body. I cordially accept the suggestion which remained pending so long, and I have just passed orders for the constitution of the governing body and to bring final proposal before me regarding the powers which they will enjoy. The question of staff is a very important and urgent one, and I am satisfied that the school is at present understaffed, and I think that the pay and prospects of certain members of the staff should be improved. As the Hon'ble Mover has already made a reference I do not again mention the subject, but I have already sanctioned two additional temporary hands, and the final question of staff will be gone into as soon as the matter has been considered by the Finance Department to whom we are making a reference now. It has, moreover, been brought to my notice that the equipment of the school is in some respects deficient, and that the instruments which the Headmaster of the school requires are not complete. The question of equipment is now being considered by the Director of Public Instruction, and I hope that the matter will be remedied soon.

Then again the Hon'ble Mover has mentioned the question of the Dacca School of Engineering having a Principal of its own and of the removal of the nominal subordination of the school to the Dacca College. I have directed that the Headmaster in future should be designated as the Principal, and the question of extending some of the classes will also be at the same time considered.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has among other things laid stress on the point of reviving the second-year survey class in the school. Regarding that all that I can say at present is that the Joint Technical Board have been going into the matter again, and I believe that they have come to the conclusion that the second-year survey class in the Dacca School of Engineering can be revived, keeping the survey class at Mainamati as well. If that is so, and if the proposal come up to Government, I can assure the Babu Surendra Nath Ray; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Hon'ble Member that the proposal will receive the closest attention, and if it is possible to revive it again, we shall do so.

Turning now to the other point that he has mentioned in connection with the admission of more students, well that is a general complaint. I have, as I have already said, been able to admit some additional students this year, and I trust that with the additional staff and with the removal of the school to a more commodious building we may next year be able to receive a considerably larger number of students, and if the number of would-be entrants justify this, we shall then be prepared to consider the question of doubling the class or duplicating the staff in consequence. But beyond that I cannot promise. I think the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution will see that some of the questions that he wanted to press before the Government have already been taken up by the Government, and therefore there is no necessity for him to press the resolution at this stage."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"After hearing the Member in charge I do not think I should be justified in pressing the resolution. It appears that, in fact, all my recommendations are now before Government and some of them have already been carried out. First, as regards the governing body the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur accepts my recommendations; as regards the staff he thinks that their pay and prospects ought to be improved; as regards the equipment of the school he says that it is now being considered by the Director of Public Instruction; as regards the Principal, my suggestion is that the Principal ought to be a different man to the Principal of the local college; that proposal also he is prepared to accept. Then as regards the second-year survey class, it can be revived, and as regards the admission of more students he is quite justified in saying that with additional staff and additional accommodation in the new Secretariat Press Building the question will be favourably considered. So in these circumstances I do not think I would be justified in pressing the resolution, and I beg leave to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq was to have moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee be appointed to inquire into the circumstances connected with the abolition of the Electrical and Mechanical classes in connection with the Dacca School of Engineering.

He said :—

"My Lord, I understand that the question of the improvement of the condition of the Dacca School of Engineering is under consideration, and in that case let me hope that the question of the abolition of the mechanical and electrical classes will also be taken up. In these circumstances I do not think I should press my proposal for the appointment of a committee and with the permission of the President I beg to withdraw the resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that out of the educational grants provided in the current year's budget, a sum of Rs. 50,000 be granted to the promoters of the proposed Howrah College for the purpose of building the college.

The Hon'ble Member being absent, the resolution was not moved.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government of India be moved to sanction a special monthly war allowance for six months to all Government servants in Bengal drawing not more than Rs. 100 a month at the rate of 10 per cent. of their respective salaries.

He said :—

"My Lord, the principle underlying this resolution is not a matter of controversy. As a matter of fact the principle has been recognised in the Government resolution of the 12th June 1919, and with the object of affording some measure of relief to all Government servants, certain concessions have already been made to these ill-paid ministerial officers, so I need not take up the time of the Council in labouring the principle. All that this resolution seeks to recommend is this : that by the concession made by the resolution of the 12th June relief has been granted to this extent, namely, ranging from Re. 1 to Rs. 2-8. I have taken the liberty of recommending that the concession should be a little larger so as to make the relief really appreciable. What has been given is this. Rupee 1 in these days can purchase only 4 seers of rice. Taking an average family to consist of 5 members really what has been given means less than a seer of rice a month, and in the case of the maximum concession, namely, those who get over Rs. 40 and not over Rs. 50, in their case the monthly concession has been given at Rs. 2-8. According to the calculation that I have made it is something like 2 seers per head. I leave it to Your Excellency to consider whether that is a relief which is at all appreciable. Of course this is a case between masters and servants. These low-paid officers are the servants of Government and the whole question is whether they deserve consideration at the hands of the Government in a critical time like this. Some concession has already been made, and according to my calculation the rate comes to something like 5 per cent. in all these cases. I have ventured to demand 10 per cent. on behalf of these unfortunate officers. I should think, my Lord, my demand is rather meagre, but having regard to the difficulty which Government are bound to experience in meeting this extra cost, I have thought fit not to make a larger claim.

There is only one other matter which this resolution seeks to recommend. It is somewhat different from the concession already granted. In that resolution concession has been granted to those who draw below Rs. 50. Now, my Lord, even those ministerial officers who draw Rs. 100 are hard hit by the prevailing high prices, and living in the midst of these people we know what these men are really suffering. Your Lordship will excuse me if I submit that it is rather difficult for members of the Government to be able to realise the amount of their sufferings. I am inclined to think that if the Government really knew the true extent of their sufferings, possibly Government might have been induced to make the concession a little larger. There is one other matter to which I would like to invite Your Excellency's attention, and it is this that in the resolution of the 12th June concession has been made to those whose pay is over Rs. 12; there is a large class of people whose pay is less than Rs. 12. I do not know the principle upon which these people have been excluded, probably because they were in the enjoyment of some grain compensation allowance. If not, their case should be considered also. This morning a Bill was introduced for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and I should think that if this concession were not granted it would be an act of cruelty as well. With these observations I press this resolution for the consideration of the Council."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this resolution is the first of three of a somewhat kindred type, in so far as they all deal with the pay of the ministerial officers of Government, though this one is of a more specific character than the other two in recommending the grant of relief with reference to existing post-war conditions. But the economic conditions which have brought about this resolution have equally brought about the other two, and so far as I now make any remarks of a general character, they will be equally applicable to the two other resolutions which follow.

The resolution which the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has just moved is very like a resolution that was moved last August by the Hon'ble Maulvi Faz-ul-Haq, which differed only in that it did not make a specific recommendation of a 10 per cent. enhancement. I then opposed that resolution, partly, it is true, on the ground that at that time food prices were fortunately not high. Again in March last, the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, in connection with the financial statement, moved a very similar resolution in Calcutta, and in connection with that I promised to consider it to the extent of giving relief to men drawing Rs. 30 and under. In answering those two resolutions, I stated the facts to the best of my ability, and I am afraid, therefore, that I have nothing very new to say on this occasion.

Of the economic facts we are, of course, only too painfully aware; whatever salary we are in receipt of, whatever position we occupy, this enhancement of prices is brought home to us in every purchase we make, and Government fully sympathises with the hardship which is being caused thereby to its more lowly paid servants. Cultivators have, to a certain extent, compensations, for with the prevailing high prices the agriculturist gets better prices for his produce, as for instance, he does at the moment for his jute. But these compensations are not open to the Government clerk, and we cannot but sympathise with his position and appreciate the loyalty with which he has continued to do his work for Government despite the adverse circumstances which surround him. But there are facts what we cannot forget. I have been told before that I offer but poor comfort in pointing out that the whole world is suffering from this hardship of high prices, yet although it may be only cold comfort it is essential to remember that the whole world is a victim of the misfortunes that have come upon us on account of the war. It is perfectly impossible for this Government, with the best intentions in the world, to save their servants from the effects which are common over so wide an area. We can sympathise but we cannot entirely save. Our sympathy, moreover, has not only been lip sympathy; we have tried to do something for the more lowly paid, and that little we have done. The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta may call it wholly inadequate, but what we have done has involved us in a very considerable expenditure.

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

Our first action was directed towards the relief of menials, and I explained its character in this Council room last August. I think the Hon'ble Member must be under some misapprehension in saying that we have done nothing for those drawing under Rs. 12; we raised the pay of all menials according to a revised classification of districts to Rs. 10, 9 and 8, and we gave an extra rupee to those drawing less than Rs. 12. That was what we first did, and that has cost us some 4 lakhs of rupees. As a result of the August discussion, I only promised in Council that we would try to do something up to Rs. 30; when we came to look into the matter further we thought that there was a case possibly for doing a little more, and we gave relief up to Rs. 50. That cost us Rs. 3½ lakhs, so, therefore, we have, at least, in recognition of the consequences of the war, incurred an expenditure of 7½ lakhs, and our difficulty in going further is simply one of practical finance. If we were to concede this resolution, we estimate, on a rough calculation, that enhancing the pay of those under Rs. 50, i.e., in raising it from 6 per cent. at which, approximately, it is now, to 10 per cent., would cost us Rs. 1½ lakhs, and giving 10 per cent. to those between 50 and 100 would cost us another 4 lakhs; so in addition to the expenditure of 7½ lakhs, this resolution, when we put it in figures, is a practical request that we should disburse another 5½ lakhs.

We feel that we are not justified in accepting that expenditure at the present moment. I have previously said in this Council, and have drawn the attention of Hon'ble Members to the fact, that our financial position under the Reform Scheme is not going to be a very advantageous one; since I last spoke on that topic we have made a more detailed examination of the figures, and the position has come out rather worse, I might say considerably worse, than what we anticipated. We have now got to discuss that question with the Government of India, and until we discuss it with them we really are very much in the dark as to what our future financial resources are going to be. Unless we receive a full recognition of our claims from the Government of India, our position will be one of some difficulty. A second objection is that these are not the only claims upon us. We see how these matters grow up; we give relief up to 6 per cent., and a few months later we are asked to go up to 10 per cent.; we give relief up to men on Rs. 50 and we are next pressed to go up to Rs. 100; while resolutions are constant in this Council asking us to do something for the sub-deputy collectors on Rs. 100, for the munsifs on Rs. 200, and so on. A matter to which attention has been prominently drawn in the recently published report of the University Commission is the inadequate pay of teachers, and any one can see that within the next few years their claims are going to be very forcibly represented. We are also faced with the possibility of having to raise the pay of the lower ranks of the police, and as regards constables especially recruitment may be affected by recent improvements in the pay of sepoys. Again, although we have given menials relief to the extent of Rs. 4 lakhs, the full scheme, if carried out, will cost us about Rs. 17 lakhs, and I could give other instances of a like type. These are all practical reasons which tend to staunch the flow of our sympathy, and we do not feel that we can, as a matter of fact, go much further than we have. On these grounds, I am afraid that I cannot accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, this is not a matter upon which there can be any argument. As regards the arguments based on the fact that there are munsifs and sub-judges, and so on, I should like to say this—that there is a remarkable difference between the case of those who are given only a living wage and those officers in whose case there is some margin. The ministerial officers receive a pay which does not allow any margin. That is the difference, my

The President ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

Lord. But if Government find that the financial position is such that it is impossible to make further concession, then, of course, I do not think I can press my resolution. I leave the matter to Your Excellency's Government."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The President said :—

"Items 18 and 19 raise substantially the same question and it will be convenient if they are both discussed together. I shall, however, be prepared to put them to the vote separately from the chair."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government of India be moved to raise the initial pay of the ministerial officers in all Government offices in Bengal to Rs. 40 per month.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, the present scale was fixed in Western Bengal in 1906, I believe, and in Eastern Bengal so far as my recollection goes in 1911 or thereabout. Now the question is that the initial pay of Rs. 30 was fixed on the principle that it was adequate to furnish the employes with reasonable incentive to work honestly and conscientiously, but that amount was fixed because that was considered to be the lowest living wage for a man of the middle class. I take the liberty to read this passage from the report of the Ministerial Officers' Committee of Eastern Bengal and Assam of 1908-09 :—

'From these figures it is apparent that the prospects of an officer attaining, under present rules, a pay of Rs. 50 or over in the course of his service are remote, that to many a pay of less than Rs. 40 a month must be the ultimate goal of their ambition and that a great part of the official life of the majority will be spent in posts in which they will draw less than Rs. 30. The decision of the question whether on the whole the pay is adequate therefore depends to a considerable degree on the answer to the question whether a pay of less than Rs. 30 is such as will enable a man of the amla class to live in ordinary comfort and meet the reasonable expenses of men of the same class. To this question we have sought an answer from many sources, and the replies we have received lead us to the conclusion that there is no room for doubt that Rs. 30 a month is the very lowest sum which can be held to be a living wage for men of the amla class even at the beginning of their service. The facts and figures given in chapter X of the report of the Salaries Commission shows that even in 1885 Rs. 30 a month was as little as a man of the amla class could live on with comfort. In the twenty years which have passed since that report was drafted the cost of living has undoubtedly increased, and it is only on the most parsimonious scale that Rs. 30 will now suffice even for a man with a very small family.'

That was the principle, my Lord, underlying the scale that was fixed in 1908-09, because that was considered to be the lowest living wage without any reference to the question as to whether that pay could furnish a reasonable incentive to work honestly and conscientiously. Now, my Lord, if Rs. 30 was the lowest living wage even in 1885 and if Rs. 30 was considered to be parsimonious in 1905, then the question arises what is the present position in view of the fact that the prices of all articles, of all necessaries and of all essentials have risen very abnormally. Now there are two estimates given about the reasonable expenses—bare necessities of life. These two estimates were given to the Ministerial Officers' Committee by two gentlemen of Dacca, namely, Khan Bahadur Khwaja Muhammad Emdad and Rai Kali Prasanna Ghosh Bahadur. It will appear from these two estimates that according to the estimate of the Khan Bahadur Rs. 35 was the expenses necessary for the ministerial officers; they could not do just as well according to the other estimate—I mean the estimate of Rai in the pay of Rai Kali Prasanna Ghosh Bahadur—it was Rs. 30. Now if one goes through the items of these estimates it will be perfectly clear that prices have increased at least doubly in each one of these items. So that according to that calculation the lowest living wage should be held now to be Rs. 70 according to one estimate and Rs. 60 according to the other estimate. That is also borne out by the figures which were furnished by Your Excellency's Government in answer to a question of mine at the meeting of 3rd July last. From that statement it appears that the prices of necessities of life have increased very very considerably—in some cases double, in some cases a little less than double, and so on. Therefore it is a very serious question as to what the initial pay of these officers should be. Your Excellency may well realise the inevitable results of inadequate pay. Without describing that in my own words I shall place before the Council a graphic description given by the Ministerial Officers' Committee in 1908 about the inevitable result of such an inadequate pay. In paragraph 28 of the report it is stated:—

'From the low pay, the method of recruitment and want of training flow general inefficiency and—what is by far the most serious defect—the canker of corruption which has eaten so deeply into the ministerial staff. As the figures in paragraph 22 show, 57 per cent. of the staff must either depend in part on private means for their existence or must subsist by dishonesty, and if we count in the apprentices, the percentage rises to 64. Of these private means amla and apprentices as a class are not possessed to any considerable extent. Mutual help, when there is a family party in the office, may keep some on low pay or no pay from the path of dishonesty; but the committee feel it is no exaggeration to say that fully one-half of the low-ture officers and of the apprentices live on what they, by illicit methods, get from the public. The methods resorted to are many. As in 1885, their low, information is sold to the public which either it is in the interest of the Government to keep secret or which can only be obtained legitimately by payment of fees—delay is caused or procedure is expedited in return for a bribe, the douceur—processes are issued or not issued, served or not served, to the convenience of the man who bribes the highest, papers disappear before the public appear mysteriously, and in extreme cases, when the cash equivalent is forthcoming, records are tampered with, at times, in the most ingenious and, at times, in the most barefaced manner. The records of all or nearly all districts afford abundant instances in which dishonest dealings on the part of the office employes have been detected. But detection in such matters is a mere accident since it is neither in the interest of the briber or the bribed to disclose the transaction and the fellow officers of the bribed who mostly "live in glass houses" even if they know of the transaction will not disclose it unless impelled to do so by enmity. It is of course not the men on low pay only who take bribes. A habit once acquired is not easy to shake off and the officer who was driven by necessity to take bribes while his pay was low finds the habit cling to him and even if he, when he has a living wage, desire to be honest he must often find that he cannot free himself from the mesh of the professional briber.'

Then, my Lord, the question discussed there is what is the remedy of this state of things. The recommendation of the Committee on the question is given in paragraph 30—

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

'First and foremost it is clearly essential that to every clerk who employed in any capacity a living wage should be assured. This alone will not eradicate corruption; but at least it will reduce to a temptation, which can be resisted, what is now an imperious necessity, and will make possible for all clerks to begin and run their official course without resort to dishonesty. To effect this it is in the first place necessary to raise initial pay to Rs. 30.'

Under these circumstances the initial pay was raised to Rs. 30 in 1908-09.

"Now the question arises as to what is the lowest living wage now. This is a problem which Government ought to solve undeterred by the consideration that it is a question of great financial responsibility. It is true that a little concessions that have been granted to the menials have involved Government in a very large expenditure of about 7½ lakhs, but none the less that is a problem which must be solved. If Government do not do anything for these ill-paid clerks then they will eke out their existence by means of corruption. They must live and they must have their food to keep their body and soul together. Of course there is the question of luxuries, but this is a different matter. When the lowest living wage is very much more than Rs. 30, then the question arises how will they meet their wants. I have already submitted they must live whether Government increase the pay or not. If the pay is not increased, they will have no other alternative left but to take to corruption. Now what is corruption, my Lord? It means that they will have their money from the rate-payers at large dishonestly but dishonestly by the back door. So if the whole question is analysed and critically examined it makes no difference whether that money makes its way into their pocket in the shape of bribe or in the shape of increased pay—I mean so far as the rate-payers of the country are concerned it makes no difference. So even according to that calculation it is high time, my Lord, that the whole question should be discussed and inquired into. What I wish is nothing more than that. I must admit that I have made a specific recommendation, because if I am to move a resolution like this I must make a specific recommendation. I do not pretend to say that my recommendation that I have made is very precise or exactly what it ought to be. That is a matter which must be left to Government and it is not for me to submit, but in any case, it is high time that the question as to what should be the lowest living wage, according to the present prices of things, should be considered, and after coming to a decision on this point the lowest living wage should be given to them by way of increment.

With these observations I beg to commend this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I rise to speak on this resolution. As has been observed by Your Excellency it is substantially the same as the one which stands in my name in general form. The question of the pay and prospects of ministerial officers should be in my humble opinion considered by Government without any further delay. I am not one of those who believe that simply by raising the pay of the ministerial officers corruption in the public courts and court offices will disappear like magic. They will not be able to do away with the habit which has a tradition of centuries behind it, but it is hoped that if they get living wages as has been remarked by my friend opposite, and if they are not driven to corruption, they will be more careful and it may gradually in the long run disappear. They will not, as they do now, venture boldly and openly to carry out corruption without any check because the only people who can bring about a check is the public at large and the public will hesitate to bring it to the notice of the authorities because they know that these poor clerks do not get a living wage. My Lord, I am sure we will have the sympathy of Your Excellency's Government in our endeavour to better the unfortunate conditions of the ministerial officers of Government, and I am afraid we will be told that the financial position of Government does not admit of taking a large step at the present moment, just as we have been by Sir Henry Wheeler, and that any substantial increase in the pay of ministerial officers will also involve the expenditure of a large amount of money. So far as we can see our financial condition is not very good and we have found it difficult to meet several of our pressing demands, but we know that whenever Government want to have something done they get the money for it, and they have it done without any very great difficulties. The present high prices have affected all classes of people, not only the poor men but the men in affluence as well. The pinch is felt all over the ladder, but everyone will agree with me when I say that the lowest rung of the ladder feels more keenly than the highest. Government have been more than considerate in considering the question of pay and allowances and the prospects of the various Imperial services, for instance, Medical, Civil, Police, Forest, &c., and money has been found for the improvement of the pay of these highly paid officers. We do not grudge them this improvement, but we think that other unfortunate servants of the State who do more or less hard and responsible work should receive some consideration at the hands of their employers. My Lord, I think it is not necessary in order to make out a good case in favour of these ministerial officers to place all the facts before the Council because Government are fully aware of these facts, and I know, my Lord, that some orders have been passed granting small allowances to lowly paid officers. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has observed that most of the lowly paid clerks have received some allowance, but I beg to submit that it is neither adequate nor sufficient and has left the matter practically where it was. I think for the efficiency and purity of these officers it is absolutely necessary that immediate steps should be taken to improve the pay and prospects of these ministerial officers. In the resolution of which I have given notice I have specifically confined myself to ministerial officers of Government in the mufassal, because my experience is limited to mufassal offices only. I venture to say that those in Calcutta offices somehow or other make their position felt on the Councils of Government, and they have opportunities of pressing their claims on the Members of Government which the poor ministerial officers in the mufassal have not, just as in the case of the members of the Indian Civil Service who have influential friends at Home who press their claims before the Secretary of State and the House of Commons. The Heads of Departments who are in Calcutta press the claims of their subordinates before Government and sometimes they get a higher rate of pay sanctioned for their ministerial officers. But the ministerial officers in the mufassal cannot put forward their claims through their heads of offices before Government as the conditions in one district are the same as those in other districts and unless all the district officers come forward with a particular proposal, it can receive no consideration. It is not likely that for the sake of the ministerial officers all the district magistrates and district judges are going to hold a conference and bring forward a recommendation. I think the ministerial officers in the mufassal have been so long neglected that it is now high time that their claims should be pressed before Government. My Lord, even the clerks, not the head clerks or head assistants, but ordinary clerks, in the office of the Commissioner of Police get Rs. 200 to Rs. 300 a month and they have been given increments, whilst the sharistadars in district offices, who, in my humble opinion, have far more responsible work to do than the clerks in the office of the Commissioner of Police, draw only Rs. 125 to Rs. 150. I think that the time has come when this question should engage the attention of Your Excellency's Council, and I hope and trust that the decision which Your Excellency's Government will come to will be favourable to these lowly paid clerks."

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

Sir, it must be obvious from what I have recently said what action Government is likely to take in connection with these two resolutions. If we cannot see our way to give temporary relief to a restricted number in respect of special conditions, we cannot equally see our way to give relief to a larger number and on a more permanent basis. I have already asked the Council to consider my previous general remarks in reference to these two resolutions, and there is little more that I wish to say. However there are one or two points particularly apposite to these two resolutions, and it may be convenient to mention first the second resolution—that moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem—as that has the wider scope of the two. This resolution makes the general proposal that steps be taken to improve the pay and prospects of all ministerial officers in the mufassal, and in opposing it I do not want our attitude to be open to misconception. We are constantly taking steps to improve the position of our ministerial officers. Hardly a day passes in the Financial Department that some cases of this kind do not come up. In this year's budget, we have made provision to improve the pay of the registration clerks who, as everybody recognises, were inadequately remunerated. As another example, it was only a few days ago that I approved a scheme for the improvement of the pay of the clerks in civil surgeon's offices in the mufassal, and we have a proposal before us for improving the pay and prospects of the lower division clerks in the Secretariat. These are some instances of cases that are constantly coming before us, some of which go through and some are rejected according to the estimation we form of their merits. But I take it that this resolution really suggests that we should open an enquiry of a general character. Revisions following an enquiry of a general character were made in Eastern Bengal in 1911, and in Western Bengal in 1906, and practically what we object to in opposing this resolution, is that we should, at this juncture, undertake a general investigation which, as we know by experience, always involves a very large bill. We demur to undertaking that now, for the reasons which I have already given, and in particular the present time could not be more unfortunately chosen for an examination of this kind. Conditions are abnormal now, but we hope, whether or not prices ever fall to the pre-war level, that at any rate they will fall to an appreciable extent. Should we therefore set on foot an investigation of this character now that everybody is obsessed and oppressed by these high prices, we should be in great danger of fixing normal rates on abnormal conditions. That, to my mind, whatever we may have to do in future, is a conclusive reason for deferring now any investigation of the kind which is proposed to be set on foot.

Coming to the resolution of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta which deals merely with the initial pay of ministerial officers, and proposes that it should be raised to Rs. 40, the arguments of the Hon'ble Mover do not really amount to more than this : that recent economic developments have caused hardship. That, as I have already said, we fully admit. The position as regards the initial pay of the ministerial officers is briefly and roughly this : It is Rs. 25 in Western Bengal and Rs. 30 in Eastern Bengal : in Calcutta it is Rs. 40 in the Secretariat, and Rs. 30 in the offices of Heads of Departments. The question of adopting Rs. 30 as the minimum pay in both Western and Eastern Bengal has been under discussion for some time, and at this moment is merely awaiting the examination of a few remaining figures ; we expect to put this small concession through with as little further delay as as possible—that is to say, we are going to raise the initial pay in the Western Bengal districts from Rs. 25 to Rs. 30. A proposal to which I have just alluded relative to the lower division of the Secretariat also contemplates enhancing the initial pay from Rs. 40 to Rs. 50 ; and I very much fear—in the way these matters act and re-act upon one another—that it will have an effect even outside the Secretariat. So in that way certain things have been done, and certain things have been forced upon us, but for the reasons which Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, Maulvi Abul Kasem, Maulvi A. K. Fazul-ul-Haq.

I have just given. I would deprecate any general and sweeping investigation, or the raising of pay wholesale with one stroke of the pen from one rate to another. Action of that kind very often entails quite unexpected consequences. Obviously if we are to put up the mufassal rate to Rs. 40, we will be told that the Secretariat rate of Rs. 50 is quite inadequate, and so on. Therefore while we will try to consider individual cases that may come up before us from time to time as sympathetically as we can, we demur to any general investigations or enhancements of the kind contemplated by these two resolutions.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, I have nothing more to add, but I would press this resolution.”

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The following motion which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem was then put and lost.

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to improve the pay and prospects of ministerial officers of the Government of Bengal in the mufassal.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that suitable instructions be issued to the officers concerned to ensure the selection of properly qualified persons to serve as jurors in the mufassal.

He said :—

“The recommendation contained in this resolution is of some importance in view of the fact that the system of trial by jury has now been extended to all the districts of the Presidency excepting of course Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling. In those districts, where the system of trial with the aid of assessors were in vogue, it did not very much matter if the assessors had not been very carefully selected because after all the opinion of the assessors was not at all binding on the Judge. But matters are different so far as jurors are concerned ; and having regard to the finality which attaches to their verdict, it is of the utmost importance that care should be taken in selecting persons to serve as jurors. I do not wish to enter into the details of the arguments in support of my resolution, because I have reason to believe that the recommendation will commend itself to Your Excellency's Government.”

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

“My Lord, I accept the resolution on behalf of the Government. The object underlying it, namely, to ensure the selection of properly qualified persons to serve as jurors in the mufassal is one with which Government are in entire sympathy. But in this connection I should like to point out to the

*Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan ; Akhil Chandra Datta ; The President ;
Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.*

Hon'ble Mover that Government are already aware of the danger. What we propose to do is to draw the attention of the Sessions Judges of other districts as well to the circular on the subject and take such further steps as may be found necessary. Therefore we are willing to accept the resolution."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 21.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta was to have moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council to take such action as may be necessary to drop the proposal of making English the Court language in subordinate Courts in Bengal.

He said :—

"My Lord, I understand from the Hon'ble Member in Charge that a communication has been received from the Hon'ble High Court saying that this proposal of making English the Court language has been dropped, and in view of this fact it is not necessary for me to move this resolution. I shall only say this : The news will be received by the country with a great sigh of relief : there was such a volume of feeling in this matter."

The President said :—

"Does the Hon'ble Member wish to withdraw the resolution ?"

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"Yes, my Lord."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 22.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that suitable instructions be issued to Magistrates in Bengal in regard to the trial of cases under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), particularly with a view to giving facilities to the accused persons—

(a) to defend themselves properly ; and

(b) to offer sureties for good behaviour after final orders have been passed.

He said :—

"My Lord, it may seem somewhat surprising to Hon'ble Members that I have been led to bring forward a discussion of this character in this Council. Ordinarily it is an accepted maxim that judicial independence of Magistrates should not be interfered with, and it may seem that circular orders of instructions from Government might be interpreted to be an indirect if not a direct interference with their judicial independence. But I will briefly explain the objects which I have in view, and I hope it will be apparent to Hon'ble Members that the grievances of such a serious character, as I am going to describe, ought, in my opinion, to be remedied.

The first part of the resolution refers to the defence of persons under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or, as is popularly known, the section relating to the giving of security for good behaviour in the case of the suspected person. The first difficulty which an accused person in such a case encounters—and I am speaking from personal knowledge—is this :

That the Magistrates who are required to try these cases in the mufassal generally hold the trial practically in the thana compound. It may be that it is considered, in the interests of the accused persons themselves, that the trial should be held if not in his own village at least in the vicinity of his village or, as it is popularly called, within the locality. But things become quite different if the Magistrates hold the trial in the thana compound, because, in these circumstances, the witnesses are under the control of the Police. Secondly, it sometimes happens that as soon as proceedings are drawn up against an accused, he is immediately sent to hajat and he rarely gets an opportunity of communicating with his friends and relations. In such cases a short date is given and the trial is held several miles away from the district headquarters where the man is locked up, and the result is that he cannot engage a lawyer to defend him nor can he communicate with his friends and relatives. In such cases the man practically goes undefended. These are mainly the two difficulties which accused persons encounter under present conditions ; and I beg to suggest that, without meaning in the least to interfere with the judicial independence of the Magistrates, some sort of general instructions may be given to them so that an accused person might get facilities for properly defending himself.

The second portion of the resolution refers to the difficulties of those persons who have come forward to offer sureties for their good behaviour after final orders are passed. It so happens that as soon as a surety comes up with an application offering as surety, the case is sent on to the Police for inquiry, and by the time the Police finish their inquiry, the man necessarily remains in hajat. It sometimes happens that days and days are wasted, and ultimately the Police report practically on no reasons whatever declining to accept those persons as sureties. The Magistrate accepts such recommendations without making any inquiry. In such cases I submit that it is due to the accused persons or to the sureties who come forward that the Magistrates must make an inquiry himself instead of relying solely on the Police. These are not matters of judicial discretion, and I venture to submit that in such matters directions may be given to the Magistrates. My Lord, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council any further regarding a resolution of this character. I never meant to suggest that instructions should be given to the Magistrates regarding the way in which they weigh the evidence or record or exercise their judicial discretion, but I only wish that instructions may be given to them in order that the procedure might be modified in such a manner that the accused persons may have opportunity of defending themselves and that after orders have been passed, that they may get proper opportunities for carrying out that order. With these words, I commend this resolution to the consideration of this House.

The Hon'ble Mr. Graham said :—

“ My Lord, on behalf of Government I beg to oppose the resolution ; and I do so not from any want of sympathy with the accused who have to defend themselves in these cases, but because the issue of such instructions, as have been proposed by the Hon'ble Mover of the resolution, appears to be superfluous and unnecessary. The recommendation made by the Hon'ble Mover is that suitable instructions should be issued to Magistrates in Bengal in regard to the trial of cases under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, particularly with a view to giving facilities to accused persons (a) to defend themselves properly, and (b) to offer sureties for good behaviour after final orders have been passed.

With regard to (a), the suggestion appears to be that the accused in these cases are not at present given facilities to defend themselves properly. I venture to think that there is no substance in this suggestion. As a matter of fact such facilities are provided in the Code itself. Section 117, sub-section (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, lays down that the inquiry, where the order requires security for good behaviour, shall be in the manner prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed.

The procedure to be observed in the trial of warrant cases is given in Chapter XXI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and it provides inter alia for the cross-examination of prosecution witnesses and the recording of defence evidence. It is also provided that, if the accused files a written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record. Furthermore, there is provision for the issue of process for compelling the production of evidence at the instance of the accused. I may mention too that, as a matter of fact, the accused in these cases are invariably defended either by a pleader or a mukhtear.

With regard to what has been said by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq with regard to the venue of the inquiry, and his statement to the effect that such inquiries are sometimes held in Thana compounds, I may point out that it is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate to determine where the inquiry shall be held. At the same time, it is, I imagine, rare for such an inquiry to be held in a Thana compound. With all deference to what the Hon'ble Mover has said on this point, I do not remember any case in which such an inquiry has been held in a Thana compound. From a legal point of view all that is necessary is that the proceedings shall be taken within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate empowered, and that the person proceeded against shall reside within those limits. If, in any particular case, objection is taken by the defence to the place of inquiry, it is always open to them to move the Magistrate, and there is no reason to suppose that such an objection would not receive judicial consideration. I submit, therefore, that in view of what I have said above, it is reasonably clear that adequate facilities are provided for accused persons in these cases to defend themselves, and I do not see what further facilities can be given. In view of these provisions of the law it would seem to be unnecessary to issue any such instructions to Magistrates, nor does it seem desirable that Government should adopt a course of action which might be regarded as interfering in any way with the discretion of Courts. Facilities for defence in criminal cases are matters which are appropriately dealt with in the Code of Criminal Procedure, and it would appear to be outside the province of the executive Government to deal with them. If in any particular case the facilities, which are provided by law, are not accorded, the accused has his remedy in an appeal to the District Magistrate under section 406 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

With regard to the second recommendation made by the Hon'ble Mover that facilities should be given to accused to offer sureties for good behaviour after final orders have been passed, it lies with the accused persons themselves and their friends to offer sureties, and it does not appear to be clear how Magistrates can afford facilities in the matter. It may be mentioned that a Magistrate cannot act arbitrarily in regard to accepting, or rejecting sureties, as under section 122 of the Code of Criminal Procedure he can only refuse to accept a surety on the ground of unfitness, and if he does so he is bound to record his reasons. Here again, if the Magistrate fails to comply with the provisions of the Code, the party aggrieved has his remedy in the appellate Court.

Inasmuch therefore, as these matters are already provided for in the Code and, in any case, are not matters in relation to which the issue of instructions by the executive Government is desirable, I would ask the Council to negative the resolution.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“My Lord, I admit that the cases to which I have referred are of a somewhat exceptional character, but such cases have occurred, and it appears to me that they do occur in spite of the fact that the Code of Criminal Procedure lays down elaborate provisions as to the manner in which the trial is to be held. There are certain matters within the discretion of a Magistrate where he acts more or less as an executive officer. However, a discussion of all these points will raise very controversial issues. I thought it proper to bring the matter to the notice of the Government, but, since the considered opinion of the Government is that this resolution cannot be accepted, I do not think it would be worth while to press this resolution any further. So, with your Excellency's leave, I beg to withdraw the resolution.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 23.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate steps be taken to connect Barisal with Calcutta by rail.

He said :—

“This resolution is a of very simple character and it recommends that steps be taken to connect Barisal with Calcutta by rail. I brought forward this resolution for discussion in this Council about four years ago when the Hon'ble Mr. Beatson Bell (now Sir Nicholas Beatson Bell) on behalf of Government practically accepted the resolution and gave us to understand that the question of connecting Barisal with Calcutta by rail was under consideration by Government and probably would be given effect soon. Unfortunately, however, the war broke out and the question was shelved. Now with the return of peace and with better financial condition, I think the question might again be considered. With these few words, I beg to commend the resolution to the House.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

“My Lord, it is quite correct, as the Hon'ble Member who has moved this resolution has stated, that my predecessor in office accepted the resolution in those terms in August 1914. The Hon'ble Member is under the impression that the case still stands in the same position, and that it has not been carried into effect for financial reasons. If the Council will bear with me for a few moments, I will explain why it is that the deliberate opinion of Government with regard to this project is that it is inexpedient. Very shortly, the proposals regarding this project in a chronological form are these. In 1911 a reconnaissance was sanctioned by the Railway Board to ascertain the best means of connecting Barisal with Khulna; two alternative routes were examined, and, three years afterwards, the Railway Board sanctioned a detailed survey not only of the proposed line from Khulna via Madaripur to Barisal but also of an additional section from Faridpur to Madaripur. This survey was completed in 1914. While these proceedings were in hand various enquiries were made in this Council, and the Hon'ble Member himself in 1913 asked a question on the subject he was informed that steps were being taken to connect Barisal and Calcutta by rail. He then asked another question in the following year 1914, and was informed that the details were well in hand. At a meeting of this Council in August 1914, to which I have referred, an Hon'ble Member submitted a resolution representing the urgency of connecting Barisal and Calcutta by rail. This, as I have said, was accepted by my predecessor; he went so far as to say that the Bengal Government accorded their cordial support to the proposal to construct a broad gauge line from Khulna to Barisal; and indeed, in the same year, the Bengal Government in submitting their annual list of railway projects included this very project amongst their recommendations. It was after that that a change in opinion has taken place. The project was examined with great care from every point of view. One expert said that the Madumati river which it was proposed to cross between Khulna and Madaripur was so unstable that it would cost crores to hold it under a bridge, and another expert held that the waterways and headways given were quite inadequate. The Bengal Government then examined the matter very carefully; and after full reconsideration advised the Railway Board under the Government of India two years afterwards, in October 1916, that the alterations and additions which were then proposed to meet the requirements would render it impossible on financial grounds to carry out the scheme, and might even result in its entire abandonment. Apart from that, the Bengal Government stated to the Railway Board, that even if all the alterations and additions were carried out and even if a satisfactory solution could be found for the crossing of the Madumati river, the Bengal Government were apprehensive that the railway would be a constant menace to the general health of the population. The Bengal Government were not able to inform the public at that time because the matter was still sub judice; in fact, in September 1917, when another Member asked a question in this Council he was informed that the matter was still under consideration in the Government of India in the Railway Board. A further enquiry was then made in August 1918 by a Council question, and the Council were informed that the Government of India had decided to abandon the project. In abandoning this project the Railway Board had obviously been influenced by the views of the Bengal Government, expressed in October 1916, said that while the main project might be abandoned, they, the Railway Board, were considering how they could arrange for the financing of a smaller line from Faridpur to Bhanga in the same district. The last communication received from the Railway Board is that of August 1918, when they said that they would defer the consideration of the financing of this branch line until after the end of the war. Since then we have heard nothing further on the subject. This, then, my Lord, is a statement of the discussion in connection with the project to connect Barisal and Calcutta by rail, which it is desirable to place on record. It will be seen that the Bengal Government on the basis of fuller information changed their minds on the ground of the menace to the health of the community which the construction of the project on the original alignment would entail. Indeed from the point of view of the people of Bengal themselves, the construction of railways which are likely to interfere with the natural ebb and flow of water over the land is to be deprecated. An increase of malaria is too high a price to pay even for improved railway communication, and the Hon'ble Member himself must be fully aware of the complaint in Bengal that such and such a railway has done permanent harm to the tract which it covers. In this instance the main objection was that the alignment in question was at right angles to the drainage of the country.

Mr. Cumming.

So far, Sir, I have to disappoint the Hon'ble Member. He may well ask what is proposed to be done now. My reply is that the Bengal Government did propose an alternative scheme of connecting Calcutta with Barisal by means of an extension of the existing railway from Faridpur, and at the present moment the Bengal Government are prepared to recommend to the Railway Board that the possibility of completing this alignment should be reconsidered. In view of this, Sir, and of the fact that while one approach to Barisal from the west has been definitely condemned on engineering, financial and sanitary grounds, still an approach from the north-west is possible, I hope the Hon'ble Member may see his way not to press the resolution. Government desire to do what my predecessor accepted in 1916, viz., to connect the headquarters of the province with the headquarters of an important district like Bakarganj if it can be properly done."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

" My Lord, it would not be a proper recognition of what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member were I now to press this resolution. I therefore beg leave to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 24.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to improve communication between Calcutta and Dacca, either by accelerating the existing tram and steamer services or by such other means as to the Government may appear fit and proper.

He said :—

" My Lord, the resolution which has just been withdrawn bears a family resemblance to the one which I now move. It has also an ancient history behind it, and it also wants to connect an Eastern Bengal district with Calcutta, but I hope, my Lord, that this resolution will receive a more favourable consideration at the hands of the Hon'ble Member in charge because it wants to connect the capital of Eastern Bengal with the capital of the province. In this resolution I have purposely avoided mentioning any particular scheme, because in my experience in this Council I have found that it is always safer to leave the question vague ; because whenever any particular scheme is suggested Government experts come forward with objections which it is very difficult for a layman to meet. I understand, my Lord, that for a long time a proposal has been pending before the Government about connecting the town of Dacca with Aricha in the Manikganj subdivision on the south, and if a railway is constructed connecting Dacca with Aricha and a ferry service between Aricha and Goalundo and the train service between Goalundo and Calcutta is made a little faster, I think this journey to Dacca from Calcutta can be completed in eight hours or exactly half the time now taken to come from Calcutta to Dacca. What with the prospect of a well-equipped College in Dacca and the future prospect of a large Medical College here, it is as important that the people of Calcutta should be in close touch with Dacca as that the people of Dacca should be in close touch with the people of Calcutta, and I have been further told that this project of a railway between Dacca and Aricha has received sympathetic consideration at the hands of the Railway Board as well; but another objection has been raised that a railway on an embanked road will cause interference with the free drainage of the locality, and bring in malaria, as has been just mentioned by the Hon'ble member in charge. True it is that to a very large extent our railways are responsible for the spread of malaria in this country, and if we are to believe the historians, we learn that malaria was unknown in this country before railways were introduced. However, if the question of malaria did not interfere in the construction of the railway line from Howrah to Kalka, I do not think the small tract of land which has got many rivers and channels in it from Dacca to Calcutta will suffer much. The advantages of having more easy communication between two important centres of the Presidency will have greater weight with the public and the Government than the danger of malaria, and that can easily be avoided if we have a sufficient number of openings in the railway road for the passage of water. At the present moment there is an embanked road practically from Dacca to Aricha which does obstruct the drainage, except perhaps with the exception of 4 or 5 miles. The road is 45 miles long, about 40 miles of it is embanked road and only 5 miles is low road through which the water passes. I think if the project be taken in hand and openings made here and there, it will also protect us from malaria and at the same time afford greater facility for communication between Calcutta and Dacca which will be of mutual benefit to the people of this part of the Presidency as well as to the people of Calcutta. With these few words, I beg to commend this resolution to the consideration of the Council."

Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has made a proposal regarding the improvement of communications in this province which is of peculiar interest both to the residents of the eastern districts and of course to members of this Council who have been summoned to attend at Dacca. He has said that he has purposely framed it in an indefinite form because he is aware that definite proposals are more liable to attack. In his argument, however, he has made one practical suggestion, namely, the suggestion regarding a railway from Dacca to a point opposite Goalundo. This has been the subject of a good deal of local discussion within recent months here in Dacca and the local press is very desirous that such a project should materialise. Government, I may say at once, are prepared to accept the resolution in general terms without committing themselves, any more than the Hon'ble Member has done, to any specific project.

It goes without saying that Government are prepared to accept all reasonable improvements in communications which are both the means and the proof of material progress. There are two forms of improvement. There is improvement of the existing means of transportation, and in the second place there is the creation of new lines of transportation. As regards the existing means of transportation, I shall be prepared to send a copy of these proceedings to the carrying companies and agencies concerned both by road and water. As regards new lines of transportation there are again two possibilities, improvement entirely by land or improvement of steamer service by water. The Hon'ble Member is perhaps not aware regarding the second possibility, namely, improvement of service by water, that Government have in contemplation an improved water route which if constructed would shorten the river journey to Dacca by one-half ; but on account of various engine ring and financial considerations Government are not in a position to say if, and when, effect will be given to the scheme. If, however, this scheme does materialise, it will be of very substantial benefit to Eastern Bengal. As regards the other alternative of improvement of communication by land, this proposal of a railway from Dacca to a point opposite Goalundo has been revived, and, as I have said, there is much local opinion in favour of this particular alignment. On this point, however, I can say but little at present. This much, however, may be said :—that the soundness of this project as a financial proposition is at present under examination, and in the second place that as regards a railway alignment, the railway policy of the Government must be ultimately under the control of the Railway Board. I am afraid, however, that those who advocate the construction of this line have never seriously considered what the cost would be if adequate waterways were given ; and, as I have mentioned regarding the previous resolution, that a possible source of disease may be created if adequate waterway be not given, and secondly, those who advocate this particular project have not considered what the effect of an embankment at right angles to the line of spill of the big rivers Dhaleswari and Padma would be. I may say at once that this railway project was definitely rejected many years ago by the Railway Board, although it had then been considered for a number of years. This, as the Hon'ble Member is aware, is primarily a matter for engineering experts to determine, in view of the more recent knowledge that we have of the hydraulics of the area, namely, what scheme would be the least innocuous in point of view of public health and what in point of view of capital outlay would be the least expensive. In those circumstances, as I have already stated, Government are prepared to accept the resolution with a perfectly open mind, in view of the further inquiries which are at present being made, as to what may ultimately be a practical solution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I have to thank the Hon'ble Member for the sympathetic reception which he has given this resolution."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 25.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq was to have moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that suitable steps be taken for a proper and effective representation of the Eastern Bengal districts on the Legislative Council to be formed under the Reform Scheme, either by proper representation to the Government of India or by such other methods as to the Government may seem fit and proper.

He said :—

"My Lord, I owe an apology to this Council for having brought forward this resolution for discussion. I gave notice of this resolution rather in a hurry and in response to an urgent request of some of my Dacca friends who thought that Eastern Bengal districts had been somewhat neglected in the distribution of seats under the proposed Reform Scheme. At that time it was not possible for me to verify the figures because, if I waited one day I would have been out of time. I now find from an examination of the report that I cannot honestly say that the Eastern Bengal districts have been unfairly treated. As advised at present therefore, I do not think I can press this resolution. I therefore beg leave to withdraw it."

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 26.

The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that an expert in town-planning be appointed as the Chairman of the Calcutta Improvement Trust when that office becomes vacant, in consequence of the grant of any leave to, or on the retirement of, the present incumbent.

The Hon'ble Member being absent, the resolution was not moved.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 27.

The Hon'ble Mauvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that extensions of service be granted to officers in this Presidency in cases in which they happen to be deprived of full pension by reason of too strict an interpretation of the recent circular orders of the Secretary of State for India.

He said :—

" My Lord, we began this day's sitting by the introduction of a Bill to which reference has been made once before—I mean the Bill for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. I think I will be guilty of cruelty to members of this Council if I make a speech at this hour of the day in recommending this resolution to the Council. What I mean is quite clear from this resolution, and the Government and the members will understand what is meant. Under the old rules when an officer had to retire under the 25-year rule, discretion was given to the Government to grant him an extension on the ground that he has not earned his full pension. Under the recent orders, an amendment of the old rules, it lays down that no extension can be granted except on public grounds. The fact that an officer has not earned or is not entitled to full pension is not 'public grounds' and therefore an officer is made to retire simply because he has not reached the full period of service, although he is capable of good and hard-work. I think, my Lord, that in such cases either by moving the Secretary of State or a change in the regulation, a point may be stretched in their favour and officers who have done good service and are capable of rendering further good service in the interest of the people, who will have the advantage of their service, a small extension should be granted in order to enable them to earn the pension to which they are morally entitled."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

" My Lord, to put it in the briefest form, the reason why we cannot accept this resolution is that, constituted as Government is at the moment in this country, whatever may be the case hereafter, the matter is one in which we are governed by the orders of the Secretary of State, and it would not be open to us, even if we would, to say to that authority 'We do not like your orders, and we do not mean to carry them out'. It is perfectly true that we have occasionally stretched a point in special cases where the interval between the ordinary date of retirement and the term qualifying for full pension is very small; but we cannot accept any proposition that we should do so in an ordinary way. The rule has only recently been framed in its present form, and it was so framed after full discussion. Before 1917, the old rules, although a man could be called on to retire at 55, used to favour his retention if he was fit in the interests of the superannuation charges. In 1917 the whole matter was thrashed out, and, contrary to the practice that obtained up to that time, it was definitely laid down that an officer, other than a ministerial officer, should retire at 55 except when exceptional public grounds for his retention existed and there was no doubt as to his physical fitness. These are the instructions by which we are governed and only recently, on a representation which came from a certain quarter that we were interpreting this rule too strictly, we made a reference to the Government of India in which we explained our practice as follows :—

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

'The local Government have felt bound to interpret the new rule strictly in the case of all services, and they have held that the retention of the services of an officer after he has attained the age of 55 would not be justified if an equally or almost equally capable officer can be found to take his place without serious detriment to the public interest.'

We were told in answer to that, that our interpretation of the rule was correct, and I am afraid, so far as we are concerned, that closes the discussion."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member, I beg leave to withdraw this resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Adjournment.

The Council was then adjourned sine die.

(b) What action has been taken by Government on the memorial?

(c) Is it a fact that old section rates have been abolished and that new contract rates have been introduced, with the result that extra copyists are unable to earn more than the minimum pay of the ministerial officers?

(d) Was this the case before the introduction of the new system? If not, what was the necessity for the change?

(e) Is it a fact that these extra copyists do not get any grain compensation or war allowances usually given for the increased price of food-stuffs and other necessities of life, although some of them have been working there continuously for 10 or 15 years?

(f) Is it a fact that the number of extra copyists employed is four times that of the permanent staff?

(g) Is it the intention to keep them on permanently, and, if so, is it intended for the present to make some of the more senior men permanent?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) As it was submitted direct it has been referred to the Inspector-General of Registration for disposal.

(c) In 1899 the section rates, which used to obtain previously and under which a copyist used to get Re. 1 for 1,600 English or 2,000 vernacular words copied, were abrogated. In their place a monthly rate of Rs. 20 for each temporary copyist, subject to an outturn of 3,000 words a day, was introduced in the Calcutta office. The minimum pay then admissible to a permanent copyist in that office was Rs. 20 a month. This was raised to Rs. 25 a month in 1907. The monthly rate of pay of a temporary copyist was at the same time raised to that level.

(d) No. The change was made because the employment of men on section rates was found in practice to be unnecessarily costly.

(e) Temporary copyists are not whole-time servants of Government and are not therefore entitled to grain compensation allowance; but a very few of them who, though technically in temporary employ are entertained continuously, are entitled to the war allowance.

(f) Yes, but the number of extra copyists employed varies from time to time with the pressure of registration work.

(g) No such proposal is under consideration."

(b) When is the construction of the sanctioned line to be commenced?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

The Garden
Reach Municipality.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the constitution of the present Garden Reach Municipality? How many Commissioners does it consist of, and how many of them are nominated by Government and how many are elected?

(b) Is it a fact that the original South Suburban Municipality was split up in 1897 into three municipalities, namely, (1) Garden Reach, (2) Tollygunge and (3) South Suburban (Behala)?

(c) Is it a fact that the residents of the original South Suburban Municipality enjoyed the elective system and that, since 1897, the residents of what is now the Garden Reach Municipality have been deprived of the privilege of electing their representatives to the newly-formed municipality while the residents of Tollygunge and Behala are permitted to enjoy the privilege in their respective municipalities?

(d) If so, what is the reason of this differential treatment accorded to the residents of the Garden Reach Municipality?

(e) Is it a fact that the residents of the Garden Reach Municipality submitted three successive petitions to the Commissioner of the Presidency Division on the 7th April, the 30th May and the 18th July last, praying for the introduction of the elective system and asking him to receive a deputation?

(f) Is it a fact that the only reply to these representations was given in a letter, dated the 12th August last, informing the petitioners that the Commissioner would receive the deputation after his return from tour on the 2nd September at 3 P.M.?

(g) Is it a fact that while these successive representations were pending with the Commissioner without eliciting any reply the Garden Reach Municipality was reconstituted by a notification in the Calcutta Gazette on the 30th July last?

(h) Are the Government considering the desirability of introducing the elective system into the Garden Reach Municipality?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) The present Municipal Board of Garden Reach consists of 12 Commissioners appointed by Government.

(b) The original South Suburban Municipality was first sub-divided in 1897 into 2 municipalities, viz., South Suburban and Garden Reach. The former was further sub-divided in 1900 into two, viz., South Suburban and Tollygunge.

(c) The reply is in the affirmative.

(d) Garden Reach differs from other suburban municipalities in that it contains mills, dock-yards and Emigration Depots which give employment to about 30,000 people out of a population of 46,000. The Mills, Dock-yards etc., pay taxes amounting to 75 per cent. of the total income. It is not a residential quarter for middle-class families. Both on account of the predominant mill interests and because it would be difficult to secure suitable elective representatives, it has not been considered desirable to introduce elective system here.

(e) A petition purporting to emanate from certain ratepayers dated 7th April, 1919, was received by the Commissioner and sent to the District Magistrate for report. This was followed by another petition on the 30th May asking the Commissioner to receive a deputation, but it was decided to await the return of the Magistrate's report before granting this request. In August Mr. Lang, who had succeeded to the office of Commissioner in July, received a petition by name, dated the 18th July, asking him to receive a deputation and to this he consented, although the new Committee had already been appointed on the 27th July.

(f) Yes.

(g) The Garden Reach Municipality was reconstituted by notification No. 2049M., dated the 26th July.

(h) The reply is in the negative."

(a) Is it a fact that the southern part of the town of Pabna, including the Court compound, the quarters of high officials and the Sitlai Lodge, is in imminent danger of being washed away by the Ganges? Danger south Pabna erosion Ganges

(b) Is it also a fact that the matter was brought to the notice of His Excellency the Governor last year on the occasion of his visit to the town and that His Excellency was pleased to assure the people that necessary action would be taken to prevent further erosion?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what protective steps have been taken, or are being taken, since the assurance given by His Excellency, to prevent the rapid erosion of the river below the town?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) It is a fact that the outlying portions of the town known as Bajitpur, Sadhupara and Ramchandrapur are in imminent danger of being washed away by the Padma. The danger in regard to the Court compound and the Sitlai Lodge does not appear imminent.

(b) In his reply to the addresses presented at Pabna on the 29th August, 1918, His Excellency the Governor said: 'The Chief Engineer in the Irrigation Department has already inspected the scene of the erosion during the present year. He informs me that the river has gone back to the old channel which it occupied sixty years ago, and he does not expect that further serious erosion will take place. At the same time he proposes to keep the position under careful observation with a view to taking such measures as may be found possible should the necessity arise.'

(c) The position has been kept under careful observation and the position of the river delineated on the plans. It is not possible to state with certainty to what further extent erosion will continue; but it is possible that the houses occupied by the Collector and the Superintendent of Police may have to be vacated. The position was inspected by the Chief Engineer in the Irrigation Department on the 19th August; it is under the careful observation of the local officers of the Public Works Department; and a further inspection will be made by the Chief Engineer when the river level falls sufficiently. Any project for the permanent protection of the town and Government buildings is likely to cost a very large sum of money; a full report will, however, be submitted to Government with the recommendations of the Chief Engineers of the Public Works Department as soon as the river level falls sufficiently to enable a more thorough inspection to be made."

Revision of pay of the Khas

Maniaguri.

(a) Is it a fact that there were proposals for revising the pay of all ministerial establishments in executive and judicial offices under the Eastern Bengal and Assam Government (including Khas Mahal establishments) and that such proposals received the sanction of the Secretary of State as far back as 1916?

(b) If the answer to clause (a) be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether the pay of the ministerial staff of the Khas Mahal was so revised in pursuance of the said proposals? If not, why not?

(c) Is it a fact that the Khas Mahal staff of Maniaguri, in the district of Jalpaiguri, made repeated representation about the revision of their pay to the Deputy Commissioner of Jalpaiguri in 1914, and to the Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division?

(d) Is it a fact that the Deputy Commissioner of Jalpaiguri replied to the aforesaid representation that the "matter would be reopened after the receipt of a final report from the Settlement Officer?"

(e) Is it a fact that the settlement operations have been finished and the final record-of-rights published?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) The matter is still under inquiry.

(c) Two representations were made in 1913, and one in 1918.

(d) No, the matter is at present under the consideration of Government.

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what action they have taken or are taking in the matter?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the comparative advantages and disadvantages of Kishorganj and Husainpur in this respect?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

(a) Yes.

(b) Yes. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the resolution on the subject of the partition of the Mymensingh district which was published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 2nd June, 1915.

(c) and (d) In response to that resolution representations were received from the Husainpur People's Association and others proposing that Husainpur should be selected as the district headquarters instead of Kishoreganj. Similar representations were received in favour of other small towns. The main objection brought against Kishorganj was that the water supply is insufficient, but special inquiries made on this point showed that an ample supply could be made available. Apart from this, Kishorganj has decided advantages over Husainpur in that it is centrally situated on the Bhairab-Mymensingh Railway, whereas Husainpur is on the western boundary of the district about nine miles distant from the railway. Moreover, Kishorganj, being already a subdivisional headquarters, could be converted into a district headquarters at much less expense than would be incurred if the headquarters were located at a place where no Government buildings exist. For these reasons, Government decided to place the district headquarters at Kishorgan, in preference to any of the other places suggested."

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"The answer to the particular question is in the negative. Arrangements are, however, in force in different districts by which licensed importers can import Burma rice on condition that they do not sell above a price fixed by the District Officer. (c) Have the Government considered the desirability of arranging direct with the mills and the mill agencies for the sale of cloth?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

"(a) No. The causes of the high price of cloth are known and there has been very little rise recently.

(b) Arrangements have been made by local bodies both in Calcutta and in the mufassal for the supply of a limited quantity of cloth at approximately present prices in view of the possibility of a rise of price at the time of the Pujas and afterwards.

(a) With reference to the question of a site for a new Legislative Council Hall for Bengal, have the Government considered whether the Victoria Memorial Building, now approaching completion in construction, would be suitable as a meeting place for the prospective Legislative Council?

(b) Have the Government considered that the distance of the Victoria Memorial Building from Government House and the business part of the town with motor-car and telephone conveniences would be conducive to its adaptability as the future Bengal Parliament House?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of referring to the committee which they have recently appointed for advising them upon a suitable site for a new Legislative Council Hall, the question of the utilization for such purpose of the Victoria Memorial Hall?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"All suggestions of this character will doubtless be examined by the committee recently appointed to consider the question of a suitable site for the new Council Chamber. Pending the receipt of the report of that committee, Government do not propose to express any opinion in the matter."

(b) Is it a fact that it was laid down as a condition that the Government would recoup the loan in 8 years and then release the estate of the Maharaja from Government management?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing, year by year, the amount that has, up to date, been realized and the balance due?

(d) Is it a fact that the late Rai Jamini Mohan Dass Bahadur was placed on special duty in the Tagore Estate for about 6 months and that he prepared a scheme of management and also submitted to Government a report on the management of the said estate?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the said scheme and report?

(f) Was the said scheme approved by Government? Was it followed by Mr. Mackay, the present Manager of the said estate?

(g) Is it a fact that Naibs and Assistant Managers are being annually paid bonuses varying in amounts from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,500.

(h) Is it a fact that the total amount of such bonuses comes to about Rs. 15,000 annually? Are such bonuses allowed by the rules of management of such estates?

(i) Was any sanction ever obtained from Government before increase in salary and payment of bonuses, fixed travelling allowances, charges for horses, elephants and green-boats were made by Mr. Mackay?

(j) Are bonuses and green-boat allowances, in addition to fixed travelling allowances, paid to circle officers of Khas Mahal, Encumbered and Wards' Estates?

(k) Is it a fact that the Maharaja Sir Prodyot Kumar Tagore complained to Government about the excessive establishment charges of the estate with special reference to the payment of bonuses? If so, what action was taken by the Government in the matter?

(b) When were the inquiries referred to in the said answer ordered and what opportunities were given to the above contractors to substantiate the allegations they made in their memorial?

Works Department.

(a) Is it a fact that—

(i) the Upper Subordinate Service of the Public Works Department was formed more than 50 years ago;

(ii) that the scale of pay and allowances then fixed has remained the same ever since;

(iii) the qualifications required from the members of the service who have joined during the past 25 years or more have been steadily raised, without any compensating rise in salaries or allowances;

(iv) in 1913 the Secretary of State for India sanctioned certain schemes for the betterment of the service which had been submitted by the Local Government?

(b) What are the features of these schemes as sanctioned by the Secretary of State, and what steps have since been taken to give effect to them in Bengal?

(c) Have the Government received any memorial from the members of the service in Bengal?

(d) Is it a fact that several other provinces have already granted increased pay and allowances, with time scale, to the members of the Upper Subordinate Service in those provinces?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) (i) Yes.

(ii) Yes, except that sub-engineers, 1st grade, are now granted under certain conditions two periodic increments of Rs. 50.

(iii) No. The qualifications required have not been raised, but the standard of education of those seeking training in engineering and subsequently competing for appointments in the Upper Subordinate Service is higher now than it was 25 years ago.

(iv) No. The Hon'ble Member possibly refers to the fact that in that year the Secretary of State sanctioned the grant of certain enhanced financial powers to Local Governments; these enhanced powers enabled Local Governments themselves to deal with the memorials of members of the Upper Subordinate Service which had been submitted to the Government of India.

(b) As stated above no scheme has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The present position is that in 1915 the Government of India suggested certain broad principles to be followed in revising the pay of the Upper Subordinate Service and the substitution of a time-scale of pay. A time-scale was drawn up; but effect could not be given to it at the time owing to financial conditions brought about by the war. It has subsequently been re-examined and revised and it is hoped that it may be brought into force at an early date.

What action has been taken in Dacca, Mymensingh and Tippera in pursuance of the recent ordinance regarding the supply of rice, and how far has it been effective in controlling the price and supply of rice in each of these districts?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“No notification under Ordinance IX of 1914 was published in the district of Tippera; and no specific action has been taken in the districts of Dacca or Mymensingh under the powers conferred by the notifications relating to those districts.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“Twenty-nine. It is difficult to say what action has been specifically taken on each of these memorials or representations, as the matter has been constantly engaging the attention of Government. The latest results are those given in the recent communiqués of the 28th and 31st August, 1919, of which copies are laid on the table.”*

(a) Are the Government aware of the grievances of the district kanungos of Bengal?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the reason why there is so great an inequality of pay between settlement kanungos and the district kanungos of Bengal?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing the number and other particulars of yearly promotions to the subordinate civil service since 1914 from—

(i) the settlement kanungos, and

(ii) the district kanungos, and state the reason in each case as regards the general qualifications and special merit, if any, and period of service of those who were promoted?

(d) Is it a fact that the claims of the district kanungos were totally ignored in 1917, and again in 1919, when 14 vacancies were filled up by promotion from the settlement kanungos alone?

(e) Is it a fact that a promise was given to the district kanungos that they would be promoted to the subordinate civil service for their good work and that wherever possible the services of deserving and efficient men would also be utilized as managers and sub-managers of Government, and wards', attached and trust estates in the Presidency of Bengal?

(f) Was this promise duly considered at the time of the recent appointment of the manager of the Bainchi B. L. Mukherjee's Trust Estate in the district of Hooghly?

(g) What is the total number of district kanungos who are at present serving as managers or sub-managers in the wards' attached and trust estates in the Presidency of Bengal?

(h) Will the Government be pleased to state the history of the services and academical qualifications of the manager of the Gobardanga Wards' Estate in the district of the 24-Parganas prior to his appointment to the present post?

(i) Are the Government considering the advisability of appointing deserving district kanungos for their meritorious services as circle officers, as an experimental measure, and in other vacant posts kept reserved by Government, or likely to occur at the time of the reconstitution of the union boards under the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919 (Bengal Act V of 1919)?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Certain communications regarding their grievances have been brought to the notice of Government.

(b) The reasons are as follows.—

(i) District kanungos hold permanent and pensionable posts; the posts of settlement kanungos are temporary

(ii) District kanungos draw travelling and halting allowances; settlement kanungos are not entitled to travelling allowance except by rail or steamer journeys and for journeys outside their jurisdiction.

(iii) The duties of settlement kanungos are different from, and more arduous than, those of district kanungos

(iv) The rules provide for the recruitment of more highly educated persons as settlement kanungos than as district kanungos.

(c) A comparative statement is laid on the table in which is included the period of service and educational qualifications so far as they are at present known to Government. Government are not prepared to go into reasons in detail and give information regarding the respective merits of individual officers.

(d) In 1917 no district kanungo was nominated for appointment by the Board of Revenue. In 1919, 14 special vacancies due to the increase in the cadre owing to the expansion of the circle system were filled up by promotion from settlement kanungos, with the intention of appointing them eventually as circle officers. This was done in accordance with the recommendation contained in paragraph 152 of the Report of the Bengal District Administration Committee that settlement kanungos would furnish a particularly favourable field for the recruitment of the additional sub-deputy collectors required for the circle system. The ordinary vacancies for 1919 have not yet been filled up.

(e) The Hon'ble Member probably refers to the following statement regarding district kanungos:—

'Kanungos who have done exceptionally good work will be eligible for promotion to the Subordinate Civil Service, and His Excellency in Council desires that whenever possible the services of efficient and deserving men should also be utilised as managers and sub-managers of Government and wards' estates.'

(f) Yes

(g) One.

(h) Read up to the First Arts standard. A history of his services is laid on the table

(i) Government do not propose to reserve any posts for district kanungos in connection with the recruitment of circle officers, but it is open to the Board to nominate district kanungos for those appointments as sub-deputy collectors that are made on the nomination of the Board."

(a) Is it a fact that the office staff of the Director of Public Instruction have had a separate list since 1914 or thereabouts? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why officers of other clerical establishments, such as the Divisional Inspector's office, etc., have not been included in that special list? (b) Is it a fact that the names of the officers of the Director of Public Instruction's office have not since then been published in either of the subordinate educational service or lower subordinate educational service lists since 1914? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why the public were kept in ignorance of the appointments, promotions, etc., in the office of the Director of Public Instruction?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) There has been a separate cadre for the office establishment of the Director of Public Instruction since December, 1915. There is a separate cadre for the office of each of the other Heads of Departments in Bengal. Posts belonging to different establishments cannot conveniently be included in one common list.

(b) Yes, for the reason that these officers do not belong to these services any longer. It is contrary to the usual practice to notify the appointments and promotions of non-gazetted officers in the Secretariat offices and offices of other Heads of Departments.”

Is it a fact that almost all the members of the staff of the office of the Director of Public Instruction have been favoured with promotions—some more than once, from the 1st April, 1913 to the 1st April, 1919? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why the cases of the officers in the graded services, Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service, who are required to wait eight years before they can pass through a grade, have not been considered for promotions?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state why the pay of Rai Sahib Surendra Nath Singh, Personal Assistant to the Director of Public Instruction, has been raised from Rs. 250 (grade I, Subordinate Educational Service) to Rs. 350?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Three extensions.

(b) Extensions of service have been granted to this officer in accordance with clause (a) of Article 459, Civil Service Regulations, of which a copy is laid on the table.

(c) The Rai Sahib's present permanent pay is Rs. 280 outside the graded service, his permanent post being that of the assistant next in rank to the Personal Assistant. For over a year, he has been holding substantively pro tempore the post of Personal Assistant in consequence of the absence on deputation to military duty of the permanent incumbent and his salary in this capacity is Rs. 340.”

Article 459 (a) of the Civil Service Regulations referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. GOODE to question No. 14 (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. FAZL-UL-HAQ at the Council Meeting of the 3rd September, 1919.

Promotion of Babu Adwait Rakshit.

(a) Is it a fact that Babu Adwait Rakshit has been promoted to grade V, superseding about 70 senior officers in grade VI?

(b) Is it a fact that he was also appointed Head Master of the Chittagong School, though there were many officers above him in the grade?

(c) Is it a fact that he was removed from this post and made an Assistant Head Master owing to the representations made by senior officers?

(d) Is it a fact that he has been again appointed as Head Master of the Khulna Zila School as a special case? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for this promotion?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) In making Subordinate Educational Service promotions in September, 1916, Babu Adwaita Charan Rakshit, then Assistant Head Master, Chittagong Collegiate School, No. 70, in class VI, Subordinate Educational Service, was promoted substantively pro tempore to class V with effect from 16th April, 1916, superseding 68 officers above him. This special promotion was given him by Mr. Hornell after a personal inspection and in recognition of his excellent work.

(b) and (c) In June, 1916, during the absence on leave of Babu Rajendra Chandra Chakrabarti, late Head Master, Chittagong Collegiate School, local arrangements to fill the vacancy, were, as usual, preferred and hence the next in rank on the staff, viz., Babu Adwaita Charan Rakshit was appointed to act as Head Master as a temporary measure. When in the middle of 1917, the Head Mastership fell permanently vacant owing to the death of Rajendra Babu, it was considered expedient to fill up the vacancy by the appointment of an energetic officer who was a good teacher and a good disciplinarian. Accordingly, the inspectors of schools were asked to nominate an officer of these qualifications. As the result of the nominations received Babu Harpada Mukherji, then a senior officer in class V, was appointed as Head Master of the Chittagong Collegiate School.

Government are not aware whether any objection was taken to Adwaita Babu's appointment as Head Master by officers senior to him.

(d) In April, 1918 the Headmastership of the Khulna Zilla School fell permanently vacant by the retirement of its permanent incumbent, Babu Phatik Chandra Chakrabartti. Inspectors of schools were asked to nominate for the vacancy an energetic officer who was also a good teacher and disciplinarian. Of those nominated Babu Adwaita Charan Rakshit, though junior to some, was considered the best and he was accordingly appointed.

(a) Is it a fact that Babu Narendra Nath Ray, Head Clerk, Chittagong College was originally in the graded service, and that he was then transferred to an outside grade on Rs. 60 when he was appointed to a post on Rs. 100 within a few years? Promotion
Babu Na
Nath Ray

(b) Is it a fact that he has been only recently again put in a grade vacancy, in grade IV, over the heads of a large number of officers?

(c) Is it true that had he been in the graded service he would not have reached grade V at the present moment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

(a) Babu Narendra Nath Roy was originally in class VII of the Subordinate Educational Service. He was not appointed on Rs. 60 outside the graded service. From class VII, Subordinate Educational Service, he was appointed direct on Rs. 100 outside the graded service with effect from the 9th January, 1911, as Superintendent of the Office of the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Circle, as he was considered to be well-qualified to hold that post.

(b) He has been promoted to Rs. 125 in class IV, Subordinate Educational Service with effect from 14th September 1918, but not over the heads of a large number of officers. In fact no officer of class V, who might be considered to be deserving of promotion had put in longer service in that class than Narendra Babu had put in on Rs. 100 outside the graded service. Further, of the officers on Rs. 100 outside the graded service Narendra Babu was senior to all the rest.

(c) If Babu Narendra Nath Roy had remained in the graded service he would have been in class V now; many officers who were junior to him when he was in class VII of the Subordinate Educational Service are now in class V.

17.

(a) Is there any truth in the statement that Babu Kula Bandhu Chakravarty, a matriculate clerk, now Head Clerk in the office of the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, passed the 7th grade of the Subordinate Educational Service in about two years' time due to special favour? Case of B
Kula Ban
Chakravart

(b) Is it a fact that this officer has recently been given special promotion from grade VI to grade V, within the course of about two years?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) On the nomination of the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, Babu Kula Bandhu Chakrabartti, who has read up to the B.A. standard and who at that time was 2nd Clerk in the Inspector's office on Rs. 50 outside the grades was appointed Head Clerk of that office and in class VIII of the Subordinate Educational Service in August, 1911. He was promoted from class VII to class VI in the ordinary course in July, 1916.

(b) He was given special promotion to class V with effect from October 2, 1918, over the heads of 59 officers. This special promotion he had thoroughly earned by the very efficient discharge of the particularly onerous duties he has to fulfil.”

grade officer to graded service.

Is it a fact that Babu Arun Chandra Ray, an under-graduate Head Clerk in the office of the Inspectress of Girls' Schools, Dacca, an outside grade officer on Rs. 60, has been promoted to grade V of the Subordinate Educational Service?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“The reply is in the affirmative.”

suspension of
higher grades.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state under what rules the Director of Public Instruction is empowered to suspend any graded officer's natural promotion to a higher grade when there is nothing against such officer?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the service conditions set out by the Secretary of State for India at the time of sanctioning the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service cadres?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state under what rules the service conditions of meritorious officers in the Subordinate Educational Service cadre can be suspended by the Government or by the Director of Public Instruction in the way of stopping their promotions to higher grade vacancies?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state how and under what rules an officer having served long in the Subordinate Educational grades can be put outside the grades and his promotion stopped, when there is absolutely nothing against his service?

(e) Is it a fact that Babu Joy Chandra Mahalanobis in grade III of the Subordinate Educational Service has been posted outside the grade without his consent?

(f) Is it a fact that in grade V there are still about 20 officers who have been there for more than eight years?

(g) Is it a fact that of all officers in the grades of the Subordinate Educational Service, the officers in grade V require a stay of more than eight years for promotion to a higher grade?

(h) Is there any truth in the statement that this detention in grade V of experienced and meritorious officers is due to many indiscriminate postings of outsiders, outside grade officers and recipients of special promotions in the vacancies of the higher grades, especially in grade IV?

(i) Is it a fact that the congestion is mainly due to a disproportionate number of posts in the different grades and to new postings in grades without proper provision in the corresponding higher grades? If so, what steps are being taken for alleviating such congestion?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) and (b) No service conditions were laid down by the Secretary of State for the Subordinate Educational Service. In the Government of Bengal resolution of the 30th March, 1897, constituting the service, of which a copy is laid on the library table, two principles were laid down:—

(i) promotion from class to class will not be determined by seniority alone. Seniority is only one of the conditions which render an officer eligible for promotion. Efficient service in the posts hitherto held, the nature of the appointments in which officers are serving, and capacity to fill posts of higher responsibility, are other determining factors of equal importance, which are to be considered as well as seniority;

(ii) promotion of an officer to a post of greater responsibility will not necessarily imply promotion to a higher class on higher pay. An officer's selection for a post of greater responsibility will be an indication of his fitness for promotion at some future time, and in this way he will indirectly be a gainer; and in accordance with these the Director of Public Instruction is competent to withhold the promotion of those officers whose work is not satisfactory or is of a less responsible character.

(c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to (a) and (b) above. Promotions of meritorious officers are not stopped.

(d) There are no such rules but in some cases where it was felt that the officers had reached the maximum that their qualifications and responsibilities justified they have been put outside the grades so as to relieve the block in promotions.

(e) The reply is in the affirmative.

(f) No. There are only two such officers.

(g) Officers in grade V of the Subordinate Educational Service have ordinarily to remain in that grade for about six years.

(h) and (i) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to question No. 20.”

20.

(a) Is it a fact that under the rules sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India every officer in the Subordinate Educational Service with good service is bound to reach to the top grade before retirement?

Promotion and progress of officer in the Subordinate Educational Service.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many years are required by an officer under the present conditions of service in the Subordinate Educational Service, to reach grade V and to reach grade I, if he is a graduate and enters service in grade VIII?

(c) Are the Government aware that an officer requires about six years on an average in passing a grade in the Subordinate Educational Service?

(d) Is it a fact that the new posts in the grades of the Subordinate Educational Service sanctioned by the Government have got no corresponding proportionate posts sanctioned in the higher grades?

(e) If so, what steps are the Government taking against the stoppage of promotions by the younger men?

(f) Are the Government aware of the fact that the new appointments created and postings made in grades I, II, III, and IV of the Subordinate Educational Service (especially in the last) as foreman mechanic instructors, lady teachers, lecturers and demonstrators of colleges and upper subordinate teachers, have seriously prejudiced the promotions and the future prospects of graduate teachers who have been occupied in actual teaching work for the last ten or fifteen years in the Sibpur and Dacca Engineering Institutions?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) There are no rules of the Secretary of State for India about the Subordinate Educational Service.

(b) It cannot be said definitely how many years are required to reach grade V or I starting from VIII. Roughly speaking an officer starting from grade VIII should reach grade V in about 16 to 18 years and grade I in about 25 to 30 years.

(c) In the last four grades of the Subordinate Educational Service the average is about 5 or 6 years and in the 1st four grades about 4 years.

(d) It is a fact that the present grading is unsatisfactory.

(e) and (f) It is presumed that the Hon'ble Member refers to promotion being retarded by the appointment of young men outside the service direct to higher pay. Lecturers and Demonstrators of colleges, women B.A., B.T.'s and Foremen Instructors of Engineering Institutions, etc., have to be appointed on a higher rate of pay. This is unavoidable but for appointments of this kind new posts on higher pay are created and only in very few cases are actual grade vacancies utilised for making direct appointments from outside on higher pay. It is recognised that the present practice is prejudicial to the interests of those in lower grades but it is hoped to reorganise the service in the near future and the principles on which reorganisation should proceed are being worked out.”

(a) Is it a fact that under orders of Government or the Director of Public Instruction, students of certain high schools are to be made ineligible for junior scholarships on the result of the Matriculation Examination of the Calcutta University?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the names of all such schools explaining the reasons for such orders in each case?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Yes. These orders have since been withdrawn.

(b) A list is laid on the table.”

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the methods by which the estimate that one-fifth of a ton of food-grains is required per head of the population per annum has been arrived at, and when was this estimate first made? Normal requirements of Bengal in food-grains for human consumption.

(b) What are the reasons for believing that this is an over-estimate, and since when, and by whom has this belief been entertained?

(c) Has any inquiry been held for the purpose of ascertaining the exact normal requirements of Bengal in food-grains for human consumption? If so, when, by whom, in what manner, and with what specific results?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) The Government of Bengal are not aware how or when first the estimate that one-fifth of a ton of food-grains is required per head of the population in India was arrived at.

(b) The reason for believing it to be an over-estimate was its failure when applied as a working formula for deciding the requirements of each province.

It is understood that all provinces which attempted to utilize the formula share this belief: when it was arrived at is not known to this Government.

(c) No; but calculations have been made as to the average quantity of rice consumed per head in Bengal."

total production of food-grains in Bengal during the last five years.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the total production of food-grains in Bengal during each of the last five years and the difference between the total export and import thereof in the corresponding periods?

(b) Has there been any excess of exports over imports of food-grains in Bengal during the last ten years? If so, when, and by how much?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

" (a) A statement is given below :—

			Total estimated production of food-grains, excluding pulses, during the last five years.	Net imports of food-grains during the last five years.
			Tons.	Tons.
1914-15	6,514,000	435,264
1915-16	8,421,000	761,062
1916-17	8,176,000	679,792
1917-18	8,770,000	283,999
1918-19	7,011,000	48,577

No estimate is made of the production of pulses.

No statistics are available for inter-provincial imports and exports by road and by steamer or country boat between Bengal outside Calcutta and (1) Bihar and Orissa and (2) the United Provinces.

(b) A statement is given below:—

			Net exports.†
			Tons.
1910-11*	213,079
1911-12*	543,291
1912-13	177,224

plus of -grains in normal years.

With reference to the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming on the 4th July last that in Bengal "there is a considerable, though not a very great surplus (of food-grains) in normal years," will the Government be pleased to state in detail the grounds for this opinion?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The statement was made as regards rice, not as regards food-grains. It is based on the nearest approach to an estimate of the daily consumption of rice per individual—man, woman and child—in Bengal which can be obtained, viz., one pound or eight chittaks a day.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

25.

With regard to 1917-18, during which, as stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming on the 4th July last, we had “ one of the finest rice crops in Bengal on record ”, will the Government be pleased to state the total quantity of Bengal's export and import, respectively, of rice, during that year?

Total export and import Bengal rice 1917-18.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The figures, excluding those for inter-provincial imports and exports by road and by steamer or country-boat between Bengal outside Calcutta and (1) Bihar and Orissa and (2) the United Provinces, which are not available, are :—

		Tons.
Exports	...	361,074

(a) With regard to the “ different degrees of accuracy attributable to the data upon which such estimates (of the quantities of food-grains available per head) have to be based,” referred to in reply to an unstarred question at the meeting held on the 12th August last, will the Government be pleased to indicate the probable elements of inaccuracy, if any, in the matter of statistics relating to (i) the total yield of rice, and (ii) the export and import thereof, so far as Bengal is concerned, and the probable margin of such inaccuracy?

Accuracy of agricultural statistics.

(b) Is there any reason to suppose that the trade returns relating to export and import as published by Government are inaccurate? If so to what extent, and when was such inaccuracy first suspected or detected in Bengal, and under what circumstances?

(c) To what extent can the agricultural statistics published by the Government of Bengal be depended upon?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ (a) There is an element of inaccuracy in the total reported yield of rice in Bengal because a cadastral survey, which would give the correct area under rice at the time of the survey, has not yet been completed for the whole Province.

Further, the reported figures for exports and imports do not include figures for inter-provincial imports and exports by road and by steamer or country boat between Bengal outside Calcutta and (1) Bihar and Orissa and (2) the United Provinces which are not available. Government are unable to say what the probable margin of inaccuracy is; but cadastral surveys show that the area under rice had been previously underestimated on the average in districts so surveyed by 7 per cent.

(b) and (c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the above answer. There is no reason to suppose that the trade returns relating to export and import as published by Government are inaccurate for the particular line of traffic for which the returns are compiled."

27.

The decision to treat Bengal as a surplus province.

(a) With reference to the reply to my question at the last meeting regarding the decision to treat Bengal as a surplus province, will the Government be pleased to state the date or dates on which they "submitted their views," though not formally consulted, and the purport of such views on each occasion?

(b) With regard to the census of rice stocks held in November last, referred to in the said reply, is it not a fact that the said census was pronounced by Sir Henry Wheeler on the 19th February last as incomplete, and by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming on the 4th July last as patently incorrect?

(c) Beyond the said census, what were the other "facts regarding the situation" upon consideration of which Government were satisfied that Bengal could not be treated as a deficit Province?"

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Government are not prepared to give the information asked for.

(b) Yes.

(c) Comparative prices, estimate of the rice crops of previous years, forecast of the winter rice crop of 1918-19 and information as to the general economic situation in each district."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

28.

The meaning of a "surplus province"

Will the Government be pleased to explain what is meant by a "surplus province"? Is the term applicable to Bengal, in so far as it "could not be treated as a deficit province"?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"A 'surplus province' is a province possessing stocks of food-stuffs in excess of their requirements at the time. The term was so used as applicable to Bengal in respect of rice, in so far as 'it could not be treated as a deficit province' in the answer to the question to which the Hon'ble Member alludes"

Conferences held at Nagpur and Delhi on the question of food supplies.

(a) Are the Government aware of a conference held at Nagpur in August, 1918, under the presidency of Sir Claude Hill, to consider the question of food supplies, and also of a similar conference held subsequently at Delhi?

(b) If so, were the Government of Bengal represented at the said two conferences, or were they asked to send any representative thereto?

(c) Have the Government any information regarding the decisions arrived at, or discussions held, in the said two conferences, and how the same affected Bengal? If so, will the Government be pleased to make a detailed statement about it?

(d) Were any estimates or statements prepared for these conferences on behalf of the Government of Bengal, or was any expression of opinion made in any other form on their behalf at these conferences in regard to the rice position in Bengal? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the purport thereof?

(e) Is it a fact that the decision to treat Bengal as a "surplus province" was practically arrived at in these conferences after due regard being paid to representations made on behalf of the Government of Bengal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

" (a) Yes.

(b) The conferences were not conferences of Governments, but meetings of Directors of Civil Supplies intended to facilitate the working of the control system. The Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, attended, with the permission of the Government of Bengal, but not as their representative.

(c) Yes. Government are unable to make a statement as to the proceedings of a conference held under the directions of the Government of India.

(d) A statement was prepared by the Director of Civil Supplies. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to the last part of question (c).

(e) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to his question No. 18 asked at the Council meeting of the 12th August.

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the "representation made to the Government of India in May last," as a result of which the export of rice from Bengal is stated to have diminished? Export of rice from Bengal.

" Government are not prepared to lay a copy of the representation on the table."

(a) With regard to the duties of the Director of Civil Supplies, on behalf of the Local Government will the Government be pleased to state what supervision, if any, is exercised over him by the Local Government in the matter of his discharge of the said duties? Duties of Director of Civil Supplies.

(b) What are the methods employed by him in discharging his functions on behalf of the Local Government under clauses (a) and (b) of the reply to unstarred question No. 19 of the 12th August last? Will the Government be pleased to give typical instances of each case, and state how often these powers have been exercised by him?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

" (a) Government supervise the work of the Director of Civil Supplies in the same way as they supervise that of any other officer directly responsible to them.

(b) The prevention of competitive purchases by certificate holders was arranged by requesting Directors of Civil Supplies, in other provinces, to refuse certificates to persons whose representatives in Bengal bought rashly and by arranging that purchases for a province should be made by a limited number of firms only: thus it was arranged that Sind should buy through three firms only.

The control over movements within the province is exercised by making arrangements with the railways for wagons to be supplied or refused at the various stations or by refusing certificates. A typical instance is the arrangement by which the Assam-Bengal Railway was to move uncontrolled Burma rice from Chittagong only if booked through to stations in those districts of Bengal or Assam where it was required.

To state how often steps were taken of this kind is impossible; much of the work was done by unofficial arrangements with the Railways concerned of which no record was kept."

Grant of priority certificates.

(a) With reference to the answer to unstarred question No. 22 of the 12th August last, will the Government be pleased to state the circumstances in which certificates have been altered at the instance of the local Director, and how often they have been so altered?

(b) Is the local Director permitted to make any such alteration in the priority certificates on his own initiative? Or, is agreement of the issuing Director an essential pre-requisite for this purpose?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Certificates sent by other Directors are never altered at the instance of the local Director.

(b) There are no formal rules on the subject. Alterations are made sometimes at the special request of the issuing Directors and sometimes on the basis of informal understandings previously arrived at with them."

33.

Relations between the Director of Civil Supplies and the Collector of Customs.

What are the relations between the Director of Civil Supplies and the Collector of Customs, in the matter of export by sea?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"Licenses for export of rice by sea to Rangoon require the countersignature of the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal. Otherwise he has no direct connection with the Collector of Customs, who, however, keeps him informed as to amounts exported."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

Placing of a maximum limit on the total quantity of rice to be exported

Was any maximum limit placed at any time upon the total quantity of rice which could be exported from Bengal, by sea and otherwise? If so, when, and what was the said maximum?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"Not so far as the Government of Bengal are aware."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

35.

Census of rice stocks.

With reference to the reply to unstarred question No. 26 of the 12th August last, will the Government be pleased to publish a detailed statistical statement showing the results of the recent census of rice stocks?

"Government are not prepared to publish such a statement."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

36.

Will the Government be pleased to state the various rates at which Burma rice can be sold at the headquarters of the different district towns in Bengal? Rates of Burma rice.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

A statement is laid on the table. The apparent discrepancies between the rates in different districts are due not only to differences in local conditions but also to different varieties of rice having been imported or taken as a basis of calculation.

The notice published by the Director of Civil Supplies on the 30th July last, giving the maximum prices per maund fixed for sales of Burma rice by licensed importers, is also placed on the table."

(b) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of taking any similar action in Bengal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

use of the cinematograph diffusing elementary knowledge of hygiene, etc.,
the mufassal.

(a) In regard to the suggestion put forward in my budget speech advocating the use of the Kinematograph in diffusing elementary knowledge of hygiene, etc., in the mufassal, will the Government be pleased to state whether the same has their approval?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, what steps are the Government taking in the matter?

(c) If the answer is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons they have against taking up the suggestion?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a), (b) and (c) Government recognize the advantages of visual instruction by means of the cinematograph. The Sanitary Commissioner has already devoted considerable attention to the subject; he is unable to get suitable films prepared in India. In any case, the cost would be very heavy. Government have done a good deal to provide visual instruction in hygiene by means of magic lanterns.

Eighteen municipalities which (1) employ health officers or sanitary inspectors and (2) have guru-training schools located within their limits, have been supplied with lanterns and slides for a course of 12 lectures.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps, by way of a supplementary question, said:—

“I hope that the Government will not lose sight of what I consider to be a very important method of teaching the ignorant people the elementary science necessary for their comfort and progress. My friends have asked me to press the matter.”

The President said:—

“Order, order. If the Hon'ble Member is asking a supplementary question he is not entitled to argue the point.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said :—

"I simply wish to ask whether the Government intend pursuing the subject at an early date."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan replied :—

"My Lord, it is not properly a question. Government will consider the matter when examining the whole question."

By the Hon'ble Mr. Arun Chandra Singha:—

39.

(a) Are the Government aware that in a suit for enhancement of rent, on the ground of a rise in prices of staple food-crops the Court is required, under section 32 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, to compare the average prices during two decennial periods and that for this purpose the Court has to refer to the price-lists published by the Government under section 39 of the said Act? Supply to civil courts of price-lists of staple food-crops.

(b) Is it a fact that in civil courts in the mufassal copies of the official Gazette in which such price-lists are published, are not always regularly preserved and that the plaintiff is required to file a certified copy of such issues of the Gazette at his own cost?

(c) Is it also a fact that for the convenience of Revenue Officers trying enhancement suits under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, a complete list of the average prices for 20 years is prepared by the authorities and duly supplied to such officers?

(d) If so, are the Government contemplating taking steps for the removal of this inconvenience to the litigants, either by supplying all civil courts with similar price-lists or making any other convenient arrangement?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) Under the High Court rules District Judges are required to preserve in their record rooms a copy of the Calcutta Gazette bound in yearly volumes for a period of 12 years, and it is presumed that this rule is complied with.

With regard to the latter part of this question Government have no information on the point.

(c) A list showing the average prices of staple food crops for twenty years was prepared in the office of the Director of Land Records, Bengal, and copies of it were supplied to Commissioners, Collectors and Settlement Officers.

(d) It is ordinarily the duty of litigants to file in Court certified copies of any documents which may be necessary to prove their case. Under rule 111 in the Bengal Records Manual (pages 24-25 of the edition of 1915) District Officers are required to preserve one copy of the Gazette permanently, and, that being so, litigants should experience no difficulty in obtaining certified copies of the lists, or of such portions thereof as may be necessary to their purpose."

(a) Is it a fact that a memorial has been submitted to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal by the inhabitants of Bajitpur, Kaliarchar and other neighbouring villages of the district of Mymensingh praying for the location of the subdivisional headquarters of the proposed new district of Kishoreganj at Kaliarchar instead of Bajitpur? Location of the subdivisional headquarters of the proposed new district of Kishoreganj.

(b) Is it a fact that the merits and demerits of the two places are discussed at length in the said memorial?

(c) Have the Government considered or are they considering the arguments advanced in the said memorial in favour of Kaliarchar and against Bajitpur?

(d) Have the Government come to any final decision on the question?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) and (b) Yes.

(c) and (d) The question has been very fully considered on several occasions during the last four years and Government have finally decided that the headquarters should be at Bajitpur.”

use of a munkidar.

With reference to the reply given to my unstarred question No. 39 asked at the meeting of Council on the 12th August last, will the Government be pleased to say whether it is a fact that the Chaukidar submitted a representation to the District Magistrate in which he adheres to his former statements that the man died of starvation and that he had actually been going without food for some days prior to his death?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“It has been ascertained that such a representation was made by way of appeal. The matter is pending with the District Magistrate.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

pay of sub-registrars.

(a) Is it a fact that the maximum pay of sub-registrars under the commission system before 1880 was Rs. 250 and that their maximum pay under the present system is Rs. 150?

(b) Are the Government aware that there is a feeling of dissatisfaction amongst the sub-registrars on the following grounds, namely:—

(i) that their pay has not been raised although the pay of the provincial services, both executive and judicial, has been raised;

(ii) that the minimum pay of the district sub-registrars is lower than that of the sub-deputy collectors; and

(iii) that the practice formerly in vogue of recruiting some officers of the provincial service from amongst the sub-registrars has been abolished?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of raising the pay of the sub-registrars proportionately to the increments which have been allowed in the provincial services?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Prior to 1880 sub-registrars were remunerated by commission on certain percentages of the fees realised in each office without any maximum limit in practice. According to a list prepared in 1878, 171 sub-registrars drew under Rs. 100 a month, 21 sub-registrars drew between Rs. 100 and Rs. 150 and 2 drew over Rs. 150, viz., Rs. 152 and Rs. 153 respectively. The maximum pay of a sub-registrar is now Rs. 150.

(b) No. The grounds stated are not correct; for the following reasons:—

- (i) only the pay of the lowest grade of the provincial services, both executive and judicial, has been raised from Rs. 200 to Rs. 250;
- (ii) the minimum pay of a district sub-registrar is now Rs. 200 a month while that of a sub-deputy collector is Rs. 100; and
- (iii) in view of the superior qualifications required for the provincial service, the Registration Department is not suitable as a normal recruiting ground for that service; but it is open to the Inspector-General to recommend qualified sub-registrars for the consideration of Government.

(c) A scheme for the revision of the cadre of sub-registrars which would improve their prospects was sanctioned in 1918 by His Majesty's Secretary of State on the understanding that effect would not be given to it until the financial situation improves. Proposals for introducing it are under consideration."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

43.

(a) Is it a fact that the minimum pay of ministerial officers in all departments is Rs. 30 the only exception being in the Registration Department in which the minimum pay is Rs. 15?

Minimum pay of ministerial officers in the Registration Department

(b) Will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of enhancing the minimum pay of the ministerial officers of the Registration Department so as to bring it on a level with other departments?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) The minimum pay of ministerial officers in judicial and revenue offices is Rs. 30 a month in Eastern Bengal Districts and Rs. 25 a month in Western Bengal Districts, while the minimum pay of a clerk in the Registration Department is Rs. 20 a month and that of a Muharrir Rs. 15.

(b) A revision of the pay of ministerial officers in the Registration Department has been sanctioned by His Majesty's Secretary of State; and it has been decided to give partial effect to the scheme with effect from the 1st March, 1919."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr laid on the table a statement of the result of the inquiry into the case of the arrest of one Shaju Khatun promised in his reply to question No. 16(2) (unstarred) asked at the Council meeting of the 3rd April, 1919.

STATEMENT REFERRED TO IN ITEM NO. 3 OF THE LIST OF BUSINESS FOR THE MEETING OF COUNCIL ON THE 3RD SEPTEMBER, 1919.

With reference to paragraph (2) of the reply to question No. 16 (unstarred) put by the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta at the Council meeting held on the 3rd April, 1919, the result of the inquiry is laid on the table.

One Kajim Mashalchi of Baburchar, husband of Shaju Khatun, the woman in question, was suspected of complicity in a cloth-looting case of Sadarpur police-station in the district of Faridpur. On the 8th February, the circle inspector, who was investigating the case, received information that the woman had left her home on the previous day for her father's house at Maheshwardi, taking with her some new clothes. In so doing she had, of her own accord walked a distance of ten miles, which is not without relevance to the facts detailed below. He caused the house at Maheshwardi to be searched on the morning of the 9th February. During the search, four new dhoties were found for which the woman was unable to account. She was then arrested with her children and sent by a sub-inspector to the police-station at Bhanga, some five miles off, in charge of an escort, while the sub-inspector proceeded to search another house. There were blood-stains on the woman's clothes at the time of her arrest, but the sub-inspector made no inquiries about them. On her way to the police-station, the woman began to bleed and was given a piece of cloth by the head constable in charge of the escort to hide the blood-stains. On arrival at the police-station, the head constable gave her soap, with which she washed her clothes. The woman was detained for the night with her children in the lock-up at the police-station. Next morning, the inspector offered to release the children on bail, but nobody was willing to stand surety for them. The inspector then gave orders that the woman and her children should be taken to Talma in a boat and from Talma to Faridpur in a carriage or a bullock cart. The party arrived at Talma about midnight, and as no carriage or bullock cart was available, they proceeded on foot to Faridpur, about ten miles off, reaching that place on the morning of the 11th. On her admission to the jail, the woman complained that she had been assaulted by the police, but the sub-assistant surgeon of the jail who examined her found no marks of violence on her person. That night at 11 P.M. she gave birth to a still-born child, the body being in a decomposed condition. From the state of the body, the sub-assistant surgeon was of opinion that the death must have taken place three or four days before the delivery.

The subdivisional officer, who made a careful inquiry into the matter, found that the woman's allegation that she had been assaulted by the police was unfounded, but that in her condition she was subjected to undue bodily exertion, though in view of the medical evidence, the death of the infant had probably taken place before her arrest. There is some corroboration for this view in the fact that blood-stains were found on the woman's clothes at the time of her arrest. It has also been found that the head constable in charge of the escort made every possible attempt to secure a means of conveyance for the woman from Talma to Faridpur. He also tried unsuccessfully to procure accommodation for her at Talma for the night.

The responsibility for this unfortunate occurrence must be laid on the inspector and sub-inspector. The former states that he did not notice the blood-stains on the woman's clothes, while the latter says that he attributed them to menstrual flow. Both of them, however, questioned the woman while she was in custody, and should have taken steps to satisfy themselves as to her real condition and her fitness to travel to Faridpur. There is no suggestion that they were actuated by any improper motive. Their callousness seems to have been due to sheer lack of care and want of thought. It is, however, this callous exercise of authority which brings the police force into disrepute, and in order to mark his sense of the gravity of their offence, the Governor in Council has directed that the sub-inspector should be removed from the charge of a police-station and degraded for eighteen months. The inspector, whose responsibility was less direct, has been degraded for a year.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.*THE CALCUTTA AND SUBURBAN POLICE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta and Suburban Police (Amendment) Bill, 1919, and moved that the said Report be taken into consideration.

He said :—

“On the occasion of the introduction of the Bill I dealt at some length with the considerations affecting it, and it is not surprising, in connection with a small measure of this kind, that there is little more to be said on this occasion. The Select Committee met, and again went over the arguments which had been touched upon in Council, relevant to the Bill, and as will be seen from their report, they decided to recommend that the Bill be passed as introduced. One of our members, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, has annexed to the report what is described as a note of dissent, but which, I think the Council will agree, is rather in the nature of a few comments and suggestions which may be very briefly met.

After referring to certain provisions of other Acts, he says that he does not desire to raise any objection to clause 2, but only to suggest that any order which affects the public, and not the force only, should receive the sanction of Government. With reference to that I would again point out that the section of the Act which we are amending—as before, I refer to the principal Act, namely, the Calcutta Police Act—is section 9, which does not refer to orders affecting the public but only to orders affecting the force, and therefore the contingency which he apprehends will not arise.

His second comment is that he thinks it should be clearly provided that nothing should be done to restrict the free movement of a suspended officer in obtaining redress. I mentioned that point when the Bill was introduced, and stated that, compatibly with the general direction that they should stop at Lalbazar, facilities were already given to men under suspension to get into contact with any outside legal advisers whom they might wish to consult.

So much for the report of the Select Committee.

It may be remembered that we at one time thought of taking up this Bill at Dacca, but we agreed to keep it over for the present meeting in order to give full opportunity for public opinion, if it desired to do so, to express itself. As regards that we have only received one letter from the Indian Association, and again, I think, the Council will agree that if the objections contained in that letter are all that can be put up by way of criticism, then the Bill is not open to very grave exception.

Apart from that, to the best of my belief, there was only one newspaper which contained a series of some three articles dealing with the Bill, with which, I am given to understand, a gentleman interested in the recent litigation was not altogether unconnected. It may, therefore, fairly be said, as a general statement, that the inhabitants of Calcutta have decided after seeing the Bill, that they can sleep safely in their beds undisturbed by the fears and apprehensions which were voiced in some quarters when the Bill was introduced.”

* The motion was put and agreed to.

Sir H. Wheeler; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

SUPPLEMENTARY LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4A.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta was to have moved that in the last line of clause 2 of the Calcutta and Suburban Police (Amendment) Bill, 1919, for the word "control" the word "sanction" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Member being absent the amendment was not moved and was deemed to be withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler also moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

He said :—

"I will only say a word to further reassure Hon'ble Members as to the propriety of substituting the word 'control' for the word 'approbation'. I did not mention the fact on the first occasion, and had intended to do so in connection with the amendment of which notice was given. Since, however, that has not been moved it may interest Hon'ble Members to know that our amendment is merely following what already is to be found in the corresponding sections of the Madras and Bombay City Police Acts."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTIONS

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest).

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 6 and 7.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that immediate arrangements be made by Government for opening additional sections of classes in all Government colleges in Bengal, for the accommodation of those successful students who have been refused admission into colleges for want of accommodation.

He said :—

"My Lord, there is a complaint all over Bengal for the non-admission of a very large number of qualified students into colleges who have successfully passed the Matriculation, the I. A. and I. Sc. examinations of the Calcutta University. They knock at the door of the colleges and they are told that the allotted seats are filled up. Disappointed students are unable to understand the real reason why they are deprived of the inestimable benefits of University education. Their guardians also feel the greatest difficulty. My Lord, in a province consisting of 45 millions of people, the percentage of literate people is very small, and I consider that it is the sacred duty of the enlightened Government to provide facilities for higher education. The schools in Bengal are sending every year thousands and thousands of successful students to the gates of the University. My Lord, if the colleges under existing arrangements cannot provide sufficient accommodation, some effective steps ought to be taken at once for the benefit of the students and thus relieve the anxiety of their guardians. My Lord, I sent notice long ago of a question which I intended to ask at the last sitting of the Council to get accurate statistics as to the number of successful students who have been refused admission into colleges for want of accommodation, but the reply to this has been postponed. On a previous occasion I moved Your Excellency's Council regarding the admission of students into the Medical College, Calcutta. I do not feel inclined to-day to dwell upon this important matter. It is not very expensive to open sections of classes in Government colleges for the further accommodation of students. The amount of profit to Government from the collegiate schools of the Presidency College, I mean the Hare and Hindu schools, is more than Rs. 60,000 during the last six years from 1912-13 to 1917-18, but it is a matter of great regret that a large number of successful students of these collegiate schools have been refused admission into the Presidency College. It will take a long time to give effect to the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission. But the students must not sit idle and waste their valuable time. Financial consideration is a great question with Government, but at the same time, my Lord, let me be frank. I consider that it is the paramount duty of the civilized Government to educate the sons of those who live under their protective wings. With these remarks I commend this resolution for the acceptance by Your Excellency's Council."

The President said :—

"The next resolution on the agenda paper raises substantially the same point as is raised by the resolution now under consideration, and it will be convenient, therefore, if a single discussion takes place now. I shall then put the two resolutions separately from the Chair."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray then moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee be appointed to inquire into the difficulties of students in securing admission to colleges and other educational institutions in Bengal, and to recommend suitable measures for providing adequate facilities for their studies.

He said :—

"My Lord, it was said by a great Judge, Sir Barnes Peacock, years ago that the difficulties of a degree-holder begin when he gets a degree. It may be said with equal truth that the difficulties of a student begin when he passes the Matriculation examination or the I. Sc. examination and tries to get himself admitted in one of the colleges, to continue his studies, either in Arts or medicine or engineering. In these days it is easier to pass an University examination than to get admission in a college. I know very well that there are difficulties in the way of admission on account of the large number of boys who pass the Matriculation or the I. Sc. or the I. A. examination, to make room for them all, but I am afraid there has not been any serious attempt to grapple with the situation either on the part of Government or on the part of the college authorities. Let us hope that when the Dacca University will become a reality before the beginning of the next official year, its authorities will endeavour to get over these difficulties in the colleges under their control, and that it will be for the benefit of students of Eastern Bengal desiring to continue their studies in colleges. But I have very great doubts as to whether the opening of a new University will be able to cope sufficiently with the present situation. At the present time there may be some difficulty in making arrangements in those colleges where the tuition leads to a degree in Arts or Law for admission to the I. Sc. or B. Sc. classes, as, besides college lectures, arrangements have to be made for laboratory work. But as regards pure Arts classes, I mean the I.A. and B.A. classes, arrangements may be made by simply opening new classes and appointing new lecturers or Professors. The initiation in this direction may be taken by Government at once by opening new sections for Arts students as suggested in the resolution of my Hon'ble friend, Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur. I think, so far as Government colleges are concerned, students should be admitted to the maximum capacity of the classes as sanctioned by the University; besides, additional sections should be opened in the various classes, to make room for some of the boys who are now turned away. But the policy adopted is the very reverse of what it ought to be. I would cite only one instance: In answer to certain questions at the last Council meeting we were told that the maximum number of students admitted in the 1st-year class of the Dacca College during the time of Mr. Archbold was 233. This was in 1917, but in the years 1918 and 1919 the numbers admitted were 196 and 191, respectively. We are, however, told that 1917 was an exceptional year. Again, we find that the maximum number of students in the 1st-year class has been fixed at 180, 100 reading for the Intermediate examination in Arts and 80 reading for the Intermediate examination in Science. The reasons given for this reduction are, however, not at all convincing. One would have expected that in these days when the number of boys passing the Matriculation examination has been increasing year after year arrangements would be made to admit larger number of boys in the College Department, but what has been done? The number of students who will get admission has been reduced from 233 in 1917 to 180.

Babu S. N. Ray.

In this country, besides Law, Medicine and Engineering, there is no other useful career open to our young men as they have in Europe or America. The number of seats open in the two Medical colleges in Calcutta or the Sibpur Engineering College, are limited. The struggle for existence has been great. It is, therefore, necessary that something must be done at least to give our young men a proper training to qualify themselves for the different professions, whether it be Arts or Medicine or Engineering. Government might very well say that it does not look well that we should be dependent for everything upon Government help. But the fact is that our people without Governmental aid are helpless, and in my opinion when the Government finds that the parents of Indian boys desire that their sons should be adequately educated the Government ought to be proud of the fact and afford every encouragement and facility, both to the parents and to their aspiring sons.

We should like to know if there is any truth in the report that the Principal of the Presidency College issued a notice to the following effect the other day :—

'Applicants for admission who seek personal interviews do so at their own risk. Those who take up my time by unnecessary interviews will have the fact noted against them on their application.'

I am sure we are all anxious to understand the purport and meaning of such a notice, and why it should be noted against a young seeker of information from the Principal as if he had committed a serious offence. So much for the Arts students. Now I shall say a few words about the students who want to enter the Medical colleges: There was at the last Council meeting a resolution asking Your Lordship's Government for the appointment of a committee of officials and non-officials to inquire into the methods followed by the authorities in the matter of selection of candidates for admission into the Calcutta Medical College at the beginning of the current session. After hearing Sir Henry Wheeler on the resolution I thought I would not be justified in taking up unnecessarily the time of this Council in discussing about the admission of students to the Calcutta Medical College. But, unfortunately, we are bound to state, for the enlightenment of Government, that various are the rumours that we have been hearing for the last five or six years as regards the methods adopted by students and the ways, by the adoption of which alone, students could get themselves admitted in the Calcutta Medical College. It may be that the rumours are exaggerated, that they are even unfounded and quite incorrect. Boys, they say, have been driven not only from pillar to post and from post to pillar trying to obtain admission, but we all remember how a candidate for admission into the Calcutta Medical College died by knocking his head against a tram line post while getting down at Kidderpore to go to the house of a clerk of the Medical College in order to secure his good offices to get an admission. I was told the other day by a well-known medical man of Calcutta, himself a Professor in a Medical College, that the claims of boys who had taken up such subjects as Physiology, Chemistry and Botany in the Arts examination, with the main object of getting themselves admitted in the Calcutta Medical College, were passed over, with the result that their study of these subjects should be practically useless. We fully appreciate the views of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler that some discretion ought to be left to the Principal of the College in the matter of admission, but, I think, it is the duty of Government when complaints are openly and systematically made, at least to ascertain how far the complaints are justifiable by facts. I was told that of nearly 2,500 candidates for admission in the Medical colleges and the Medical School in Calcutta only about 400 could get admission, the rest were practically thrown on the streets. People naturally look up to Government for providing greater facilities to the students who wish to enter the Medical colleges and school.

With reference to the admission of boys to the Sibpur Engineering College, I think the rules as to age debar a large number of them from getting themselves admitted. It is for the Governing Body of the institution to modify the rules and admit as many boys as practicable.

That the Government can, if they so desire, do a great deal with reference to the admission of boys admits of no doubt. It is only the other day that the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, after personal inspection of the Dacca School of Engineering, made arrangements for the admission of 20 more boys to that school and has ordered the appointment of two more teachers. A little sympathy with the needs and requirements of the student class would go a great way to solve the problem of admission of boys to the different colleges of Bengal. Whether there is scope for admission of more boys in the different colleges at the present time, and if not, what steps it will be necessary to take in order to admit more boys, is one, I think, which a committee will be able to formulate."

The Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji said :—

"My Lord, any one passing by the many colleges in Calcutta or in the mufassil during the first fortnight after the publication of the results of the Matriculation and the I.A. and I. Sc. examinations must have noticed the knots of anxious-looking students, who, like so many 'disconsolate angels at the gates of Paradise', have, during the last few years, unsuccessfully clamoured for admission. There would have been nothing to evoke our sympathy or excite our feeling if these flotsams of the University had, like so many jetsams, been washed ashore and, after being for a while the playthings of the winds and the waves, succeeded at last in reaching the goal. The alarming increase in the number of students in colleges and schools, the absence of even so much as elbow-room in the college classes, and, what is worst of all, the laying of an embargo, in Government colleges, on the admission of students other than those of transcendent merit, are causes that have operated, in late years, to render the lot of ordinary students uncommonly hard. I am connected in some way or other with the management of a number of schools and a second class college, and I have personal experience of the difficulty encountered alike by the Matriculates and the Intermediates in securing admission, not only to the several Arts colleges, but to the Medical and the Engineering colleges, as well. I have been a witness to the lamentable way in which students, burning with a desire to continue their academic career, after being driven from pillar to post, had to give up their life's sole endeavour—their quest of the Holy Grail—and pass into the silent life of the humble scribe. Jealously upholding its prestige as the premier college in Bengal, the authorities of the Presidency College take especial care to admit only students whose names figure on the front page of the pass-list and who may exhibit potential qualities capable of taking them through the next ordeal with flying colours. The other colleges, aided and unaided, besides being few in number, are handicapped by the University Regulations in the matter of admissions.

Five hundred and eighty-six is the approximate number of high schools in Bengal. These schools sent forth over 10,000 matriculates last time to be accommodated in 34 Arts colleges, first and second grade, and 2 or 3 Medical and an equal number of Engineering schools. Deducting about 20 per cent. or one-fifth of the total number, on account of those that did not proceed further, and making allowance for the 500 or so who took up medicine or engineering, each of the Arts colleges was required to make provision for admitting on an average 237 matriculates in the 1st-year classes. Similarly, each of the 34 first-grade colleges was required to provide for over 200 I.A.s and I.Sc.s in the 3rd-year classes. It has, however, been computed that about 5,000 students have this year been left out in the cold quite unprovided for. Are we not, under the circumstances, justified in saying that in the matter of admissions the colleges have miserably failed to rise to the height of the occasion, and have rendered a miserable account of themselves as educational institutions? 'Many were called, few chosen'—these are the words that involuntarily start to our lips as we endeavour to find the cause of the present educational discontent. And yet, in the face of so much heart-burning caused by the names of nearly half the number of successful under-graduates being placed in the Index Expurgatorium for no other fault than that they failed to score exceptionally high marks in the lottery of University examinations, the University has laid another embargo on education by raising examination fees. Is this not a case, my Lord, in Lord Churchill's memorable language, of 'the forest lamenting that Mr. Gladstone may perspire'? And is it not, I ask, time the authorities should look the situation squarely in the face? Not the authorities alone, but the worthy citizens as well of this no mean city should contrive to open wide the portals of University education by founding more colleges and widening the avenues leading to the temple of learning. The University ought to remember that as hosts it has a duty to perform towards its guests, the young hopefuls, already bidden to its boards, and hungering and thirsting after intellectual food and drink. It ought also to remember that in shutting the doors of its banqueting halls on them it but transgresses the rules of hospitality and starves the minds of the rising generation. Ample provisions are being made at the expense of these unfortunate students for the post-graduate classes, and it was only the other day that this Council passed the Primary Education Bill. We are, therefore, going to provide for the foundation, on the one hand, and the topmost storey, on the other, while the main body of the structure is going to be allowed to take care of itself. Is it not time, my Lord, I again respectfully ask, that the long arm of Your Excellency's Government should intervene and afford relief to the many thousands of disconsolate young men who are every year denied admission to the many Arts colleges in this province? And I pause for an encouraging reply.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

In common with every humble father of a family, I feel no hesitation in supporting a resolution which echoes the feelings of the entire province."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I fully share the anxiety and the concern felt by my educated countrymen as to the difficulties with which our students are confronted when they find their names in the list of successful candidates either at the Matriculation or I.A. examination. Some of them are fortunate and lucky to get themselves admitted in the colleges, but a large number, at any rate a very considerable number, of those boys find themselves in actual difficulties by not getting accommodation in the colleges. To prove this fact figures are not at all necessary. The number of successful candidates at one of these examinations and the number of seats available in all the colleges put together will show that the colleges cannot accommodate all these students. This is a serious difficulty and must be solved, and solved without any further delay. But I am afraid I cannot join my friends in asking either for the opening of additional classes or for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the matter. In the first place the opening of additional classes in our colleges will only postpone the difficulties to a later date. The boys will no doubt get admission in the colleges, but after they pass their B.A. or B.Sc. examination they will find themselves again in the same position as they found themselves when they passed their Matriculation. I do not think the appointment of a committee will serve any useful purpose, as past experience has shown that this will lead to considerable delay and will cause not a little expense to the State. The results of their deliberations are considered by Government and then Government decide on their report. In this case, I think the Government, with the expert opinion they have at their command, can very easily come to a conclusion without the formation of a committee.

I would, my Lord, suggest a solution for the consideration of Your Excellency's Government. Some time back in this Council a resolution was moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter—in fact it was an amendment to my resolution which was accepted by Your Excellency's Government—for the opening of technical and industrial schools all over the province. If we can afford to have them, and we can do so with very little expense, the opening of additional classes will practically mean the opening of new colleges. If we can afford to have industrial and technical colleges all over the province, the congestion will certainly be relieved, and it will also serve a very useful purpose as it will materially improve the economic situation. There has also been another suggestion made for the opening of Medical schools, and if these two projects be taken in hand, I think much of the difficulty will be removed. We have been told that we have to look to Government for all our educational needs. Although we have to depend upon Government to a great extent it cannot be said that my countrymen have failed to lend their services and to exert themselves for the advancement of education. A large number of private colleges and endowed colleges have been established and are being run in this province. Government have to afford relief first and the people will follow suit, and if Government take up the work of starting Medical and Industrial schools, I am sure my countrymen will follow suit and supplement these institutions by private ones of their own, and this will greatly remove the difficulty which is felt by us at the present moment and at the same time open new avenues of employment for our boys and it will be better than leaving them as dissatisfied and unprovided graduates of the Calcutta University."

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

' My Lord, I desire to draw the attention of the Council to a very important aspect of the question—an aspect which it is well-known is often overlooked in practice though not in theory both by Government and the public. In theory, the public and Government agree that the policy of increasing mere literary education should not be pursued, but in practice an opposite course is always followed. My Lord, in this connection a comparison of the state of collegiate education in Bengal and Great Britain seems to be very helpful. Our population is almost equal to that of Great Britain, but according to last year's figures we have about 26,000 collegiate students in Bengal. In Great Britain last year the number of such students was 16,000—and this decrease was perhaps due to the war—but in normal times the number was equal to the Bengal number. In Bengal we have mere literary education and theoretical scientific education, in Great Britain they have about two dozen technical institutions and about 20 medical institutions, and although agriculture not very important for Great Britain, they have about eight agricultural colleges. Then as regards mere literary education, the avenues of employment open to the young graduates of Great Britain are immeasurably superior to those which are open to the graduates of Bengal. Now if Great Britain with all its wealth and all its opportunities is content with 26,000 undergraduates, it is really surprising that my countrymen should ask for more literary education. I am glad to find that in theory they do not demand it but in practice we find that it is constantly pressed before the Council that more literary colleges should be opened. During the last few years one literary college has been established at Rangpur and another at Faridpur, and I understand that attempts have been made to establish a literary college at Bagerhat and my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur desires to press upon Your Excellency's Government to provide funds for the opening of another literary college at Howrah. I sympathise with the desire for more education, but one object is to fit these young men for useful vocations of life. It will not do either for my countrymen or for Government to express a pious desire in not pursuing a policy of mere literary education, and for that reason principally I am sorry to say I have to oppose both the resolutions. But it will not do for Government merely to remain idle on this question. I am aware that there is the Report of the University Commission which has got to be considered. The University Commission raises large questions which require large sums of money, and in the meantime unless we take certain active steps which it is possible to take without spending large sums of money, matters will become very much worse when Government will be in a position—if it ever be in a position—to carry out actively all the recommendations of the University Commission. My Lord, I desire to make some practical suggestion. I suggest that pending action taken on the University Commission's Report, we might make more openings, with fairly modest expenditure, by the establishment of more medical schools. In this connection, I desire to state that Government last year agreed to open a new medical school at Burdwan, and we are all grateful for that, and it is possible to do more. It is also possible for Government to give more facilities for workshop training, and in that connection too the Government have already provided facilities for training 50 men in the workshop at Kanchrapara, and it is urgently necessary to do more. Then on the question of agricultural education, it is possible to do something on practical lines. I am sorry to say that, in a province like Bengal, we have no agricultural institutions, and at the same time I am conscious of the fact that agricultural education in provinces where such institutions exist have not been very successful in the sense that the graduates or students who pass out of agricultural institutions always find it difficult to get a vocation and they have to drift either to Government service or to other vocations of life. The principal reason is that these institutions have never taken note of the existing conditions of life in our country. Our country is a country containing a mass of illiterate cultivators. It is necessary to create a link between the agricultural experts of the Government Agricultural Department and the ignorant ryots, and this can only be effected by taking note of the existing conditions of life in Bengal. The whole of Bengal is parcelled out into a number of zemindaries and within these zemindaries we have zemindars' agents who exercise considerable influence. If we have some sort of institution where we can give adequate training for a zemindari officer who will, at the same time, be sufficiently trained in agriculture to assimilate the results of improvements in scientific agriculture, I believe we shall find in these men a link between the ignorant ryot and the agricultural expert, I think the Agricultural Department will be able to do a lot with a minimum of expense. What can the Agricultural Department possibly do with one inspector for a district of 2,000 or 3,000 square miles or for the matter of that half a dozen?"

Maharaja Bahadur of Burdwan; The President; Mr. P. C. Mitter.
Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"May I rise to a point of order? We are now discussing the question of the admission of students into colleges and not the question of medical or agricultural education."

The President said :—

"On that point the Hon'ble Member is perfectly entitled to put forward alternative suggestions against this resolution which he thinks preferable, such as the increase of agricultural education, and so on. But I would ask the Hon'ble Member not to travel too widely over that ground, though strictly speaking he is at present in order."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, my object was to explain matter so as to make my position more clear. I bow to Your Excellency's ruling and I will not pursue it too widely, but if the Hon'ble Member feels interested in the scheme, I shall be very happy to discuss it with him, if he so desires."

My position is simply this that it will not do to wait indefinitely, and that it is urgently necessary that some active steps should be taken at once to provide for useful vocational education."

The Hon'ble Babu Kisor Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I think there is unanimity of opinion that arrangements should be made for more educational institutions. A large number of students are coming out successful every year in the Matriculation examination, but adequate arrangements have not been made for their accommodation either in the colleges or elsewhere. There is no doubt that it is very desirable that additional arrangements should be made for agricultural, technical and industrial education, for literary education is not enough. When this is done, the young men will find outlets for their energy. But because we have to do that, that is no reason why we should stop the progress of education in the general line. We are grateful to Your Excellency for your sympathetic pronouncement, made the other day at Dacca that at an early date additional arrangements would be made for the spread of medical education. There are demands for such an education, and there is need for the employment of such educated persons. It is only for Government to make additional accommodation for that education, either in the higher or lower standard. That will afford a good opening for a large number of persons, but there is one thing to be remembered even also having that in view, which is this : It is now admitted that the Matriculation standard is not up to the mark and the recommendation of the University Commission is that the I.A. or I. Sc. should be the final stage of secondary education. It is for this reason, I think, that the opening of additional classes, wherever necessary, would go a great way in helping the cause of education—medical, industrial, or agricultural. Until proper arrangements are made for the opening of agricultural colleges or schools in different centres or for industrial education at least the ground-work should be made more suitable in the existing colleges for general education to the acquisition of such technical knowledge in the future. The opening of additional classes for the I. A. or I.Sc. is not a difficult question, and, I think, Government will not have to spend too much for the purpose. An additional class for 100 students can be managed by two professors. The uniform rate of fees now is Rs. 6 a month. If two additional classes are opened for the I.A. and I.Sc., I believe three or four professors will do, and in each class there will be an income of Rs. 600, which will not only go towards the pay of the additional professors, but will also pay for hiring houses for the accommodation of students and for other needs. There might be some difficulty about hostel accommodation, but that can be arranged by hired houses. So far however as additional classes are concerned additional building accommodation might be necessary, but for that also, I think, that if arrangements be made for the holding of these additional classes, either in the morning or in the evening, the difficulty may be obviated to a certain extent. At any rate it is urgently necessary that some arrangements should be made. My hon'ble friend Maulvi Abul Kasem thinks that if we make additional accommodation and turn out more students, we will be faced with the difficulty of providing employment for them, but the progress of education is necessary, and if for that purpose additional necessities arise, the solution is there. Mere literary education is not enough and other arrangements should be made for technical instruction. Simply because we are not in a position to provide employment for the growing numbers, that cannot be any reason why the progress of education should be stopped. Whether a committee would be of any use or not, it is for the Government to consider, but at any rate, I beg to submit, additional arrangements should be made for the progress of education which ought not to be hindered or stopped for any reason whatsoever."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I would not have ventured to take part in this debate, had it not been for the fact that two of my friends, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem and the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter have thought it fit to oppose this resolution. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter opposed this resolution with considerable warmth and vehemence, but that is perhaps my friend's usual style, and I do not think that his opposition is as keen as it apparently appears to be. My hon'ble friend Maulvi Abul Kasem in opposing this resolution has, for the moment, forgotten the special needs and requirements of the Muhammadan community. I rise to support this resolution not merely for the sake of emphasizing the fact that the difficulties in the way of students getting admission into schools and colleges constitute a real grievance, but that these difficulties are particularly acute in the case of Muhammadan students. This year, immediately after the Matriculation results were out, I circulated a notice to the various colleges in Calcutta asking such Muhammadans as failed to get admission into the colleges to communicate with me. My object was to find out by way of a rough estimate the number of Muhammadan students who failed to secure admission in the colleges. I found from the number of students who came to see me that no less than 162 or 172—I forget the exact number, but it was considerably over 150—who communicated to me the fact that in spite of their most earnest endeavours they had not been successful in getting admission into any of the colleges in Calcutta. One can guess from this the number of Muhammadan boy students who have failed to get admission, and from that an idea can be gained of the number of students who have to give up their studies for want of accommodation in existing colleges. The question, therefore, arises, and it is an admitted fact, that the present accommodation in colleges happens to be insufficient—whether the failure of the students in getting admission into colleges is to be considered a curse or a blessing.

Two of my Hon'ble friends who have opposed this resolution have in a manner indicated that they look upon this fact as a blessing to the country, and that for a country like India where the people refuse to take to technical education or to any kind of education other than mere literary education, it is something of a God-send that the doors of colleges are shut upon the students; that if not from inclination at least from necessity, our countrymen will be driven to qualify themselves not as mere B.A.'s or M.A.'s but as experts in craftsmanship if they take up careers other than those which are open to men who have received a mere literary education. I admit that there is some force in these arguments and something to be said for the view that has been put forward, but I ask my hon'ble friends whether, before any student takes to technical education, it is not necessary that he should receive a certain amount of general literary education in order to enable him to take advantage of the education imparted in technical institutions in this country. My Lord, Mr. Mitter has told us that there are 26,000 under-graduates in England—about the same number that there are at the present moment in Bengal—and he asks us to consider whether it is proper that we should ask for more colleges when the people of the United Kingdom do not, in spite of the fact that the number of under-graduates there practically equals the number of under-graduates in this country. I am not prepared to discuss the statistics with my friend, Mr. Mitter, nor do I think I am called upon to consider whether in looking at the figures he has not made any mistake, but I take the figures as he has quoted them; but I would ask him to consider that although the number may be 26,000, or rather more, those of the students in that country who go to technical institutions are really equipped with a much larger amount of literary knowledge than most of the under-graduates in this country. What I mean, my Lord, is this: that although a man in the United Kingdom may not have been able to enter any of the colleges, still he possesses, for reasons I need not discuss, a fund of general knowledge which enables him to follow the education given in technical institutions better than any student in this country. We all know the scant education which matriculates in this country get, and unless a student has attained a standard which we call the I.A. standard he cannot be called fit to enter the medical profession or go to any of the technical institutions that at present exist in this country. The point I would like to emphasize is this: that before we can insist upon technical education, if technical institutions are started all over the country, some amount of literary education should also be given to the pupils and that the present system of shutting out a large number of students should be stopped. As regards the Muhammadan students I would remind the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem that he also joined me in my prayer to Your Excellency's Government for another Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta; my friend corrects me by saying he has always supported my prayer for one more Muhammadan Arts College in Calcutta. Well, let it be one more Muhammadan Arts College, that is to say, to find an outlet for about 300 or

Mr. Dunn.

400 students. If we were justified in asking Government to let us have a college for 300 or 400 students, how does my friend justify his attitude in opposing these two resolutions which are of a general character and which will bring relief not only to Hindu students but also to Muhammadan students. On behalf of the students of my community, as well as in the wider interest of the student community in general, I beg to accord my hearty support to this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Dunn said :—

"My Lord, the first of these resolutions asks that additional sections should be opened in Government colleges in order to provide for those matriculates who have not been able to get admission into colleges in Bengal. The second resolution asks that a committee of inquiry should be appointed to examine the general question of the admission of successful matriculates into colleges. The first two speakers will not, I hope, expect me to deal with all the details which they have raised in their remarks. The other speakers have raised large and important issues which I cannot possibly deal with at this stage, but I would like now to refer the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter to the proceedings of the last Council meeting at Dacca in which the establishment of an agricultural institution was stated to be under the consideration of Government.

So far as the two resolutions are concerned there is the underlying assumption that there is no adequate provision in colleges in Bengal for the number of boys who leave high schools and are successful in the Matriculation examination. That is the underlying assumption, and the first resolution asks that we should proceed to open additional classes in Government colleges, in order to meet what is a general demand. Now, if the very sombre picture which the first two speakers have painted is an accurate one, it would be obviously impossible to meet the large general demand by opening additional sections in the classes in the comparatively small number of Government institutions. But what are the facts for the whole of Bengal? The specific question which has been raised by various speakers deals with certain areas and with certain localities. We must look at this problem as a whole and the facts are as follows :—

In the year 1918 the number of boys who passed the Matriculation examination successfully was 7,758. I find that at the end of the academic year 1918-19, that is, after a period during which successful matriculates are admitted into colleges, the number of 1st-year students in colleges, Government and private, was no less than 6,108, and the number reading in certain special institutions was no less than 830, giving a total of 6,938. It is a simple calculation, resulting in the astonishing fact that no less than 90 per cent. of our successful matriculates are accommodated in some form of a collegiate institution or other. If it is necessary to give these figures for the I.A. and I. Sc. students, I wish to state that the number of those boys who passed their Intermediate examination was 3,658 and the number of students who joined the 3rd-year class after that examination was 2,396, again giving a percentage of 90 per cent. of the boys who are actually accommodated in institutions. Now, these figures appear to be very convincing, and, I think, they are convincing. But what about Government institutions? I take it the first two speakers have this specially in their mind. The facts for these institutions are as follows : in Government colleges there were 1,814 applications for admission ; of that number no less than 1,617 were admitted. I speak now of matriculates and I would like to point out to the gentlemen who have spoken in favour of these two resolutions that there are at present in the Krishnagar College no less than 48 vacancies in the 1st-year. Those rejected were 797. From the percentages which I have given it would the difficulty so far has been that students do not always choose subjects according to their capability and future requirements, but sometimes according to fancy. The other difficulty which is not generally known but which, I think, must definitely be stated, is that our students sometimes apply to as many as three colleges for admission at once, the Presidency College being, of course, the favourite. I can understand their desire for entering the Presidency College; it was my own college. They would probably apply to the Scottish Churches College as a second string and probably to the Ripon or Metropolitan or Bangabasi College as a third string. Well, that probably accounts for the residuum which Mr. Dunn has not been able to account for, leaving alone the medical institutions and occupations of life, which absorb a considerable proportion of our matriculates. The University does all it can to see accommodated those who have matriculated. From that point of view the arrangement described above was undertaken and we could always tell students where a vacancy was. But this is a matter which no one can control and I do not think that the University can be blamed in the way the Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji attempted to do, because it has never been unmindful of the situation. I shall not speak of the fees and the post-graduate studies now. Calcutta is fairly full of stories and rumours and comments. Unless, however, we have a good strong post-graduate class neither primary nor secondary nor University education can be improved, for you require a large number of teachers who must be trained in the post-graduate classes and also in training colleges which Your Excellency's Government is providing. Without that portion of the University machinery educational work will be at a stand still. I do not mind criticism about abuses. But the direct point of view must never be forgotten by a certain section of the community. As regards the question of fees, there again the matter is delicate and in connection with the debate the introduction of the question is unnecessary. I would ask Members carefully to consider the needs of the situation for there is, the other side of the question too. I do not wish to be drawn into a discussion whether it is advisable to have more than 26,000 graduates here as in Great Britain as the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter attempted. Hon'ble Mr. Fazl-ul-Haq has pointed out that without some general education our boys cannot be given any particular technical education, agricultural, commercial, medical, etc. We cannot have a number limit of the kind that Mr. Mitter seems to suggest, and we hope we shall never have it. It is, of course, well-known that English men do not generally think of a University career in the way that our boys do here. Many careers and openings invite them and University prospects are not their sole objectives for reasons that will be obvious to all. The whole suggestion is beside the issue and need not be seriously controverted."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, when I put this resolution before the Council I was labouring under the impression that the resolution will meet with the approval of the Government. I find that my resolution has touched on points which are not relevant to the question at issue. I have brought to the notice of the Council that in Government colleges a large number of successful students are not admitted and, therefore, some sort of accommodation ought to be given to them. I find that a discussion has been made as regards encouragement of education in industrial and agricultural schools. I have submitted already in my speech that these are large questions and if there would have been agricultural and industrial schools in existence at this time probably I would not have come to the Council with a resolution like this. We have got the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commissioners and we look to the day when their recommendations will be accepted by this Government and the Supreme Government, with modification but how is the difficulty to be solved at the present moment? If there had been agricultural institutions these students might have been accommodated to them, so, with regard to industrial institutions, if they were in existence students would have been admitted into them. But granted that there are no industrial schools or agricultural schools, should not facilities be given to the students to get admission into Government colleges? That is a question which the Hon'ble Members would have to consider. As a matter of fact, it cannot be denied that these students do not get admission in Government colleges and my proposition before the Council is that they ought to get admission. Suppose there is a Government college in a distant station and suppose 80 boys are refused admission in that college, are we to be told by Government that they must find accommodation elsewhere, in Calcutta and in private colleges? It is for the Hon'ble Members of the Council to consider the difficulty in which students are placed. I do not like to discuss the question of the encouragement or discouragement of literary education or the encouragement or discouragement of industrial or agricultural education. I have nothing to do with that at present. I submit for the consideration of the Hon'ble Members that Government ought to give facilities to the students who have not been admitted into Government colleges and that it is the only point which I submit for discussion and consideration of the Members. My proposition is a very comprehensive one. I have taken into consideration the claims of the Muhammadan students, the claims of the Hindu students, and there is one united voice in the mufassal that these students ought to be accommodated in Government colleges. As I submitted to Your Excellency when moving the resolution that statistics have not been supplied to me when I put a question to the Council but whether the number is small or great, the question is whether the Government or the Educational authorities are in a position to incur expenditure for the benefit of these students? I am told by the Government Member in charge that no additional classes are to be opened in the Government colleges. What will these students do? Are they to run about in the street or are they to sit idle? That is a question which the Hon'ble Members will have to consider. The difficulties are very great: I speak on behalf of the mufassal students in this Council. I dwell upon the result of inquiries that great difficulties are felt by them. My Lord, I do not think it necessary further to discuss the question in the Council. I know very well that the Hon'ble Members—both official and non-official—will consider the practical difficulties in which these students are placed. My Lord, I have nothing more to say. I hope that the Hon'ble Members will kindly consider the resolution which I have put forward before them deliberately and advisedly.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, after hearing Mr. Dunn that about 90 per cent. of the matriculates get admission in the 1st-year class of the colleges, whether private or Government, and that about 90 per cent. of the boys who pass the Intermediate examination in Arts get admission in the B.A. classes, I do not think it proper to take up unnecessarily Your Excellency's time. But there is one fact which I ought to mention and which has been represented to me by my hon'ble friend Maulvi Aman Ali, and it is known to Your Excellency personally, and it is this: He collected certain figures when Your Lordship had been to Chittagong and he represented to Your Lordship that about 20 Hindu boys and about 60 Muhammadan boys could not get admission in the Chittagong college. That shows the necessity of opening additional sections in the Chittagong college, because, so far as I am aware, boys from other districts will not go to Chittagong for their education, and it is the Chittagong boys who have not got sufficient accommodation in the college of their own division. If proper inquiry be made it will be found that this is the case in all the divisions, that there is need for giving greater facilities to students to get admission in colleges. But after hearing Mr. Dunn I do not think it proper to press my resolution.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Motion No. 6 was then put and lost.

Motion No. 7 was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that out of the educational grants provided in the current year's budget, a sum of Rs. 50,000 be granted to the promoters of the proposed Howrah college for the purpose of building the college.

He said :—

"I am grateful to Your Excellency for permitting me to move this resolution.

We have had a long and very interesting debate on the question of accommodation in Government colleges and its extension in different colleges. This resolution, I am sure, whatever has been the fate of the other resolutions, stands on a different footing. Here, a number of gentlemen have started the idea of establishing an intermediate college which may fitly be described as a high school, according to the standard laid down in the University Commission's report, in the district of Howrah. My Lord, they have collected a certain sum of money, and they have also got the approbation of the University of Calcutta. What they want is a decent house. I believe Government are helping them in the matter by asking the educational officers to assist them in finding a suitable house. I do not know whether they have been able to find one yet, but all that is required is money, and the modest request I make is that Rs. 50,000 be granted to them to supplement their resources for a college building. My Lord, I do not think that my hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter, who casually referred to my resolution, will think that my resolution in any way affects the general question whether education should be diverted in other directions, namely, agricultural and industrial. But unfortunately no practical step has yet been taken in that direction, although I am glad to hear from the Hon'ble Mr. Dunn that the matter is now under the consideration of Government so far as the establishment of an agricultural institution is concerned. My Lord, this college will teach up to the I. A. standard of the Calcutta University, and I believe it is admitted by everyone present that for the purpose of giving a fair general education, the I. A. standard is possibly the minimum standard that can be insisted upon. The student who seeks admission in the Calcutta Medical College or in the Silpur Engineering College must pass the I. A. standard or the I. Sc. standard of the Calcutta University, and therefore, I think, it will be admitted that it is not an institution intended merely to manufacture B. A's and M. A's of the Calcutta University. It is an institution which is intended impart a general education to the boys of the district of Howrah. Howrah is a very big area, it is a very big place, and is a matter of surprise that it has not got a single college of its own. The people are trying to get a college and what they want is a little help from Government. I hope that this help will not be denied to them.

As regards the sum of Rs. 50,000, I find in the budget no less than Rs. 97 lakhs is budgetted for expenditure under "Education". My Lord, I am sure if Your Excellency's Government be pleased to make this grant, this money can be found from the savings of the items which are included in the budget. In fact, I find that there is an item of Rs. 12 lakhs, and I am sure the whole of the money will not be spent this year. There will be considerable savings and Rs. 50,000 is such an insignificant amount compared with Rs. 97 lakhs, that I feel sure Your Excellency's Government will be able to spare that sum. I do not wish to take up the time of the Council by making further observations on the subject. It is merely an appeal for a little dole on behalf of the people of Howrah, and I hope Your Excellency will see your way to accept this resolution."

Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Mr. Goode.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, the general aspect of the question has been fully discussed, but my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur feels that his resolution does not touch so much the general aspect of the question of literary education as against non-literary education. There is one point which apparently he has overlooked. If you take away a certain sum of money and apply the same to the promotion of literary education then to that extent the promotion of non-literary education will be made difficult. Bengal can afford a certain sum of money for education generally. Well if you commit yourself to a policy of extension of literary education, it means that for all practical purposes the Government and the people make themselves responsible for a certain amount of recurring expenditure in literary education. When the Government and the people co-operate in future for the extension of non-literary education the money so provided will not be available. I would ask my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur to consider this aspect of the question, and may I just throw out a suggestion for whatever it is worth to my hon'ble friend and the people of Howrah? I understand that they have raised a certain amount of money. Last year the objection to having a medical school at Howrah was the congestion of student population there. Well, if you are going to have another literary college there it will mean more congestion. Can the people of Howrah not now divert the money to a more useful purpose?

One word more, my Lord, and I am done. It seems, as the general aspect of the question has some bearing on the point, that I have been considerably mis-understood. My plea was not a plea for retarding high education. I would want high education to advance, but you cannot advance high education in spite of what the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has said, if you confine your activities to narrow limits. Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari says that because Great Britain has 26,000 under-graduates why should we limit our ambition to that number I entirely agree with him, but I will ask him to remember that we cannot really advance unless we make our educational activities more broad-based.

The Hon'ble Mr. Goode said :—

"My Lord, in replying to the motion of the Hon'ble Member I do not propose to criticize his resolution upon its merits, but I wish to suggest that it is not practicable to deal with his proposal in this Council. It will be desirable very briefly to recapitulate the history of the proceedings which led to this resolution.

The Rai Bahadur has stated that a committee of Howrah gentlemen recently moved the University of Calcutta for permission to found a second grade college in Howrah. The University after having enquiries made by two members of the Syndicate approved affiliation and forwarded the proposal to Your Excellency in your capacity as Rector of the University. On a study of the papers Your Excellency was of opinion that the proposal which was made for the accommodation of the college and the financial arrangements were unsatisfactory, and you therefore suggested to the Government of India that further assurances in regard to these two matters should be required. The Government of India thereupon in exercise of their powers under the Universities Act requested that Your Excellency as Rector should appoint some educationalist to make an enquiry into the question of the accommodation and the financial merits of the proposal. Mr. Barrow, Principal of the Presidency College, was deputed to make that enquiry, and he did so in company with some of the members of the original committee. He reported that the house in which it was proposed to accommodate this college was quite inadequate and also that the financial stability of the new institution was by no means assured. The Government of India upon receiving his report decided that the affiliation recommended by the University should not be granted.

Now, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur has taken upon himself to make in this Council an application which I suggest would much more properly come from the Governing Body of the proposed college. It is for that Governing Body which has been provisionally formed either to move the University or the Local Government for some contribution towards the establishment of the college they desire. I may state for the information of the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur that Government has every sympathy with this proposal on its merits. We recognize that in the near future we may be obliged in putting into execution the University Commission's report, to found many intermediate colleges throughout Bengal, and we recognize that the foundation of an endowed college at the Howrah district headquarters will be a most sound and desirable undertaking. I need not inform the Hon'ble Member that by intermediate college, I mean the same thing as he means by second grade colleges. I think, therefore, that the Hon'ble Member would be well advised to withdraw his resolution and to desire the Governing Body to approach Government for a grant which they require to establish this college. If Government is satisfied that their financial position will be sound, I think I can assure the Hon'ble Member that Government will deal with any proposal emanating from the Governing Body in a most sympathetic manner. We know from his resolution that the Governing Body of the proposed college now propose to make a new building. I understand that Rs. 40,000 has already been deposited in securities with the District Magistrate of Howrah, and that there is some hope of obtaining another Rs. 40,000 as a private benefaction. If that is so, the Governing Body have Rs. 80,000 in their hands with which to start their new venture. Now, if they approach the Government of Bengal with a sound and businesslike statement and show clearly that they are able to house in an adequate and satisfactory manner the new institution they propose to found, provided that the Government of Bengal will supplement their Rs. 80,000 by half a lakh, then, I think, on behalf of Government, without committing Government by any definite promise, I can at least assure the Hon'ble Member that any such proposal will receive very sympathetic consideration from Government. In this view of the case I hope that the Hon'ble Member will be prepared to withdraw his resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened with great interest to the speech of Mr. Goode and I may say that I am very grateful to Mr. Goode and the Government for the very sympathetic reply that has been given to me. After what has fallen from him, I do not think it necessary to press my resolution, in fact

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

I think I will do a distinct service to the people of Howrah by withdrawing the resolution at this stage. But I think it necessary to offer a few observations or rather explanations. I quite appreciate the fact that an application should come from the Governing Body, but my Lord, this resolution was not an inspiration that has come to me from the Most High, but an inspiration from some persons who are interested in it. And without explaining in further detail, I believe the Governing Body is also glad that I should put this matter before Your Excellency's Government. My Lord, I hope the Government will also kindly take into consideration this fact, that the people of Howrah have proceeded in a true businesslike way and in a spirit of self-help. They have raised Rs. 10,000 and further expect to raise another Rs. 40,000, and as far as I am able to follow Government will consider their case very sympathetically.

Now, my Lord, before I sit down I would like to make one or two observations with reference to the remarks of my hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter, who has been very active to-day in some of his speeches. He has said in this particular instance that a certain sum of money will be diverted from its proper channel, that is, for the promotion of what he calls 'literary education'. I might explain here, my Lord, that the establishment of second grade colleges is not intended for the manufacture of B.A.s and M.A.s or lawyers like my friend Mr. P. C. Mitter. The other day on behalf of a brilliant student of the Calcutta University, who has passed the Matriculation examination in the first division, I approached a distinguished member of this Council, and a great friend of ours, who is interested in the development of industrial education. This boy wished to take up the industrial line, and he was told by the Principal of the Sibpur Engineering College that he would not get anything higher than the post of an Overseer in his college unless he got a degree from the University of either B.A. or the L.Sc. Here is a boy—a very brilliant boy—who has stood very high in the examination of the Calcutta University cannot get admission into the higher classes of engineering because he has not passed the L.A. Does my friend mean to say that boys like this should simply be content with the posts of Overseers to look after the steam-rollers of the city and earn Rs. 30 to Rs. 40 a month. I do not think that the 10,000 matriculates will be content with such a situation, with merely looking after the steam-rollers of the mufassal or the city.

Then, my Lord, my friend has so eloquently spoken about the diversion of money to literary education. May I draw my friend's attention to what he has done in his own district at Bhowanipur. About two years ago how could my friend conveniently forget the importance of industrial education and promote the foundation of another college for literary education. I know that the people who come from Bhowanipur are rich people—they get the bulk of the loot from the High Court and they have not to come up to Government for doles; they establish colleges out of their own money. Why did they not then establish an agricultural or industrial institution? Perhaps the thought of retaining the reputation of Bhowanipur for producing the best lawyers was uppermost in their minds at the time."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that an expert in town-planning be appointed as the Chairman of the Calcutta Improvement

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Trust when that office becomes vacant in consequence of the grant of any leave to, or on the retirement of, the present incumbent.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I am again grateful to Your Excellency for allowing me to move this motion ; it was to have been moved at the last meeting of the Council. It is well-known to Your Excellency as well as to the Hon'ble Members of this Council that the Improvement Trust has been in existence for the last 7 years. When the Improvement Trust was started a non-technical man in the person of Mr. Bompas was appointed at the head of the Trust. I think it was necessary at the beginning for the proper organization of the administration of the Trust, to put it on a working basis, and to give it a good start, that an able and efficient officer should be placed at the head of it, and Mr. Bompas, it must be said, was very fitly selected as the proper man for the post. He has organized the administration and it is now in working order. At the same time, my Lord, I think, from my own personal knowledge of the affairs of the Trust for some 7 years, that the time has now come when we should have a technical man at the head of the Trust. My Lord, from my very close association with the affairs of the Trust, and with due deference to the views which may be expressed by others who may say that there is not much work for a non-technical man as the head of the Trust, at present there is more work for a technical man as the head of the Trust than for a non-technical man. I believe, my Lord, that at the present time it would be a great advantage to the city if a technical man with expert knowledge is appointed as the head of the Trust. My Lord, for the last 18 months or more, the Trust has not got their Chief Valuer, their Chief Engineer, and practically the work is being carried out by the Chairman of the Trust, who has combined in himself the functions of the Chief Surveyor, Chief Valuer and Chief Engineer. There are no doubt capable assistants under him who have been trained so far as the valuation of the Survey Department is concerned.

My Lord, I might have my quarrels with Mr. Shroshree, but I think it is bare justice to mention that a more capable man had not come to the Trust. He has left the department thoroughly organized and thoroughly equipped with a trained body of men—all of them Indians—who have been trained under him and are doing the work very well and efficiently under the guidance of the present Chairman. Then again, the Chief Engineer has also retired from the Trust and in his place we have got a Deputy Engineer who is doing the work fairly well. My Lord, I think that the time has come, now that the Chairman is going to retire, to consider whether an expert town-planner should not be appointed in his place. I may say at once that I am not asking for an Indian to be appointed for such a man could not be at present found amongst Indians. Far from it, I think an expert town-planner, if appointed, should be an Englishman and I am sure we can get such a man from England. I do not think, however, that such a man could be got in this country. Objections may be raised that such a man may lack administrative capacity. My Lord, I pay most heartily my tribute of respectful admiration to the members of the Indian Civil Service for the many eminent works that they have done in different capacities in India. But, my Lord, I think I may say without any disrespect to the members of that eminently glorious service that administrative efficiency is not the monopoly of that service alone. I remember when the question of the Governorship of this Presidency was mooted, the members of this service claimed that a Governor could not do so well coming from a foreign land unacquainted with the highways and byeways of the province as a senior member of their service who would do much better than a Governor imported from home. But, my Lord, what has really happened ? The Governors who have come out belong to a noble race and they have since adapted themselves to the new situation with great credit to themselves. My Lord, I hope there will be no such feeling with regard to this matter. In the Trust itself we had Mr. Finnimore, an Engineer, as a Chairman for about 8 months and no one will dispute that he performed the administrative part of the work quite efficiently and to the satisfaction of both the Government and the Trust. Let us take the railways. This important department is administered by officers who are not members of the Civil Service. The Education Department also is administered by a member of the Educational Service. In the Police even, although there have been civilian heads in the past, the department is now run by a member of the Police Service. The Commissioner of Police who is at the head of a vast organization is not a member of the Civil Service. So I think that the capacity to administer affairs efficiently is not confined to the members of the Civil Service alone. In England, in Canada, and even in Bombay, they have got an expert town-planner at the head of such affairs and they do not belong to the Civil Service. I am only trying to show by citing these facts that it is not essential for the proper administration of the Trust that a member of the Civil Service should be appointed. I am not against the members of the Civil Service at all; they might have been necessary at the beginning, but the time has now come when an expert should be appointed at the head of the Trust.

There is another advantage in appointing an expert. He may come more into touch with the members of the Board and his views may go to the Local Government direct and in an undiluted form. If such a man is appointed there will be economy also in the establishment. We are now paying Rs. 4,000 a month to the Chairman, Rs. 3,500 to the Chief Valuer and Rs. 2,500 to the Chief Engineer, but if at least two of these posts are amalgamated there will be a considerable saving in the expenditure. In the Port Trust, although we have an honorary Chairman, the whole administration is conducted by a technical officer who is called the Vice-Chairman. So, if there is a nominal official Chairman and an expert town-planner as his deputy I shall be quite content, but I cannot urge it having regard to the existing provisions of the law. I have just mentioned the Port Trust system only to strengthen my argument and to show that a big organization can be run by a man who is not a member of the Civil Service. My Lord, I do not want to say anything further on the subject, but I earnestly hope that this will be considered, and even if a member of the Civil Service is to be appointed in Mr. Bompas's place I pray that he may not be a Land Acquisition Collector of the Trust as is rumoured. Public confidence will at once be shaken in that case and I hope that such an arrangement will not be made."

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot support the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. His proposal is to appoint an expert in town-planning to fill up the Chair of the Calcutta Improvement Trust to be rendered vacant by the retirement of the present Chairman. In my opinion he has taken a very narrow view of the duties which the Chairman is called upon to perform. His duties are multifarious, and above all he must possess administrative capacity of a high order with financial experience in order to guide, direct and instruct his subordinates, so that the work may go on smoothly without any waste of public money. He has also to see that no money is squandered away in useless or unnecessary schemes, and that there is no lack of check or discipline among his subordinate officers. An expert in town-planning may have some of the above qualifications, but he will be, as a rule, very deficient in finance, and in these troublesome times it would be dangerous to appoint a man who is devoid of experience, both in administrative and financial works. If what is stated by Raymond Unwins in his 'Town-planning in Practice' be correct that 'for the roads in a town to satisfy their primary function of highways, they must be so designed as to provide generally for easy access from any point in the town to any other', the present Chairman, though not a town-planner, has, with the advice of his expert subordinates, done remarkably well, and though he has favoured the southern quarter of the city more than the northern, nobody can deny that Bhowanipur has been greatly improved, and the roads that have been opened are real works of public utility. If the Chairman has a difficult problem to solve in regard to any scheme, he can very well engage the services of a town-planner for a time just as the Calcutta Corporation did in the case of the Burrabazar scheme.

From the Annual Report of the Calcutta Improvement Trust for the year 1917-18, it will be seen that there are schemes for thirty proposed public streets awaiting execution, which will probably take about 10 years to complete, so that the present Chairman, by his foresight and prudence, has anticipated the requirements of the town and left very little for a town-planner to do. In fact, his occupation is gone. If my friend says that Burrabazar is not yet improved, I should say that a Sub-Committee is considering the matter and they have the opinion of Mr. Geddes for their guidance. Of course, there are the further reclamation of slums and the building of houses for the poor bhadralog and working classes, which could very well be done by the Chief Engineer of the Trust in consultation with the City Architect of the Calcutta Corporation, and I have no doubt that the housing problem which is inseparably connected with good roads and means of locomotion, would be solved by them without much difficulty and without the help of any other expert. We must remember that the Chairman's responsibility is very great, and that responsibility cannot be satisfactorily discharged by his simply being an expert in town-planning. For these reasons, I oppose this resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjee said :—

"My Lord, I beg to oppose the motion. I will only say a few words giving my reasons why I am doing so. Only a few days ago my hon'ble friend moved a resolution of a similar nature at a meeting of the Improvement Trust; he failed to get a supporter there and in the opinion of the full Board of the Trust a town-planning expert was not thought to be a proper person to be appointed as the head of the Trust. The resolution is very clearly worded, but I am sorry to say that after his vehement speech against the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, the Hon'ble Mover got confused and forgot the main issue. He first said that the Port Trust Vice-Chairman was a technical man. That is not so. He was a member of the Port Trust and he should have known it. Then he said that the post of the Chief Engineer and the Chairman of the Trust may be combined. Generally a town-planner is not an engineer. The work of an engineer in the Trust is of a very difficult nature which cannot be done by a town-planner with his elementary knowledge of engineering. Again, he said that Mr. Shrosbree trained a number of Indians and he expressed his admiration for him for doing so. If the work can be done by the men trained by Mr. Shrosbree then it is obvious that a town-planner is not now necessary. He also said that a town-planner is now more necessary than at the commencement of the work as at the beginning of the work the department had to be organized and, therefore, a civilian was necessary. But I think that if a town-planner was at all necessary it was necessary at the earlier stage. Your Excellency's Government are aware that almost all the important schemes were framed and Government sanction obtained, but the work could not be fully carried on owing to the difficulty of getting materials during war. The work has now progressed far, and in connection with the few remaining important roads the Collector is busily engaged in the acquisition of lands. Therefore, it is evident that it is not at this stage we want a town-planner.

The work of the Chairman of the Trust, as the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha has pointed out is of a multifarious nature. He has not only to preside over meetings, attend sub-committee meetings, land committee meetings in which co-opted members are often taken and where conflicting interests are decided, but he has to see that the money of the Trust is not kept idle and that the work of the Trust does not suffer for want of funds. He has also to keep a vigilant eye on the work of Revenue collection and he has to supervise the outdoor work and inspect in the morning three times a week. All this shows that the Chairman of the Improvement Trust should be a man of great tact and of wide Indian administrative experience. I admit that at the earlier stages of the work a town-planner would have been a most valuable adjunct but at this stage he is not necessary. The Hon'ble Mover has said that he has considerable experience of the Trust as he has been associated with it from the very beginning. But there are others too who can claim the same experience, and in their opinion this is not the proper time to appoint a town-planner at the head of the Trust. I am also constrained to say that experts generally lack business and administrative qualifications. They are more or less faddists but they can do their part of the work very well. All these facts will not justify us to ask Government to appoint a town-planner. Long before the Hon'ble mover sent notice of his resolution there was a rumour that Government was going to get a town-planner from England for the Trust and I believe my hon'ble friend got his inspiration from that rumour for moving this resolution. I venture to think, however, that Government would be making a mistake if at this stage they bring out a town-planner to carry on the onerous duties of the Chairman of the Trust. If an elderly man from England has to do the outdoor inspection work three times a week during hot summer months he will break down completely in a very short time, and the efficient machinery of the Trust will also suffer in consequence. I, therefore, oppose the motion."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha and Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjee, for me to say something on this matter would be slaying the slain. I am opposed to the motion of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. Three gentlemen out of the eleven who play the game of the Trust have had their say. I am only an outsider who only watches the game and for that reason I am entitled to say something in this matter. I quite understand that this appointment of the Chairman of the Trust is not to be reserved for the Civil Service under the statute and that because a member of the Civil Service has filled that office for some 6 or 7 years, therefore, his successor should not be one of that service; not necessarily so. In addition to the reasons given by two preceding speakers I should say that I have felt that in discharging the duties of the office of the Chairman of the Improvement Trust that gentleman has to do certain judicial duties, not that he has to pass judgment under the Civil Procedure Code or the Criminal Procedure Code, but he has to apply a judicial mind and decide matters in which, of course, he can express his opinion this way or that way. If he makes any mistake it becomes a grievous wrong to the party affected. Therefore, I am of opinion, that a person who is trained as a town-planner is not always the best person to fill such a post. A town-planner might have had his use in the early part of the operations of the Trust or before the actual work of the Trust commenced, and as it has been said a town-planner may be requisitioned occasionally as it was done in the matter of the Barabazar scheme. Therefore, there are many things in which a gentleman who is not trained in administrative business and who is not familiar with the lives and conditions of the people would be unsuited for such an office. I do not mean to say that the Civil Service is a perfect service; they also have their limitations; they also have to learn, but they know how to learn and always generally with a view to singleness of purpose and that is for the good of the people. If you get out a town-planner who has been suggested by my friend the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal from Europe, it is just possible that he might be an adventurer, and I would not trust the affairs of this city as regards its improvement in his hands. Then, Sir, a suggestion has been made that whoever may be appointed, let it not be one of the Land Acquisition Collectors. I am sorry that my friend the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal permitted himself to make an observation of this kind. If it is to be understood that the only member of the Civil Service who is a Land Acquisition Collector,—the other being a member of the Subordinate Service,—is not a desirable person for such an office, I think I ought to say that I have heard from all accounts that that gentleman has a universally good reputation for his work and service from the time that he was at Faridpur, latterly when he was in the 24-Parganas and now that he is in the town of Calcutta, he has an eminently judicial mind, is anxious to do justice and is just the man for work of this kind. Something has been said as regards the professional engineering aspect of the Trust. I am sorry that I cannot speak very highly of the result of the engineering work of the Improvement Trust. I am entitled to say that because there has been lately a discussion on the way in which the drainage work of scheme No. 5, which covered part of Bhowanipore, and part of Ballyganj, has been done. There was an admission on the part of the Chairman of the Trust, a very tardy admission, that the work has been defective; they are sewage works, they have been defective in as much as they do not fit in with the scheme of drainage work of the Corporation of Calcutta, and not only are they not in accordance with that scheme, but it would require hand flushing for the purpose of removing the dirt and filth of that part of the town. Well, if this is the work of the engineers of the Improvement Trust, if they did not know their business, they might have asked for assistance from the Calcutta Corporation to help them in the matter of drainage works. And the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas must certainly share in the responsibility for this defective engineering work; after all, there might be some failures in certain proceedings. But, taken as a whole, I think he has shown sufficient energy, sufficient intelligent attention to the work to justify his appointment—at least it will not serve as a bar for any other member of the Civil Service to fill the post as his successor."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord. I must candidly confess that the discussion on this resolution has been most instructive to the Government for two reasons. In the first place it has brought out very clearly that the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution has met with the same fate here as he did when he moved a similar resolution in the Calcutta Improvement Trust, viz., that he has not had a single supporter to his idea. Secondly, it has been brought to the notice of Government that gentlemen who are on the Body of the Trust as well as outside it, like Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur do not consider that an expert or a man with technical knowledge, to use the Rai Bahadur Radha Charan Pal's phraseology, is essential for the post of the President of the Trust. I do not, of course, propose to argue or follow the arguments that have been brought forward by the Rai Bahadur about appointing to the Trust, men from other services than the Indian Civil Service. All that it is my business to say to-day is that in the first place, Government did very carefully consider when it was brought to the notice of the Government that Mr. Bompas was about to leave, as to whether or not the services of a town-planning expert with some administrative experience and knowledge of India could be procured, and I may inform the Council that it is true that this Government, with the assistance of the Secretary of State for India, had been trying to negotiate to get such a man to succeed Mr. Bompas. I regret, however, that the result of these negotiations has been to show that the services of such a person as the Government also had in view, could not at present be secured, but I must say that the views of the Government must, after the discussion in Council to-day, naturally undergo some considerable change, although I am not prepared to agree with Sir R. N. Mookherjee or Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur as to the futility of bringing in a man as Chairman of the Improvement Trust at the present stage, with a knowledge of town-planning. I quite admit that if we are unable to get such an expert with knowledge of India, and Calcutta particularly, and as things exist in the Calcutta Improvement Trust, we should certainly not make a plunge. I, therefore, am unable to accept the resolution on behalf of Government which has been moved by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. As the matter is urgent, and as the Rai Bahadur has been trying to fish and find out who is going to succeed Mr. Bompas as to whether it would be some wretched Land Acquisition Collector an individual on whom the Rai Bahadur seems to be particularly down upon, I am to say Your Excellency has approved the appointment of the Hon'ble Mr. French to take up the appointment when Mr. Bompas goes on leave. I am sorry I am not able to accept the resolution."

Mr. Phelps ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said :—

"My Lord, I am not connected with the Improvement Trust directly, but I am indirectly as a member of the Corporation, who has had a good deal to do with the various schemes. I do not wish to say much or advance more than one argument, but I would like to appeal to my friend the Hon'ble Mover to withdraw his motion because his constant complaint for years with regard to the Improvement Trust has been that it is a one-man show, alluding to Mr. Bompas, I suppose. Well, if he finds an administrator with a judicial mind brings about a one-man show in a committee like that, what will be the result if they get the professional town-planner, an expert, who will thrust his opinions down everybody's throats. I appeal to my hon'ble friend while there is time, to withdraw his motion else his position might be somewhat like that of Sinbad the Sailor. I think I remember the story, when I was a boy, of Sinbad the Sailor who got the old man of the sea on his back and could not get him off."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened to the speech of my friend the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha. His opposition to my motion is this, that large financial questions are involved and, therefore, a professional town-planner is not so necessary as one who is an expert in finance. My reply to that is this, My Lord, that in matters of finance, all questions are first of all considered by the Finance Committee and are generally settled by the Board on the materials that are placed before them, i.e., various schemes are prepared and the total cost estimated on the cost of each scheme. It is the Board that prepares the budget according to the resources at their disposal every year, and I do not think that it can be said with any fairness that none but a member of the Indian Civil Service is capable of controlling the finance. In other places, large financial questions are involved, and I believe it is admitted that in these cases the work has been successfully carried on by men who do not belong to that service. I allude to the Railways, the Port Trust and other places.

Then, my Lord, Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjee has said that in the Corporation I moved the same motion, and I was not supported there. He further said perhaps that is merely his guess, that I got inspiration from some one outside, that Government was taking certain steps to get a town-planning expert, and, therefore, that was just the time to rush this resolution in the Council. My Lord this is not a fact, and I most emphatically say so. Several of my hon'ble friends will remember that some time ago when the Hon'ble Mr. Bompas was going on leave on a previous occasion and Mr. Woodhead was appointed, I suggested that some expert should be appointed. This is a question which I expressly raised in the Board, but as there was not a permanent vacancy, I did not pursue the subject further. Further, we were told that there are meetings of the Lands Committee and of the Objection Committee, and, therefore, a man with a judicial frame of mind ought to preside. My Lord, I am not aware that because a member of the Civil Service has not got the Presidentship of the Committee or Sub-Committee, therefore the Committee will not exercise a judicial control. On the contrary, all the members of the Board are men who are chosen not from any particular service, whether from Provincial or Civil Service, but because they are men with some practical knowledge of the local needs and conditions and they decide according to their judgment. It has been said that at an early stage this was necessary, but at this stage this is not necessary, because lots of inspection work was required and a man coming from England would not be able to stand the climate and strain of inspection and all that. I do not know whether this is applicable to the office establishment which Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjee has got under him. I have yet to learn that there is an institute to temper the metal, as it were, before Europeans are sent out to actual service in this country. On the contrary, the records of Government show that capable men who have come out from England have been able to stand the strain of inspection and outdoor work without any loss of efficiency, and I do not know why it should be thought that if the town-planner is imported, he would not be able to withstand the strain of the work. Then, it is stated, the town-planner would be a faddist. Anything can be said against the town-planner. I am not advocating any particular individual. If Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjee terms that band of excellent men who are called town-planners and who are specially trained in that work in England, faddists, and says that they have no administrative capacity, that will materially change our opinion of English capacity and capability for work.

Then, as regards the opinion of the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, I may say this that he is quite entitled to say that he would much prefer that the affairs of the Trust should be administered by a member of the Civil Service than by any expert trained in that line. My Lord, everyone has his own opinion on this subject, but I am sure that if an opinion is taken of the public, it will be found that members would all much rather prefer an expert with thorough knowledge to have a direct hand in the Trust than to be served through a non-technical man. Grave difficulties have arisen. It is a fact, my Lord, that expert men are not in close touch with the Board. It is said that they can consult expert opinion whenever necessary as the Corporation have done in the matter of Burrabazar, taking the opinion of Professor Geddes. Well, my Lord, the Corporation is not a town-planning body, not a body specially created for the purpose of the improvement of the town. When a scheme was prepared by the Trust, the Corporation consulted Professor Geddes, but here every day, every 24 hours of their existence I may say, they would be working 23 hours on these schemes and, therefore, I think that my resolution is not quite unworthy of the consideration of Government. Government themselves realized the necessity of having an expert at the head of affairs of the Trust and it is a pity that a suitable man could not be found at present. In these circumstances I find it useless to press my motion, but I hope that Government will kindly bear this in mind and when an opportunity offers they will consider this question and appoint an expert to the post. I am sure the official and non-official Europeans will admit that if a suitable expert is found he should be placed at the head of the Trust. It will lead to economy and greater efficiency, and at the same time it would be a great advantage to have an expert man in direct touch with the Board and the public."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Commission be appointed to inquire into the causes of the excessive land values and high rents in Calcutta and, if possible, to suggest remedies in connection with this matter, and to report with the least possible delay.

He said :—

"My Lord, there has been a great outcry in Calcutta for some years past against the excessive value and rapid advance in land values and house rents, and many attempts have been made to find a remedy. The Corporation has not been remiss in trying to find a remedy, but they have not been successful. About a year ago I myself moved for a Committee of inquiry, but confined my attention to house rents only. There had been some attempts before to consider land values and house rents, but my reason for confining my attention and the attention of the Corporation on that occasion was to simplify matters, because it was recognized that for the Corporation to embark on a campaign of consideration of land values, they would get beyond their depth. I therefore confined my attention to house rents only. I cited several instances out of many which had come to my notice where landlords have arbitrarily and at a month's notice raised the rents of their houses from 25, 50, 75 and 100 per cent. and even more, alleging that the property had been reassessed, and that the price of building materials has risen. That the prices of building materials and labour had risen no one can deny, but it remains a matter for consideration to what extent the rise of building materials would justify the doubling of the rent of houses which were erected before the war disturbed current prices.

Regarding the other contention, the Corporation had reassessed the property, I took the trouble to ascertain the truth of this statement in the first five cases which came to my notice and I found that although it was perfectly true that reassessment had taken place no enhancement in either of these cases had occurred. I reminded the Commissioners that the Municipal Act authorizes a reassessment in different wards once in six years and that it had been the practice among unscrupulous landlords—I do not mean landlords in general simply unscrupulous landlords—to take advantage of the fact that a new assessment had taken place and then to squeeze the tenant for more rent knowing full well that until the next reassessment came round, the Corporation were powerless to reassess, even, although the assessor might be quite well aware that the tenant was being charged 25 per cent. or 100 per cent. more than the assessment. In Bombay the Corporation may reassess after 12 months according to their Act, but it is not so in Calcutta, unless there has been some reconstruction. I pointed out that in this way not only was the tenant being unmercifully squeezed but the Corporation were being deprived of their revenue in a shameless manner, and thus the general rate-payers were defrauded. My efforts met with no success. I was reminded by the cynical that I was addressing an assembly of landlords and that even if the Committee of Enquiry was appointed, we could do nothing but make an appeal to Government; but it seemed to me that it was the business of the Corporation to consider these arguments and appeal to Government for powers of reassessment in certain cases and perhaps to establish a Court of Appeal. These were the two points which I wished particularly to draw attention to as suitable for action by the Corporation and within their limits. But the most astonishing objection was, in my opinion, that the matter of rents was entirely and very properly subject to the law of supply and demand. The Commissioners professed their inability to see the difference in principle between the purchase of a pair of boots and the renting of a house. The law of supply and demand became a fetish, a law which might sometimes act cruelly but must nevertheless be grovelled to with helpless adoration. But the same people voted for the control of the 'common necessities of life' such as coal, oil, ghee, rice and cotton piece-goods. These were the common necessities of life, and action was taken to prevent certain traders from profiteering. I ask, my Lord, is not a house, a flat, a dwelling place of some sort, a common necessity of life? My attention, my Lord, was first directed to this subject by complaints received from people whose rents had been raised from something like Rs. 200 to Rs. 300; I mean middle class people, but since it became known that I was going to move this resolution in this Council, I have had numerous touching appeals from poor people.

One of these I received this morning from numerous persons who occupy single rooms which they pay a rent of Rs. 8 per month. It was rumoured that the landlord was going to charge Rs. 12 per month, but last Sunday the landlord's agent came round and gave them formal notice that the rent in future would be Rs. 16. Some of these poor people are actually in receipt of relief from the District Charitable Society.

I am advised that in England the 'Rent Act of 1915', the 'Courts Emergency Powers Act of 1917', and the 'Increase of Rent (Amendment) Act of 1918' are all designed to protect tenants from unscrupulous landlords. In India, the Bombay Government at the request of the Corporation did something also by way of standardizing rents, and even, following the English example, afforded retrospective relief.

My own efforts on this occasion were confined to the matter of abnormally high rents and the epidemic of unreasonableness developed by a few landlords. I am sorry to say that this epidemic has since spread very rapidly and become very virulent. Others have, however, taken a wider view and criticisms have been levelled at Government for keeping the city so long in suspense with the delay in starting the Grand Trunk Canal Scheme and for the retention of splendid building sites even now lying vacant; also at the Calcutta Improvement Trust for its so-called 'grasping policy' and defective method of rehousing the people displaced by its improvements. The Corporation has been blamed for its zeal in making new assessments, and speculators for the spirit of unholy speculation in land and house property. It is even hinted that His Majesty's Mint stands in the way of improvement as regards utilization of building sites and the Calcutta Port Trust is criticized for a misuse of the Strand Bank lands.

All these criticisms point to the urgent necessity for a Commission of Enquiry in order that the work of public bodies may be co-ordinated. The Port Facilities Committees did good work, but its mandate was circumscribed and new circumstances have since arisen. It is not for me to suggest remedies at this stage but acknowledging my defeat in the Corporation it was my intention to pursue the subject by moving amendments to the new Municipal Bill in this Council had it not been withdrawn. As an alternative I feel now constrained to move for a Commission of Enquiry in the interests of the general public. The matter is so serious that it seems to me that independent or separate action by the Improvement Trust, the Corporation and the Government is likely to end in disappointment.

I fully recognize that rents and land values must of necessity be high in a prosperous city. Any mismanagement of either the Port Trust or the Corporation or the Improvement Trust which resulted in an unhealthy and disorganized city would soon bring down land values and house rents with a run, but I submit that if the work of these public bodies were co-ordinated, fuller and more economical use might be made of the land in Calcutta and its environs and do away with some of the congestion and over-lapping of energy and perhaps diminish wild speculation. I have been very moderate in my statements and I have not only not exaggerated but I know that everything that I have said is true. I hope that this moderate request of mine will commend itself to Your Lordship's Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I join with the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps in the prayer that a commission be appointed to inquire into the condition of house rents in Calcutta, and if possible, to suggest remedies in connection with this matter. I find, Sir, that of late there has been a large increase in the value of land and house property and consequently in these days of high prices people feel this very acutely, and if we may judge of the state of affairs, amongst the poorer classes of the Anglo-Indian community, as reflected in the Calcutta newspapers, there is a sincere demand for an inquiry of the sort which the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps has asked for. If it be a fact, and we are assured by the Hon'ble Mover that it is, that in London there have been legislative measures since 1915 to regulate the relations of landlord and tenant in the matter of rent, and if Bombay and Rangoon have taken some steps in that direction, then I think it would be a proper policy to make an inquiry as suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps. True, it goes in the direction of asking for a legislative measure which will meddle with the contractual relations of landlords with their tenants. In this country, before the introduction of British rule, rents used to be regulated by custom, and contract only found a place after the introduction of Western ideas in this land. So that, if you find that things are really very hard and landlords are extortionate you should certainly make an effort to improve the relations now existing between a certain class of landlords and a certain class of tenants. With these words I beg to support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, in the Council to-day there has been a good deal of difference of opinion on the resolutions that have been moved this morning, but I hope and trust that with reference to this resolution there will be a unanimity of opinion on this side of the House. The rise in rents of houses in Calcutta is very acutely felt by all sections of the community. If our European fellow citizens find it a matter of complaint and find difficulties in paying these high rents, how much more must the members of my community—I mean the Indian middle class community—be feeling it. The Europeans can live two or three families in one house, but Indian families have to live separately and therefore they find it more difficult to secure houses in Calcutta, and as a consequence a large number of middle class people have either to give up their vocation or employment or have to pay a very high rent which leave them ~~very~~ little margin from their income for other necessities of life

Babu S. N. Ray.

The situation has indeed become very grave. It may be said that the question is one of supply and demand. So is the question of labour. But the state has interfered in disputes between capital and labour. We have also recently urged on Government to prevent the rise in the price of the necessities of life. If that can be prevented, why not the rise in the rents of houses. Accommodation is as much a necessity as rice and cloth. The resolution will, I trust, receive the support of the non-official members of the Council and I hope will also receive sympathetic consideration at the hands of Your Excellency's Government."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I have much pleasure to support this resolution. The landlords of Calcutta have been maligned in season and out of season and that probably without any rhyme or reason for a long time past. This committee, if appointed, will give an opportunity to the landlords to show that they are not as bad a lot as they are represented to be, and that most of them even with Government loans yielding about 6 per cent., would be content with 5 per cent. dividend and that they seldom get more than 6 per cent.

I do not want to anticipate the conclusions of the proposed committee. But I think the operations of the Calcutta Improvement Trust are largely responsible for displacing a large number of residents from the Indian quarter of the town. These people do not know where to go and they are obliged to remain crammed within the city and pay high rent. With reference to the European quarter of the town I think rent has increased because there has been a large influx of Europeans in the town of late and that there is not proper and suitable accommodation for them all. To this must be added a large number of Japanese who have come to Calcutta within the last 3 or 4 years and have occupied a large number of houses in Loudon Street and Ballyganj at an exorbitant rent. We must also take note of the ever-increasing development of Calcutta as a commercial and industrial centre and that Calcutta proper has not great scope for expansion. Again, people who come from the mufassal to earn a living gradually make Calcutta their permanent place of residence, because there are not such facilities to come from the mufassal to Calcutta, such as cheap trams or railways as they have in Bombay. There is also another fact to be taken into consideration. Calcutta, in spite of its epidemic diseases and its congestion, is a sanitarium and mufassal people do not like to go back to their native home to become the victims of malaria there. In fact those who become accustomed to live in Calcutta are unwilling to remain outside Calcutta.

I should mention another important fact in this connection. It is well known within the last 5 years the prices of building materials have gone up 50 per cent. Who is to pay for this? It is those for whom houses will be built or houses have been built. The occupiers of houses are, therefore, obliged to pay 50 per cent. more rent over the rent of houses in normal times. It is also a well-known fact that the price of land has gone up very high. People have now more money than they had before. Competition for purchasing lands has been very great, and people have been purchasing lands specially from the Improvement Trust at extraordinarily high prices. And these purchasers want proper return for the money they lay out. The result is that eventually the actual occupiers of houses have to pay in the shape of high rent. For these reasons, as much in the interest of the much maligned landlords as in the interest of the tenants, I welcome this resolution."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, in replying to the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps I desire to invite the attention of the Council to certain factors in the housing problem in Calcutta to which he has not, I think, given sufficient prominence and which has to a certain extent been brought out by subsequent speakers. No one will question the great difficulties of the present situation in Calcutta. We all know that rents have risen to an unprecedented height and, though I myself belong to the property-owning class, to the unreasonable demands of some of whom these excessive rents are attributed, I can assure the Hon'ble Mover that I sympathize with him in his concern for the tenants. The causes, however, which have produced the present scarcity of house accommodation and consequently what he describes as an excessive enhancement of rent, are deep-seated and to some extent world-wide, and I am not sure that the commission which he desires can be expected to provide for any immediate remedy for the evil. I do not think the Hon'ble Member in his interesting speech attached sufficient importance to the economic factors which underlie the whole problem. Certain of these factors undoubtedly lie in their very origin, but mainly as I have suggested, they are general and universal in their nature. I need make no more than a passing reference to the remarks the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has made to the enormous rise in the cost of building material and labour. The Hon'ble Mover is well aware that the present price of building material is higher than what it was 3 or 4 years ago; it is even prohibitive, and that even now the landlord who is faced with a big bill for repairs finds it difficult to contemplate it with philosophic resignation. But it is not only material and labour which cost more but we are in the midst of the biggest land boom Calcutta has ever seen and prices are being raised every day which before the war would have seemed impossibly extravagant. I need not point out to this Council that to some class in India and not less in Bengal war has brought unexampled prosperity. The Marwaris who used to prefer more fluid investments have invaded the land market and every week one hears of big transactions in house property. I could cite instances, but I shall refrain from doing so. The future may show that these prices were excessive. Some reaction, therefore, there must be to this extravagant speculation in land, but even if the boom is followed by a depression it is obvious that the new owners of house properties must attempt to obtain some fair interest on their outlay and the rise in rents can be explained by economic factors which I am afraid no commission can control. There are other factors to which I may make some brief reference. In the northern part of Calcutta the operations of the Improvement Trust have to some extent aggravated the housing problem. No sufficient provision has been made as yet for rehousing khaddar who have been dispossessed. The remedy lies in the speedy extension of the operations of the Trust to the suburban areas. I am told that to some extent the Trust have had to wait for the provision of the main system of drainage for certain suburban areas which is a function of the Corporation. However that may be, Government is convinced that the immediate need is for the Trust to develop the insanitary suburban areas and provide accommodation in advance for those whom the street schemes may affect. In the southern part of Calcutta—the European quarter—I may remind the Hon'ble Member that building operations have been checked during the war while the new industrial movement in India is responsible for some growth in the European population. I have referred to this side of the problem because, I think, it has not received sufficient attention from the Hon'ble Member in his speech. I do not think he has established the existence of profiteering, but in cases such as this, it is, I conceive, where profiteering becomes a general and flagrant abuse, that State control in the economic sphere can be most easily justified. Mr. Phelps has cited English legislation as a precedent, but in doing so he has omitted to mention that it was designed to protect the working classes and the lower middle classes. It applies to London only. It is to houses rented at £35 before the war and in Scotland to houses rented at £30. I understand that when the legislation was before the House of Commons Mr. Bonar Law in meeting the opposition to this measure lay special stress on the limited operations of the Act, but as the Hon'ble Member desires also to protect what may be termed the well-to-do class, the Bombay Act has, of course, some value as a precedent. I have not yet received any detailed information as to its operation and I cannot say how far the conditions in Bombay are parallel with those in Calcutta, but I have just had a telegram from the Bombay Government which states that their Rent Restrictions Act has worked well for small premises and has appreciably restricted though not stopped the rise in rent of larger premises. If control has been of value in Bombay I admit that there is a good case for investigation into the conditions in Calcutta with a view to determining whether control is likely to help matters and to remove the evils which we all deplore. In the remarks I have made I have referred to certain factors which lead me to doubt whether a commission, however strong, can offer a solution to the admitted evil on which the Hon'ble Mover has dilated but at the same time Government recognize that a carefully selected Commission may be expected to throw light on the whole economic question. Their investigation will show if profiteering is rife and the Commissioners may be able to suggest remedies which Government can adopt. I may, therefore, without any further delay inform the Council that the Government have decided to accept the Hon'ble Member's resolution.

Mr. Phelps.

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said:—

"I thank the Hon'ble Member in Charge for his sympathetic speech, but I may also emphatically assure him that I have not overlooked the fact that he has brought to my notice. I studied the subject very carefully and I am quite aware of the difficulties he has raised, though I was afraid that the Hon'ble Member was going to say that the difficulties might be explained away. I am very glad he did not do so because I think it is extremely important to co-ordinate the work of the different authorities. The Corporation is not in full accord with the Improvement Trust, who in their turn are not in full accord with the Port Trust and sometimes with Government. But I think a strong committee which will take expert evidence on this subject would be able to formulate some general proposal which would eventually lead to a better state of things. I cannot sit down without uttering a warning. There was a few years ago a big land boom in Australia and I learnt from my hon'ble friend Mr. Lang that it was followed by a most distressing slump. And I beg to warn all those whom it may concern, specially the landlords of Calcutta that there will be a slump and that there is no doubt about it, and it will last a very few years."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No.2.STARRED QUESTIONS.

The following questions which had been starred were put and answered :—

By the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur:—

1.

(a) What is the name of the gentleman who was responsible for the weather reports which were issued on the 24th and 25th of September last in Calcutta from the Bengal Meteorological office? The cyclone in East Bengal.

(b) Is it a fact that on the 24th September, he published the following report:—

“ The depression which is in the north-west angle of the Bay this morning is only slight. It will likely move into South Bengal to-day. The sea is moderate at Saugor Island and Pamban and rough at Colombo ” ?

(c) Is it a fact that the following day, he published the following report:—

“ The storm which passed to the south-east of Calcutta yesterday was of very small extent and only affected places which were close to its centre.

.....The effect of the small storm has disappeared rapidly and the sea is smooth or slight at all stations except Colombo where it is rough ” ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Central Meteorological office at Simla record the following observation at 8 o'clock in the morning of the 24th of September upon the same materials which were available to the Bengal Meteorological office:—

“ The disturbance in the Bay has developed into a storm about 50 miles south of Saugor Island. It will probably enter Bengal to-day ” ?

(e) Since the last cyclone, i.e., of the 24th and 25th September, have the Government of Bengal made inquiries into the conduct of the Bengal Meteorological Reporter, and if they are satisfied with that gentleman's explanation will they be pleased to favour this Council with a brief statement of that explanation?

(f) Is the same gentleman still holding the Meteorological Reporter's office or has he been relieved of it?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) The officer concerned is Mr. D. B. Meek, Meteorologist, Calcutta.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes. None of these reports referred, however, to the cyclonic nature of the storm for the reason given in the communiqué published by Government on the 14th October, 1919, that it was of too small a diameter to influence meteorological conditions at the observatories between which it passed.

(e) No. The Meteorologist, Calcutta, is under the Government of India and not under the Government of Bengal. Moreover, the Government of Bengal have no reason to be dissatisfied with his work or to believe that his conduct can in any manner be associated with the havoc wrought by the cyclone.

(f) Mr. D. B. Meek continues to hold charge of the office of the Meteorologist, Calcutta "

The cyclone in East Bengal.

(a) In connection with the cyclone of the 24th September last will the Government be pleased to state whether danger signals were hoisted at the inland river stations of East Bengal, and, if so, at what hour and in what places?

(b) Have the Government ascertained whether communications could not have been made earlier, and danger signals hoisted earlier, than what was actually done?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) Danger signals were hoisted at the following inland river stations of East Bengal on the 24th September at the times stated:—

Goalundo	19 hrs. 30 min.
Narayanganj	19 hrs. 51 min.
Chandpur	19 hrs. 20 min.
Barisal	20 hrs. 10 min.

(b) Government have ascertained that orders to hoist danger signals were communicated as soon as meteorological conditions indicated that such signals were necessary and justified."

Librarian of the Rajshahi
College.

(a) Are the Government aware that the Librarian of the Rajshahi College, which is a large first grade College teaching up to the B.A. and B.Sc. Honours standard in English, Mathematics, Sanskrit, Philosophy, History, Physics and Chemistry, is an officer of the Lower Subordinate Educational Service on Rs. 20—25?

(b) Is it a fact that the Principal of the Rajshahi College made repeated applications for the appointment of a competent Librarian at a higher rate of pay?

(c) Is it a fact that these were rejected by the Director of Public Instruction on the ground that he considered that no good case had been made out by the Principal?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement of the Library staff of the Presidency, Dacca and Rajshahi Colleges?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The Director of Public Instruction reports that in February, 1918, the Principal recommended the appointment of an additional librarian on Rs. 50, but the proposal could not be entertained mainly owing to financial stringency. The Principal re-opened the question in July last. Mr. Dunn decided that the whole question of the pay of librarians in Government colleges should be reviewed. This has been done, and the Director of Public Instruction will shortly submit proposals to Government with regard to Rajshahi and certain other colleges, which also have only one librarian.

(d) A statement is laid on the table.”

Want of a gymnastic and games teacher in the Rajshahi College.

(b) Are the Government aware that the Principal applied for the creation of the post of a gymnastic and games master, but that the application was rejected by the Director of Public Instruction?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) Yes at all except the Sanskrit College.

(b) The Principal applied for the creation of a post in 1915, but the Director of Public Instruction could not entertain the proposal on account of financial stringency. Arrangements were, however, made by the Principal so that all the college students could take part in some form of physical exercise. The Principal reopened the question in August last, and the proposal is now under the consideration of Government.”

Status of Teacher of Economics in the Rajshahi
College.

(a) Are the Government aware of the fact that Economics has been taught in the Rajshahi College in the B. A. Pass Course for the last 7 or 8 years and that its teacher is a member of the Subordinate Educational Service?

(b) Is it a fact that since the beginning of the current session extension in affiliation in the Pass Economics has been granted to the Hooghly and Chittagong Colleges and that the teachers in this subject in the latter Colleges are members of the Provincial Educational Service?

(c) Is it a fact that the Principal of the Rajshahi College proposed to the Director of Public Instruction that the post of Teacher of Economics in the Rajshahi College might be filled by a member of the Provincial Educational Service as in the smaller Colleges at Hooghly and Krishnagar, but that the Director of Public Instruction disapproved of the Principal's proposal?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the reason for this differential treatment by the Director of Public Instruction, and whether there is any general principle by which he is guided in matters relating to the staff, equipment, contingent grant, etc., of Colleges?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a), (b) and (c) The reply is in the affirmative.

(d) In the case of two of the other colleges referred to, it was considered necessary to obtain a professor, who could also lecture in history.

In the case of Hooghly College, the University Inspectors insisted on a professor with high qualifications being appointed and an M.A. of the 1st class was only obtainable at Provincial Educational Service rates. The Director of Public Instruction cannot adhere to general principles in settling matters relating to the staff, equipment, contingent grant, etc., of Colleges. He must be guided by the special needs of each College and also by financial considerations.”

The cyclone in East Bengal.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving full information as to the extent and nature of the losses caused by the late cyclone in East Bengal, and the steps that have been taken, or are being taken, both official and non-official, for alleviating the distress of the people?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether timely warning of the advent of the cyclone was given to the people in the affected area?

(c) If not, what were the reasons of the failure to give such information and what action, if any, have the Government taken in the matter?

(d) Was there any difference in the information supplied by the Simla and Calcutta Meteorological Observatories?

(e) If so, what was the reason for this difference, and what measures have the Government taken to prevent a repetition of similar mistakes in future?

(a) Are the Government in a position to state why the jute market has suddenly become dull? The jute market.

(b) Is it due to any transport difficulty?

(c) If so, what is the cause of this difficulty and what steps are the Government taking to remedy it?

(d) Are the Government aware of the opinion that has been expressed that the dullness of the market may be due to profiteering?

(e) What action, if any, are the Government taking to prevent profiteering?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Owing to the absence of foreign demand.

(b) Not so far as Government are aware.

(c) The absence of foreign demand is understood to be due mainly to labour difficulties in England and America and in a minor degree to high freight and a high and fluctuating rate of exchange. The foreign market is the key to the situation.

(d) Government are not aware that the opinion has been expressed that the dullness of the market is due to profiteering. Moreover the facts and the eager competition amongst sellers to clear stocks indicate the reverse of profiteering.

(a) Are the Government aware that the price of cloth is still very high? Price of cloth.

(b) Have the Government made any inquiries to ascertain whether there is any chance of the high prices going down at an early date, or what measures should be adopted for controlling the market?

(c) Have the Government considered the desirability of arranging for the direct supply to each district of certain quantities of cloth for the benefit of the poorer classes of the people?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) The price of cloth, though still high, has shown no very marked variation since the beginning of the current year.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the press communiqué issued by the Government of India on the 28th October, 1919, a copy of which is laid on the table. The trend of prices is being carefully watched, but further action is not at present contemplated.

(c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to question No. XIII (b) asked by him at the Council meeting of the 3rd September last. The cloth referred to in that answer was not needed for the purpose then contemplated, as there was no marked rise of price; and the greater part of it was used for the relief of those who suffered from the cyclone in Eastern Bengal. Arrangements have been made for the free distribution of a limited quantity of cloth to the poor in every district and also in Calcutta at the time of the Peace celebrations.”

Press Communiqué referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. PAYNE in his reply to clause (b) of Question No. IX.

Since the provisions of the Cotton Cloth Act were formally put into operation in February last, there have been no violent fluctuations in the price of cloth, the trend of which over the whole period has been in a downward direction. During the last few weeks prices have risen in Bombay, mainly as a result of increased demand due to the favourable monsoon conditions, but indications point to an approach to a level which may be regarded as normal in post-war conditions. In these circumstances and in view of the fact that as stated in a reply to a question asked by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi in the Imperial Legislative Council on September 25th, the Governments of the United Provinces and Bihar and Orissa, in which the shortage of cloth was originally most acute, have still large stocks of standard cloth on hand and that arrangements have been made by the Controller of Cotton Cloth to ensure a supply of standard cloth to the Punjab and Assam where there is still a demand for it, the Government of India have decided that Cotton Cloth Control should be placed in abeyance for the present. The Cotton Cloth Act will, however, remain in force and its provisions will again be put into operation, should speculation in cloth or any other cause force prices up to such a point as to render this desirable. Mr. F. Noyce, I.C.S., Controller of Cotton Cloth, has joined the Indian Sugar Committee as Vice-President, but will remain in charge of the work connected with cloth control until it is finally wound up at the end of November. A full report on the operations will be published shortly.

Prevention of

also been carefully surveyed. Samples of water from various points along the river, and samples of effluents entering the river are being systematically examined. Up to the present 843 samples of water have been examined bacteriologically and 596 chemically and 137 samples of effluents derived from septic tanks and drains have also been analysed. Treatment of Bengal as a surplus Province in the matter
of rice

(a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. 18(b) of the 12th August, 1919, stating that no definite date can be assigned to the decision of the Government of India to treat Bengal as a “surplus province,” and also with reference to the reply to my unstarred question No. 29 (c) of the 3rd September, 1919, are the Government aware that in reply to a question put by the Hon'ble Maharaja of Kassimbazar on the 10th September, 1919, in the Indian Legislative Council, the Government of India stated that the said decision was arrived at “as a result of a conference held at Delhi in October, 1918, at which a representative of the Government of Bengal was present”?

(b) Will the Government also be pleased to refer to the reply given by them to my unstarred question No. 29 of the 3rd September, 1919, particularly the statement that “the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, attended (the conferences held at Nagpur and Delhi in August and October, 1918, respectively) with the permission of the Government of Bengal, but not as their representative,” as also to the reply given by the Government of India to the said question of the Hon'ble Maharaja of Kassimbazar, particularly the statement that a representative of the Government of Bengal was present at the conference, and that the decision to treat Bengal as a “surplus province” was arrived at “as a result of the estimate of surplus stocks of rice available in Bengal which was supplied by the Bengal representative at the conference” held at Delhi?

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the proceedings of the said conferences held at Nagpur and Delhi, which were laid on the table of the Indian Legislative Council in reply to another question by the Maharaja of Kassimbazar on the 10th September last, particularly the two opening addresses delivered by Sir Claude Hill who presided at these conferences, in which he described and treated the provincial members present as representatives of the different Provincial Governments?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to explain the apparent contradiction involved in the statements made by the Government of India and the Government of Bengal, respectively, in regard to the capacity in which the then Director of Civil Supplies (Mr. Beadel) attended the said conferences?

(e) Is it not a fact that action was taken at the Delhi conference upon the statement made by Mr. Beadel, then Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, that Bengal's exportable surplus, during the period November, 1918, to April, 1919, was 240,000 tons of rice?

(f) Is it not also a fact that at the Nagpur conference (which preceded the Delhi conference) Mr. Beadel stated "that in Bengal the prospects are fairly good and the total exportable surplus of Bengal rice may be estimated to be 300,000 tons, of which 60,000 were in Calcutta and the rest chiefly in Birbhum, Midnapore and Burdwan"?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether these statements were made by Mr. Beadel on his personal responsibility?

(h) Will the Government be pleased to state on what data these calculations were based?

(i) When were these statements made by Mr. Beadel first brought to the notice of Government, and what steps have Government made since then to ascertain the correctness or otherwise of the same, and with what result?

(j) How far are these statements reliable in view of the elements of inaccuracy in agricultural statistics and incompleteness of certain trade returns, admitted by Government in reply to my unstarred question No. 26 of the 3rd September, 1919?

(k) Has the attention of Government been drawn to that part of the said proceedings of the conferences in which the standard of individual requirements in food-grains was fixed at one-fifth ton per head per year?

(l) Is it a fact that Mr. Beadel (Bengal) was a member of the sub-committee which was appointed to determine the said standard?

(m) With reference to the statement made by Government in reply to my unstarred question No. 17 of the 12th August, 1919, that "there is ground for believing that this (the standard of one-fifth ton per head per annum) is an overestimate," will the Government be pleased to indicate the considerations on which they differ from the said conferences in entertaining this belief?

(n) Is it a fact that while the Government of Bengal accept a lower standard for calculation, the other provinces that have been allowed to import rice from Bengal, under the system of control, have based the calculations of their requirements on the standard of one-fifth ton?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Yes; but the statement in the reply made on behalf of this Government was as follows:—

'The Government of Bengal are not in a position to answer the question on behalf of the Government of India or the Food-stuffs Commissioner, but they understand that no definite date can be assigned to such a decision.'

(b) Government have referred to the papers in question.

(c) The attention of Government has been drawn to the proceedings of the conferences and to the reply referred to.

(d) Such words as 'representatives of the different Provincial Governments' can be used in different senses. They were used by the Government of Bengal in the sense that the Director of Civil Supplies was neither requested nor authorised to represent the views of this Government.

(e) The question is not clear. The proceedings do not appear to contain any reference to any action which can be definitely assigned to such a statement.

(f) Yes.

(g) Any statements made by Mr. Beadel were made on his personal responsibility.

(h) The estimate given at Nagpur was based on information from different Indian merchants; that given at Delhi was based on similar information, information supplied by District Officers and information gathered in the chief rice-producing centres of Bengal. The estimates were estimates of the amounts which at the time of their preparation the trade would be likely to export from Bengal.

(i) In October 1918. An inquiry was started as to the accuracy of these figures, but was dropped as unnecessary on receipt of orders to make detailed inquiries into the larger question of the amount of food-stocks in the Province. The orders arose out of the first resolution of the Delhi conference.

(j) The question does not seem to arise as these agricultural statistics or returns were not used in the compilation of the estimates.

(k), (l), (m) and (n) The attention of Government has been drawn to that part of the proceedings of the Delhi conference in which the standard of one-fifth ton per head per year was taken, not fixed, as a provisional basis. Mr. Beadel was a member of the sub-committee by which, inter alia, the said standard was adopted. Government have no official information on the subject, but so far as they are aware the standard provisionally adopted has been generally abandoned. In this connection the Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to question No. 22 put by him in Council on the 3rd September, 1919."

(a) Is it a fact that about the first or second week of July last, a man was found inside the out-door ward of the Mayo Hospital who desired admission to the hospital, and that the Doctor informed him that he could not be admitted as no bed was available?

Alleged dereliction of duty on the part of the Doctor in charge of the Mayo Hospital.

(b) Is it also a fact that though the man could not move and was lying on the floor, the Doctor in charge asked the man to go out of the hospital?

(c) Is it also a fact that he was then carried bodily and placed on the footpath in front of the Mayo Hospital?

(d) Is it a fact that the deceased lay there till the next morning when a passer-by 'phoned for an ambulance and that he was removed to the Campbell Hospital, where he died?

(e) Whose duty was it to arrange for the removal of the deceased to the Campbell Hospital, or any other hospital, when it was found that there was no accommodation in the Mayo Hospital?

(f) Are the Government aware of the opinion that has been expressed that it was a dereliction of duty on the part of the Doctor in charge of the Mayo Hospital in having the deceased, who could not move and was lying on the floor, removed bodily to the footpath?

(g) Has the conduct of the Doctor the approval of Government? If not, what steps are the Government taking in the matter?

(h) Are the Government considering the desirability of issuing instructions to all Doctors in charge of hospitals, like that of the Mayo Hospital, that when there is no bed vacant in the hospital, proper steps be taken for sending such patients as are incapable of moving or are very unwell, to the Campbell Hospital or any other hospital?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

(a) On the night of the 25th June, 1919, a man applied for admission to the Mayo Hospital, and admission was refused by Dr. C. H. Banerjee, the House Surgeon on duty.

(b) There is no evidence to show that the man could not move. The House Surgeon states that he examined him and did not consider that he required medical treatment. The Surgeon General and the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, made a special inquiry into the matter and are of opinion that the House Surgeon should have admitted the man into the hospital.

(c) The man was helped out of the hospital by two ward coolies and placed on the footpath.

(d) The man lay on the footpath all night and was found in the morning with a wound on his forehead. He was then removed in an ambulance to the Campbell Hospital, where he died.

(e) The reason assigned by the House Surgeon for the non-admission of the deceased was not so much the want of accommodation as that he considered that the man did not require medical treatment. As already stated, the officers who conducted the inquiry do not agree with the conclusion of the House Surgeon in this respect.

(f) and (g) The Surgeon-General and the Commissioner of Police consider that the House Surgeon was guilty of dereliction of duty in not admitting the deceased to the hospital. The House Surgeon is not a Government servant, but Government have reported the matter to the Governors of the Mayo Hospital, under whom he is serving.

(h) The rules of the Mayo Hospital provide that all urgent and emergent cases (with the exception of certain specified infectious diseases) should be admitted. This is a general rule in all hospitals, but the Surgeon-General is issuing a circular drawing special attention to this rule and emphasising that such cases must be admitted and accommodated somehow, whether there is a vacant bed or not."

(b) Are the Government aware that female passengers coming from the Ashuganj branch, and particularly those who travel by the "Surma Mail Trains," have to spend several hours at night at Akhaura?

(c) Are the Government aware that the inconvenience and discomfort to female passengers are intensified during the rains?

(d) What steps (if any) are the Government taking to remove these grievances?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) It has been ascertained from the Assam-Bengal Railway administration that there is a good and large waiting hall for Third Class passengers, but that no separate waiting-room has been set apart for the use of females travelling as Inter and Third Class passengers.

(b) Yes. Good connections have, however, been arranged for the slow trains.

(c) No. A good general Third Class waiting-hall is provided at Akhaura.

(ii) the extent and nature of the loss caused to different kinds of property by the said cyclone, as accurately as the information available to Government permits?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Meteorological offices at Simla and elsewhere received a premonition that a cyclone would be coming or was likely to come, on or about the 24th September last?

(c) If so, did the Government take any immediate and adequate step for warning the people about the approaching danger?

(d) If so, will the Government be pleased to describe the precautionary measures adopted for the protection of life and property?

(e) If no precautionary measures were adopted, who are the persons responsible for this default?

(f) What is the approximate annual expenditure incurred by the Government for the maintenance of the Meteorological Department?

(i) Are the Government considering the advisability of instituting a satisfactory system of storm warnings along the whole length of the country likely to be affected?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(b) to (e) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to starred question No. 1

(f) and (g) The expenditure on the Meteorological Department is wholly borne by the Government of India. The approximate annual expenditure on the Observatory in Calcutta, as shown in the budget of the Government of India, is half a lakh of rupees. The revised expenditure for 1918-19 was Rs 51,390

(h) Government are aware of comments in the press on the subject.

(i) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the communiqué of the 14th October, of which a copy is placed on the library table, which shows that such a system exists and why warnings of the intensity at the centre of the cyclone could not be given. (c) In what respects are these schools an improvement over the ordinary schools?

(d) Is it in the contemplation of the Government to establish more schools of this type? If so, how many and where?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The Panchayati Union scheme in its present form, aims at providing a lower primary school in each Union which has not an upper primary school. Each school costs the Department Rs. 1,000 for buildings and equipment. The sites of the schools are generally secured as free gifts. The maintenance charges of each Board lower primary school for boys are Rs. 10

Monitor	...	3	bears a portion of the cost of repairs to the schools.

The funds required for both capital and recurring expenditure are placed by Government at the disposal of the District Boards and the schools are under the direct management of these Boards. The teachers of these schools are allowed to take the fee-receipts.

(b) Up to the present 2,712 Board lower primary schools for boys and girls have been opened in the various districts. A statement is laid upon the table showing the distribution of schools for boys and girls separately district by district.

(c) The Board lower primary schools are superior to ordinary primary schools in that they are distributed on a definite geographical basis, and are not opened haphazard like privately managed schools. The Board schools are better housed, better equipped, and better staffed, the teachers being selected from Guru Training passed men. The quality of discipline and organisation which prevails in these schools is also superior.

(d) The Education Department intends to complete the Board school scheme by opening about 2,300 more schools in Unions which have no school of the type at present, and for this purpose Rs. 1,50,000, is being devoted annually, since last year, from the 5½ lakhs grant.”

the hospital at Comilla.

(a) Are the Government aware that the hospital at Comilla is an ill-equipped institution and, in fact, one of the worst mufassal hospitals in the province?

(b) Are the Government aware that Comilla was formerly considered almost as a sanitarium, but that it no longer enjoys that reputation?

(c) Are the Government considering the advisability of improving the condition of the Comilla Hospital, and of making a suitable provision in next year's budget for the purpose?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

(a) Government are aware that the Comilla hospital requires improvement.

(b) The mortality statistics do not bear out the suggestion that Comilla is becoming increasingly unhealthy.

(c) The hospital is the property of, and is managed by, the Comilla municipality who are said to be handicapped by want of funds. It is primarily the duty of the Municipal Commissioners to move in the matter of effecting an improvement, though in similar cases elsewhere private generosity has not infrequently been forthcoming. If any well-devised scheme is submitted to Government, it will be duly considered.

(a) Is it a fact that a Mussalman very recently sold his son, aged about three years, for Rs. 3 in the bazar of Nagarpur in the district of Mymensingh? Looting of rice, etc

(b) Is it a fact that he did so because he was unable to maintain himself and his son?

(c) Is it a fact that—

(i) on the 29th August last, a rice boat was looted by about 20 or 25 men in the river Bichanda, near Jhalakati, in the district of Bakarganj;

(ii) some of the looters were arrested, and

(iii) they pleaded that they were driven to this crime by starvation?

(d) Has there been any trial of the people arrested? If so, with what result?

(e) Is it also a fact that—

(i) there was a loot of rice and cloth in the hat of village Begari, within the jurisdiction of police-station Dumjo, in the district of Dacca, and

(ii) on the assemblage of a hundred Hindu and Muhammadan looters, the shopkeepers advanced to offer resistance and the looters threw nitric acid upon the shopkeepers?

(f) Is it a fact that some people have been arrested by the police in connection with this occurrence?

(g) Have they been put on trial? If so, with what result?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) The facts of the case are as follows:—

The boy in question is a sickly child, aged about 3 years. His mother is a professional beggar, homeless and deaf, and her present husband is also a professional beggar. One Saiyid Ali of the village of Shunshi took a fancy to the boy and adopted him as his son with the consent of the father and mother. Saiyid Ali gave a new piece of cloth to the mother and Rs. 3 to her husband; but they deny having sold the child.

(b) No.

(c) and (d) A rice boat was looted by about 16 persons in the river Bashanda (not Bichanda) near Jhalakati at 9 A.M. on the 29th of August last. Three persons were arrested immediately after the occurrence. Two of them made confessions before the Sadar Subdivisional Officer stating that they were driven to theft by hunger. A charge sheet was submitted by the police against 16 persons of whom 10 were tried and the rest absconded. Of the 10 accused who were tried, six pleaded guilty before the trying Magistrate, five of whom stated that they had committed the crime on account of hunger. Eight of the men were convicted under sections 143 and 380, Indian Penal Code, on the 16th October last. Seven of the accused were sentenced to two months' rigorous imprisonment and one to 14 days' rigorous imprisonment on each of the counts, the sentences being directed to run concurrently. Two of the accused were acquitted as the case against them was not proved.

(e) to (g) There is no police-station by the name of Dumjo in the district of Dacca, and no such case of looting was reported from any village called Begari or any other village in the district."

(b) Have those recommendations been given effect to?

(c) What action, if any, has since been taken by the Government in that behalf?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) to (c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to question No. VIII (starred) at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd July, 1919. Copies of the press communiqué of the 28th October, 1918 and Mr. N. N. Pillai's report referred to therein have been supplied to the Hon'ble Member.

The views already held by Government that the conditions in Bengal are not generally favourable to any marked extension of cotton cultivation are confirmed by the opinion expressed in the report of the Indian Cotton Committee, 1919, namely, that exotic varieties of cotton are unsuited to the climatic and other conditions of the province, and that there seems no prospect of any appreciable extension of the area under the indigenous varieties. The recommendations of that Committee are now under examination."

(b) What steps, if any, have the Government taken or are taking to revive the charka and introduce it on a large scale in the country?

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement made by the Hon'ble the Revenue Member in charge in connection with the resolution regarding the organisation of the cloth weaving industry moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd July, 1918, and to the answer given to question No VI (starred) asked by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd July, 1919.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the annual report of the Weaving Expert, Bengal, for the year 1918-19, a copy of which is placed on the library table.

(ii) for improving the organization for the supply of manure, seed and implements;

(iii) for extending the supply of new varieties of sugarcane; and

(iv) for encouraging the manufacture of yarn?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(i) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to the starred question No. IX put by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur at the Council meeting of the 3rd July, 1919.

(ii) In accordance with the recommendation of the Association, orders have been issued for the grant of loans under the Agriculturists' Loans Act for the purchase of seeds and improved agricultural implements; similar orders had previously issued regarding the purchase of manure. Seed stores have also been established at district headquarters, both in Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal. The policy of Government as to the establishment of seed stores for areas smaller than a district is explained in paragraph 8 of Government Resolution No. 631 T.—R., dated the 7th June, 1919, which was published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 11th idem.

(iii) In conformity with the suggestion made by the Association a programme has been drawn up, for providing every district in Bengal with a farm; two or three such farms will be established every year until the whole province is covered. Grand Trunk Canal Project.

(a) Have the Government come to any decision about the Grand Trunk Canal Project?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to say what that decision is?

(c) Do the Government contemplate carrying out the project during the next financial year?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to give a short history of the project?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to unstarred question No. 7 given at the meeting of this Council on the 19th December, 1918.

(b) and (c) The project as finally revised was forwarded for the acceptance of the Government of India in August last, and it was requested that the early sanction of the Secretary of State might be obtained to the execution of the project.

(d) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the historical summary which forms the introduction to Mr. Lees' report of 1913 on the Grand Trunk Canal Project, a copy of which has been placed on the library table. Mr. Lees' project was submitted to the Government of India for sanction in June 1914; but it was returned to the Government of Bengal for reconsideration in the light of the note dated the 31st July, 1914, recorded by the Inspector-General of Irrigation. The preparation of revised estimates and necessary plans was then entrusted to Mr. C. Addams-Williams, C.I.E., and the final scheme, as drawn up by Mr. Addams-Williams, has now been submitted to the Government of India for the sanction of the Secretary of State.”

Advancement of technical education in Bengal.

(a) What are the different schemes now under the consideration of the Government for the purpose of advancing technical education in Bengal?

(b) Have any of them been fully developed?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) (1) The establishment of a technological institute in Calcutta.

(2) The training of Foreman Mechanics at Kanchrapara.

(3) The expansion of the Government Weaving Institute, Serampore.

(4) Improved accommodation for Sibpur College.

(5) The improvement of the Dacca School of Engineering.

(6) The improvement of the evening classes at the coal fields.

(b) Schemes Nos. 2 and 5 may be said to be fully developed, although funds have not yet been actually allotted for the execution of No. 2.

No. 4 is well advanced, while No. 3 is linked up with No. 1, which though fully developed has not yet been finally approved.”

Industrial development of the country.

Will the Government be pleased to enumerate all the steps that have been actually taken in the matter of industrial development of the country since the publication of the report of the Industrial Commission?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“ The question is very general in form, but presumably it has reference to the steps taken by the Government of Bengal and not to the various industrial developments due to private enterprise.

The report of the Indian Industrial Commission was received towards the end of 1918, but it necessarily took some time to consider the proposals, and it was not until September last that the sanction of the Secretary of State was received to the organisation of a Department of Industries, which will now be undertaken.

The main questions to which the activities of the Government of Bengal have been directed in the matter of the development of industries since the publication of the report are as follows:—

- (1) The continuation of the development of such industries as assisted in the supply of war materials.
- (2) The encouragement and improvement of hand-loom weaving, for which an officer was placed on special duty and in which considerable progress has been made.
- (3) The investigation of the possibilities of obtaining good tanning material from the Sunderban forests. This inquiry, which is being conducted by Mr. Pilgrim, the tannin expert, is now nearly completed and promises very satisfactory results.
- (4) Investigations made at the Calcutta research tannery, especially as regards—
 - (a) the improvement of local tan-stuffs, and
 - (b) the manufacture of sole leather from buffalo hides
- (5) The leasing of forests for industrial purposes, such as the extraction of wood pulp, etc.
- (6) The reorganisation of the sericultural department with the object of improving the silk industry.
- (7) The development of co-operative societies with industrial objects.

In addition to the above, technical advice has been given to the promoters of industrial concerns, and in some cases facilities have been afforded under the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition of land for industrial companies whose operations were of public utility.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

19.

Will the Government be pleased to furnish the following particulars in connection with the scheme for a research tannery:—

- (i) Is the scheme being worked out?
- (ii) What progress has it made?
- (iii) What is the amount of the money actually expended up to now upon the scheme?
- (iv) What tangible result has so far been achieved?

Progress of the scheme for a research tannery.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(i) and (ii) Land has been acquired and buildings consisting of (1) a laboratory for tanning chemical research, and (2) an experimental tannery for both large and small scale experiments, have been constructed. The services of an experienced Indian expert in tanning, trained in England and on the Continent, have been obtained as superintendent of the tannery. An Indian who has specialised in the study of tannins in England for several years has been appointed as research chemist. Besides these, a tannery foreman and an assistant chemist have been appointed. Arrangements are being made for the training of apprentices.

(iii) The following expenditure has actually been incurred up to date:—

			Rs.
Land	23,483
Buildings	1,09,431*
Machinery and apparatus (ordered)	10,000†
Tools and Plant	1,163†
Running charges	598

Contingencies	412
Hides	892
Total			1,51,143

* Amount of allotment Actual expenditure not known † Approximately

(iv) The following work has been undertaken by the tannery up to date:—

- (a) The investigation of the tanning properties of Goran bark, one of the principal tan-stuffs used in Calcutta.
- (b) Experiments (1) on the production of good sole-leather by the use of local tan-stuffs and (2) on the manufacture of glazed kid leather from goat-skins, have been undertaken.
- (c) Technical advice has been given to a few local firms.

If any Hon'ble Member cares to visit the tannery and will communicate with the Director of Industries, the latter will be pleased to give facilities for seeing it.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to Government Resolution No. 7274, dated the 2nd September 1919, on the report on the operations of the Department of Agriculture, Bengal, for 1918-19, which was published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 3rd September, 1919.”

(a) Will the Government be pleased to enumerate all the projects which have been recommended by the Sanitary Board for the sanitary improvement of the province? Sanitary improvement the province.

(b) Which of them, if any, have received the administrative approval of the Government?

(c) Which of them, if any, have been executed, and at what cost?

(d) Which of them do the Government contemplate carrying out during the current financial year, and at what approximate cost?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“ The information is being collected and a reply will be given at a later meeting of the Council.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

22.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to mention—

(i) the anti-malarial works which have been taken up for execution since the commencement of the current financial year. Anti malarial works

(ii) the districts and localities to which they relate.

(iii) the improvement which they are intended to effect.

(iv) the progress which each of them has made?

(b) Has any anti-malarial drainage project been completely carried out up to now?

(c) If so, in what district or districts and at what cost?

(d) What appreciable improvement have they effected in the sanitary condition of the localities concerned?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) (i) The following anti-malarial schemes have been taken up for execution during the current year—

(1) Baraghachi.

(2) Manikhali.

(3) Jabuna.

(4) Arul Beel.

(5) Nawai-Sunthi.

(ii) Nos. (1), (2) and (5) relate to the 24-Parganas district and Nos. (3) and (4) to the Jessore district

(iii) (a) Baraghachi.—This is a deep basin where rain water collects and where no cultivation is now possible. Here the water will be drained away and regulated according to the needs of the crop.

(b) Manikhali.—A new khal is to be constructed in place of the old khal. The idea is to bring a large area of land into cultivation and also to admit the silt-laden water of Hooghly into the khal and pass it through fields and low-lying ditches.

(c) Jabuna.—The idea is to resuscitate the dead river in certain portions. By tapping the water of certain beels, the beels will be brought under cultivation and the excess water will be drained away through the dead river. The river, which is at present the breeding place of millions of mosquitoes, will thus be improved and the number of mosquitoes diminished to a great extent.

(d) Arul Beel.—A large area of land will be brought under cultivation and the surplus water will be drained away via the Mukteswari and Harihar rivers. Here also the chief aim is regulation of water.

(e) Narai-Sunthi.—With this scheme is combined the Burthi Beel project. The object is the same: the dying or dead rivers will be resuscitated and a large beel area will come under cultivation.

(iv) Construction works are being carried out for all the five schemes.

(b) and (c) Yes. Four anti-malarial flood flush schemes have so far been completely carried out, viz :—

(1) In the Meenglas tea estate in the district of Jalpaiguri, at a cost of Rs. 34,000.

(2) In the Singaran-Toposi collieries in the district of Burdwan, at a cost of Rs. 13,200.

(3) Within the Jangipur municipality in the district of Murshidabad, at a cost of Rs. 27,500.

(4) At Banka Valley in the district of Burdwan, at a cost of Rs. 73,217.

(d) There is definite evidence of the relative reduction of anopheles mosquitoes both at Meenglas and at Singaran. As regards morbidity and mortality the figures of last year have, however, been vitiated by unprecedented sickness due to influenza.

As regards the Banka Valley Scheme the evidence of the Superintending Engineer is that the scheme has resulted in the saving of crops which would otherwise have been lost: and the scheme from this point of view must have had a direct effect on the health of the population in the sphere of its operations.

The residents at Jangipur agree that an appreciable improvement has been effected in that portion of the town where the scheme is complete."

the Boy Scout movement.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to describe the present position of the Boy Scout movement in Bengal?

(b) Is it in the contemplation of the Government to place it on a more satisfactory footing during the current or next financial year?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) and (b) The organization called the Boy Scouts of Bengal is at present independent of the Baden Powell Association which is under a Provincial Commissioner with an Advisory Council, the whole Baden Powell Association in India being under a Chief Commissioner and Council. Larger provincial independence is desirable with the admission of the Boy Scouts of Bengal to the Baden Powell Association, and this is now under consideration. Government also proposes to recommend that a whole-time officer with a real enthusiasm for the Boy Scouts ideal should be recruited to work under the Provincial Association in training Scout masters for the local troops which already exist and those which, it is believed, will before long be formed in Bengal."

24.

(a) Have the Government considered the desirability of introducing compulsory drill in schools and colleges? Introduction of compulsory drill in schools and colleges.

(b) Are the Government contemplating taking immediate action in this matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) and (b) Government are awaiting the report of the Committee appointed by the Calcutta University to discuss the question regarding the introduction of drill into schools and colleges. Under existing rules, however, drill is compulsory in all Government high schools."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

25.

(a) What steps, if any, have been taken for the establishment of a Technological Institution in Calcutta, about which an assurance was given some time ago? Establishment of a Technological Institution in Calcutta.

(b) Is it in the contemplation of the Government to make the institution an accomplished fact during the current financial year?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) A conference was held yesterday at Government House to consider Government's proposals for establishing a technical school in Calcutta which might ultimately expand into a technological institute. The heads of the chief engineering firms and other leading citizens of Calcutta were present.

(b) Government have every intention of carrying the scheme through as speedily as possible, but this cannot be done within the current financial year."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

26.

(a) Are the Government considering the desirability of increasing the initial pay of assistant surgeons so as to bring it on a par with that of the members of the Provincial Executive Service? Initial pay of Assistant Surgeons.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to explain the reason for the great difference between the initial pay of the two services?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) No.

(b) The rates of pay of the Provincial Executive Service have been fixed with due regard to the status of the officers and the nature of the duties which they are required to perform. Government do not consider that any just comparison can be drawn between the case of civil assistant surgeons and the members of that service.”

(b) What reduction of expenditure, if any, was made after the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council held at Dacca on August 1917?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) A statement of the annual expenditure on account of the move to Darjeeling for the years 1914-1918, is laid on the table. The figures for 1919 are not yet available.

(b) The expenditure, which in 1916 amounted to Rs. 1,02,767, was reduced in 1917 to Rs. 84,084 and in 1918 to Rs. 74,563.”

Statement referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. PAYNE to question No. 27 (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA at the Council Meeting of the 19th November, 1919, showing the expenditure involved in the exodus to Darjeeling during the last five years.

for the last three years commencing on the 1st of April, 1916, and ending on the 1st of April, 1919?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“A tabular statement is laid on the table.”

Statement referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. GOODE to question No. 28 (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble MAULVI A. K. (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what rules authorize the Director of Public Instruction to create posts carrying different values from Rs. 50 to Rs. 250 outside the Subordinate Educational Service cadre sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India? Officers of the Subordinate Educational Service grades and outside grades.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state from what funds the salary of the officers of the outside grade service are drawn?

(c) For what purposes was the outside grades list opened, and when?

(d) Is it a fact that a portion of the costs for maintaining the outside grade officers is met by the sum left undistributed due to the non filling up of vacancies in the Subordinate Educational Service grades?

(e) Is it a fact that a considerable number of posts from Rs. 35 to Rs. 50 are being created every year against the vacancies in the higher grades of the Subordinate Educational Service?

(f) Are the Government aware that the officers in the outside grades list generally get higher initial pay than that received by equally qualified and equally placed officers in the Subordinate Educational Service grades? If so, what steps are being taken for safeguarding the interests and promotions of the latter?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it has been decided that the outside grade officers should come into the grades vacancies of the Subordinate Educational Service or in created posts? If so, what has been done to safeguard the interests of those already in the lowest grades and those who have been in service for a considerable number of years?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The Director of Public Instruction is not competent to create posts of this kind

(b) From the Provincial Revenues.

(c) The list of officers outside the graded services was prepared to enable this office to deal with questions relating to these officers in a convenient manner. The list was first published in August, 1902.

(d) No

(e) No

(f) The initial pay of an officer is regulated by his qualifications and no distinction is made between posts inside and outside the grades.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many cases of special promotions have been sanctioned for officers in which there is actual teaching work involved and how many to the inspecting officers of the Subordinate Educational Service grades, in the last three years?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any rule which fixes a time-limit for promotion of an officer from one grade to another in the Subordinate Educational Service?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether new posts have been sanctioned by the Government in the grades of the Subordinate Educational Service to provide for special promotions?

(e) Is it a fact that some of the grade vacancies are being absorbed by the recipients of special promotions?

(f) Is it a fact that a large number of vacancies in the Subordinate Educational Service grades, sanctioned by the Secretary of State, are being filled up with new postings, such as lecturers, demonstrators, and others?

(g) Is it a fact that a large number of vacancies in the grades of the Subordinate Educational Service, sanctioned by the Secretary of State, are being utilized by bringing in outside grade officers into the grades?

(h) Are the Government aware that a feeling of discontent and insecurity is prevalent amongst the officers of the Subordinate Educational Service due to the postings of outsiders and outside grade officers and to the scores of recipients of special promotions in the grade vacancies, thus blocking their future prospects and promotions?

(i) Will the Government be pleased to state under what rules the Director of Public Instruction can put in outsiders in the vacancies of the grades, thereby blocking the promotion of officers already in the grades?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

"(a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(b) There has been no case of special promotion to an inspecting officer in the Subordinate Educational Service during the last three years, as officers in the grades are placed in grade vacancies carrying the same pay as appointments outside the grade. There was one case of special promotion to a teacher of the Dow Hill School, who was promoted from class VI to class V as a result of an existing vacancy.

(c) The reply is in the negative.

(d) The reply is in the negative.

(e) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to (b); that is the case that has occurred.

(f) Lecturers and demonstrators are generally recruited initially on Rs. 25 in class IV of the Subordinate Educational Service and foreman lecturers in class II of the same service.

(g) Latterly officers outside the grades with similar qualifications and disabilities, who are generally on fixed pay, have been brought into the grades in the Subordinate Educational Service with a view to giving them chances of promotion.

(h) It is not true that there have been scores of recipients of special promotion in grade vacancies—last year the Director of Public Instruction decided to give equal chances of promotion to graded and ungraded officers, consideration being given to qualifications and nature of work done. An officer on Rs. 50 outside the grades has thus been considered for promotion to a post of Rs. 60 inside the grades. Similarly a graded officer on Rs. 45 has been given a chance of promotion to the resulting vacancy on Rs. 50 in the graded service. It was thought that the system adopted would not affect the prospects of promotion of graded officers seriously as the average pay of posts in the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service combined is Rs. 58·3 as against Rs. 43·7 of ungraded officers.

(i) Under the powers delegated to the Director of Public Instruction, competent to appoint, transfer, etc., all officers in the Subordinate Educational Service and those outside the grades whose pay does not exceed Rs. 50 per month."

Answer by Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur:—

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the report of the Medical Service Committee appointed by the Government of India has now been considered by the Bengal Government and is ready to be made public?

Report of the Medical Services Committee.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the petitions of the Civil Assistant Surgeons submitted to the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal have been considered by that authority and whether any recommendation or report made thereon has been submitted to Government?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to state when the matter of these petitions is likely to be disposed of by this Government?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the reason (if any) why the increment of the pay of the Civil Assistant Surgeons as recommended by the Public Service Commission has been held in abeyance up to date whilst the pay of the officers of the Indian Medical Service and also of the Military Assistant Surgeons and of the Sub-Assistant Surgeons has been increased?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) The report of the Medical Services Committee has been considered by this Government, but the question of its publication rests with the Government of India, by whom the Committee was appointed

(b) Petitions from Civil Assistant Surgeons in this Presidency asking for an improvement in their pay and prospects have been forwarded to Government by the Surgeon-General with his recommendations and are now under consideration.

(c) There is not likely to be much delay on the part of this Government in dealing with these petitions, but the questions involved are intimately connected with the proposals of the Medical Services Committee, which are now under the consideration of the Government of India, to whom the recommendations of this Government will have to be forwarded.

(d) The consideration of the pay and prospects of Civil Assistant Surgeons has been delayed on account of the recommendations of the Medical Services Committee. The pay of Civil Assistant Surgeons was increased in 1912, and a further increase of pay was given to civil assistant surgeons officiating as Civil Surgeons in 1915. To that extent the question of the further revision of the pay of this service was not as urgent as in some other instances to which priority may have been given.”

(a) Have the Government made any inquiries into the prospects of the fish-curing industry and fish-oil and fish-guano-manufacture in Bengal? Prospects of the fish-curing industry, etc.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the results of any such inquiries that have been made in recent years?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) Yes. The Hon'ble Member is referred to paragraphs 17 and 18 of the Annual Report of the Department of Fisheries, Bengal and Bihar and Orissa for the year 1918-19, a copy of which is placed on the library table.

Investigations regarding fish-oil and fish-guano manufacture were made as early as 1909-10 in connection with the trawling of the Bay of Bengal by the steam trawler Golden Crown. The investigations have shown that marine fish is rich in fish-oil and fish manure. The development of industries in such bye-products awaits the development of the marine fisheries by commercial agencies. The information required will be found in paragraphs 109-114 of report on the progress of enquiry into the fisheries of Bengal submitted by Mr. Ahmad in the year 1910. Copies of these paragraphs are laid on the library table.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

37.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the achievements of the Department of Fisheries in respect of — Department of Fisheries.

- (i) the organisation of trade in fish;
- (ii) the extension of financial facilities to fishermen;
- (iii) the opening out of existing fisheries; and
- (iv) the education and training of fishermen, since the department was removed from the Department of Agriculture and established as a separate body?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(i), (ii) and (iii) The Hon'ble Member is referred to paragraph 15 of the Annual Report of the Department of Fisheries for 1917, out of which his questions arise. He will find there that the organisation of trade in fish, the extension of financial facilities to fishermen, and the opening out of fisheries is not dependent on Government alone but on the willingness of the moneyed classes to promote the organisation, capital and the banking facilities necessary to develop the industry. He will also find that to enable the Department to deal adequately with such problems an increase in staff was necessary. Government have, therefore, appointed three District Fishery Officers as an experiment this year and it is proposed to augment the number next year; but it is necessary to proceed slowly and learn by experience. The Hon'ble Member is also referred to the answer to his question No. 39.

(iv) The matter is under consideration. Special facilities are being given at one primary school for the education of the children of fishermen in the district of Dacca and a special primary school has also been established for the same purpose.”

Monopoly of the Calcutta
fish trade.

Is there any truth in the statement that the whole of the Calcutta fish trade is monopolised by three or four persons, and that the trade is so organised as to prevent the possibility of retail dealers gaining any success in the fish business in Calcutta?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The trade in Calcutta is in the hands of a limited number of people and an outsider finds it difficult to start a business successfully.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

39.

Co-operative societies among fishermen.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the co-operative societies that have been formed up to date amongst the fishermen in the several districts of the Presidency?

(b) How have they succeeded in excluding the middlemen?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) A statement is laid on the table.

(b) The societies enumerated above are practically credit societies. Attempts made to induce the members to combine to sell their fish have not been successful. Some of the societies, however, have now taken a lease of their fisheries direct and have to this extent excluded middlemen.”

Statement referred to in the answer by the HON'BLE MR. MCALPIN to question No. 39 (unstarred) asked by the HON'BLE BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI at the Council meeting of the 19th November, 1919, showing the Co-operative Societies formed amongst fishermen in Bengal.

(a) Have the Government inquired into the general complaint of fishermen against railway servants insisting on gratuities before booking and despatching consignments of fish?

Alleged demand of gratuities by railway servants from fishermen.

(b) If so, what steps, if any, have been taken by Government in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) and (b) The complaints were of a general nature and as no specific cases could be cited it was not possible to take any steps in the matter.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

41.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing what practical steps have been taken to organize the weaving industry of the Presidency on co-operative lines?

Organisation of the weaving industry on co-operative lines.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“The Hon'ble Member is referred to the note on the subject recorded by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal, which was laid on the library table in reply to the starred question No. VI put by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur at the Council meeting of the 3rd July, 1919. A copy of the note is again laid on the library table.”

42.

(a) Are the Government in a position to state whether it is a fact that the results obtained by the Anti-malarial Societies at Panihati and Sukchar encourage the application of the principle of co operation to village sanitation in Bengal?

Application of the principle of co operation to village sanitation.

(b) If so, are the Government contemplating the formation of such societies in large numbers in other parts of the Presidency also?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode:—

“(a) The reply is in the affirmative. The Hon'ble Member is referred to paragraph 63 of the Report on Sanitation in Bengal for 1918.

(b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur's question No. 64 on the 3rd July, 1919. The formation of new co-operative societies of this kind must depend mainly on the initiative being taken by the villagers themselves.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

43.

Co-operative stores.

- (a) How many co-operative stores are there in the Presidency?
- (b) Is it a fact that the prevailing high prices have created a desire for such stores in several districts and subdivisional headquarters?
- (c) If so, what steps are the Government taking to develop co-operative distribution in this connection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) On the 8th November, 1919, there were 33 co-operative stores in the Presidency and 7 agricultural purchase and sale societies which also carry on the business of co-operative stores.

(b) It is a fact that a desire for such stores has grown up in several districts and subdivisional headquarters during the last 12 months. Presumably the prevailing high prices were the cause.

(c) The number of stores rose in the year ending 30th June, 1919, from 8 to 18. Since the 1st of July, 1919, the number has risen to the figures given in answer to the first part of the question. The increase is largely the result of propaganda by the officers of the Co-operative Department. The Registrar of Co-operative Societies and his officers have brought the advantages of co-operative distribution to the notice of the public in all parts of the Province. A bureau of information has been opened in the office of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies and twice a week bulletins are issued to societies giving the Calcutta rates for commodities which are likely to be required in the mufassal. Every facility is being given by the Co-operative Department for organization of co-operative stores in all parts of the Presidency; but at the same time applications are being strictly scrutinised with a view to reducing the possibility of failures."

44.

milk societies.

(a) Is it a fact that the co-operative milk societies in the Barasat Subdivision have, comparatively speaking, been a success?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of forming more societies of this kind and of taking such steps as may be necessary to ensure their success?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) Yes."

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

45.

Co-operative societies in Bengal.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the number of co-operative societies of all kinds in Bengal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"The total number was 4,533 on the 9th November, 1919."

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

46.

Will the Government be pleased to consider the advisability of asking the Government of India to extend the scope of the proposed inquiry into the prospects of cane sugar, so as to include the date sugar-industry, which is of particular interest to this Presidency? The inquiry into the prospects of cane sugar.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The matter has already engaged the attention of Government ”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

47.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether there was any defalcation in the Sarail Ward's Estates during the management of Mr. Haliday? Defalcation in the Sarail Ward's Estates

(b) If so, what amount was defalcated and when did the defalcation come to light?

(c) In what circumstances was the money defalcated and what was the manager's responsibility?

(d) Was anybody punished for it?

(e) What was the manager's salary before the occurrence and what after it?

(f) When was his salary increased?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) Yes; there was one case of embezzlement by a law muharrir of the estate.

(b) Rs. 2,177-13-6. The defalcation was brought to light during the latter part of 1915.

(c) The Estate pleader entrusted with the work of execution of decrees obtained by the estate allowed his muharrir to receive money from the judgment debtors. The muharrir instead of crediting the money realized misappropriated it. The Estate pleader, not the manager, was directly responsible.

(d) The law muharrir was criminally prosecuted and convicted.

The money defalcated was deposited in the Treasury by the Estate pleader.

(e) Rs. 700 per mensem both before and after the occurrence.

(f) The manager's initial pay was Rs. 550; it was raised to Rs. 700 by the Eastern Bengal and Assam Government with effect from 1st December, 1909.

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

48.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that after his assumption of charge of the Dacca Nawab's estate, Mr. Meyer discharged some old officers of the said estate of good standing? If so, for what reasons? Dismissal of officers employed in the Dacca Nawab's estate.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ Since his assumption of charge of the Dacca Nawab's estate, Mr. Meyer has discharged 7 officers of the estate, three for embezzlement of estate money, two for intemperance and neglect of duty, and two for unsatisfactory work and conduct.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—49.

The Mathurapur
Ward's Estate.

(a) Is it a fact that several charges of criminal offences were brought against many old employees of the Mathurapur Ward's Estate in Maldah within the last eighteen months or so?

(b) What were the charges and how many employees were accused, and how did the cases terminate?

(c) Did the Court of Wards sanction the costs of the defence, and what did they amount to?

(d) What disciplinary action, as referred to in the answer given to my unstarred question of 4th April, 1918, did the manager and Collector of the district take to control the employees of the said estate and to prevent their misconduct?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

(a) Four criminal cases against seventeen peons of the estate were instituted in March and April 1918. No criminal charges have been brought since then.

(b) (i) Sections 147 and 323 of the Indian Penal Code—10 accused, ended in conviction.

(ii) Sections 395, 325 and 323 of the Indian Penal Code—3 accused, convicted by Sessions Judge, acquitted by High Court.

(iii) Sections 447 and 426 of the Indian Penal Code—2 accused, ended in conviction.

(iv) Section 147 of the Indian Penal Code—2 accused convicted by Deputy Magistrate, acquitted by Sessions Judge.

(c) At the time the Court of Wards was in charge only of 6 annas of the estate, and bore its proportionate share of the cost of defending the cases. The amount paid on this account cannot now be ascertained as the estate has been released.

(d) Employees accused of criminal offences were placed under suspension, and those convicted were dismissed. Since the institution of the cases referred to, there have been no complaints of misconduct, and no further disciplinary action has been necessary.”

Closing of the charitable dispensary at Mathurapur.

(a) Is it a fact that there was a charitable dispensary with an assistant surgeon in charge of it, at Mathurapur, in Maldah?

(b) What led to the closing of this dispensary?

(c) Is it a fact that the services rendered by this dispensary in fighting malaria were greatly appreciated by the authorities?

(d) When and at whose instance was the Mathurapur dispensary closed?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne:—

“(a) There was a charitable dispensary at Mathurapur in the district of Malda with a private medical practitioner, and not an assistant surgeon, in charge.

(b) and (d) This dispensary was a private one established and supported by Mr. Hennessy, the proprietor of the Mathurapur estate. It also received a grant from the District Board. In February, 1916, the doctor in charge obtained an appointment under the Assam Government and resigned his post, and Mr. Hennessy intimated that he did not propose to maintain the dispensary any longer. It was closed from the 1st March, 1916.

(c) The dispensary did useful work, but not more so than the other dispensaries in the district.”

(a) Is it a fact that in the report and scheme prepared by the late Rai Jamini Mohan Das Bahadur, the loan given to the Maharaja Bahadur Sir P. C. Tagore, Kt., was proposed to be redeemed in about 9 years?

Loan to the Maharaja
Bahadur Sir
P. C. Tagore,
Kt.

(b) On taking charge of the Tagore mortgaged estate, did Mr. Mackay submit to Government any scheme of management showing in how many years the redemption of the loan could be made possible?

(c) Were the cost of the maintenance of a steam-launch, the doubling of the pay of the naibs and the payment of Puja bonuses, green-boat and horse-allowances, over and above fixed monthly travelling allowances to the naibs, shown in Mr. Mackay's scheme?

(d) What steps have the Government taken to ensure economical management of the Maharaja Bahadur Tagore's estate?

(e) Are the affairs of the estates periodically inspected by any officer of the Government?

(f) Are the accounts audited by examiners of local accounts, and is a report submitted to the Government?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) No.

(b) No, but when the second loan of rupees ten lakhs was sanctioned an estimate of repayment was prepared and approved by Government.

(c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to clauses (d) to (i) and (k) of a question relating to the affairs of the Tagore Raj mortgaged estate asked by him at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd September, 1919.

(d) The appointment of a competent Manager.

(e) The properties are situated in several districts. No special officer is deputed to inspect them, but the District Officers are frequent visitors to the portions within their respective jurisdictions. The Commissioner of Dacca exercises general supervision and scrutinises expenditure.

(f) No, but the accounts are audited monthly by a qualified Auditor and an annual report is submitted to Government embodying the audited figures for the past year.”

Will the Government be pleased to state whether the accounts of the Karatya, Sarail, Bhowal and Mathurapur estates under the Court of Wards are examined by the examiners of local accounts and whether the reports of the examiners are submitted to Government?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ The accounts of the Karatya, Sarail and Bhowal estates are audited by the Examiner of Local Accounts, whose reports are submitted to the Board.

The Mathurapur estate is not now under the Court of Wards.”

(b) Are the Government considering the advisability of providing proper meteorological arrangements at a suitable centre in Eastern Bengal?

(b) No. The Meteorological Department is under the Government of India.”

Development of Kalimpong as a hill-station.

(a) What progress has been made in the schemes for the development of Kalimpong as a hill-station?

(b) How many building sites are being offered on lease at Kalimpong and on what terms?

(c) How many applications have been received from the Indian and other communities respectively for building houses on the terms offered by Government?

(d) Are the Government aware of the opinion that has been expressed that the terms and conditions of lease are not generally considered to be fair?

(e) Are the Government considering the desirability of modifying the said terms and conditions?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“ (a) The resumption of 756 acres on the northern portion of the Rinkingpong ridge is practically complete and steps are being taken to resume 1,102 acres on the southern portion of the ridge.

The allocation of sites in the northern portion will be made shortly.

A detailed scheme of water-supply has been approved, and a sum of 2 lakhs has been provided for expenditure on this account during the present financial year.

Arrangements are being made for the construction and improvement of roads, and for the preparation of a drainage scheme.

(b) On the northern portion of the ridge, 252 building sites are available. They will be leased for a term of 90 years, subject to certain broad conditions. The rates of premium will vary from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,500 per acre, and the rates of ground rent from Rs. 50 to Rs. 100 per acre per annum according to the position and suitability of the site. The rates of ground rent are subject to revision after each period of 30 years.

A pamphlet embodying the main features of the scheme and the terms of the lease has been available to the public for several months and a copy of it is laid on the library table.

(c) Three hundred and twelve applications have been received up to date for building sites, of which 228 are from Indians and 84 from other communities.

(d) Government are aware that letters have been published in the press criticising the terms and conditions of the lease.

(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the grievances of the travelling public in regard to the Khulna-Bagerhat Railway, as published in the newspapers? The Khulna-Bagerhat Railway.

(b) Are the Government aware of the serious inconveniences suffered by the travelling public on the said railway, arising mainly from the following circumstances—

- (i) the lower class carriages are unprotected and unsafe,
- (ii) the roofs leak in the rains, and the canvas coverings are insufficient for protecting passengers from the heat and rain,
- (iii) there are no waiting-rooms for upper class passengers and for purdanashin ladies at several stations,
- (iv) there are no platforms;
- (v) the number of carriages for females of the 3rd class is insufficient, and there is no special accommodation for upper class female passengers;
- (vi) the charges for the ferry are too much, especially for the 3rd class; and
- (vii) no water-closets are provided for passengers at the stations, nor for male passengers in the 3rd class carriages?

(c) What action, if any, are the Government taking for the removal of these grievances?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) The replies are as follows:—

- (i) The type of carriage in use on the Khulna-Bagerhat Railway is similar to that adopted on several other light railways of narrow gauge, and experience has not shown that such carriages are insufficiently protected or unsafe.

- (ii) Carriages designed for a light railway are necessarily of light construction and canvas coverings are generally considered sufficient. Some leakage may have occurred but the Railway authorities are giving this matter their attention.
- (iii) The Khulna-Bagerhat Railway is a small light railway of a total length of $19\frac{1}{2}$ miles. The number of upper class passengers for six months amounted to 1,492 in all. In the opinion of the Railway Administration traffic of such proportions does not appear to justify the provision of waiting-rooms at present. There are waiting-halls at Rupsa East, Bahirdia, Telidanga, Jatrapur and Bagerhat.
- (iv) Platforms at rail level have been constructed at all stations. In view of the lowness of the carriages, the Railway Administration does not consider that raised platforms are necessary.
- (v) Reply is embodied in the reply to question (c)
- (vi) The charges for the ferry service are levied by the Steamer Companies and are not considered excessive. They are—

				Rs. A. P.
Passengers	0	2	6 each.
Luggage and Parcels	0	4	0 per maund.
Goods	0	0	8 per maund

- (vii) A latrine has been provided at Rupsa East Station and another is being constructed at Bagerhat Station. Should traffic increases warrant, and funds permit, the Railway Administration is prepared to provide others.

(c) In view of the fact that the Khulna-Bagerhat Railway is a light railway of only $19\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length and that the journey from Khulna to Bagerhat takes only 2 hours, and further that it is a new line recently opened, it does not appear to be quite reasonable to expect that facilities such as exist on large railways can be immediately provided. As the line becomes better established and revenue increases, the Railway authorities will doubtless gradually improve the present condition of the line."

The cyclone in

(a) Is it a fact that the daily weather report and the chart issued by the Director-General of Observatories at Simla differed materially, as regards the state of the weather on the 24th September, 1919, at Saugor Island and other places in the Presidency of Bengal, from those of the Calcutta Meteorologist?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the Indian Daily Reports, dated the 22nd, 23rd, 24th and 25th September 1919?

(c) Is it a fact that the daily weather report and chart of the 24th September, 1919, issued by the Director-General of Observatories at Simla, indicated the approach of a storm to places in the Presidency of Bengal, while those of the Calcutta Meteorologist did not do so?

(d) At what hour were observations taken by the Calcutta Meteorologist and when was the danger signal hoisted at Calcutta and the Hooghly ports.

and when were those signals communicated to the inland river stations in Bengal on the 24th September?

(e) Is it a fact that at 2 P.M., on the 24th September, 1919, an observation was taken by the Calcutta Meteorological Officer relating to the state of the weather?

(f) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the report that was received from the Meteorological Officer at Alipur?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state at what hours the "danger warning" about the storm of the 24th September was received by each of the inland river stations?

(h) Is it a fact that the "danger warning" was not received by some of the inland river stations?

(i) Are there any fixed hours of attendance for the Meteorologist at the Meteorological office at Alipur?

(j) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the hours of such attendance?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) and (c) The Indian Daily Weather Report indicated the approach of a storm; the Calcutta Daily Weather Report indicated the approach of a depression. There was no material difference.

(b) The Indian Daily Weather Reports in question are laid on the library table.

(d) (1) The Calcutta Meteorologist does not take observations; but on the 24th September special observations were called for by him every six hours beginning at 14 hours from—

THE CALCUTTA CRUELTY TO ANIMALS BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved that the Calcutta Cruelty to Animals Bill, 1919, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Hon'ble Mr. G. N. Roy, the Hon'ble Mr. Payne, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps, the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray and the mover, with instructions to submit their report in time for its presentation in Council at the meeting in December next.

He said :—

" My Lord, I had the honour to introduce this Bill at the meeting of the 12th August last, and I then explained the general nature of its provisions. Since then the Bill has been circulated for opinion, and a certain number of replies have been received which, I believe, are in the hands of Hon'ble Members. Two or three, I am told, are still outstanding. A perusal of the replies indicates, as may have been reasonably anticipated, that no exception is taken to the general principles and objects of the Bill. Comments are made on points of detail and suggestions are offered for improvement, but these are matters which can be gone into by the Select Committee, and as on the question of principle, which is at the moment our main concern there is general agreement, I do not propose to take up the time of the Council further by a discussion in detail of particular provisions of the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

*Sir Henry Wheeler.THE EASTERN FRONTIER RIFLES (BENGAL BATTALION
BILL, 1919.*LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to the Regulation of the Eastern Frontier Rifle (Bengal Battalion).

He said :—

“My Lord, this Bill has reference to the force which is generally known as the Dacca military police. In addition to the ordinary civil police as found at thanas, and in addition to the armed branches of that civil police which are concentrated in small numbers at the headquarters of districts, experience of many years has shown the necessity in Bengal of keeping in readiness for use in times of emergency, a small well disciplined mobilised force which can be subjected to a higher degree of discipline, and therefore attain a higher degree of efficiency, than the ordinary civil police. That force is known as the military police, and in nature it partakes more of a military than a civil character. In Bengal it has been in existence, in one form or another, for many years. To go no further back than the last redistribution of the province in 1912, it was then constituted on a basis of six companies. In 1918, owing to its being found that the strength was insufficient to meet the duties devolving upon it, a seventh Company was added, and the force now comprises about 750 officers and men. It is distributed thus : 5 companies at Dacca, one at Hooghly and one at Buxa and it is comprised of Gurkhas, who are in the minority, and Jharias.

As I have said, the employment of military police in Bengal and in the adjacent province of Assam is no new thing. It was formerly—i.e., before the days of the first partition—regulated by what was known as the Bengal Military Police Act (V of 1892) and the Assam Military Police Regulation of 1890. After the first partition and the creation of the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam, the headquarters of what may be said to have represented the old Bengal force was placed at Dacca, with detachments at Barisal, Silchar and the Garo Hills. In addition there were other more distinctively Assamese battalions employed in the upper districts of Assam. We kept the residue of the companies, the most important being, I think, at Bhagalpur and Ranchi. It was not long before the Eastern Bengal and Assam Government felt the obvious inconvenience of having two bodies of military police within their boundaries governed by two different Acts, namely, the Assam police governed by the old regulation of 1890, and the new force at Dacca governed by the old Bengal Act of 1892. The men were liable to be employed together and also, I believe, were liable to be transferred from one battalion to another. In consequence of that fact the Eastern Bengal and Assam Government passed what was known as the Eastern Bengal and Assam Military Police Act of 1912, which was applicable to all the military police within their borders, thus restoring uniformity of treatment and after the second partition that Act was brought into force in the present province of Bengal with effect from the 1st October, 1912, by notification under the Bengal, Bihar and Orissa and Assam Laws Act, 1912. So at the present moment we are governed in Bengal by the Eastern Bengal and Assam Military Police Act, as in the adjacent province, which is now Assam only. That is the existing position.

In 1917 the Assam Government moved the Government of India to be allowed to adopt a more distinctly military nomenclature in designating their force, which they wished to call the Assam Rifles. The reasons for that request were, briefly, that they wished to enhance the status of the force when it was on military duty. They had found that when these men were employed along with regular troops on the Frontier—and, incidentally, had done well and been commended by inspecting officers—there was a tendency on the part of regular soldiers to look down upon them as being merely policemen, and not pukka soldiers, and that reacted prejudicially on the force. By removing that defect, they thought also that it would be easier to get military officers to join the force, and it is on the presence of military officers that discipline very largely depends, while it was found that the feeling of all ranks was very keen that they should be regarded in the eyes of the public as what they were, i.e., more soldiers than civil police. The Government of India accepted the argument, but drew attention to the state of the law which would require amendment in order to enable a new name to be given to the force. They pointed out that if the local administration was going to amend the Act, it had better at the same time get rid of the anomaly by which the Assam force was governed by the same Act as the separate Bengal force, letting each province stand on its own and have the kind of Act best suited to it. They therefore referred the matter to us, and we made enquiries as to how matters stood here. We found that, just as in Assam, the officers and men in our force strongly resented being called 'police' when in many respects they were treated as soldiers, and especially they resented it if the status of the Assam force was going to be raised in this respect and they were going to be left as they were. We recruit from very much the same sources as at least some of the Assam battalions, and if we do not put our battalion on the level of Assam, we should obviously have difficulty in finding men, and should get the worst recruits. Therefore the same arguments were found to be valid in the case of Bengal, especially as our Pacca battalion had been employed on the Frontier both in the old days along with the Assam battalions, and in recent times in the Abor expedition of 1911-12 and in the Chinlong expedition of 1913. This same question of status was further emphasised by the experience of the recent great war, when one officer and 101 men went from our force to the Indian Expeditionary Force and did very well. One man got an Order of Merit, and a havildar was promoted to a subardarship, while seven men got promotion as non-commissioned officers and those who saw the men uniformly spoke well of them.

In view of these facts it seems to the Local Government to be reasonable that we should fall into line with the administration of Assam, and call our men by a more distinctly military name. We had some discussion as to what that name should be, and eventually, on the suggestion of the Government of India, we propose to adopt the terminology of the Eastern Frontier Rifles, Bengal Battalion. On the basis of that terminology the Act has been re-drafted, although there has been no practical change in substance. The amendments, which will be found underlined, are mainly verbal, largely concerned with the substitution of the word 'rifleman' for 'military police.' To all intents and purposes the Act is in substance what it was before; only amendments of a verbal character are proposed in order to give effect to the intention, which I have explained, of giving the battalion the more distinctly military status which it really enjoys. The Act itself, as will be seen from a brief glance at it, refers specifically to the discipline and maintenance of the force. There are special terms of enlistment, and men wishing to join come under a discipline which is more distinctly appropriate to soldiers. The Act therefore is one which little concerns the interests of the public; its amendment is designed to meet a need peculiar to the force as such."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The President said :—

“I have agreed to the postponing to the next meeting of resolution Nos. 5, 6 and 7 on the Agenda paper standing in the name of the Hon’ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta on the ground that the Hon’ble Member is unable to be present to-day on account of illness.”

The resolutions were as follows :—

5. The Hon’ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta to move the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that arrangement be made with a view to the payment of the monthly pensions of Government pensioners in the Presidency of Bengal by postal money-order, if they desire, and that, if necessary, the sanction of the Government of India be obtained in that behalf.

6. Also to move the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to improve the pay and prospects of the Assistant Surgeons in the Presidency

7. Also to move the following resolution :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

8. The Hon’ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Government do approach the Government of India for a grant of rupees fifty lakhs of such sum as they may think necessary from the Imperial Government to alleviate the distress caused by the recent cyclone in Eastern Bengal.

He said :—

“My Lord, for two years the country had been put to great inconvenience and the people subjected to great hardship on account of the high price of cloth, for nearly a year the country had been almost on the verge of famine on account of the abnormally high price of rice and other food-stuffs and the people could with difficulty eke out an existence, when the terrific cyclone of the 24th September last swept over the province and laid desolate a number of adjacent districts of Eastern Bengal, including portions of Khulna and Jessore.

That your Excellency’s Government have now been doing all that they possibly can to alleviate the sufferings of those who have suffered from the cyclone is well-known. There was no doubt some delay on the part of the Central Government to move in the matter and to take necessary steps, but the men on the spot, some of the District Magistrates, Sub-divisional Officers and some of the circle officers had already been to the places affected by the cyclone and were doing their level best with the limited means at their disposal in organising relief work. The non-official gentlemen who had gone to some of these places for rendering help saw that relief work had already been commenced by Government officers. But if your Lordship's Government have now been doing all that they possibly can to alleviate the sufferings of those who have suffered from the cyclone, the leaders of the people have also come forward in this great work. In fact they were the first in the field in organising regular relief measures in some of the more affected areas. The Bengal Relief Fund Committee, the Ram Krishna Mission, the Sadharan Brahmo Samaj and the Seva Samiti people, and last but not least the Servants of India Society have been working hard and zealously to alleviate the sufferings of the people in distress by contributing money, food-stuffs and cloth. I need not impress on your Lordship's Government that the country and its people have been sadly injured by the recent visitation, and it will take some time before the devastated portion of the country can recover. I shall quote from a few extracts from some of the reports of gentlemen deputed by the Bengal Relief Fund Committee to organise relief work in the affected districts to show the nature of the distress and the relief required. I need hardly say that they are men of the highest character and their reports can be taken without any reservation.

This is what the Dacca Secretary of the Bengal Relief Fund Committee reports :—

"The most pressing need of the people at present is rice and cloth. I personally know instances when the people are taking food after two days. Many are half-fed. Only 10 per cent. of the people, mostly of the trading classes, are full-fed. Many people are half-fed and in rags. I personally know of many instances where women would not come out of their huts to receive relief for want of cloth. In short the problem of Eastern Bengal to-day is one of rice and cloth."

I quote from another report, that of Mr. H. D. Bose :—

"At Barisal, opposite the District Board Office, at about 8 o'clock in the morning, I found that there were nearly 500 to 700 people assembled to get their quota of rice ; there was a general scramble, pushing and elbowing from all sides and directions, as if they were taking part in a Rugby football game, their clothes torn, bodies lacerated, and not a few knocked out of breath. Even after all this a host had to return unsatisfied and unattended as there was not sufficient quantity of rice in stock, and this in spite of the sympathy, generosity and humane efforts to supply their wants by men like the officiating District Magistrate and others".

I quote the following from another report, which relates to an earlier period of the relief operations :—

"There are about 325 unions in the Dacca district and each union consists of a number of villages, the members of which range from 8 or 10 to 30 or 40 in each union. Government have given Rs. 25,000 for distribution amongst the people residing in the various unions and thus the money obtained by each union would be about Rs. 70 or thereabouts on the average. We can safely assume that the average number of villages in each union would be about 25 or 30. It can be easily understood what would be the effect of distribution of Rs. 70 or thereabout in about 25 or 30 villages, and in places where the number of villages in a union is about 40, the allotment for each village would be a little less than Rs. 2".

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

"Government help has been paid for proportionate distribution in all the different unions, but the sum mentioned is too inadequate, and it can very reasonably be said that this help of Rs. 25,000 has not improved the condition of the suffering people even a bit, while the help rendered by our public spirited men has confined itself to only a group of neighbouring villages. The poor middle class people will never go for a pittance of four annas or eight annas. The people most hardly hit are the poor middle class, whom agricultural loan would not help and also will not be in any way benefited by a gift of an insignificant sum".

I am informed the Government have since supplemented these contributions, but the funds at the disposal of the local officers are still much inadequate considering the extent of the distress.

The following is about Jessore :—

"Immediately after the cyclone the Subdivisional Officer of Narail left for the interior, visited all the places, formed committees, raised some money and made arrangements for its distribution and applied to Government for agricultural loans. But with all the good intentions he could make no headway as he was handicapped for funds. It was at this time that I reached Narail on the 23rd October and met him. He at once decided to come with us again to show us all that he knew, so that outside help might flow to alleviate distress".

It also appears that in some of the places in the Jessore district the paddy crop has suffered considerably. It is reported that not only 80 per cent. of the huts had fallen, but three-fourths of the crop had been destroyed.

This is what one gentleman wrote about one of the unions of Khulna only about a week ago :—

"There are ten villages under the union, and in all the villages famine conditions prevailed before advent of the devastating cyclone. The Khulna District Relief Fund sent Rs. 40 only to a branch relief committee formed and the three unions of Raghunathpur, Rungpur and Rudaghara. An officer of the Government came to inquire into the condition of the people with a view to open relief works. He promised speedy relief, but it is going to be more than two weeks since his visit, and as yet we have got no response. Two hundred and fifty families, consisting of nearly 800 persons, are having half meal or no meal daily."

The extracts to which I have drawn your Lordship's attention give only a faint idea of the real state of things. Those who had been to these places or have come from these places say that they cannot paint in their true colours the miseries of the people. There have not been any laches on the part of the Government officials to try to grapple the situation. The three Indian District Magistrates, those of Khulna, Faridpur and Bakarganj, did not blench from the helm when the wind blew highest. A gentleman from Dacca writes :—"The people of Dacca really owe a very deep debt of gratitude to their energetic and their sympathetic Magistrate to whom and to Mr. Hart the success of the relief work is to a great extent due." A friend who has recently returned from Manikganj speaks in the highest terms of the energetic efforts of the Subdivisional Officer there and of the circle officer at Baira. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has been to many of the affected parts and the representatives of the people have been up and doing in the great work. Your Lordship has placed a special officer, Mr. Hart, as head of the relief work. The officials and the representatives of the people have entered the field with whole-hearted zeal and are vying with one another in alleviating the distress of the people. There has been whole-hearted co-operation between the officials and the non-officials. If the people thought it their duty to lend their helping hand to their brethren in calamity, your Lordship's Government have also considered it their duty to assist those whom Providence has placed under their control. Proper sanitary measures to guard against the outbreak of cholera or other epidemic diseases or the breaking out of influenza should be taken at once. The water of the tanks and streams have become foul on account of the decomposition of plants and trees, even dead bodies of animals and men. A gentleman writing from Dacca only last week says :—

“ For some days after the cyclone the sight of the corpses floating on the river Padma was simply thrilling. It is useless to multiply instances of such horrible sights we have commonly met with in course of our daily work. . . . East Bengal have seen cyclone, flood and famine and are awaiting fourth, not less distressful than these, namely, epidemic of diseases.”

Government have no doubt a programme of medical relief for the affected area, and their officers are doing spade work in certain centres. But the problem is a vast one, and must be grappled in right earnest.

Now let us see what is the amount which will be necessary to meet the present situation. It is no doubt very difficult, nay almost impossible, for a non-official who has no access to official papers except those which appear in the Government communiqués now and then to give an estimate even approaching to accuracy as regards the amount which will be required for the purpose of relieving distress. It appears however from the estimate of the Subdivisional Officer of Manikganj in the Dacca district that the damages caused by the cyclone in that subdivision alone would be about 25 lakhs of rupees. He does not state how much money will be required to feed the cyclone-stricken people for at least six weeks. It must be remembered that only three thana areas of this subdivision have fallen within the devastating ambit of the cyclone. He takes into account the number of cattle killed and wounded, number of huts blown down and damaged, valuable trees uprooted, the number of food-stuffs destroyed, including standing crops, as well as the number of boats sunk. I have tried to get similar figures with reference to other subdivisions, but I have not got them. Probably your Lordship's Government are in possession of them. But I think the subdivision of Munshiganj in the Dacca district where it is said there is not a single homestead which has not been affected, Kishoreganj in Mymensingh district and portion of Faridpur are more affected than the subdivision of Manikganj. If we take into account the damages sustained by the Bagerhat subdivision in the Khulna district and the Narail subdivision of the Jessore district, as well as some other subdivisions of Dacca, Bakarganj, Tippera and Mymensingh, we think the damages would come up to about 2 crores of rupees. I do not for a moment contend that Government are bound to restore these places and the men who have suffered to their original condition. I do not for a moment contend that Government should pay for the trees or for the boats sunk or the loss to the steamer companies, for they must have been all insured. But I think the suffering people, many of them in the lowest depths of poverty, can very well look up to Government, and does look up to Government, for their food and clothing for some time and for at least a portion of the cost of their huts. To add to the miseries of the people the price of jute which was Rs. 20 in August last is now Rs. 3 per maund. God knows the reason why? Government officers have no doubt been distributing cloth and rice in many of the affected parts and rabi crop seeds are being distributed through the Agricultural Department which is doing commendable work. But winter is approaching and unless these people get proper clothing or huts to live in, they will die by thousands. I think it is a fact well known to Government that agricultural loans, for which Rs. 21 lakhs have been granted, will not benefit the bhadralok classes or the lower landless classes either.

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

We find from the Government communiqué published in the papers of the 8th November, after I had sent notice of my resolution, that your Lordship's Government have given or are going to give, in addition to the grant of 21 lakhs of rupees in the shape of agricultural loans, the following relief :-

1. One lakh pairs of cloth, some at concession rates and some as gratuitous relief. If we take the price of cloth at Rs. 4 per pair, and if we take that half the number of clothes will be given as gratuitous relief, that gives us 2 lakhs of rupees worth of cloth which will be given by Government as gratuitous relief.

2. Next as regards Burma rice. It appears that one lakh and seventeen thousand maunds of Burma rice, which must have cost at least Rs. 6 per maund, or rice worth about 7 lakhs of rupees have been purchased by Government and consigned to Dacca, Faridpur, Mymensingh and Khulna. If half of this rice has been or going to be distributed as gratuitous relief, we see that rice worth about $3\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of rupees will be given as gratuitous relief.

3. We next find that Rs. 60,000 have already been distributed as cash in the district of Dacca, whereas Rs. 45,000 have been sanctioned for the districts of Faridpur, Bakarganj, Jessore and Khulna, i.e., about one lakh and five thousand rupees have been spent or are going to be spent on this head.

We therefore find that Government have already spent or are going to spend almost immediately more than $6\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of rupees in gratuitous relief. We also find that it will require $3\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs for reconstruction of Public Works Department buildings, whereas those under the Police Department will require $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs for reconstruction or repairs, i.e., more than 8 lakhs of rupees will be necessary to reconstruct the Government buildings. Then there is one more serious damage which demands our urgent attention. It is well-known that most of the schools of various grades in the affected area used to be housed in kutchas or tin roofed bungalows and these have not been able to withstand the fury of the cyclone, with the result that most of these educational institutions are seriously handicapped for want of suitable habitation and some of them may even have to close. Unless Government step forward and give substantial aid to these institutions, educational progress in Eastern Bengal may be set back for some time.

Of the $6\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of rupees for gratuitous relief, we think about 3 lakhs of rupees have been raised by private subscription, leaving $3\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs to be defrayed from the budget estimates of the year. This is only expenditure so far incurred. It appears from the report of the Bengal Relief Fund Committee, published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika and the Bengalee, that about Rs. 1,45,000 have been spent by them in gratuitous relief in the shape of cash, Burma rice and cloth. We find that cash, rice and cloth worth Rs. 35,000 have been given to Dacca, Rs. 44,000 to Mymensingh, Rs. 14,000 to Faridpur, Rs. 7,000 to Barisal, Rs. 2,000 to Comilla, Rs. 3,000 to Chandpur, Rs. 8,500 to Jessore and Rs. 6,500 to Khulna; Rs. 6,500 to the Ramkrishna Mission Relief Committee, Rs. 5,000 to the Social Service League Relief Fund, Rs. 5,000 to the Brahmo Samaj Relief Committee and Rs. 5,000 to the Medical Relief Committee. It also appears that a sum of Rs. 3,210 have been subscribed to the fund organized by the Servants of India Society for the relief of distress in Eastern Bengal.

I take it that the amount which is being spent or will be spent for the relief of the cyclone-stricken people will no doubt be spent from the budget estimates of this year by postponing what the Government consider to be necessary items of expenditure. Your Lordship must have observed the fight that goes on year after year between the non-official members of this Council and the official members during the budget time if the non-official members want to divert any money from the budget allotment to any item of expenditure which they consider would go to support a popular measure. I attribute this attitude on the part of Government to the fact that Government are not very flush of money. For four years Government had to postpone spending of money on many useful projects. If the necessary items of expenditure be not spent this year on the several heads for which they are allotted but are spent in the cyclone relief work, the works will have to be undertaken next year from the next year's budget. But if the money which will be necessary for cyclone relief be not entirely borne by your Lordship's Government, but if a portion of it at least be borne by the Supreme Government, the necessary provincial works may go on, whereas the relief work will not suffer. Appeals have gone forth on behalf of the famished people of this country to England and even in the continent of Europe, and those appeals were always responded to. There have been ere this meetings in the Mansion House under the presidency of the Lord Mayor to relieve the distressed people of this country and moneys have been collected and sent to this country. I see no reason why your Lordship's Government should not approach the Government of India for some money to aid the afflicted. There may not be any constitutional or statutory obligation in such matters on the part of the Government of India to give financial aid, as in the case of famine. But I venture to submit that the Supreme Government has a sacred duty to step after such visitations of nature, and place substantial funds at the disposal of the provincial authorities to enable them to meet a situation so tragic and so unprecedented.

Your Lordship was pleased to issue an appeal on the 3rd October on behalf of the sufferers from the cyclone in East Bengal. Your Lordship was pleased to state that though some time must lapse before it is possible to form a complete estimate of the damage done, it is clear from the reports which have already reached the Government that distress of a serious nature prevails in the affected areas. The Government are doing what is possible in the way of granting relief, but when the Government have done all that is possible with the resources at their disposal there will be still immense scope for charitable assistance. Under these circumstances, I have no hesitation in appealing to all who are in a position to do so to assist their less fortunate fellowmen, who, at a time of abnormal economic strain, have had their lot rendered still more difficult by this calamitous visitation of nature. Your Lordship's appeal has had the desired effect. The public have come forward, the mercantile community—both European and Indian—have come forward to relieve the people in distress. Why should not the Government of India stretch out their helping hand in this critical time. If there was a time when help was necessary it is this.

One word more and I have done. If your Lordship's Government as a government do not think it proper to approach the Government of India for help, let the appeal go forth in the name of the non-official members of this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, it would possibly conduce to the despatch of business in this Council if I were to announce at this stage that Government are prepared to accept this resolution as it is worded; in view of the fact, as I shall explain later, that Government have already taken action on the lines suggested. The Hon'ble Member's resolution, as it appears on the agenda, might bear one of two interpretations. One might be that in view of the amount which the Bengal Government are spending in connection with cyclone relief, which was an unexpected drain on the finances of the province in a year of stress, the Government of India might be asked to recomp the Local Government to some extent for this unforeseen expenditure. Another interpretation might be that in view of the extent of the damage done and the suffering caused, the Bengal Government's contributions were not sufficient and that an appeal should be made to the Government of India to supplement the expenditure of the Bengal Government. As far as I have followed the Hon'ble Member's speech,—and I may say that at the beginning of this sitting, he did me the courtesy of handing to me an advance copy of his speech,—it would appear that he desired to support both of these suggestions. Before, however, dealing with what might be termed the broad financial aspect of the resolution, I should like to deal in detail with a few of the allegations of fact which the Hon'ble Member has made and with some of his statements. Government desire to acknowledge the appreciative reference which has been made by him to the work of the officers of Government in connection with the relief that has been instituted.

Mr. Cumming.

As regards the communication of information at the very beginning to the headquarters of Government, the Hon'ble Member has perhaps overlooked the fact of the breakdown in communications. At one time the Commissioner of Dacca could only communicate with the headquarters of Government through Rangoon. The Hon'ble Member does not seem to be aware of, or has overlooked, the fact that from the very moment that information came in sufficient quantity and of sufficient importance to the headquarters of Government, an extremely unusual order was given to every District Officer concerned to spend as much as he thought fit in anticipation of any sanction. The Hon'ble Member has also referred to certain reports which have been communicated to him or to the press. In this connection I should like to say that if any member of the public in his experience finds that there are defects which might be remedied, both Mr. Hart and myself would welcome any information; such information should be communicated direct to Mr. Hart who is in administrative control of these operations.

Another small point to which the Hon'ble Member has referred is his inability to understand why the price of jute has lately fallen, which, he states, adds another factor to the difficulty of the situation. On that point there was an answer to question No. VIII given this morning, the essence of which is that it is due to causes entirely outside of, and beyond the control of, not only the Bengal Government but Bengal.

As regards the subject of medical relief, I can say that in the area where it was most required it was given promptly; and that arrangements are now in hand, and have been in hand, for extending such relief where it is required. I have of course no wish—far from it—to minimise the extent of the damage that has been done. But here again I think the Hon'ble Member has overlooked certain points which, if he were a resident in one of the eastern districts, he would have noticed. In the first place, particularly in Mymensingh, the raiyats themselves have rebuilt their houses very promptly either by their own labour or by helping one another. In the second place, all over these districts the larger buildings which belonged to people of capital are being rebuilt, and have been rebuilt, with surprising rapidity, from which the labouring population have received a great deal of advantage. As we know, in famine times the difficulty is to create work in return for help. But in this case work was universally open.

The Hon'ble Member does not ask that all damages should be made good. He says, however, that the suffering poor—if I quote him correctly—can look up to Government for food and clothing. I may say at once that that is exactly what the officers of Government are endeavouring to provide by themselves or in co-operation with non-official agencies. Throughout the Hon'ble Member's speech I have not heard any reference to any principle which governs the grant of relief on an occasion of this nature. The only approach which I can find to such an enunciation of principle is the statement that the Government of India—the supreme Government—have a sacred duty to perform by stepping in after such a visitation of nature and by placing substantial funds at the disposal of the Local Government. These, my Lord, are a few comments on certain statements of the Hon'ble Member. I said, however, that I should like to deal with the broader aspect of the question; and this is exactly the aspect on which the Hon'ble Member has not favoured the Council with any remarks.

It is first of all necessary to understand what the facts are regarding the financial expenditure; and, secondly, to realise what are the limitations on expenditure by the State from funds contributed by the general taxpayer on the relief of distress, whether caused by famine, earthquake, cyclone, storm-wave or any other visitation of nature.

Now let me state very shortly what are the financial facts. Government have allotted certain sums which have been announced in the communiqués published. These sums are paid from the Provincial finances. At the same time a large sum has been obtained from the Government of India for the purpose of loans; for it should be understood that, according to present financial arrangements, the Local Government borrows from the Government of India all monies that it gives out in loans, whether to local bodies or private individuals. The Government of India have further been requested that the expenditure incurred by the Government of Bengal should be treated in the same way as expenditure incurred in the relief of famine, namely, that three-fourths of it should be redeemed by the Imperial Government and one-fourth left to the debit of the Local Government.

Then as regards charitable funds, a considerable sum has been locally subscribed in all the districts which has been locally expended, practically on pure charity. A non-official Relief Fund known as the Bengal Relief Fund has been constituted. In addition, the Cyclone Central Relief Fund was inaugurated under His Excellency's auspices, while there are other private charitable organizations which have given their funds and their agents for its distribution. The Government of Bengal have also allotted certain sums from the income of charitable endowments, of which the Local Government is the trustee; and Government have also asked for a grant from the Indian People's Famine Trust. Finally, the public have been informed that the distribution of all the non-official charitable funds has been so worked out as to prevent, as far as possible, mutual overlapping or overlapping with the money spent by Government on charitable relief. These, my Lord, are shortly the facts regarding the financial aspect of the question.

The second point is very important, namely, the necessity for an appreciation of the limitations on the expenditure by Government of money belonging to the State; and here we must have recourse to principles. Let us in the first place examine whether the relief of distress occasioned by a natural calamity is covered by any of the objects for which civilised states are maintained. We have the authority of John Stuart Mill that Government may take upon itself anything really important to the general interest; and we have a long range of authorities from Hobbs and Bentham down to President Wilson of the present day for the proposition that one of the ministrant duties of the State is the care of the destitute. If these propositions be accepted, it has, in the second place, to be considered what limitations there are on such expenditure, namely, on the expenditure of State funds for the relief of distress. Here we are dealing with the position in India. Fortunately, the whole question of the delimitation of expenditure on the relief of distress between State funds and private funds has been more clearly enunciated in India than in any western country. For an examination of that principle we need not go further back than 1878, when in the correspondence between the Government of Lord Lytton and the Secretary of State, who was then Lord Cranbrook, it was stated that Government is responsible, as far as may be practicable, for the saving of life by all available means in its power. The same principle had been enunciated previously in Great Britain in the terms that every civilised society finds it necessary to provide that no person shall perish for want of the bare necessities of existence. At the same time, English authorities laid down a clear distinction between State relief and private charity. This principle was re-stated at the time of the great 1896-97 famine by the Government of India in the following words :—

“As we have said, we accept as our own the responsibility for saving life. But life once secured, our responsibility to the afflicted ceases and our responsibility to the tax-paying public begins.”

The Government of India in 1896 prepared a statement of the objects, to which private funds, as distinguished from State funds, might be applied. It was declared that there was ample scope for the exercise of private charity in supplementing the operations of Government in mitigating suffering and in relieving distress which fell short of absolute destitution. Four main objects were enunciated on which private contributions might usefully be expended ; first, in supplementing the subsistence ration provided by public funds ; secondly, in provision for the maintenance of orphans ; thirdly, for the relief of the middle class poor ; and fourthly, for giving a fresh start to those who have lost their all. When the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was constituted on three occasions within recent times after the 1896 famine, after the 1899 famine, and after the 1909 famine, a statement of these objects, on which private contribution might legitimately be expended, was accepted by those who were responsible on each occasion for this relief fund. In more recent times, on the occasion of the floods in the Burdwan Division in 1913, this delimitation of the spheres of public and private relief was recapitulated. In connection with the opening of the relief fund which was then constituted, Lord Carmichael said that it was the duty of Government to preserve life by giving a maintenance to the destitute : but that Government had a duty to those whose money it spends ; and that Government would not undertake to replace actual losses. The Hon'ble Mr. Lyon on the same occasion said that Government as guardian of the public purse was subject to rules which prevented it from yielding to charitable impulses when dealing with the money of the taxpayer.

In a further subsequent communication to the Committee of the Fund, the Bengal Government of that day made a declaration of principle in the following terms : that gratuitous relief was for the relief of immediate personal distress due to want of food, temporary shelter and medical help : but that Government could not undertake to restore houses, or supply seed or cattle gratuitously, though assistance might be given in these respects by means of agricultural loans. And, finally, in making the appeal to private benevolence in connection with the recent cyclone, on the 3rd October last, His Excellency declared that when Government had done all that was possible with the resources at their disposal there would still be immense scope for charitable assistance.

The Hon'ble Mover has given to the Council his estimate of the total loss to property caused by the cyclone. I should like to say at once that such estimates were placed in my hands very early in the course of the relief operations. They had been prepared very hastily on imperfect information by sub-inspectors of police-stations ; and I discarded them as utterly unreliable. At the same time, if, by any hypothesis, these estimates might be considered as accurate, Government in its capacity as custodian of the public purse, has never undertaken and cannot undertake responsibility to replace actual losses or to meet the cost of repairs of all damages. It is true that the Hon'ble Member did state that he did not ask for so much ; but nevertheless the whole purport of his arguments was that a great deal more should be done towards the replacing of losses. It is, my Lord, not only a question of the liability of the State, but a question of the pauperization of the people. Indeed, the Hon'ble Member seems to be labouring under the misapprehension that State relief is charity. This is a fallacy; State relief within its proper sphere is not charity, it is an obligation on the State. Indeed as regards the relief of distress in India on the occasion of a famine there is one thing that can be said, and one eminent authority has said it,—namely, that the State relief of distress in India, if properly organized, does not demoralize the people. It is therefore clear that there has been a definite principle and a consistent application of that principle in the policy adopted by the Government of India and by Local Governments in dealing with the relief of distress after a natural calamity. It is true that such a principle was first enunciated in connection with distress due to famine; and that the circumstances of distress due to a cyclone or a similar calamity are somewhat different. Granted: it is of course the fact that at one and the same time practically the whole population in the area affected by storm is afflicted; and this justifies a liberal interpretation of the principle of saving life. Government and its officers have on this occasion interpreted that principle in a liberal way. The methods ordinarily adopted in the case of famine for giving relief in return of work of some kind are not specially applicable to the present position; for this reason on the present occasion, apart from purely charitable relief for the helpless, a great portion of the Government relief has been in the form of the sale of cloth or of rice at cheap rates in areas where cloths were wanting or where the rice-supplies have been damaged or destroyed. Where the assistance is given in the form of gratuitous relief to those who are not absolutely helpless, then the relief trenches on the jurisdiction of that which is debitable to private benevolence. After a reasonable lapse of time, when immediate and almost universal distress has been temporarily relieved, it is right that the standard principle should obtain; and that the obligation of Government should then be limited to the grant of gratuitous relief in the shape of money or cloth, or grain to widows, orphans and people without resources or to people incapable of doing any work either through age or infirmity, and to the grant of loans to those who have resources. The subscriptions which have been contributed by the various relief funds are being utilized either to supplement what is given by Government or as grants to those persons who do not come within the strict category of those who according to this long-standing policy are the suitable recipients of relief from the State. I may state here that the principles which I have now enunciated were placed by me before the Executive Committee of the Central Cyclone Relief Fund, on which there are representatives of four of the non-official organizations; that these principles were accepted by that Committee; and that a Memorandum which I had prepared on the subject has been widely circulated amongst those interested.

I have explained at some length, my Lord, the matter of the jurisdiction of State relief, as it is clear that there is some misapprehension on the subject. Before I conclude, may I summarize very shortly what Government have done compatibly with these principles which have been enunciated? I maintain that subject to these principles Government have a clear conscience that they have done what is right both towards the afflicted and towards the tax-payer. First of all, 1,50,000 maunds are under purchase by Government at a cost of 9 lakhs of rupees. The prime object of this was to supply a cheap rice for sale and not to dispense charity; but of this not an insignificant portion has been given away as gratuitous relief to suitable recipients. Secondly, 500 bales of cloth, valued at 4 lakhs of rupees, have been purchased by Government. Of this portion has been distributed gratuitously, and the balance is being sold. Thirdly, 21 lakhs of rupees have been obtained for agricultural loans to cover the requirements of seed, cattle and rehousing in the case of agriculturists; and, fourthly, more than one lakh of rupees has been given in cash for direct gratuitous relief from Government. This is a short statement of the financial position at the present moment.

Mr. Meares; Babu S. N. Ray; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Member while mentioning the specific sum of 50 lakhs has also suggested in his resolution an indefinite alternative,—namely, whatever sum may be thought necessary. I stated at the beginning of my remarks that Government would be able to accept the resolution as it is worded, because Government have already taken action on the same lines; and I now repeat that, on the understanding that the actual amount is at the discretion of the Bengal Government, and also in view of the fact that the Bengal Government have already taken action by obtaining loans from the Government of India, and by asking the Government of India to recoup the Bengal Government a considerable portion of the expenditure incurred and that they have therefore already carried out the literal terms of the resolution, Government are prepared to accept it. But I must emphasise that this acceptance is contingent on the understanding to which I have referred. Government cannot relinquish the principle and the policy which I have endeavoured to explain to the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Meares said :—

"My Lord, I do not think the Hon'ble Mover can be fully aware of the conditions as they now are in the affected areas. As is nearly always the case in distress of this description it is immediate relief that is most needed. Prolonged relief for several weeks or months should only be necessary in the more acute cases, and such cases can only bear a very small proportion to the whole. The immediate extreme distress following on the cyclone was removed by the very prompt action taken by the Government in distributing the necessities of life, and these steps have undoubtedly played by far the most important part of any relief work that has been done. I was at Narayanganj at the time of the cyclone and have been there ever since, so have had every opportunity of studying conditions at first hand. The standing crops suffered comparatively little; in fact the rice crops have benefited by the heavy rain; houses have been reconstructed and work generally is now going on normally. I am not saying that there are no cases requiring further relief. There are the widows and orphans of those who were drowned during the cyclone who will require help for some time, and these are the more acute cases I have mentioned. The work of general relief, however, which has now been going on for some time should now be sufficient to meet the case of the majority, and large additional funds can hardly be necessary. Besides the help rendered by Government, large subscriptions have been collected, and the position now is such that part of these subscriptions might very well be reserved to meet the more urgent and prolonged cases where it is necessary."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am very much obliged to Your Excellency's Government for having accepted the resolution. That is all I have got to say."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq being absent, the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution on his behalf :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the typists attached to the offices of the Director of Public Instruction and the Inspector-General of Police be placed on the same footing regarding pay and prospects as the typists in the Bengal Secretariat.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

He said :—

“My Lord, after having considered a question of such great importance as the relief of distress caused by the recent cyclone in Eastern Bengal, I feel a little diffidence in taking up such a trivial matter as the pay of a few typists in Government offices. But the absence of my Hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, has thrown this responsibility on me, and I think that though the resolution be unimportant and the number of people affected by it small the question is certainly deserving of consideration. In March 1918, my Hon'ble friend, Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, moved a resolution in this Council that the pay of the typists in the Bengal Secretariat should be raised to a uniform grade of Rs. 40 to Rs. 100 by annual increments of Rs. 5. This resolution was accepted on behalf of the Government by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald with certain modifications. We are glad to find that effect has been given to that so far as the typists in the Secretariat are concerned. But, as the resolution itself says, this was not done at least in the offices of the Director of Public Instruction and the Inspector-General of Police, where the typists used to enjoy the same pay and had the same prospects as typists in the Secretariat. Their case was not considered and in reply to a question put by my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, he was told by the Hon'ble Mr. Payne that Government were not considering the proposal of raising the pay of the typists in the heads of departments to a uniform grade with those of the Secretariat, and it was added that there was always a difference in pay between the clerks serving in the Secretariat and those serving under heads of departments. It may be that the clerks in the Secretariat are differently treated from the clerks in the office of the heads of departments—as a matter of fact, in mufassal offices they are treated much worse—but the case of the typists is quite different. They were on the same pay as the Secretariat typists and so they have a very just grievance in this matter. Till 1906 I am told the typists were in the general cadre of clerks in the office of the Director of Public Instruction; it was then under the Hon'ble Sir Archdale Earle. He suggested that there should be a separate cadre for typists in his office and that was accepted by Government. On the recommendation of Mr. Kuchler the pay of the typists in the office of the Director of Public Instruction was fixed on the same basis as that of the typists of the Bengal Secretariat, viz., Rs. 30—50 in one grade, and Rs. 50 to Rs. 70 in another. There the matter rested and there was no change in their position. The typists of the Bengal Secretariat brought their position to the notice of Your Excellency's Government through the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, and their prospects were improved, but the typists in the office of the Director of Public Instruction remained in the same position in which they were, even in these days of high prices when they find it difficult to make both ends meet. This class of typist does not belong to the general office cadre, and they do not enjoy the chances of promotion which are open to other clerks; they form a cadre by themselves, therefore their position deserves consideration. The Hon'ble Mr. Donald, while speaking on the resolution of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, said that no difference should be made between typists; they do the same class of work, the work of copyists, and as soon as they show a sufficient amount of efficiency, they should all be treated in the same manner. I think that dictum applies equally to the typists serving in the Secretariat, as well as under the Heads of Departments. In this case I think I have official support. Mr. Wordsworth, the Director of Public Instruction, moved in the matter and recommended that the typists in his office—there are six or seven typists altogether—should be placed in the same cadre as the typists in the Secretariat, and I think Your Excellency's Government will consider it worth while to give them the relief which they deserve.”

Sir, Henry Wheeler; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has himself admitted that this is a trivial and unimportant resolution; and personally, I venture to think it a pity that our clerks, when they wish to secure an enhancement of a few rupees, should get into the habit, instead of going to the departmental heads who know what the facts are, of running to members of the Legislative Council and enlisting their support for the public ventilation of these matters in an august body like Your Excellency's Council. This august body is not in such a good position as the Secretariat to say whether a clerk's salary should be one or two rupees higher than it is. Another incidental difficulty in which Hon'ble Members involve themselves by letting their kindlier feelings perhaps run away with them, is that they are not acquainted with the real facts, and they do not put their resolutions in a complete form. If the object of this resolution is to place all the headquarters offices in Calcutta in which a special grade of typists is employed on the same footing as the Secretariat in the matter of their pay, then the resolution is not complete in merely mentioning the offices of the Director of Public Instruction and the Inspector-General of Police, because it should also include the offices of the Board of Revenue and the Collector of Customs. I merely mention this in illustration of the difficulties which I apprehend are characteristic of this type of resolution. The actual point is, whether in place of two grades of Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 and Rs. 50 to Rs. 70 for typists specially employed as such, we should give a pay of Rs. 40 rising by annual increments to Rs. 80. It is a trifling matter of a few rupees, and the Hon'ble Member apparently thinks that, because it is small, we should agree to it. But we do attach importance to the principle, which is not only characteristic of typists but of other grades, that in the Secretariat we pay slightly higher than in the offices of heads of departments. It is a principle of long standing and it works in the sense that we do get men on the scale of pay offered who can be entrusted to do their work efficiently. Although it is merely a matter of a few rupees, it is relevant that on the pay we offer we can get men, and we are not offering them a pay below the market rate. It is obviously easy to say that because a man is doing the same sort of work on this side of the street, he should be paid the same as a man doing similar work on the other side of the street. But it is the case that the work of the Secretariat is more responsible, more open to public criticism and attracts more public attention; therefore we give a trifle more so as to try to get the cream of the market; whether we succeed or not, is another matter. Candidates being forthcoming under these conditions, we do not propose to accept this resolution. I have several times mentioned in this Council, and I will mention it again to-day, that our financial position is anything but satisfactory, and that fact will be brought forcibly to the attention of Hon'ble Members, if, as proposed very shortly, we have the Financial Relations Committee sitting to decide the future relationship between the provinces and the Government of India. It will then be brought home to Hon'ble Members that the financial position of the Government of Bengal is by no means what we would like to see it in view of the many urgent calls upon us, and therefore, in so far as this is not an urgent call, I do not think we should accept it.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, I got this resolution as a legacy from my Hon'ble friend, and I am not prepared to press it after what has fallen from Sir Henry Wheeler. Before I withdraw it, however, I would like to submit in reference to what Sir Henry Wheeler has been pleased to observe that there has been a difference in the pay of the Secretariat clerk and the clerk in the offices of the Heads of Departments. But so far as the typists are concerned, since 1906

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

they have been drawing the same pay as the typists in the Bengal Secretariat and if there has been a rise in the pay of the Secretariat typist, I think the typists serving in these two departments can naturally expect that their pay should be raised, and that there was sufficient justification for making this demand. However, as circumstances are, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken without delay for the improvement, re-excavation, renewal or reconstruction of irrigation tanks in Bengal, and that necessary legislation in this connection be taken up as early as may be practicable.

He said :—

"This is a resolution which, in my humble opinion is, I think, of no less importance than that which we discussed a little earlier. The question of irrigation tanks greatly affects agricultural conditions in this country, and as agriculture is the mainstay of the people of this country, I think its importance cannot be under-estimated. As regards the question of re-excavation of irrigation tanks, so far as I am concerned, I may say the initiative in this matter was not taken by me. Your Excellency is aware that the initiative was taken by Mr. Birley, the Collector of Burdwan, whose services we have lost—which I regret very much—as he has gone on leave. He did much good and solid work for the agricultural classes and his interest in their welfare prompted him to write a letter on the subject of irrigation tanks to the Government, asking that Government should take steps in this matter; he did me the favour of sending me a copy of that letter, and I accordingly felt it my duty to send notice of a resolution on this point in order to draw the special attention of Your Excellency's Government to this question. The resolution is so worded as to affect the whole of Bengal, but I will only speak with reference to the district from which I come in Burdwan and the neighbouring districts of Birbhum, Bankura and a portion of Hooghly-Chinsurah where we have an enormous number of irrigation tanks, the majority of which have silted up or are being silted up. The question is, can we re-excavate them? Now certainly the owners have no interest in them, neither have the zamindars nor tenure-holders or the raiyats on fixed rent. They are not interested in the irrigation of the land lying on the borders of those irrigation tanks for they may either cultivate it themselves or let it out for cultivation as paddy land to other raiyats, and naturally as they have no interest in re-excavating or improving these tanks and no pecuniary interest in the matter, they will not move in the matter. The result is that these irrigation tanks are in a deplorable condition and agriculture suffers to a very large extent. Last year, my Lord, we expected a bumper crop of rice; we had very good rains in the earlier rainy season in July and August and crops were ready for ripening; then there was a failure of rain in October with the result that nearly half, if not more, of the crops were lost. This year, my Lord, there was shortage in the earlier part of the season, but all the same we managed to get land cultivated and the crops were growing satisfactorily, but there was again a failure of rain in October with the result that much of the crop was damaged, and we had a much smaller crop than we otherwise expected. But if these irrigation tanks were serviceable, we could have arranged to irrigate this land and keep them in order and therefore save this crop from dying out. As the details of the question have been given in Mr. Birley's letter to Your Excellency's Government, I think it will not serve any good to recapitulate them. I appeal to Your Excellency's Government to take steps in the matter so that agriculture in my part of the Province may flourish and improve as it ought to, so that we may not entirely depend on nature for our agriculture. Of course when there is a complete failure of rain, there will be no crops and famine—that we understand—but for the simple failure of one rainy season if the crops die out, this is a matter of regret and misfortune, and steps should be taken to avoid it. My Lord, various suggestions have been made that under the Village Self-Government Act the village boards are given authority to take loans for re-excavating these tanks and recoup the same by taxing the people whose lands will be irrigated by these tanks, and I think the raiyas, as far as I have been able to ascertain, and so far as the officials are concerned, they will also agree in the matter. They will gladly pay up to make up the interest and sinking fund on the loans that may be necessary. They will gladly do it, if it can be done in two or three years, and they are only too anxious that it should be done. If they have not moved in the matter, it is because they could not, and it remains to the credit of Mr. Birley, and I hope that his efforts in this measure will meet with success."

Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, in this case also Government are prepared to accept the resolution on the ground that action has already been taken on the lines proposed by the Hon'ble Member. Government have indeed taken action in two ways. Government have taken action in the first place in different departments without the aid of legislation; and in the second place Government have initiated legislation for this very object, namely, the improvement or re-excavation of irrigation tanks in Bengal. I shall take up the question of legislation first. In March of this year the Government of Bengal appointed a Committee to consider the whole question of legislation for sanitary and agricultural improvements, for the reason that the existing acts were unsuitable. The application of the Embankment Act was too limited; the procedure of the Drainage Act was too cumbrous; and the Sanitary Drainage Act was not applicable to purely agricultural projects. This Committee was well constituted: it had representatives of four district boards who were interested in the matter under discussion. The Committee duly submitted their report and a draft Bill was prepared, the intention of which was to consolidate the existing legislation and to correct the lack of elasticity which was the main fault of the present law. This Bill is designed to cover both large and small schemes. Amongst the latter will be those to which the Hon'ble Member has drawn attention. It has already been submitted to the Government of India; and it will, I trust, if enacted, achieve the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view. In the next place, Government have already taken action without the aid of legislation. This action has been confined, as is natural, to the Burdwan Division, the interests of which the Hon'ble Member represents in this Council. I shall take in turn the case of three districts.

In the case of the Birbhum district, I have ascertained from the Collector, Mr. G. S. Dutt, that the District Agricultural Association and various branch associations, which now number no fewer than 80 in his district, have taken up the question of the re-excavation of irrigation tanks. So far 21 such tanks have been re-excavated, resulting in an increase of 1,600 bighas of irrigated area; and the re-excavation of 132 more such irrigation tanks is under consideration by these branch agricultural associations. Then, as regards the district of Bankura, the construction of tanks has been a feature of famine relief works during the last two famines. In the relief of the 1915 distress,

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

62 reservoirs were re-excavated ; and during the present distress, 25 more such irrigation tanks have been similarly treated. Both the Commissioner of Burdwan and myself can bear testimony to the incalculable benefit which the raiyats have derived from this work which has been accomplished through famine labour. Apart from that, the Director of Agriculture is giving his attention to the promotion of irrigation in this district ; and the Co-operative Department is endeavouring to solve the water-supply problem by the formation of co-operative societies. The Hon'ble Member has also mentioned certain proposals submitted by Mr. Birley, the District Officer of Burdwan. These proposals have been received by Government and have been considered. One of his suggestions is the same as that mentioned in the case of Bankura, namely, the constitution of co-operative irrigation societies. The other points mentioned by him are of a somewhat technical nature ; but they have been and will be further considered.

I should like to point out to the Hon'ble Member in this connection that while the Agricultural Department, the Co-operative Department and the Public Works Department can give advice and counsel, and while it is hoped that this new legislation, if it materializes, may correct many of the existing defects of procedure, yet work of this description, namely, minor irrigation, is emphatically within the domain of private effort. Government therefore consider that the most practical line of advance for the object which the Hon'ble Member has in view, is through branch agricultural associations and through co-operative societies which may take up individual schemes. I repeat that Government accept the resolution ; but would emphasise the proposition that if any genuine instances of self-help in the construction of irrigation reservoirs come to the notice of Government, such genuine instances of self-help are most likely to receive the assistance of Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said .—

"My Lord, I have come to the Council to support this resolution of my learned friend, but I see that the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has accepted the resolution. Allow me, therefore, my Lord, to say that the raiyats of the Burdwan Division are very grateful to your Excellency's Government for steps having already been taken in the direction which the resolution emphasises. My Lord, when the Bengal Village Self-Government Act was passed we thought of this matter, and we thought at that time that the provisions of section 30 of the Act would meet the point which has been raised by my learned friend. But I find to my disappointment that although a district is now a net work of unions, they are unable to take up the irrigation work which is the subject matter of consideration by Your Excellency's Government to-day. Under the provisions of section 30 of the Act, Union Committees have authority to excavate, re excavate or repair tanks, and under the provisions of section 45 of that Act grants-in-aid are given to Union Boards by District Boards, but the money of the district board cannot be spared largely in this direction. Supposing in a district there are 140 unions, what amount of money can be allotted to the union boards, if a difficulty arises as to how to meet the irrigation tanks.

I am very glad to hear to-day that legislation on the subject of improving irrigation tanks is going to be materialised. No subject is more important than the improvement of irrigation tanks. If these tanks are improved and repaired, I am sure that there will be less scarcity than what we are now to face. It is necessary that private zamindars should come forward and co-operate with Government, but the difficulty is that these zamindars are mostly absentee landlords and consequently the improvement of irrigation is neglected. Your Lordship may perhaps be aware that in many parts of the districts of Burdwan and Hooghly the irrigation tanks have silted up. We find that Civil Courts are flooded with law suits as to the right of prescription in making use of the water of the tanks. The result is that the tanks are not improved and they are allowed to run into a very bad condition and consequently water cannot be available from them. Therefore, it is a pleasure to us to-day to hear that legislation is going to be taken up on this subject. If this is done earlier, so much the better for us, especially for the agriculturists.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

With these few observations, I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am very grateful to Your's Excellency's Government and to the Hon'ble Member in charge for the very sympathetic reply he has given and for having accepted the resolution. I quite agree with him that in the matter of minor irrigation the principle of self-help should exist and that we ought to work it out ourselves.

Reference has been made to the network of organization in the district of Birbhum for agricultural improvements ; and I, my Lord, here gratefully acknowledge the good services rendered by Mr. Dutt, the Collector of the District, for the improvement of agriculture and for his activities in many other directions. He has done many things there, and if these agricultural tanks have been re-excavated it is to a very large extent due to the energy and devotion to duty exhibited by Mr. Dutt himself. I am sure that if Mr. Birley had been in Burdwan for some time longer, we would have all our complaints removed. But that is not to be so. In this case, my Lord, as I began by saying that the interest of the owners of tanks lies in the fact that if these tanks are allowed to silt up they can be let out for cultivation, and we have to take note of that. In the matter of irrigation tanks, as in all other matters, we must take note of human nature as it is. Nobody is going to spend money or allow anything to be done which interferes with his own personal and pecuniary interests. So we want legislation so that irrigation tanks may be re-excavated, although the owner may not like it or may object to it. However, as Government have already taken action in the matter, I can only say that we are deeply grateful to Government ; and in this matter we can safely congratulate ourselves that the usual delay, which takes place in Government offices in taking action on suggestions made, has not taken place, and the matter has been expedited as much as possible."

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the name of the Burdwan Municipality be removed from the First Schedule to the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, at an early date.

He said :—

"My Lord, it is almost to a day this year that I had the honour—and might say almost the misfortune—to move in this Council a resolution that the order of supersession passed on the Burdwan Municipality be withdrawn. I was then unsuccessful and my wishes did not meet with the approval of Government. I hope to have better luck on the present occasion. The Burdwan Municipality was superseded in October 1918, and under the orders of supersession it was restored to a body of Municipal Commissioners in October 1919. But in the meantime Government were pleased to put the name of the Burdwan Municipality in the First Schedule by which the rate-payers and the citizens of Burdwan lost the right of electing their own representatives on the Municipal Board, and I submit, my Lord, that there was no justification for depriving them of their rights. True it is that fault was found with the body of Municipal Commissioners who had the charge of the municipality in 1918 and that they had not worked satisfactorily. That is a question on which it will serve no useful purpose to dilate now. But neither in the Government resolution superseding the municipality nor from any other facts has it been proved that the rate-payers of Burdwan have failed to discharge their duty for which they ought to be disenfranchised. The Burdwan Municipality has been in existence for a very long time, and I remember, my Lord, that only very recently it was recognised as one of the best managed municipalities in the province. When the Government of Bengal thought it fit to give some little freedom to some of the selected municipalities in the matter of the preparation of their budget, Burdwan was one of the three municipalities in Bengal chosen to exercise that power and that liberty.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

Now, that freedom has been granted to almost all the municipalities, and whenever there was an occasion to give a place of honour or of some advantage to any of the municipalities, Burdwan was at least one of those selected for the purpose. I might mention that during the Coronation of His late Majesty King Edward VII, of all the mufassal municipalities only two in Bengal, viz., Cossipore-Chitpur and Burdwan, were allowed the privilege of sending an address to the Government of India, and we had in the Government resolutions good words said about us. All of a sudden, Sir, because a particular body of Municipal Commissioners failed in their duty, are we the citizens of Burdwan to suffer for that? There has been no case made out to show that the rate-payers ever deliberately elected bad men or they could not exercise their franchise or they did it wrongly. It is a fact that the previous generation exercised the franchise with credit to themselves and with advantage. Simply because once a particular ward or two or some voters here and there acted unwisely and by fluke one or two men or say a majority of them got in who ought not to have been there, that is no reason to disenfranchise the whole body of citizens. Government choose their officers very carefully, but it has been found that many Government officials holding positions of responsibility and trust have been found guilty and they have been dismissed from the service and committees have sat over them. But for that reason has it ever been suggested that the authority which employed them was to blame? It was only an error of judgment or a mistake which they could not anticipate or foresee. The same is the case with the people of Burdwan. Even if they chose representatives who were not deserving of their trust, they ought to have been given an opportunity to show whether they could reform.

As on the last occasion so on the present, I beg to say that it was the neglect of duty, if not the misconduct, of the Municipal Commissioners which induced the citizens of Burdwan to form and establish a Rate-payers' Association in the town, and it was started only on the eve of the supersession. They started that organization to watch over the conduct of the Municipal Commissioners and to guard the future elections which were then coming on. But the Rate-payers' Association or the authorities of that association were not given an opportunity to show their work or to exercise their influence over the voters and rate-payers of Burdwan. The result is that we have now got a body of Municipal Commissioners entirely appointed by Government. It may be said that on consideration of the report of the gentlemen who sat as Commissioners to inquire into the affairs of the Burdwan Municipality it has been thought desirable to put it in the schedule, but what can those Commissioners say? They can only say that some of the Commissioners were guilty of gross misconduct. That may be so, but that does not show that the rate-payers or voters of Burdwan are not fit to exercise their franchise. By examining the records of the Municipal office it cannot possibly be said that the rate-payers are unfit. Besides that, though I think the rate-payers may have been a little neglectful in the past they are more active in the present day, and they ought to be given the right of choosing their own representatives. One of the reasons at least which was given to us by Mr. Birley, the Collector, was that they could not allow us to exercise the franchise because no list of voters was ready on the day on which it was to be handed over to the Commissioner. Of course, that was not the only reason, but that was one of the reasons. If the voters' list was not ready, was it the fault of the rate-payers or was it the fault of the Officer-in-charge of the Municipal office? It was ready in the case of the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality. Why was it not ready for the Municipality of Burdwan? Even if the Government decided to put the Municipality in the First Schedule as they have done, at least the officers in charge of the Burdwan Municipality could not anticipate Government orders and they ought to have got the voters' list ready before the Government orders were passed putting the Burdwan Municipality in the First Schedule, but that was not done. Besides that, my Lord, there are Mr. Birley's recommendations about nomination which were made after consulting all available agencies in Burdwan. I gratefully acknowledge that so far as the Muhammadans of my town are concerned, we are in the best possible position to-day than we can ever be under the system of election. But at the same time, in spite of the fact that we are enjoying a very good position to-day and we have some of our best men on the Municipal Board, we feel the indignity suffered by my fellow-citizens and we resent the humiliation before other municipal towns of this Presidency which we suffer for no fault of ours. It is true that Mr. Birley consulted the Rate-payers' Association, the Peoples' Association and the Bar Association, and it was on the recommendation of these associations and public bodies that the present board has been formed. Naturally, if the rate-payers were given a chance of election it is 10 to 1 that a very large majority of these very men would be elected. Therefore, so far as the personnel is concerned there is very little difference between the elected and the nominated Board, so far as Mr. Birley's nominations go. But unless the name of the Burdwan Municipality is removed from the First Schedule, we anticipate that Mr. Birley will no longer be the Collector of Burdwan and the next Collector may have different ideas about nominations and may choose a lot of Municipal Commissioners who may not enjoy the confidence of the people. So far, therefore, as this particular Board is concerned, I have nothing to say about it. But I think it is due to the rate-payers of Burdwan that they should have the right of choosing their Municipal Commissioners and whether these very men are returned or not, the rate-payers ought to know that the Municipal Commissioners look upon them as their masters and task-masters and not that they should depend on the District Magistrate for their appointment or seat on the Municipal Board.

My Lord, a good deal has been said about the Burdwan Municipality and I know its faults and defects more than anybody else. But at the same time I submit that the charges brought against that municipality that the roads were bad, drains were not flushed, filtered water was wasted with impunity; but may I ask whether during the year in which the Government have been in charge, has there been any appreciable improvement in any of these things? The roads, I beg to submit my Lord—and I challenge contradiction—are worse than they were in the hands of the old Municipal Commissioners, and if in the days of the old Municipal Commissioners there were no arrangements for flushing the drains they were, at least cleansed once a week, but during the period it was in charge of this new body it was never cleansed once in 12 months. Water used to be wasted with impunity indeed, but has there been any prevention beyond the fact that a heavy loan has been contracted with the object of putting up meters and to have a fresh engine for improving the water-supply, but this could be done by any public body—it neither requires wisdom nor much energy. In regard to the waste of water in public taps, the only measure that I noticed was taken by the officer in charge of the Municipality was that whenever a silly woman was found keeping the tap open the tap was removed altogether and the supply was stopped. This matter was brought to the notice of the Commissioner and under his orders that tap was replaced after three months. This happened at a place which was largely inhabited by bustee people. Therefore, I say that there has been absolutely no improvement at all.

As regards finances, my Lord, the accounts have been kept very efficiently so far as the papers go. But the first examination of the account books has compelled the Chairman of the new Municipality to write to the Examiner of Local Accounts to send a special auditor to go through and examine the papers and as the result of the first examination we find that there has been a misappropriation and defalcation, and we are going to consider the whole question again. So, my Lord, after all, the old Municipal Commissioners were bad enough but they were not much worse than those who have been put in charge of the Municipality by the Government.

Before I sit down, I beg to submit one special grievance of the citizens of Burdwan regarding assessment. On the last occasion in this Council it was stated that the assessment made by the Municipal Commissioners of Burdwan was not fair and equitable, that they taxed the poorer people more and let the rich off easily because the latter were men of influence who could influence the appeal benches and the assessing authorities. But to my horror I find that this inequality and inequity of assessment has found greater expression during the time of the new assessment by the Government officials when the poorer people have been taxed much more and the richer people have been under-assessed. I brought to the notice of the Government official in charge several instances and he said that under the law he had no power to remedy them. I have been connected with Burdwan for some years and I have found in my experience that there has been an increase of Rs. 12,000 or Rs. 15,000 in the general assessment, but by the assessment made by Government officials we find that there has been an increase of Rs. 20,000 that is not much in a municipality whose income was previously Rs. 1,31,000.; Mr. Birley knew perfectly well that there was a general complaint all over the town regarding these assessments, and it is quite evident that under the new régime of the Municipal Commissioners the poorer people have been very much over-assessed than on previous occasions, and a smaller number of people have been under-assessed with the result that the municipal income has not materially improved. The question involved is not the good work of the municipality—I think that the present Municipal Board with its energetic Chairman who devotes his whole time to the municipal work and can afford to do so will do very good work—but the question is about the dignity and prestige and the power to be exercised by the rate-payers.

We feel ourselves humiliated before other municipalities and we protest against that humiliation. We want that the Municipal Commissioners should know that every tax-payer is their master and that they are responsible to every tax-payer for their conduct. They should not sit on the Board with the idea that their nomination and appointment as Municipal Commissioners depend on the good will of the Government officials, at whose hands rests the appointment of Municipal Commissioners.

Above all, my Lord, it will not always be the good fortune of the citizens of Burdwan to have a sympathetic and liberal-minded Collector as Mr. Birley and the Hon'ble Member-in-charge who has got a special interest and a special advantage of knowing Burdwan and its people well.

With these observations, I commend this resolution for the acceptance of this Council."

[The Council was then adjourned for lunch.

The Council reassembled after lunch.]

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, like Mr. Dick and King Charles' head the Maulvi Sahib and the Burdwan Municipality have put in an appearance in the Council Chamber again to-day. Just about a year ago on the 26th of November last, the Hon'ble Mover of the present resolution recommended to the Governor in Council that the orders of supersession of the municipalities of Burdwan and Hooghly-Chinsura be reconsidered and withdrawn. Unfortunately, owing to illness, I was unable to be present on the occasion and for that reason the brunt of giving the reply and defending the Government's action had to be borne by Your Excellency. I find, however, from the proceedings that while the case of the Hooghly-Chinsura Municipality roused some considerable sympathy from the non-official members of this Council, the case of the Burdwan Municipality was espoused in a distinctly non-committal and half-hearted manner not only by those Hon'ble Members who supported the resolution, but by the Hon'ble Mover himself. In fact, to use Your Excellency's own words, the Maulvi Sahib in his speech on that occasion 'damned the municipality and the erring Commissioners with faint praise'. It is true that he urged extenuating circumstances and while admitting certain faults pleaded that the extreme measure of supersession was not called for. It was mainly, however, for the rate-payers—regarding whom he has spoken with some fervour again to-day—that he took up the cudgels stating that the new Ratepayers' Association had been formed to fight against the apathy and neglect of Municipal Commissioners and to better the administration of the municipality. He contended then, and he has contended to-day, that even if the Municipal Commissioners had been guilty of gross neglect and misconduct there was no justification for disenfranchising a whole body of rate-payers because of the folly or stupidity in electing these men. My Lord, to-day the Maulvi Sahib has really brought out nothing new to support the view which he expressed when he moved his resolution about a year ago, although, of course, he has complimented Mr. Birley, the late District Magistrate and Collector, on the selection made by him, but has tried his best to lay it thick on the Government as to the inability on their part to put things straight during the year that the Burdwan Municipality was under Government management, forgetting that when the Government took over the management it found it in perfect chaos, and that it was not possible for them to straighten out things during the short period that it was under Government administration.

I find from the proceedings that the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazlul Haq, who in supporting the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem last year, supported it mainly on the ground that the decision arrived at, if pursued to its logical length, meant the deathblow of the progress of self-government and development of self-governing institutions in general. The Maulvi Sahib moved his resolution and his main argument was the humiliation of the rate-payers and the taking away of the privilege which the townsmen of Burdwan have long enjoyed. Your Excellency speaking on the resolution made the following remarks :—

“ Far from regarding our action as likely to discredit the capacity of the people for managing their own affairs, it seems to us that when we did find obvious and glaring cases of maladministration covering a long period of time, it would be to the advantage of the cause of self-government if we showed that we should not overlook matters of this kind ”

Your Excellency also remarked in reference to certain statements made by the Hon'ble Mover of that resolution that you had never regarded Government's action as a punishment but rather as a service rendered by Government to the public. Now, my Lord, it is easy for the Hon'ble Mover of the present resolution to ask this Government to let bygones be bygones in view of the fact that the municipality has for over a year been administered by an official agency, and more particularly in view of the fact that the old régime or rather the small ring of self-seeking men who have made the administration of this town a scandal, have since, by the action of Government not only been relegated to private life, but also, I venture to think, in the opinion of all right-thinking men have been discredited by the facts which I shall presently disclose—I repeat that in view of these circumstances, it is easy for the Hon'ble Mover to urge Government to give the municipality a new trial and to show its faith in local self-government by trusting the electors of Burdwan once more. In reply to the earlier resolution Mr. O'Malley had urged that there was no guarantee of a straight election being obtained while the influences which were corrupting the municipal administration remained unimpaired. At the same time Mr. O'Malley pointed out that the official agency which was then directing the affairs of the municipality could not reasonably be expected to clean up the Aegean stable within the short space of time which they had up till then enjoyed and it is certainly borne out by the fact that from the report from which I shall give extracts, it has not been possible for the Government to straighten out things in the way that it might have been possible had the municipality been in Government administration for a longer period. It is easy to suggest that if Government claim that the official administration of the past year has been efficient as indeed I shall in the course of my speech assert in spite of the statement made by the Hon'ble Member, there should now be no objection to restoring to this unfortunate municipality its old constitutional privileges. My Lord, I propose to deal with these general considerations at a later stage in my speech. At the present moment I desire to take this opportunity of justifying Government's action in October 1918 by submitting for the information of this Council the deplorable facts which our later enquiry have brought to light. I am reluctant to rake up these memories, but I feel constrained to do so. Government, indeed, felt that having for many years past, and particularly since 1918, been compelled so frequently to condemn the maladministration of this municipality, we should have been glad to have allowed the whole matter to sink into oblivion, but the Hon'ble Member's resolution, although it does not expressly question Government's decision for superseding this municipality, from the remarks which have been made, clearly implies that Government has shown a want of discretion and a lack of sympathy with the cause of local self-government by continuing to withhold from Burdwan the full enjoyment of its ancient privileges. Now, it seems to me that it is very essential that we should set ourselves right in this matter in the eyes of the impartial critics, and after a careful deliberation I have come to the opinion that I shall be doing a public service in setting out some of the facts upon which our present course of action is based, thereby, I hope, convincing this Council that Government would be acting unwisely at the present time in accepting the Hon'ble Member's resolution.

I shall begin, my Lord, by some brief quotations from Government resolutions reviewing the municipal administration in Bengal. It is not correct for the Maulvi Sahib to say that up to about a year ago the Burdwan Municipality was patted on the back for its good administration. The resolutions of 1901-02 stated that collections in Burdwan were unsatisfactory. In 1902-03 the Lieutenant-Governor stated that practically all the municipalities in the division showed improved results except that of Burdwan. Again in 1909-10, after referring to the state of the collections in this municipality, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council went on to remark that he trusted that no time would be lost in remedying this discreditable state of affairs which was remarked upon in the resolution for 1908-09 also. In 1910-11 after referring again to the discreditable collections, the resolution made the following remarks :— 'Reviewing the municipal administration of the year as a whole, it appears that in the Burdwan Division the two worst managed towns are Burdwan and Midnapore.' In 1911-12, it was stated that 'Burdwan and Midnapore are again unfavourably mentioned by the Divisional Commissioner as the worst administered towns in the division.' In 1913-14 the resolution stated that the Burdwan Municipality, which, however, had passed through a period of serious strain owing to the Damodar floods, was the subject of unfavourable comment. The audit of its accounts has revealed a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. In 1914-15 it had an abnormal outstanding balance of Rs. 35,000 and again in 1915-16 we were told that 'of Burdwan it is reported, very little good can be said.' In 1916-17 the resolution states that the 'municipality is criticised by want of control over the municipal staff, inefficiency and waste of public money.' In 1917-18 affairs came to such a pass that the District Magistrate deputed a Deputy Magistrate to enquire into the affairs of this municipality. The enquiry was obstructed by the municipal executive. Papers were suppressed and the municipal engineer who made certain statements to the District Magistrate was dismissed at a subsequent meeting of the Commissioners on the ground that the municipality could not afford so expensive an officer, although the same question had been considered and decided in an opposite way within six months previously. The Deputy Magistrate's enquiry was necessarily incomplete, but the information disclosed such a shocking state of affairs that Government decided to supersede the Commissioners and to order a fresh and more formal investigation. It was considered that the enquiry required a knowledge of accounts and a capacity to weigh evidence, and that it should be conducted by a special committee consisting of an accounts officer deputed by the Accountant-General, Bengal, and an experienced Deputy Magistrate. Babu Hem Kumar Mallik, Deputy Magistrate and Babu Bhupendra Nath Chaudhuri, local auditor, were accordingly selected to hold the enquiry. They were instructed to investigate the various irregularities and malpractices that had occurred and so far as possible to ascertain who were responsible for them, and to advise whether any action should be taken against them. Their particular attention was directed towards the reduction and valuations, the remission of taxes, arrears of collection, municipal contracts for miscellaneous articles and especially the issue of licenses and non-disposal of petitions. The report of this Committee was received by the local Government in May last, and I think it advisable, especially when the Maulvi Sahib has asserted as he has done to-day that the Government had no justification for the steps they have taken, to refer briefly to certain abuses which it disclosed. The last election of this municipality took place in 1915-16 and the previous election in 1912-13. All the Commissioners excepting 5 out of 22 were re-elected.

Maharajahdiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The former Chairman and Vice-Chairman were also re-elected. The report states that a clique was formed of certain of the Commissioners which succeeded in shaping the policy of the Board. Some of them, we are told, took undue advantage of their position in the matter of assessments, house connections, licenses, etc., and otherwise crippled the resources of the municipality. It is said that they generally conducted the affairs of the municipality by mutually helping each other, and as the Maulvi Sahib is perfectly aware, as he comes like myself from Burdwan, that in the end the municipality became a sort of Mutual Admiration Society. The Committee had reason to believe that doubtful and unworthy means had been employed in securing votes. A rising pleader of Burdwan stated that when he sought for election he was asked by certain voters to present them with a harmonium for their theatrical party and to spend a considerable sum in improving a religious building. He refused to comply with those requests and retired from the election. It is stated that some of the Commissioners obtained privileges for themselves and favours for their friends. I need not mention their names because the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib as well as myself know their names. The committee quote an instance of an unimportant lane in which a Commissioner lived being first converted into a ghama road and subsequently macadamised. Three shop-keepers were prosecuted for selling bad ghee. All three samples were declared by the Sanitary Officer to be adulterated, but the case against one of them who was the son of a Municipal Commissioner was dropped and the cases against two others were pressed. One Commissioner recommended that several of his relatives, who were in good circumstances, should be given reduction of their assessments. This application, however, was not disposed of before the supersession of the municipality. The assessment was revised and a quarterly increase of nearly Rs. 8,000 was obtained. Of this amount Rs. 6,500 was given up and in the opinion of the committee wrongly given up by the executive committee. Some of the Commissioners obtained reductions on the assessments of their own properties. These cases have been carefully examined by the committee who in almost all the cases held that the revised valuations were fair and that no reductions should have been made. It might be said that that was one of the reasons why Government took action, but I must mention on the other hand that assessment for every Government building was allowed to go up. As regards private houses, in some cases remissions were granted, although the holdings never fell vacant, and in others there was no proper system for obtaining information when vacancy ceased. The outstanding arrears on the 31st October 1917 were nearly Rs. 65,000, and most of this sum was arrears of long standing. The collecting sarkars are said to have been very apathetic and there was laxity of supervision. Warrants were not issued and if issued were allowed to accumulate and remain unexecuted and in numerous instances there was not good reason for the heavy arrears as shown by the fact that the current taxes in many of these cases were collected. The committee makes the inference—I cannot say of course whether it is justified or not—that the realization of old arrears was not pressed as it might have alienated votes. Perhaps the Maulvi Sahib may know better than the committee. All roads were in bad repairs and there seems to have been little supervision over the conservancy staff. The Maulvi Sahib says that the drains have not been flushed for the last 12 months, a fact entirely erroneous, though I may also remind him that Government occupation of the municipality was not for fully 12 months. Out of 3,025 feet sewers, 1,300 feet was at the time of the supersession unworkable owing to portions of sewers being broken and so blocked up. Conservancy carts were in a most unserviceable condition and the trenching ground, as the Hon'ble Member knows, was a perfect nuisance. The Committee found no proper method of checking expenditure on road repairs. The water-supply suffered from the indiscriminate granting of new private connections against the advice of the Sanitary Engineer. The office registers were sadly neglected and petitions of complaint appear to have been thrown aside and disregarded. I think the Maulvi Sahib once came and told me himself that this was the case. The record-keepers' papers lay in a disorderly heap. Valuable stores were left in charge of a man on Rs. 11 a month who knew no English and could hardly write legible Bengali. His stores account was apparently never checked. The contract system for the supply of miscellaneous articles is said to have been a 'huge scandal' and the committee, while unable to state how much the municipality had been cheated of, are satisfied that fraud had been practised on an enormous scale. The system which the Chairman introduced was to allow the contractors 5 per cent. advance on the rates supplied by the Calcutta firms. Bills were supposed to be substantiated by sub-vouchers showing the price at which the contractors had purchased from the Calcutta firms. It appears, however, that the office merely checked the advance of 5 per cent. and made little attempt to check the sub-vouchers. The contractors had in some cases got blank forms of Calcutta tradesmen and, after filling them up and signing the name of the firm, supported their bills by these spurious sub-vouchers, while in other cases they altered the figures in genuine invoices submitted by Calcutta firms. The accountant and the two contractors have recently been prosecuted—the former was convicted but acquitted on appeal, the two latter have pleaded guilty and have been convicted. In one case a purchase was made from a Calcutta firm for Rs. 125 but the invoice, purporting to have been issued by this firm but repudiated by them in Court although actually written on one of their forms, showed that the purchase was made for Rs. 60. In another case the same thing was done in which the municipality was charged Rs. 699 odd, i.e., 5 per cent. advanced on the alleged invoice price of Rs. 666-8, although the Calcutta firm had actually been paid only Rs. 432. Another printed sub-voucher in which the form was genuine but the entry fictitious was produced to support a claim of Rs. 378, although the articles had actually cost the contractor Rs. 184. I could cite many other instances of gross frauds. I suggest that the fact that such crude devices should have been successful argues either complicity or gross negligence on the part of the municipal executive and staff. It may be argued that an Honorary Vice-Chairman could urge extenuating circumstances if he failed to check the detailed accounts of his office. I do not admit that argument since it must be held that any person accepting the privileges of a public office must consent also to shoulder its responsibilities. Moreover, it is to be remembered that in the present case the irregularities had frequently been brought to the notice of the municipal executive. There was no excuse for the undue advantages which some of the Commissioners were allowed to take of their position. One Commissioner obtained a house-connection in 1915 without the payment of the usual fee of Rs. 125. The money was paid on the 2nd October 1918—the date of supersession. The Vice-Chairman obtained a house-connection for which he paid the fee on the same day, i.e., the 2nd October, the date of supersession. In both those cases the ferrules were larger than the house-connection rules allowed. Another Commissioner had not paid the fee till May last for a connection obtained in 1914.

My Lord, I have gone into these unedifying details at perhaps some unnecessary length, but I feel that it is my duty to convince this Council that the maladministration of this unfortunate municipality had attained to such scandalous heights that very drastic action was essential.

I have recently seen the Administration Report on the working of the Burdwan Municipality during the year 1918, which includes the period of six months during which the municipality remained under supersession. I find that the total receipts for the year exceeded those of the previous years by Rs. 3,595 while the general revision of assessment carried out by an outside assessor has given an annual increase of Rs. 27,181 which is, however, liable to reduction on appeal. The financial position of the municipality has, therefore, improved and the District Magistrate thinks that its routine administration is better. It cannot, however, be expected that the huge arrears which have accumulated can be immediately realized or that the neglect of years can be remedied in a few months.

I should now, my Lord, like to deal with certain general considerations which the Hon'ble Member in moving his resolution has submitted to this Council. In the first place I would submit that it was impossible for Government, in view of the grave malpractices by which the municipality's administration has been characterised, to run the risk of having any of those particular Commissioners, who have been pilloried in the report which I have quoted, as Commissioners of the new Board. Under the law, moreover, it would have been necessary to hold elections prior to the supersession of the municipality, so that the new Board of elected Commissioners might be ready to take office as soon as the period of supersession ceased. But there was no time, as it happened, to prepare the preliminaries for an election when Government considered the arrangements to be made after the 2nd October 1919, while the Act does not permit the period fixed under section 65 to be extended. Government, therefore, decided that the municipality should be placed in Schedule I and the new body of Commissioners therefore nominated.

It might be suggested that as the interval subsequent to the period of supersession, has now been tided over, it will be possible for Government to have preparations made for an election. The present Board of Commissioners could carry on while the preliminaries are being duly carried out. I submit, however, that it is impossible for Government to suggest to the gentlemen who have shown sufficient public spirit to take on, at the request of Government, the thankless task of putting this municipality straight, that they should within a few months of their appointment be dismissed with thanks in order to make room for an elective body. I am not sure that the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution has realized the invidious position in which he wishes to place Government.

We are grateful to those gentlemen, among whom the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib is one, for having accepted what I have termed a somewhat thankless task and it would, therefore, to my mind be an ungracious act indeed on our part to give them an unceremonious couge when we did not see—at least some do not—any further use for them. Moreover, whilst being a townsman of Burdwan myself, I do not in any way wish to run down the intelligence of the electors there; yet in view of what did happen and may easily happen again, knowing as I do Burdwan, I doubt if the public can altogether rely on these electors to select the best representatives. The past history of the municipality certainly does not tend to give us confidence in this behalf. The Hon'ble Mover is probably aware, as he himself has said it, that Mr. Birley took the utmost pains to consult public opinion in sending up his nominations. He consulted the leading associations and received a deputation representing the trade interests of the town. His nominees in practically all the cases are included in the lists of suitable persons which were handed in by the bodies concerned. Of course, I recognise that a nominated Board, however well selected and however representative it may be is still not the same thing as an elected Board to a town which has so long enjoyed the privilege of election. I also recognise that by placing this municipality under Schedule I, Government are compelled to cast, so to speak, a slur and an indignity upon the citizens of Burdwan which many of them will naturally resent. But, nevertheless, in view of the facts which I think it is my duty to lay before the Council, although it is not the intention of Government to keep this municipality indefinitely in Schedule I, on which head the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib seems to have some apprehension, I think that Government must refuse to bind themselves by any promise to restore it at a given date. I can only say that Government will anxiously watch its progress under the new régime, and will, at the earliest practical moment, only readily restore to the rate-payers their old privilege. I also think that the public should have an opportunity of judging as to whether in making selections to the present Board, Government have really not done them a good turn; for we have included in the new Board not only some of the best men available but mainly or largely persons recommended by the different public bodies in Burdwan who were consulted by the District Magistrate, and who, I have every reason to believe, as the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib himself knows, are satisfied with the selections made.

For these reasons, my Lord, I recommend to this Council that the resolution be thrown out."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

" My Lord, with reference to this resolution, I occupy a very unfortunate position. When I moved this resolution I said that I felt that it was an indignity and an undeserved indignity thrown on the people of Burdwan; but the question of the honour, the dignity and the interests of the citizens of Burdwan is of great concern also to the Hon'ble Member in charge—and in fact of far greater concern to him than to an individual like myself—and if I am in a rather unfortunate position of moving this resolution it is simply because the Hon'ble Member-in-charge is now a Member of the Government and does not sit on the non-official side.

My Lord, I did not enter into the details regarding the order of supersession, nor did I at all mean to question the justice or the reasons for that order which is now an old story. But the Hon'ble Member-in-charge has taken the trouble to read some extracts from the report of the Commission that sat. I admit, and admit fully, that all these instances which he has read out are no doubt deplorable instances, and that it is a disgrace to my fellow-citizens and fellow-countrymen in Burdwan. But, at the same time, I submit my Lord, that the report is still incomplete and many other instances have been left out. I know of many other instances, and I offered myself to Babu Hem Kumar Mallik to give my evidence, but I was told that I would be called later on and the inquiry was finished without taking my evidence. I know also that this was the case with several other gentlemen whose evidence was not taken.

My Lord, the Hon'ble Member-in-charge has referred to some leagues or cliques that were formed to put a particular body in power. So far as the last executive of the municipality were concerned, the question how they were elected is known to the Hon'ble Member-in-charge as well as to myself. But so far as the Chairman and Vice-Chairman were concerned, they were elected not through any cliques but through untoward circumstances

Instances have been given that house-connections have been surreptitiously taken. But I can remind the Hon'ble Member that there are instances in which separate connections have been taken in entire violation of rules. I know of instances in which a gentleman, who exercised his influence as a Municipal Commissioner, has got his holdings—not one or two, but several—miserably under-assessed, and under the fresh assessments, they have been again under-assessed. These holdings are inhabited by public officials who pay a known rent and in spite of this fact, they have been miserably under-assessed. Still these gentlemen have been appointed Commissioners by Your Excellency's Government. This thing has happened always and I do not grudge it, because Mr. Birley in making his recommendations consulted various public bodies and associations and accepted their recommendations. So I do not grudge their being on the Municipal Board; and I admit that these mistakes occur, whether the Municipal Commissioners are elected by the rate-payers or are appointed by the Government.

As I began by saying that, speaking as a Mussalman, which community I represent in this Council, and I repeat what I said before, we are deeply grateful to Mr. Birley and to the Hon'ble Member-in-charge as we have been placed in a very fortunate and favourable position on the new Board. But what I say is, I said it before and I say it again, that it is the question of the disenfranchisement of the whole town without justification that we do not like and we ask that the slur should not be allowed to continue any longer. If the name of Burdwan is not removed from the First Schedule now, I do not know whether we shall occupy the same position on the next occasion when the opportunity arises. The Hon'ble Member says that we should give the new Board a trial and watch its progress. I naturally expect, my Lord, that after a year or two when the report will be favourable, as this Board has fortunately got a very energetic young man as its Chairman who can devote, and can well afford to devote, his whole time to the work of the municipality and who does the work of the municipality with a devotion worthy of the dignity of a town like Burdwan, it will turn out very good work; that fact will be a justification for Government allowing the name of the Burdwan Municipality to stand in the First Schedule. The Government will naturally say—'Here is a Board appointed by Government and it is working very well. It should, therefore, be allowed to work on.' That is my apprehension, my Lord. The Hon'ble Member has said that we have got a Board which is working very satisfactorily; but I can tell him that he does not live in Burdwan and does not know that we had to meet with great difficulties and had to get up conspiracies in getting this very gentleman elected as the Chairman of the Municipal Board, outside the Municipal office in the open camping ground, and that it was after a good deal of struggle that we managed to get him elected as Chairman. Otherwise, the nominee of the gentlemen who are responsible for our late misfortune and disgrace would have managed to get himself elected as Chairman. It was on account—and I claim some credit for it—of the bold stand made by the Muhammadan Commissioners that we managed to get this energetic young man elected as Chairman.

The Hon'ble Member had said that corruptions were attempted at the general election of the rate-payers. I know, my Lord, that this gentleman has done us a favour by accepting the Chairmanship of the Board and that attempts were made to corrupt the Municipal Commissioners to vote for a particular gentleman as Chairman. Of course, that attempt was frustrated.

The Hon'ble Member has referred to the fact that a certain theatrical party asked for a harmonium. I know of the instance and I was present at the time when the request was made. But it is well known that such things happen, and on the particular occasion the candidate, whose cause I was espousing, sternly refused to come to terms with these people. In all countries where elections are held bioscope-shows and grants in aid to charitable objects are given, as these go to help towards the election. These things are not peculiar to Burdwan itself. But I claim it to the credit of the citizens that the candidate sternly refused to comply with the request that was made. We must, however, take into consideration by whom the request was made; it was made by a band of vagabond young men who employ most of their time in theatrical music and do no work.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

I might cite another instance in which a religious shrine was offered to be rebuilt by a candidate for municipal election ; he offered to rebuild a Muhammadan shrine or tombstone and to surround it by a wall and to pay for it ; but it must be said to the credit of the rate-payers of that particular ward that they refused the offer, although as a matter of fact they were raising subscriptions for the object. Of course, I know of another instance in which corruption was employed and some people were bribed to vote. I confess that such things did happen and do happen even now, and it was for the prevention of these corrupt practices that we started the Ratepayers' Association. Admitting that we did commit a mistake and that we have been guilty of corruption, it is the duty of the parental Government to educate the people to exercise their rights and not to disenfranchise them as was done on the last occasion. At the time of the last election, as the Hon'ble Member has stated, in 1916, we brought to the notice of Mr. Marr, who was then the Collector of Burdwan, a specific instance of bribery, and the result was that Mr. Marr wrote in so many words that under the Bengal Municipal Act corruption was no offence, that it did not invalidate an election, and that he could not therefore interfere. I took the written statement of Mr. Marr to Mr. K. C. De, who was then Secretary to the Municipal Department and it was then placed before the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Syed Shams-ul Huda, who promised to take up the matter at the time of the next amendment of the Bengal Municipal Act. I beg to ask the Hon'ble Member whether these people, who were guilty of attempting to corrupt and were guilty of corruption, have all been eliminated from the present Board. He has referred to my personal knowledge and I respectfully take his word. He knows as well as I do that the present Board has not been cleared of these people, and I therefore claim that no Board can be perfect. I submit that this Board is quite as good or as bad as the previous one, with the exception of Muhammadans who are in the best position. What we feel, my Lord, is that the stigma and slur cast on the people of Burdwan should not continue.

The Hon'ble Member has referred to the cliques and combinations which were made to put somebody on the Board and to have a sort of Mutual Admiration Society. I would like to know from the Hon'ble Member whether the elected members only of the last Board which was superseded were a party to these cliques and combinations, and whether the present nominated members were not as good a party as the elected members themselves. In fact, one of these parties or cliques is now represented by a member who was nominated by the Government. It was in the Raj Palace itself that the whole exposure took place in the presence of the Hon'ble Member himself. There is another point with reference to these gentlemen that we cannot afford to do without them ; they are men of influence and unfortunately they exercise their influence in their own interests and in those of their relatives, and although I move for the withdrawal of the order of supersession, I submitted then and I repeat it now that they did exercise their influence then and do exercise it even now, whether outsiders are appointed as assessors or whether they are appointed by the municipality.

It has been remarked that the Municipal Engineer was dismissed because he complained to the District Magistrate. I submit that although I have not been a Municipal Commissioner for about 6 or 7 years prior to the supersession, I have taken some interest in municipal affairs—I did find that the Municipal Commissioners were not going straight. I in consultation with some of my friends started the Rate-payers' Association. I may submit also that for some time past the question of the staff maintained by the municipality has been engaging our attention. We have found that the staff employed are somewhat expensive and the question was whether so many men should be employed by the Municipal Board.

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

"The fact is that the old Municipal Board appointed many men whom they liked and it was due to the Mutual Admiration Society, because the Municipal Commissioners always wanted their protégés to be appointed. Therefore, we wanted to sit on judgment on them, and the Municipal Engineer was one of the officers whose services at least, I still maintain, the municipality does not require. Burdwan is not a town like Calcutta or Dacca or Howrah that it requires a skilled engineer: an ordinary Upper Subordinate Class man, who can put the roads in order, can manage its work. Whenever there is a big scheme, e.g., of an overhead water tank, the municipality generally indents for a man from the Sanitary Engineer and it has to pay for him. What is the good, therefore, of keeping a highly-paid engineer? I may submit that the engineer did make some statement to Mr. Birley; but the engineer was himself a member of the party at that time. I admit, my Lord, that, at the present moment, we, the Mussalmans of Burdwan, find ourselves in an absolute majority on the Municipal Board and are therefore in a very good position to-day.

With these observations, and after what has fallen from the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur, I do not think that it will serve any useful purpose, in a house like this, to press this Resolution; and I therefore beg leave to withdraw it."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that immediate steps be taken to improve the professorial staff of the Rajshahi College, specially in English, Philosophy and Physics, and that the College be affiliated in the Economics Honours Course and the Botany Pass Course; and
- (b) that early arrangements be made for providing gradually post-graduate studies in Chemistry, Physics, English, Mathematics, Philosophy, History, Sanskrit and Persian and for reopening the B. L. Classes in the said College.

He said :—

"My Lord, I do not think that I need detain the Hon'ble Members for long on account of this resolution because for some time past I have been dealing in this Council with the Rajshahi College, and I hope I have thereby and by my last Budget speech specially already made it sufficiently clear that the Rajshahi College, though it does not suffer in any way in comparison with the Dacca College in so far as the number of students, percentage of success, etc., are concerned, yet it suffers very much in comparison with the Dacca College in point of professorial staff and other educational facilities, and, for the matter of that, in point of Government expenditure per head of student. The fee rate of the Rajshahi College was Rs. 4 some time ago and it was raised to Rs. 6, and the reason then given by the Government was that it was done with a view to uniformity. But, my Lord, it is certainly a matter of great regret that the uniformity was sought for only with regard to the tuition fee, and, not to speak of any corresponding uniformity in the matter of educational facilities and other advantages, the little that was good in the Rajshahi

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

College is being gradually taken away. I have been complaining of this for long; but, my Lord, I must say that I have been unheeded. The Rajshahi College had for its Professors in English, Philosophy, Physics and Sanskrit some of the best men in the University, and now for some time past in all these subjects the professorial staff is far beneath that standard which even prevailed there only a few years ago. I also tried in my capacity as Secretary to the Rajshahi Association to impress upon the departmental authorities, but all my efforts could not be of any real use. And therefore as a last resort I have brought this matter by way of appeal to the Hon'ble Members and to Your Excellency specially. Your Excellency is going to visit Rajshahi very soon. Your Excellency will, I hope and trust, be able to see personally the present condition of the Rajshahi College and its special requirements in the light of the few facts I have already placed and am now placing for Your Excellency's consideration. Of course, the Rajshahi College has grown to its present status under absolutely Indian management, and it is very creditable to those very able officers who have helped in its development. I say this as I do not wish to be misunderstood. What I complain of at the present moment is not so much against those gentlemen who are now engaged in teaching in the Rajshahi College as against the policy of engaging Subordinate Educational Service men on tuition work in the college classes, especially in the B.A. classes. What I want for the Rajshahi College is that the tuition work should be entirely managed with Provincial Educational Service men under the guidance of an experienced professor of proved ability on higher pay for each subject, and the Principal and at least one senior professor should be persons promoted to the Indian Educational Service which will be an incentive to meritorious work among the professors. I beg humbly to suggest further in this connection that whenever there is to be a transfer or vacancy caused by retirement or any other event, the vacancy should be filled up by an equally efficient man, and to my mind, in case of transfer of an efficient professor, the problem of an equally efficient successor should be first considered, and until one is available the transfer ought not to take place. I may cite here the case of the transfer from the Rajshahi College of Babu Hem Chandra De, Senior Professor of Philosophy. He was transferred, so far as we can judge, without any arrangement being previously made for an equally efficient man to go in his place. The result was that the Philosophy class suffered much. Without any reflections upon anybody, I may safely submit that the arrangement now made is very unsatisfactory. Out of the three Professors for Philosophy and Logic two are Subordinate Educational Service men and the third has just been promoted to the Provincial from the Subordinate Educational Service. Before this, Babus Hem Chandra De, Krishna Chandra Bhattacharyya and Ambika Charan Mitra were in the post of the senior professor of Philosophy—they are, without doubt, distinguished professors of ability of a very high order. So far as English is concerned, I need only say that the result in that subject in recent University examinations has been extremely unsatisfactory. In my support I cannot do better than to quote from the report about the Rajshahi College by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari and Mr. Jnan Chandra Ghosh, dated the 22nd January 1919, and from that by Mr. J. N. Das Gupta and Mr. Jnan Chandra Ghosh, dated the 17th September 1917. In recommending an additional teacher for English Sir Deba Prasad and Mr. Ghosh say that 'in making the appointment care should be taken to strengthen the quality of the staff,' and Messrs. Das Gupta and Ghosh in their report of 1917 remarked that 'the failure in English in 1917 has been very heavy. Out of 171 students sent for the I. A. Examination 101 failed in English, 50 failing in this subject only. Out of 127 students sent up for the B. A. Examination 64 failed in English, 27 failing in this subject only.' I may add that though the teaching of English is admittedly defective in the Rajshahi College still the present tutorial staff for English consists of three officers of the Subordinate Educational Service and two only of the Provincial Educational Service. Then, as regards mathematics, when Babu Rajmohan Sen retired the Rajshahi Association approached the Government and got an assurance that 'an endeavour will be made to send a fairly senior professor in his place.' But at last one had to be promoted to the Provincial Educational Service, so far as I remember, for being sent to the Rajshahi College. I must, however, make it clear that I am not making any reflection upon the ability of the new gentleman. I am informed that he is an able man and I am glad that he has been promoted to the Provincial Educational Service. But what we wanted was that a senior professor should have been either appointed or transferred to be at the head of the tutorial staff in Mathematics. Another complaint is that no research scholarship is provided for in the Rajshahi College. Dr. Neogi, the officiating Principal, is himself a man of great reputation in the field of chemical researches, but he has got no assistant to help him in that work. To sum up this part of my address—what I submit is that now that the Dacca College is being converted into a University, the Rajshahi College is undoubtedly taking the first place among the mufassal colleges and in that view it is but fair that it should be maintained in that high level of efficiency which is consistent with the position it already occupies. I must frankly confess that of late there has been a serious apprehension in the minds of the Rajshahi public that if the present state of things in the Rajshahi College continues, it will in no time lose much of the development it has made during the last twenty years. We do not see any reason why the interests of the Rajshahi College should be sacrificed or overlooked in the interests of any other institution. Only three or four years back the Rajshahi College was cheap for the students and its professorial staff was of a superior order, but now that the tuition fee has been increased by 50 per cent. the tutorial staff has been materially brought down, and the only result of the increment of the tuition fee is, I am sorry to say, that the Government grant has been diminished by nearly twenty thousand rupees.

It will not be quite out of place, if in this connection I draw the attention of the authorities to the very sympathetic suggestions of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad and Mr. Ghosh in their report about the Rajshahi College referred to above. I might be permitted to quote a few lines: 'To speak of only a few of the many present needs. The Principal and the Professors have no quarters, the hostels are defective and inadequate, the Chemistry laboratory is not up-to-date, the class rooms are insufficient and there is no library worth the name, nor a much-needed covered gymnasium. The students during their intervals have to rest under the trees, healthy and pleasant when the weather is favourable, but absolutely the reverse in other circumstances.'

On a previous occasion I referred to the desirability of the Professor of Economics of the Rajshahi College to be in the Provincial Educational Service. The College has been affiliated in Economics for the last seven or eight years, and it is high time that a further development should be made by also providing for the study of that subject in the Honours course.

In my resolution I have asked for the affiliation of the College in the Botany pass course. At present there is no arrangement for study in that branch in the Rajshahi College, though there was such an arrangement some years back under the old regulations North Bengal is pre-eminently an agricultural tract, and in order that the study of scientific agriculture, which is so much needed in that part of the country, especially for the benefit of the Muhammadans who form the majority in the division, may develop, the affiliation of the College in Botany is urgently necessary.

Then, my Lord, as regards the second part of my resolution, I may be permitted to inform Your Excellency and the Hon'ble Members that the question was raised a long time ago and there was much correspondence and discussion about the proposal between the Rajshahi Association, the Governing Body of the College and the Director of Public Instruction. The Director referred the matter to the Governing Body of the College with certain proposals by his letter No. T-437, dated the 28th October, 1916, and the matter was considered by the Governing Body, who approved of the proposal of opening of M.A. and B.L. classes in their meeting held on the 24th December, 1916, and reported to that effect to the Director of Public Instruction in their letter No. 1014—32, dated the 25th January, 1917. At the time the only difficulty that was felt was the question of funds for the recurring expenditure. But there was an offer of Rs. 50,000 from Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi of Puthia and another offer by the Raja Bahadur of Dighapatia and his brother Kumar Basanta Kumar Ray through the Rajshahi Association, for the construction of a building estimated at about Rs. 50,000. The Rajshahi Association also undertook to provide additional buildings for the purpose and the question of funds for the recurring expenditure has also now been solved by the raising of the College fees from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6 a month which has given an increment of nearly Rs. 16,000. Now there are arrangements for M.A. and B.L. classes in the mufassal in the Dacca College which is going to be converted into a University. So the necessity for providing for such study in the mufassal will soon arise. At Rajshahi there were M.A. and B.L. classes before; the new arrangement under the University Commission report is likely to take time. In the meantime I hope the Rajshahi College will be granted the boon for which the public is so eager and ready to contribute materially. Government, I think, will not have to spend much on this score. A big hostel for the accommodation of students is going to be built, I understand, next year, at a cost of nearly three lakhs including the grant of Rs. 50,000 provided in this year's budget. Hired houses now occupied by the students may, if necessary, be utilised for any additional accommodation necessary for the M.A. and B.L. students. The University Commission also suggests that the Rajshahi College is a fit one to be maintained as a University College to be developed hereafter into a University. In that view also my proposal can be safely given effect to. I appeal to Your Excellency to take the matter into your serious consideration and make the Rajshahi College a self-contained one, and I hope that the Government will accept my proposal.

In this connection I beg to quote from a letter of the Director of Public Instruction to the Governing Body of the Rajshahi College, dated the 28th October, 1916. The letter says :—

‘My personal view with reference to the development of the Rajshahi College is that at the present moment instead of embarking on any new schemes the College should concentrate its attention wholly on the improvement of the work which it is already attempting. The existing accommodation for the students is very defective; and I should have thought that any money which the Rajshahi Association or any other body or persons may be willing to contribute could with greater advantage have been devoted to the removal of this defect.

At the same time I appreciate the anxiety of the people of Rajshahi to create additional educational facilities at the Rajshahi College, and I am prepared to consider favourably any scheme for the opening of M. A. and B. L. classes at the Rajshahi College provided—

- (i) that arrangements both as regards accommodation and instruction of the classes can be made to the satisfaction of the University of Calcutta and the Government of India with whom the final decision as regards the affiliation of the College up to the M. A. and B. L. standards will rest;

Mr. Hornell.

- (ii) that no additional cost is imposed on Government as a result of the opening of the classes and of their maintenance for a period of five years from the date of opening ; and
- (iii) that adequate guarantee will be furnished that the funds which it will be necessary for the opening and maintenance of the classes for five years will be forthcoming

I have to explain that any extension of the affiliation of the Rajshahi College for which the Department of Education may be willing to approach the Calcutta University cannot take effect before the beginning of the session 1918-19.

That was in 1916. And although the Rajshahi Association undertook to provide for the accommodation of the building nothing could be done in view of the expected report of the Universities Commission, although the Director of Public Instruction in his letter, dated the 29th March, 1917, addressed to the Governing Body of the Rajshahi College appreciated the public spirit of the Rajshahi people. The letter says :—‘ I appreciate very greatly the generous contributions with which the public of Rajshahi have come forward, and I fully sympathise with their anxiety to create further facilities for higher education in Rajshahi.’ The report is out now, but I believe some time will elapse before effect can be given to it. Meantime I think it is time that something should be done towards opening the B. L. classes in Rajshahi.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Hornell said :—

“ My Lord, the burden of the Hon'ble Member's song seems to be that Government are grossly neglecting the interests of the Rajshahi College and that he has been repeatedly urging the Educational Department to do something ; over this he has taken about half an hour of the Council's time. All I can say is that since I returned to this province in September last, I have had the pleasure of meeting the Hon'ble Member, but he never mentioned all these grievances to me. I venture to suggest that if he had done so and discussed the matter with me I could have spared the Council a good deal of my reply.

The first part of the Resolution suggests that immediate steps should be taken to improve the professorial staff of the College, especially in English, Philosophy and Physics, and then proceeds to suggest that the affiliation which the College now enjoys should be extended so as to include the Economics Honours course and the Botany Pass course. As regards the existing staff, there are two professors of English and three lecturers. The senior professor is a 1st class M.A. who in his day stood second in the University. His pay at present is Rs. 400 a month in class IV of the Provincial Educational Service. The second professor is a 2nd class M. A. in English whose present pay is Rs. 200 a month in class VIII of the Provincial Educational Service. The three lecturers are all 2nd class M. A.'s in English and the pay of each is at present Rs. 125 in class IV of the Subordinate Educational Service. Government has recently agreed to increase the staff by the addition of a professorship in the Provincial Educational Service. The staff in Philosophy consists of a professor in class VIII of the Provincial Educational Service and two lecturers, one in class I of the Subordinate Educational Service and the other in class IV of the Subordinate Educational Service. The professor is a senior officer of considerable experience who has recently been promoted from a lectureship in the Dacca College. The senior lecturer who is a senior officer in class I of the Subordinate Educational Service is now on leave and is studying in England. A Muhammadan gentleman was appointed to act in his place, but he has recently been transferred to a permanent post at Dacca. It has not yet been possible to fill up the temporary vacancy. The second lecturer is an officer in class IV of the Subordinate Educational Service. The Senior Professor of Physics was, until recently, Rai Kumudini Kanta Banarji Bahadur who combined this work and the work of Principal. The Rai Bahadur is now on deputation with the Calcutta University as an Inspector of Colleges. In his place an experienced officer from the Sibpur College has been appointed to act. There are two Professors of Physics and the holder of the second professorship is a 1st class M. A. who stood first in this University. Thus, before the Rai Bahadur left, the two professors of Physics in the College were the top men of their respective years. There are two Demonstrators in Physics, one in class III and the other in class IV of the Subordinate Educational Service.

Turning to other departments of the staff, which the resolution does not mention, we have asked Government for a temporary additional lecturer in Arabic and Persian and an additional Demonstrator in Chemistry. The Governing Body of the College have not submitted any formal proposals regarding the affiliation of the College either in Economics Honours or in Botany. Certain representations have been received from the Secretary of the Rajshahi Association and these have been sent to the Principal of the College for consideration.

As regards the second part of the Resolution, I am not quite sure what the Hon'ble Member means by making early arrangements for providing gradually post-graduate studies in certain subjects. The proposal for starting post-graduate classes as also B. L. classes was carefully considered by Government in 1917, and it was then decided that no steps could be taken until the recommendations of the University Commission had been considered. The report of the Commission is now before the public and this Government are still awaiting the orders thereon from the Government of India. The Commission have advised a complete reorganisation of University education throughout the Presidency, and until a decision has been arrived at with reference to their recommendations, it is impossible for the local Government to commit themselves to any undertakings with regard to the future of the College."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have very little to say as regards the first part of my hon'ble friend's resolution, nor have I much to say as regards the second part in which he asks for facilities for post-graduate studies in Chemistry, Physics, etc. I will only speak on that part of the resolution in which he says that early arrangements should be made for re-opening the B. L. classes in the Rajshahi College. No reason has been given why, with the present plethora of law graduates in the country, there should be an additional machinery for manufacturing such graduates in Northern Bengal. I believe that there are at present 10,000 law graduates practising in the different Courts in Bengal, and in one subdivision of Rajshahi I believe there are about 130 practising B. L. pleaders. And I think in the town of Rampur Boalia there are not one hundred but several hundred law graduates practising as pleaders."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"No, in Rampur Boalia the number is 70 only.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"I accept my hon'ble friend's statement. But I suppose that no one has complained about the paucity of the number of pleaders there. I believe the law graduates themselves realize now that life, after getting the law degree, is rather dreary, and to multiply the number of lawyers in this country is not a thing which is desirable. There is the University Law College and if the authorities abolish all the law colleges and classes in the country, the country would not be the worse for it. Mr. Hornell has not naturally looked into this side of the question, and the Government letter which has been quoted does not refer to that view of the question. But, my Lord, if you are able during your time to get all the law colleges and classes abolished in Bengal it would be a great thing. If there are no law graduates within the next ten years the country would be the better for it. I think that after six years in college a man has to serve his apprenticeship with a pleader, which takes about two years more, and then unless he is very industrious and exceptionally intelligent, he earns hardly any money but gains more wisdom. They take to questionable ways, and I think that if their number is increased and there is more competition, it would not improve the conduct which is required of every member of the bar. I am sorry to have to make this observation as I myself had the honour of belonging to the Bar. Instead of increasing the number of lawyers it is my firm conviction that the law classes should be abolished. There are about 3,000 students studying law at present and over and above this we do not want another class to be opened in Rajshahi for these law students. Therefore I am not in favour of opening the B. L. classes at Rajshahi."

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I am accused by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell of wasting half an hour's time of this Council by moving this resolution. Of course, I am glad that he has come back to take charge of his department after his labours in the University Commission, and I am also glad to learn that he is quite willing to discuss the matter with me and that if anything can be done it will be done.

As I have said at the outset, it is not for a vote in this Council that I have brought forward this resolution, but simply to bring to the notice of the educational authorities the defects not only pointed out by me but also by the Hon'ble Sir Deva Prasad Sarbadhikari in his inspection note in January last. I still maintain that the arrangement for the teaching of Philosophy is very defective, about which nothing has been said, and that unless some arrangements are made for its improvement, I do not know what will be the fate of those reading that subject at Rajshahi. I do not say that Government are not sympathetic and that they are neglecting their duty, but what I beg to submit is that it sometimes happens that proper notice is not taken, though, I think, it is for the purpose of finding out these defects in Government colleges that Inspectors have been appointed and inspection is made by the educational authorities. I pointed out these defects and tried for their improvement on several occasions, but to no effect, and so, my Lord, I have at last thought it advisable to bring forward this resolution at a time when after a few days Your Excellency will be visiting there and will be able to obtain first-hand information from the local authorities.

I need only say a few words about the B. L. class for which I have been mercilessly attacked by my Hon'ble friend, Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur. I do not know why it should be compulsory that all persons from the mufassal should come to Calcutta or go to Dacca for the study of law. Dacca is going to be a separate University and what will be the arrangements there we do not know. I am informed that there are 3,000 pupils in the University and in the Ripon Law Colleges. If in Calcutta it is necessary that law study should be made and any number should be taught, I do not see why it should be discouraged in the mufassal. My Hon'ble friend, who was a distinguished member of this profession, has now retired after his long and prolific practice : his son has now got a Judgeship in the Calcutta High Court. Of course he can now discourage the law study, but the country at large cannot do so. What will the rising generation do? Of late, we have been trying to make other avenues of life open to the rising generation, but we are not in sight of any other at present. Even the arrangement for the study of Medicine is very limited. My Hon'ble friend forgets that the pleadership classes are going to be abolished and that consequently B. L.s are to practise in the Munsifs' courts, and in fact many B. L.s nowadays practise in the Munsifs' as well as in the criminal courts. I think he has been misinformed that at Rajshahi there are over 200 pleaders. As a matter of fact, there are not more than 70. I do not know from where he got his information. My idea is that if the B. L.s can be encouraged to practise in the Criminal Courts the atmosphere in these Courts may be improved to a certain extent. My friend thinks that the law study should be abolished altogether. I do not know why, and even if that be so, the University are the proper authorities which should be moved to that effect. Even in the University Commission's Report it is not suggested anywhere that the law study should altogether be discontinued or discouraged in this country. It seems to me that the legal profession is still now at least one in which the rising generation can make out a living. If one can honestly work in the criminal or in the Munsif's Court he can earn Rs. 100 a month, whereas if one gets an appointment in the Education Department one will not be given more than Rs. 35 a month. Whatever that may be, this is not the proper place for discussing whether law study should be abolished altogether or discouraged. What I beg to submit is that if the Dacca College is raised to the standard of a University, the Rajshahi College will be the only college which will be second to the Presidency College and that is one of the reasons why it should be maintained on the same lines as Dacca. I may inform my Hon'ble friend that law study is also necessary for the success of the M.A. class. At Rajshahi, whatever my friend may think, the Governing Body is presided over by the District Magistrate who is a European gentleman, and recently an M.A. of Great Britain also thought it necessary and recommended that M.A. and B.L. classes should be opened there; but at that time, pending the consideration of the University Commission's Report, and for want of funds, nothing was done. Now that the report is out, I trust that the proposal whether further facilities should be given to Rajshahi will receive the serious consideration of Your Excellency's Government as well as the educational authorities. Whatever my Hon'ble friend, Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, may think, the people of Rajshahi are so very keen on the subject that they are willing to contribute so large a sum as Rs. 1½ lakhs towards the development of M.A. and B.L. study. The subject of improving the status of the Rajshahi College and that of improving the arrangements for the study of the several subjects now taught are urgent affairs and require early consideration. I think no time should be lost in considering the proposal for opening M.A. and B.L. classes because hereafter we may lose the benefit of so large an offer as Rs. 1½ lakhs.

It is needless to consider now whether the college should be established at Rajshahi or Rangpur. The Rajshahi College was raised to the status of B.A. classes in the year 1878, and it has grown to be an institution second in importance to the Presidency College and equal in importance to the Dacca College with about 800 students, 400 in the B.A. and 400 in the I.A. classes and therefore I submit that instead of checkmating it it ought to be further developed.

I may be permitted to withdraw the resolution in the hope that the matter will engage Your Excellency's consideration when Your Excellency will shortly visit the place."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri; Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a conference of the Principals of all colleges in Bengal, Government as well as private, be invited to meet under the presidency of the Hon'ble the Member in charge of Education, to consider the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission and to submit their report to Government.

He said :—

“ My Lord it will, I hope, not be necessary for me to inflict any long speech in order to impress upon Hon'ble Members the necessity of the proposal embodied in my resolution. Hon'ble Members are all aware of the many diverse and far-reaching recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission which are no doubt calculated to serve the best interests of the country in the matter of educational development in all its branches. Before the report of that august body is considered by the Government of India and action taken by them, I think the Government of Bengal will submit a report upon the recommendations of the Commission. My humble suggestion is that before the Government of Bengal consider the recommendations and submit their report thereupon there should be a conference of the experienced educationists who are in charge of the existing educational institutions and who are principally and immediately concerned with these recommendations. Individually they will be able to submit their views no doubt, but there is a special advantage—which I don't think I need point out—of discussing the questions involved in a conference where by mutual exchange of views and open discussions a unanimity of views upon the recommendations of those vitally interested in the same may be secured. The real difficulty to my mind will be how to give effect to the weighty recommendations of the Commission which will practically revolutionise the whole educational system involving very heavy expenditure, both capital and recurring. If the system proposed by the Commission and decided upon by the Government is to be given effect to by degrees, then the question how to do it can best be solved by those experienced educationists who are now conducting the existing system. I might add that the excuse of my bringing forward this resolution is that I not only consider it desirable, but to my mind such a conference is absolutely indispensable.

With these few words I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Government and the Council.”

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, it is very difficult to follow the reasons of the hon'ble gentleman who moved the resolution. He suggests that a conference of the Principals of all the colleges in Bengal under the presidency of the Hon'ble Member in charge be formed. Now, my Lord, what is the object of the conference? Is it to sit in judgment over the recommendations of the University Commission, or is the object to carry out the recommendations of the Commission? All these recommendations are now before the Government of India. They are to be formulated into several sections and the Act will be passed. If a report be submitted by all the Principals of colleges under the presidency of the Hon'ble Member in charge, that report will be of no avail. The whole question of the recommendations of the Commission will be discussed at a proper place, at a proper time, and before the proper authorities. I find that the Rajshahi College has been mentioned as the best college and that there is considerable intellectual activity in that quarter. The Commission says that so far as the Krishnagar and the Hooghly colleges are concerned, they are of an inferior kind, and I gather inferentially that the B.A. standard in these colleges may not be recommended. These are matters, Sir, which are agitating the minds of the people. The recommendations of the Commission are the subject-matter of consideration by the people throughout Bengal, and criticisms are offered on the recommendations of the Commission, because the public think that they have a right to do that. Surely, before the recommendations come into force, the opinion of the public will be considered. If the proposed conference of Principals of all colleges is held and the public are not associated at the conference, what will be the result? I therefore think that this resolution which has been moved by my learned friend is out of place. If he considers that the conference will do some good, I have not the least objection. But all the recommendations of the Commission are now before the Government of India and the whole subject will be discussed in the Imperial Council and non-official views will be taken into consideration by the Government of India. My Hon'ble friend suggests that no non-official element is to be taken in the conference; and I am really surprised to hear that; but if anybody is to object to the recommendations of the Commission it is the non-official people, and I do not think they should be excluded.

My Lord, without wasting further Your Excellency's time, I beg to oppose this resolution".

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I will say only a few words. I do not quite see the necessity of the proposed conference. I imagine that all the Principals of the colleges were examined by the Members of the University Commission, and I understand that most of the Principals of colleges, whether in Calcutta or in the mufassal, are members of the Calcutta University Senate. I think, Dr. P. Neogi, the present officiating Principal of the Rajshahi College, is not a Fellow of the University Senate. The permanent Principal is always made a Fellow, but the officiating man has to wait probably till he becomes permanent. His predecessor in office, Rai Kumudini Kanta Banarji Bahadur, was or is still a member of the Senate. The Senate will meet and discuss the recommendations of the University Commission. There the Principals of almost all the colleges, whether in Calcutta or outside Calcutta, will have the opportunity of saying their say and of criticising the proposals of the members of the University Commission. That being so, I do not see why there should be a separate conference; and I oppose this resolution."

The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I do not think I need take up the time of the Council at any length. The Hon'ble Mover of this resolution has already had the views of two of his non-official colleagues who have opposed the resolution, and I think on good grounds. Although on behalf of Government I am unable to accept the resolution, I may say that I am in entire sympathy with the Hon'ble Mover in so far as he desires that at some stage or other there should be a frank exchange of views between Government and the leading educationists in Bengal regarding the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission. To some extent, therefore, I am in agreement with the Hon'ble Mover, but I would now go on to say why I cannot accept the resolution. In the first place, the Report of the Calcutta University Commission, except that portion of it which deals with the Dacca University, is still under consideration by the Government of India. The issues relating, for example, to the reconstruction of the Calcutta University are numerous and intricate; and it is very necessary and proper that the Local Government should have the opportunity of the fullest exchange of views with the Government of India before the Local Government indicate their views on certain definite and vital issues to the public. In the second place, I cannot conceive that a round-table conference on the report generally can lead to much practical result. The subject is too vast, its extent too wide, the essential issues are too numerous ; and we do not want another Commission. But the Hon'ble Mover's conference which is intended, I presume, to sit from day to day will be perilously like another commission. Again I think that the Hon'ble Mover has failed to realise the far-reaching consequences which the Commission's proposals involve in suggesting that his conference should consist merely of a few professional educationists. If there is to be a conference and obviously we have got to consult public men before long representing other interests also, in fact all those who are concerned in the reorganization of education will have to be consulted. The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur has mentioned the Calcutta University. Surely, the Calcutta University has a right to be heard, if Government decide that the main issues of the problem should be discussed at a conference convened by Government. My Lord, I am unable to speak with any more definiteness without obtaining the views of the Government of India on this point, but I may state that we fully recognise that if the recommendations of the Commission are to be substantially accepted and translated into action, we must have on our side the willing co-operation of all those who have considered the educational problems of Bengal, and we believe that some kind of conference at a later stage might be held but more catholic in the section of opinion which would be represented because that will help Government and at the same time satisfy the public that these important questions will not be decided hurriedly or without the most careful consideration. For these reasons I cannot accept the resolution nor can I at present agree to bind Government to convene any such conference as the Hon'ble Mover suggests. But I may say that we may reasonably expect that at a later stage we shall have a conference for the discussion of certain vital issues by persons interested therein, quite apart from the debate that is likely to take place in the Imperial Council on the Dacca University Bill or the Calcutta University Bill. Such a conference might be helpful, but at the present moment I am not prepared on behalf of Government to accept the proposal of the Hon'ble Mover.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said —

"My Lord, I was labouring under a misapprehension. My idea was that before the matter is taken up by the Government of India the opinions of the Calcutta University and the Bengal Government would be taken, but as I now see the matter will be first considered by the Government of India and then we shall have to hold some sort of a conference. As the Senate was asked separately to report, I thought that we should have a conference here just now. I am satisfied to hear that some sort of conference will be held at a later stage and therefore I wish to withdraw the resolution."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned to the 18th December 1919 at 11 A.M. at Government House, Calcutta.

Educational grants made under the Syedpur Trust Estate.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the history of the grants made from the Syedpur Trust Estate to the various educational institutions, and how they have been utilised since their inception?

(b) Is it a fact that the entire grant of the Syedpur Trust Estate to the Daulatpur H. E. School is at present being spent for the benefit of the Muhammadan students alone, whether tenants of the estate or not?

(c) When, and under what circumstances, was this innovation made and by whom and under what authority?

(d) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following remark made by Mr. Monahan, as Commissioner of the Presidency Division, in the visitors' book of the Daulatpur H. E. School on the 26th February, 1915:—

“ I do not quite understand why the benefit of the grant which is made to this school from the management and improvement allotment of the Syedpur Trust Estate, should be restricted to Muhammadans. It seems to me that the poor and deserving non-Muhammadan tenants of the estate may have a claim on it.”

(e) What action, if any, has been taken on the above remark?

(f) Is it a fact that a dismissed police servant, named Rahimuddin Shaikh, was appointed a teacher of the Daulatpur H. E. School some time back, in preference to qualified Muhammadan candidates of the locality?

(g) Are the Government aware of a feeling that exists that this gentleman has been trying to create a tension of feeling between Hindu and Muhammadan students since his appointment?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) The estate has been under the management of the Board of Revenue for nearly a century, and it would involve an undue amount of labour to trace the history of the grants made from its funds to various educational institutions.

(b) and (c) The Board of Revenue directed in 1913 that the grants made from the funds of the estate to primary schools should be brought up to 1 per cent. of the rental, which should be allotted to schools established for the benefit of tenants of the estate, irrespective of religion, while grants to secondary schools, such as the Daulatpur High School, which were to be limited to 1 per cent. of the rental, were to be given for the benefit of Muhammadan students only.

(d) and (e) It is understood that at the time when Mr. Monahan recorded the remarks in question he had not the previous papers of the case and the orders of the Board of Revenue before him. No action was taken on his remarks.

(f) and (g) Government have no information on the subject.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(1) Suitable text-books have been recommended for supplementary use in the 3rd and 4th classes of high schools and in the training colleges. In the middle and upper primary stages as well as in normal, guru-training and muallim-training schools, certain text-books have also been recommended for the use of pupils as a compulsory subject (in Government and aided schools). In the lower primary stage the instruction is oral. A copy of the list of text-books is laid on the table.

(2) Arrangements have been made for the delivery of a course of lectures on hygiene in the training colleges and schools at Calcutta and Dacca, in the Dow Hill training class for Europeans at Kurseong, and at the Bethune College and collegiate school, Calcutta.

(3) Provision has been made for the teaching of the subject in certain guru-training schools by the Health Officers or sanitary inspectors employed in municipalities or district boards.

(4) Lanterns, screens and slides have been purchased for use in connection with lectures on hygiene.

(5) The suggestion that hygiene should be included as an optional subject for the matriculation examination was forwarded to the University. On their application, the Government of India have sanctioned the prescription of hygiene as an additional subject for the matriculation examination.

(6) An application has been made to the Government of India for the appointment of a whole-time Physical Adviser and a Deputy Sanitary Commissioner for school hygiene. Necessary provision for these posts, as well as for the measures mentioned above, has been made in the current year's budget."

D. In lower primary schools and in the corresponding classes of high, middle and upper primary schools in this Presidency, lessons on Hygiene should be entirely oral. These lessons should take the form of talks on the following or similar topics :—

- (a) The necessity for personal cleanliness.
- (b) The necessity for keeping rooms clean.
- (c) The necessity for pure water, fresh air, sunlight and ventilation the danger of shutting up sleeping rooms.
- (d) The danger of insanitary and dirty habits, such as spitting.
- (e) The necessity of exercise.
- (f) Some information as to how simple complaints—wounds, snake-bites, burns, &c.,—should be treated; how a drowning person should be handled, &c.

The teaching must proceed not merely by precept but by example. The first essential then is that the teacher himself should be a man of healthy and clean habits; the second that the school should be well ventilated and scrupulously clean; the teacher should also insist that every child who comes to school must be clean and tidy.

Reorganization of the Victoria and Dow Hill
Schools.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to give effect to the promise of the acting Director of Public Instruction given at the meeting of this Council in July last with regard to the reorganization generally of the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools?

(b) What sum is sanctioned per diem per capita for the feeding only of the pupils of the Victoria and Dow Hill Schools, respectively?

(c) Is any other item in addition to actual food chargeable against this sum?

(d) Has this scale been submitted to, and approved by, the medical authorities as being sufficient to provide adequate nourishment for growing children?

(e) If not, are the Government considering the desirability of obtaining the opinion of the medical authorities on this point?

(f) Has any increase in pay and emoluments for the staffs of the two schools been sanctioned and given effect to?

(g) If so, has such increase been proportionate in each school alike?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) Proposals for the reorganisation of the two schools are under the consideration of Government.

(b) The rate of the capitation boarding allowance for the boys of the Victoria School is Rs. 20-4 a month. This includes Rs. 18 for food and Rs. 2-4 for laundry, oil, wood, etc. The amount sanctioned per diem per capita for feeding only amounts therefore to 9 annas 7 pies.

The rate for the girls of the Dow Hill School is Rs. 18 a month, but the allotment for them is pooled with that of the students of the training class attached to the school, for whom an allowance of Rs. 45 each a month is sanctioned. The exact amount set apart per diem per capita for feeding the girls cannot, therefore, be stated definitely.

(c) The answer to (b) covers this question.

(d) The above scale was fixed in 1913 in consultation with the Sanitary Commissioner.

(e) The question of increasing the existing rates in view of the increase in prices is now under the consideration of Government and due consideration will be given to the recommendations of the Sanitary Commissioner.

(f) Pending the reorganisation of the schools certain members of the staffs of both the schools have received increments in their allowances as a temporary measure, with effect from 1st July, 1919.

(g) The increments have been sanctioned according to sliding scales, from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50, which are different for male and female teachers. There is this further difference also that female teachers drawing above Rs. 200 have not been granted additional allowances, whereas male teachers at the Victoria School drawing above Rs. 200 have been granted increments."

(i) whether any applications for appointment in that service have been received from Indians, and

(ii) how these applications have been disposed of?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Marr:—

"(i) Yes. The Collector of Customs, Calcutta, received during the last two months applications from three or four Indians for posts in the Preventive Service.

(ii) The Collector of Customs or the Superintendent, Preventive Service, interviewed all the applicants, but found that, while they generally possessed better educational qualifications than are needed for a Preventive Officer's work, none of them satisfied the conditions under which recruits for such service are selected. These conditions are that candidates must—

(1) be under the age of 25.

(2) be unmarried.

(3) be of athletic habits and of physique good enough for outdoor work in all weathers and at all hours.

(4) have good eyesight.

The majority of the applicants only satisfied the first condition.

The Hon'ble Member is also referred to the reply given by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes to question No. 14 (b) asked by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi at the meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council held on the 24th September, 1919."

Appointments in the Forest
Department.

(a) Is it a fact that applications have recently been invited by the Conservator of Forests, Bengal, from Europeans for 8 posts in the Forest Department?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to say why applications have not been invited from suitable Indians who have graduated in Science?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Owing to unavoidable delays in filling up the sanctioned cadre of the Imperial Forest Service and the difficulties which would be caused by the consequent shortage of staff, the Government of India authorised this Government to entertain temporary officers as stop-gaps subject to a maximum pay of Rs. 800 a month and a time-limit of two years in each case. Applications were accordingly invited by the Conservator of Forests from Europeans for five posts, corresponding to the number of vacancies in the sanctioned cadre of the Imperial Forest Service.

(b) The question of appointing Indians who had graduated, not in Science, but in Engineering was considered; but in view of the fact that the officers proposed to be appointed were intended to take the place of Imperial Officers and would only hold the posts for two years without any prospects of any further employment in the Forest Department, the suggestion was abandoned."

Railway.

(a) Is it a fact that through 3rd class tickets are not issued to passengers travelling over the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway and Eastern Bengal Railway from Darjeeling to Calcutta in ordinary passenger trains?

(b) Is it a fact that such passengers are charged the fares for the mail train?

(c) Are the Government aware that this arrangement causes great inconvenience to passengers, especially those who come from Darjeeling, Kurseong, etc.?

(d) Are the Government considering the advisability of moving the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway authorities to issue through tickets from Darjeeling and other places on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway to Calcutta and to charge ordinary fares?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"(a) Third class passengers from stations on the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway can book through to Calcutta by paying the fare laid down for the Mail train. Passengers travelling by ordinary trains other than the Mail can take advantage of a lower fare over the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway by booking to Siliguri and re-booking thence to Calcutta.

(b) Yes.

(c) No.

(d) No, the Local Government do not consider that any action is necessary as the Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway Company have the right of fixing a tariff of fares, subject to the maximum prescribed under their contract."

High School.

With reference to the reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. Goode to my question at the Council meeting of the 12th August, 1919, that there was no deflection of the amount earmarked for improving the staff and increasing the pay of Government High School teachers, is it in the contemplation of the Government to give retrospective effect to these proposals from the 1st April, 1917, i.e., the date the Imperial grant was made, and, if necessary, to move the Government of India for the removal of any technical objection which may be in the way of so dealing with the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“The scheme was sanctioned by the Secretary of State in a telegram dated the 18th September, 1919, which was received by the Government of India on the 21st idem. Under the Civil Account Code unless otherwise expressly ruled, or unless the contrary appears from the context, a sanction of the Secretary of State takes effect from the date of receipt of the orders by the Government of India. Apart from this objection, which is not merely technical, it would be impracticable to give retrospective effect to the proposals from 1st April, 1917, both because the sums allotted in 1917-18 and 1918-19 are not included in the present year's budget, and also because it would not be possible to appoint teachers to the sanctioned posts with effect from the date mentioned.”

(b) No.

(c), (d) and (e) In view of the answer to item (b), items (c), (d) and (e) do not arise.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Baladeb Pande, father of Debanand, a détenu interned in village Malo, within the Jalpaiguri district submitted a petition in July last to grant his son leave for one month to enable him to come home to perform the yearly sradh of his mother which was to take place on the 23rd Srabon last?

(b) Is it a fact that the Additional Under-Secretary informed him in reply that the Government were not prepared to accede to his prayer?

(c) Is it a fact that thereafter Baladeb Pande sent a wire to the Additional Secretary, Political Department, praying for seven days' leave for his son Debanand and that this prayer was also rejected?

(d) Is it a fact that Debanand is the only son of his parents?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why leave was not granted to Debanand with such restrictions as might have been considered necessary?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Stephenson:—

“ (a) Baladeb Pande did submit a petition to that effect.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes.

(e) Déténus are usually allowed leave to go home on the occasion of the first śradh after a parent's death but not on the occasion of the annual śradh. In Debanand Pande's case there was no reason for the grant of a special concession."

Particulars about the construction, etc., of a building occupied by the Settlement Officer of Tippera and Noakhali.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state what was the total cost incurred in building the two-storied pucca house at Comilla which was till very recently in the personal occupation of the Settlement Officer of Tippera and Noakhali?

(b) From what fund did the cost of construction of the said building come?

(c) What was the purpose for which the building was originally constructed?

(d) How is the building proposed to be utilised now that it is no longer required for the Settlement Officer?

(e) Is there any foundation for the popular impression that the cost of the said building was included in the cost of the settlement operations which have been or which are proposed to be recovered from the landlords and tenants concerned?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence and other papers relating to the construction of the said building and leading up to the final order or sanction under which the building was constructed?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(a) Rupees 53,130, including cost of out-houses, land and establishment charges of the Public Works Department.

(b) The cost was met by the Government of India, as the initial expenditure in connection with all major settlements is advanced by the Imperial Government.

(c) It was built as a residence for the Settlement Officer and an Assistant Settlement Officer; but it was intended that at the conclusion of the settlement operations it would be used as a residence for some other Government officer.

(d) It has been arranged to utilise it as the Collector's residence.

(e) It is the case that the original cost is included in the cost of the operations; but the Hon'ble Member appears to be under a misapprehension. It is also the case that the proceeds from the sale of the said building to the Local Government are credited to the account of the operations as well as the rent realised during the time it has been in the possession of the Settlement Department. The minus difference, if any, between the original cost and the subsequent credits, is borne by the Government of India and the landlords and tenants in the proportion of 1 : 3. The amount to be paid by the Local Government for the building has not yet been determined; and it is therefore not yet possible to say whether the transaction will result in a small profit or loss to the landlords and tenants.

(f) No."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

(b) Has this cost been included in the cost of settlement operations which have been or which are proposed to be recovered from the landlords and tenants concerned?

(c) What use is it proposed to make of this building now that it will no longer be required for the office of the Settlement Officer?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Rupees 25,417, excluding establishment charges of the Public Works Department.

(b) and (c) Several alternative schemes for the utilization of this building have been put forward from time to time, and recently a site committee under the presidency of the Commissioner of Chittagong was appointed to consider these schemes and advise Government. They have proposed that the Police Department should take over the building at a proper valuation as part of the scheme for new police lines. The difference between the original cost and the present valuation will in that case be borne by the Government of India and the parties from whom costs are realisable under section 114 of the Tenancy Act in the proportion of 1 : 3.”

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the rules or circulars, if any, as to the cost of construction of private quarters for Settlement Officers?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Government have agreed to the erection of quarters only at the headquarters of districts where no suitable houses are available. In districts such as Bunkura and Murshidabad no such special provision has been found necessary.

(b) There are no special rules or circulars regarding the cost of construction of buildings for Settlement Officers as distinct from buildings for other officers.”

(b) Is it a fact that he had fever at the time of such removal?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Bose is a Doctor in the Military Service?

(d) Are the Government aware that instances of racial distinction cause great irritation to the Indian mind.

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, they are taking in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Marr:—

“(a) Mr. Sudhir Kumar Bose is an old student of the Medical College, Calcutta. As a matter of special privilege Indian students, when ill, are permitted to occupy a room in the Ezra Hospital. As an old student of the Medical College, the same privilege was extended to Mr. Sudhir Kumar Bose, and he has been enjoying the benefit of a large airy room to himself. His father has expressed his personal gratitude for this privilege being extended to him.

(b) Mr. Bose had fever at the time of his removal, but no risk was thereby involved, otherwise the patient would not have been moved.

(c) Yes.

(d) and (e) As explained in (a), this is not a case of racial distinction and no further action is proposed.”

(a) What are the districts in which the Government propose immediately to introduce the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919?

(b) When is the election of the Union Boards and Local Boards under the said Act likely to come off?

(c) What contribution, if any, do the Government propose to make to the total “ Union Fund ” of the Presidency in the year 1920-21?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) The Act has been extended to the Sadar Kalna and Katwa subdivisions of the Burdwan district with effect from the 1st November, 1919, and it is expected that it will shortly be extended to the Dacca district. It is also in contemplation to extend the Act to other districts, but complete schemes for the establishment of Unions have not yet been formulated.

(b) The first election of Union Boards under the rules framed under the Bengal Village Self-Government Act will take place within six months after their establishment under section 6 of the Act. The election of Local Boards is regulated by the Bengal Local Self-Government Act and not by the Bengal Village Self-Government Act.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to make a full statement as to the policy they propose to follow in this connection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

(c) What will be the procedure to be followed in making the selections?

(d) Upon whose recommendation will the appointments be made?

(e) Is it in the contemplation of the Government to invite nomination from all District Judges or District Magistrates on the occasion of each appointment?

(f) Have the Government made any rules in this behalf?

(g) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay them on the table?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Stephenson:—

“ The question of recruitment of District and Sessions Judges from the Bar has been under consideration in connection with the recommendation of the Public Services Commission. Until final orders are passed in the matter, no details can be settled ”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

29.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that among the Additional District Judges there are some who have had hardly any experience or training in civil cases, who have to hear appeals in intricate civil suits against the decisions of very senior Subordinate Judges and Munsifs?

Hearing appeals by Additional District Judges

(b) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the opinion that has been expressed that it is unfair not only to the litigants but also to the officers themselves that they should be required to hear intricate civil appeals without previous training and experience?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of making an inquiry and of taking such steps as may be necessary to bring about a reform in this matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Stephenson:—

" It is a fact that some Additional District Judges at the time of their first appointment have had little experience in civil cases, but the instances in which they are required immediately to hear intricate civil appeals are rare. The question of improving the legal training of members of the Indian Civil Service who are allotted to the judicial branch has long received the attention of Government, and in 1913 proposals were sanctioned by the Secretary of State to enable them to undertake courses of study in law in England. In 1914 orders were passed under which selected junior members of the service were to be given continuous training in civil cases for a period of 18 months before they joined the judicial branch, but owing to the depletion of the cadre and the strain upon it in connection with the war, only three officers have so far received this training. It is hoped that, with the return of more normal conditions, it will be found possible to extend the system."

Is there any foundation for the complaint that in the Assam-Bengal Railway and other railways in Bengal greater facilities are afforded to Eurasians than to Indians in the matter of appointments, and that better pay and prospects are ensured to the former than to the latter?

Improvement
in the Dacca
School of Engineering.

- (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what is the improvement now contemplated by the Government in the Dacca School of Engineering?
(b) What amount has been actually allotted for the said improvement?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

" (a) Government have sanctioned the following proposals for developing and improving the work of the Dacca School of Engineering:—

- (1) that the school should be transferred from its present site in the Dacca College compound to the Eastern Bengal and Assam Secretariat Press buildings;
- (2) that the school hostel at present located in the Dacca College compound should be removed to a portion of the Eastern Bengal and Assam Secretariat buildings, which will be occupied by the hostel until new buildings are erected for it on some suitable site;
- (3) that the head of the school should reside in the Eastern Bengal and Assam Secretariat Press compound;
- (4) that the Head Master of the school should be designated Principal;
- (5) that the school should be placed under a Governing Body exercising independent control and certain definite powers in the matter of appointment and control of staff and the administration of finances;

- (6) that of the 40 reduced feeships which were formerly tenable by Indian students at the Apprentice Department of the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, eight should be transferred to the Dacca School of Engineering and commuted to 8 scholarships of Rs. 10 each with effect from the commencement of the session 1918-19.

Government have also sanctioned a fixed consolidated grant to meet the contingent charges of the school for a period of three years with effect from 1920-21 and have authorized the Governing Body to exercise certain powers in spending the grant. Government have further sanctioned the creation of—

- (1) one post in class VI (Rs. 300) of the Provincial Educational Service in lieu of a post in class II (Rs. 200) of the Subordinate Educational Service;
 - (2) five posts in the Subordinate Educational Service in lieu of certain posts outside the cadre of the Subordinate Educational Service;
 - (3) one additional post outside the grades for the appointment of an additional clerk.
- (b) The actual allotments made by Government are—
- (i) fixed consolidated grant for the school for three years,—Rs. 21,000 a year;
 - (ii) additional cost of staff, Rs. 3,360 a year;
 - (iii) purchase of an additional cement-testing machine, Rs. 350

Government will incur further expenditure on structural alterations and the removal of the workshops in connection with the transfer of the school to its new quarters and also in erecting the new hostel buildings. The Director of Public Instruction has been asked to submit proposals as to the total expenditure to be incurred in executing these works.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to describe the scheme now under their consideration for the expansion of the Government Weaving Institute at Serampore? Expansion of the Govt. Weaving Institute Serampore

(b) What amount, if any, has actually been allotted for the execution of the scheme?

(c) What was the total expenditure incurred last year in financing the institute?

(d) What tangible results have so far been achieved by the said institute?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

(a) The proposal is to remove the Weaving Institute from Serampore, where there are difficulties in the way of expansion, and to erect suitable buildings for its accommodation on a spacious site in the neighbourhood of Lillooah. The initial cost of the scheme (including land) is estimated at Rs. 4,32,000.

(b) No money has actually been allotted for the scheme, pending a decision on the question that has been raised of including a weaving department in the scheme for a technological institute in Calcutta.

(c) The total expenditure in 1918-19 was Rs. 33,336.

(d) From the higher class about a dozen students are turned out yearly, nearly all of whom have obtained suitable employment in factories or mills, or as weaving teachers, inspectors, etc. From the artisan class, which is attended by practical weavers, 43 passed out in the year 1918-19: of these 28 are working at their homes on fly-shuttle looms (the use of which they have learned at the institute) and 8 are employed in hand-loom factories or under Government: particulars are wanting as to the remaining 7. There are similar results for previous years. In addition to his work at the institute the Principal directs the work of five outlying weaving schools attended by practical weavers, and also gives advice on weaving matters in reply to constant inquiries addressed to him."

REPORT REFERRED TO IN ANSWER TO QUESTION No. 36 (e).

Copy of letter No. 3216/M.B., dated the 21st October 1918, from E. Hoogewerf, Esq., to the Controller of Munitions, Bengal Circle, Calcutta.

I was placed on deputation in the Financial, Commerce and Industrial Department for six months with effect from the 5th of May 1918, to assist in the improvement of the handloom weaving industry of Bengal, and as the period of my deputation will terminate on the 4th of November next, I give below a summary of the work done by me.

2. In the month of May last I proceeded to Bankura to organise for the Registrar of Co-operative Credit Societies some of weavers' societies, to make it possible for the Registrar to undertake the weaving of Dosuti cloth, a demand for which was made by the Munitions Board, Simla. During the course of a week the teacher of the Bankura Weaving School and myself aided by some of my ex-students successfully organised some 13 societies, and Mr. Donovan who visited Bankura shortly after, found it necessary to form a Union to finance and control these societies. A general meeting was accordingly convened of the leading gentlemen of the town, as many of the local weavers as could be got to attend to consider the proposals of the Registrar, and the possibilities of establishing these societies on a permanent basis.

3. The District Magistrate, Mr. Vas, was appointed President of the Union, and some of the local leading gentlemen, office bearers. The rules for the management of the Union with their bye-laws were formulated, and the Union was registered on the 18th June. The number of the societies was later increased to 20. These societies under the supervision of the Weaving teacher, Babu Sudhir Kumar Bannerjee, whose services were transferred to the Co-operative Department, successfully wove about twenty five thousand yards of Dosuti cloth for Government and other bodies, besides undertaking private orders and executing work which the Union was able to procure for them. The Union is working efficiently, and is in a position at present to undertake large orders for the manufacture of cloths.

4. Twenty similar societies were also started at Pabna, but it was not found necessary to organise a Union at that station, as a central bank already existed there, and the Registrar was of opinion that these societies could easily be controlled by the Managing Committee of the Bank. It was found that the Pabna weavers although organised expressly for the weaving of Dosuti cloth, could not be utilised for this purpose, as the rate of weaving which the Munitions Board was in a position to offer them was not found sufficiently attractive, and they preferred to carry on their own business, large orders for which they had weaving of Lunqi cloths for the Chittagong and East Bengal and Burma markets, and several thousands of these fabrics are being sold to Mahajans weekly at the local hâts. Weaving societies could also have been started in the other districts of Bengal, where weaving schools exist, but as some difficulties arose with the Munitions Board, Simla, in the matter of prices, it was found impossible to manufacture Ordnance Dosuti cloth at the rates at which Mr. Silver was agreeable to buying the material, and hence the manufacture of Ordnance Dosuti cloth has been temporarily abandoned.

5. I also organised a body of some 80 to 100 weavers in the villages some distance away from the town of Bankura on behalf of the Bengal Home Industries Association, and these weavers are still executing the orders for Ordnance Dosuti cloth, special yarn for which was purchased. I understand that some 8 000 yards of this material is now ready and it has been woven up to the specifications required by the Ordnance Department. Mr. Silver from time to time has written to say that he is prepared to purchase Dosuti cloth which could be utilized for other purposes than the making of tents, but hitherto since no definite order has been placed by him, no work could be given to the societies and in consequence it seems useless to organise fresh bodies of workers, unless sufficient work can be given to them. I would suggest in this connection that I may be permitted to go to Simla to personally discuss this matter with Mr. Silver to obtain from him some definite orders which the weavers of Bengal would welcome, and if they are sufficiently large more weavers' societies could be organised in other districts.

6. In addition to the above, I have been carrying out experiments in the spinning and weaving of Sunn hemp. As regards the spinning of Sunn hemp, some 30 to 40 samples have been hand-spun and mill-spun for Mr. Finlow, and judging from his letters, he seems to be quite well satisfied with the results. Some of the Sunn hemp yarns which was specially prepared from Jubulpore Sunn hemp fibre and which was extracted without retting, has been found to be a good substitute for flax for the sewing of saddlery, harness and boots. I have conducted experiments at Serampore for the weaving of water proof Sunn hemp canvas with the same fibre, and I am pleased to say that the samples have been much approved of and there is a great demand for it at present. To cope with the demand, two hand loom weaving factories have been started at Serampore. Experiments have also been conducted at the local Jute Mills for the spinning of Sunn hemp yarns, and I understand that one of these firms has already ordered out special machinery for the purpose. Hose pipes as well as filter cloths and beltings have also been manufactured with this fibre, and I think that at this period if some definite orders were placed with the firms referred to above, the prospects of further development seem certain.

7. Since last year a great demand for woollen cloths and blankets has also arisen, and I have been helping the local weavers of Bankura, Midnapore and Murshidabad to sell their goods more lucratively than before by encouraging some young men I know to go into the districts and to purchase woollen yarns and blankets from the wool workers and to supply them to buyers with whom I have brought them in contact. A woollen factory has also been started at Serampore by Mr. Borrie, who was an Engineer of one of Messrs. Bird & Co.'s Jute mills.

8. Besides the above, inquiries have been received by me from time to time for the manufacture of cotton canvas and Union cloths and I am constituting inquiries and having experiments carried out to ensure a regular supply of them. I have also received inquiries for the manufacture of brass and iron articles, and I have rendered the inquiries as much assistance as I could by bringing them into contact with the artisans who do this work in the villages.

9. As regards the duties I had to perform at the Munitions Board, I may state that I have been entrusted with the placing out of orders of all the textile materials, boots, hats, caps, uniforms, etc., required by the various local indenting bodies, and to inspect and pass the goods before they were despatched. I have also had to reply to numerous enquiries relating to hand spinning, weaving, and to advise the selection of suitable weaving machinery.

10. At my last interview with you, you asked me for an expression of my opinion relating to the more efficient promotion of local industries, and I think I am justified in making the following suggestions from the experience I have gained in these matters.

I am fully convinced that if the local industries of this province are to be improved, a separate department known as the Department of Industries should be created, and that it should have as its head a Director with at least three efficient assistants to deal with the primary industries of this province, namely:—

- (i) An officer who has a good knowledge of hand and power weaving and its allied branches;
- (ii) A chemist conversant with industrial chemistry and capable of conducting researches.
- (iii) A Mechanical Engineer with a sound knowledge of mining.

11. Experience shows that industries cannot be promoted or the artisans efficiently taught unless they are in some way brought under control, and this can best be done by forming them into societies and unions. In this province the work has been entrusted to the Registrar of Co-operative Societies with the result that it has formed an impediment to the development of the local industries, for the simple reason that it has been put under dual control, that is to say, the organisation of the artisans into societies and the matter of financing them has been entrusted to the Registrar of Co-operative Credit Societies, while their industrial education rests with the Education Department. Consequently, it often becomes a difficult matter for officers in charge of the two departments to work in harmony with each other. In provinces where these conditions do not exist the promotion and improvement of industries is considerably an easier matter. as the officer entrusted with the promotion of industries happens also to be the Registrar of Co-operative Credit Societies. In these circumstances I think that the Director of Industries suggested in my note should also be vested with the powers of a Registrar and may be known as an additional Registrar of Co-operative Industrial Societies.

THE CALCUTTA CRUELTY TO ANIMALS BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta Cruelty to Animals Bill, 1919.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Calcutta Cruelty to Animals Bill, 1919.

As Hon'ble Members will see, the report is short and it is also unanimous. We received various interesting criticisms on the Bill, and I think we gave due consideration to all the important matters that were raised, even though the changes made have not been very extensive. I therefore only propose to mention one or two of the more conspicuous points.

It will be noticed that in reference to clause 3 we have departed from the usual practice of Select Committees, which is ordinarily to mention what the Committee has done and not what it has not done. But as there appeared to be some amount of misapprehension as to whether the term “ animal ” did or did not include a bird, unless a bird was specifically mentioned, we have given our own reasons and our authority for not including the word “ bird,” as being not only unnecessary but even to some extent possibly risky, as leading to doubts as to the meaning of the word “ animal ” alone in other Acts.

Another noticeable change is intended to meet a certain amount of criticism that was received with reference to clause 6 and the somewhat analogous clause 11. Various people seemed to think that, while it was not unreasonable to impose a further liability for cruelty of different descriptions on the owner, trader, carrier, contractor, etc., yet it was rather hard to say that a person of that status might be sent to jail for an act of cruelty which might have been committed in his absence and without his knowledge. We have therefore modified the permissible punishment, and have also added a special protection which we took out of the English Act. As the clause is now worded I do not think any owner, etc., who exercises reasonable care has anything to fear.

We have not given a similar protection in the case of clause 7, because we thought that it was up to any one who owns or controls animals to take care that such a disgusting practice as phuka does not occur in relation to them. In recognition of a certain amount of opinion to that effect, we have, however, enhanced the punishment awardable under clause 7.

We have made a change in connection with the seizing of loads and the sending of animals to infirmaries in order to meet the view which was expressed in several quarters that it was reasonable that the owner should get a written notice that his load had been seized or his animal sent to an infirmary in order that he could make arrangements for their removal, etc. We have made provision to that effect partly by taking a rule-making power under clause 20, and in clause 23 by making a substantive change in the Bill.

The only other change of importance is perhaps that referred to in clause 26. When I introduced the Bill I foreshadowed the possibility that objection might be raised to the killing of bulls, bullocks and cows for old age. Such an opinion was, in fact, expressed in various Hindu quarters, and we have shown regard to it by providing that no order for the destruction of a bull, bullock or cow shall be made merely because it is unfit for work by reason of old age, the idea being that, following the practice which commends itself to Hindu orthodoxy, the animal should be sent to a pinjrapole.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the proposal for abolishing the First Year Class of the Maynamati Survey School be dropped and that the said class be retained permanently.

He said :—

"My Lord, what I am asking for is not the establishment of a new school but the retention of one of the two classes of the old existing school. That school was established in 1914 as an experimental measure for teaching land surveying and improvement of its method. The experiment was found successful and the school was established on a permanent basis in 1916, but recently it was rumoured that it is in contemplation to abolish the First Year Class of the School and thereupon a representation was made by the people for the retention of the class; and I understand the Government have been pleased to order that that class would not be abolished at least for another year. What I am praying for in this resolution is that the proposal might be dropped altogether. It is a very useful institution established in a very good place. The site is almost an ideal one for the purpose, situated as it is in a very healthy place, and the school is established on a residential basis and is a very useful institution. I would ask the Government to consider the following facts before any final decision is arrived at. One of the important considerations is that as a result of the abolition of the First Year Class the number of students will decrease by 50 per cent. but there will be no reduction in the cost even by 10 per cent. Then there is another aspect which is also an important one and that is that the present arrangements are of course meant to staff both the classes, and therefore the full capacity of the institution will not be fully utilised if the First Year Class is abolished. Therefore, my Lord, I hope that the proposal may be dropped."

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan : Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

• The Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

• “My Lord, I do not propose to take up the time of the Council for more than a very few minutes. The hon'ble mover of this resolution desires to maintain permanently the First Year Class at the Maynamati Survey School. I may say that it has not yet been finally decided to either abolish or to maintain permanently the First Year Class at the school. We have, for the present, issued orders for the continuance of the class up to September next. Meanwhile, it is proposed to reconsider the whole matter and to come to a decision as to whether this class should be maintained permanently or not, and it is quite clear therefore that the Government have no intention of closing the class until they have re-examined and reviewed the whole position. Moreover, this school being more or less under the Revenue Department, who directly deal with those who pass out of the survey class at Maynamati, that department will also have to consider the matter carefully conjointly with the Education Department. All I can say to the hon'ble mover of the present resolution is that whatever may be the decision arrived at, it will not be done in a hurry or without due consideration. But on the other hand, I cannot at the present moment hold out a definite promise regarding the continuance of this class. Government fully realise the importance of having such a class for the purpose of survey training in the Chittagong Division; and I can assure the hon'ble gentleman once more that we shall examine the question in all its bearings in due course. I trust that in view of what I have said the hon'ble mover will not press for his resolution.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“In view of the assurance that I have received from the Hon'ble the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur I do not feel justified in pressing the resolution. My only prayer is that, before any final decision is arrived at in favour of the abolition which, I hope, it will never be, the opinion of the public will be invited and considered. I therefore beg, my Lord, with your Excellency's permission, to withdraw the resolution.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that arrangements be made with a view to the payment of the monthly pensions of Government pensioners in the Presidency of Bengal by postal money-order, if they so desire, and that, if necessary, the sanction of the Government of India be obtained in that behalf.

He said :—

“This is a matter of convenience so far as pensions are concerned. We are aware of instances in which the pensioners find it a great hardship to receive their pensions under the existing rules. It sometimes happens that a man has to walk a long distance, or has to incur large expenditure in order to come to the head-quarters of the district, to receive his pension. Sometimes it happens that, for getting a pension of Rs. 10, a man has to spend two or three rupees. There are other disadvantages, but I need not take up the time of the Council over this small matter, for I have every reason to believe that this resolution may possibly find favour with the Government.”

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, this resolution seems to be the echo of one of a similar character that was moved in the Bombay Council on the 19th September last, and which Local Government then accepted in the sense that they stated that they would bring the method of payment by money-order to the notice of the Government of India as an experiment which was worth trying in the case of pensions up to Rs. 20.

The object of the suggestion, as the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has said, is to do away with the inconvenience of people having to come, it may be, considerable distances to the offices of payment in order to receive small sums that are due to them as pensions, and it is undeniable that that inconvenience does exist. It is also true that in the majority of cases personal attendance is required. There are a few exceptions in which payment can be made on certificates of various kinds, but in most cases people are required to be present in person. If, as suggested, payment by postal money-order is inaugurated, it is obvious that instead of the pensioner going to receive his pension, the postal peon will come to him, and his convenience will thereby be served. There is, however, a certain amount of risk in that system both to the pensioner and to Government. The peon might not pay the pension to the correct person, though in that event we would probably very soon hear from the pensioner himself, and the fraud would be discovered. The Government again might be cheated by fraudulent representation that the pensioner was alive though he was really dead, and his pension might continue to be taken by somebody else until the deception happened to be found out. These are the risks, though it is possible they are not so great as might be apprehended, especially in the case of small pensions; no system is entirely free from risk, and in the case of small pensions we should not stand to lose very much even though frauds occurred here and there. But it is relevant to note that this system of payment by postal money-order has been tried. It was tried in Bombay in the case of certain military pensioners, and it was tried on a large scale in the case of family allotments from non-combatants which were paid by postal money-order through the Dadar office. Two curious points were then brought to notice. In the first place there were many complaints of delay in payment. People complained that they were accustomed to get their pensions on the 1st or 2nd of every month, and when delays occurred under the new system they were put to inconvenience. On the other hand, there might be bona fide excuses on the part of the postal peons, by reason of inability to find the payee and the like. Another feature was that in the majority of cases advantage was not taken of this concession. This might have been for the reason already mentioned, but the fact remains that quite a number of people preferred to adhere to the old system and to draw their money in person. So it does not follow that this experiment would be a panacea for all evils.

There is another possibility which is worthy of consideration and which has been brought to our notice by the Accountant-General, Bengal. It is that we might, instead of sending money by postal peons under the money-order system, delegate at least a portion of this work of paying pensions to post-offices. Obviously, everywhere, for one Government treasury, there are half-a-dozen post offices, and instead of having to come long distances pensioners would then have shorter distances to travel. This possibility affects the Postal Department and they would have to be consulted. We do not know whether the postal authorities will be in favour of taking up what may prove to be an appreciable addition to their work.

While, therefore, willing to make inquiries, we would prefer that the resolution should be put into a more open form than that in which it has been drawn up, that is to say, that besides the proposal of payment by money-order the possibility of delegating part of the work to post offices should not be excluded. If the Hon'ble Member agrees to put the resolution in the following form, I shall be glad to accept it on behalf of Government :—

“This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the possibility be examined of improving the present system of disbursing pensions, either by the introduction of a system of money-order payments, or in such other way as will ensure that the pensioners are not required to attend monthly at treasury offices in order to draw their pensions, unless they wish to do so.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“I am quite prepared to accept the modified form.”

The resolution was then put in the following amended form and agreed to :—

“This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the possibility be examined of improving the present system of disbursing pensions, either by the introduction of a system of money-order payments, or in such other way as will ensure that the pensioners are not required to attend monthly at treasury offices in order to draw their pensions, unless they wish to do so.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to improve the pay and prospects of the Assistant Surgeons in the Presidency.

He said :—

“My Lord, this is a question on which I do not feel justified in taking up the time of this Council in view of the answers that were given by the Government at the last meeting of the Council in answer to a question by the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur. I find that the petitions of the Civil Assistant Surgeons asking for an improvement in their pay and prospects have been forwarded to the Government by the Surgeon-General with recommendations and are now under consideration. We also find from these answers that if there was any delay it was due to the recommendations of the Medical Services Committee. We have also received assurances that there is not likely to be much delay on the part of this Government in dealing with these petitions, so in view of all these it is hardly necessary for me to support my resolution with any lengthy observation. All that I am anxious to point out in this connection is this—that the members of this Service and the members of the Provincial Services, both Judicial and Executive, are men almost equally qualified, and if there is any conceivable reason for the remarkable difference of pay between the pay and prospects of Assistant Surgeons on the one hand and that of Deputy Magistrates and Munsifs on the other, the reason was that Civil Assistant Surgeons enjoy some private practice yielding some additional income to them. But, my Lord, it is now an admitted fact and Government have also recognised that the private practice of these officers has diminished very considerably owing to the increased number of private practitioners, equally qualified, now practising, and their income is now confined to the pay they receive from Government. This is a fact which should be taken into consideration in arriving at a final decision on the question of the pay and prospects of these Assistant Surgeons. In this connection I would like to explain my position by giving one concrete illustration. Let us suppose there are two boys reading for the B. A.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

examination; both pass the examination, and it so happens that one is admitted to the Provincial Service on an initial pay of Rs. 200 while his equally qualified brother who has chosen the medical profession is admitted into the Medical College for a long and expensive course of five or six years. After passing the final medical examination when he obtains an appointment he is to begin on Rs. 100 only. That shows that the initial pay in the latter service is very unsatisfactory, but as I have already submitted before I would not like to labour this point because it is admitted by Government that their pay is insufficient, and Government have already moved in the matter. My resolution is a very elastic one; I do not ask for any particular increment, all that I ask is that steps should be taken to increase their pay and prospects and that the increment granted should be appreciable and substantial. That is all I need say in support of my resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

My Lord, Assistant Surgeons are a body of men who have never been backward in preferring their grievances, and the result is that in recent years a considerable amount of attention has been given to them, and their pay has been enhanced on more than one occasion. I do not, therefore, accept the picture of them as a ground-down and sweated body of men, and while it is quite proper that the State should pay for their services a fair living wage, it must also be remembered that with the yearly increase in the number of candidates, there is no difficulty in filling our appointments, and we could not afford to, nor would it be right that we should, pay more than the fair market rate. The arguments to which the Hon'ble Member has resorted of comparison with other services are further apt to be extremely misleading and dangerous. It sounds simple to say that a Deputy Magistrate or a Munsiff gets so much and therefore that the Assistant Surgeon should get so much as both are equally qualified; or that one brother should not be left to choose one career and then find himself worse off than the other brother who has chosen another; but the argument really carries little conviction. It is probably true of every family of brothers that one adopts one line of life and another chooses a different line, and when they reach a ripe old age they may find that one has succeeded to a greater extent than the other, but that is largely a matter of luck and temperament and is not the fault of Government, while supposed analogies between various careers may take us far afield.

As illustrating what I have said regarding the improvements that have been effected in the pay of Assistant Surgeons in recent years, I may mention that, to go no further back than 1898, we then approved of four grades of Rs. 100, 150, 200, 300, and for Assistant Surgeons promoted to Civil Surgeoncies Rs. 350—500. Again in 1912 we introduced a time-scale rising from Rs. 100 to 300, with 10 per cent. of the cadre in two selection grades of Rs. 325 and 350. Again in 1915 we raised the pay of the Assistant Surgeons promoted to Civil Surgeoncies to Rs. 400—600. So that there have been three instances of enhancements between 1898 and 1915. The Public Services Commission took up the same question, and recommended a slightly improved time-scale and a slight improvement in the pay of those promoted to Civil Surgeonships. The matter was again examined last cold weather by the Medical Services Committee, and on the basis of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and of that Committee we have submitted proposals which are now before the Government of India, again improving in a fair degree the prospects of this Service. Therefore, at the present moment, while we accept the resolution as an indication that the Council may wish to endorse our action in recommending an enhancement, yet it must be clearly understood that we do not propose to do anything more than we have already done, and we shall merely await the orders of the Government of India on the proposals which have been submitted to them."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, this is a matter on which I should like to avoid any controversy in view of the assurance that we have received that the matter is under the consideration of Government. I would like to say something in reply to some of the Hon'ble Member's observations with which I do not find myself in agreement but I refrain from doing so. I again repeat my prayer that the increments that are proposed may be appreciable and not merely nominal."

The resolution was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to improve the pay and prospects of the compounders attached to Government hospitals and dispensaries in the Presidency.

He said :—

"My Lord, since giving notice of this resolution I understand that orders have already been passed granting some increments to the compounders ; in some cases it is from Rs. 20 to 30 with an annual increment of Re. 1 and in others the maximum has been raised to Rs. 35. In view of this fact all I would like to do is to express the gratitude of the compounders and of the public to the Government for this act of mercy."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, it is true that at the time when notice was first given of this resolution we had before us proposals from the Surgeon-General for raising the pay of compounders. I held them up in the expectation that the resolution would be moved on the occasion of our last meeting, but as it was then postponed, I did not think it was fair that the compounders should suffer owing to the absence of the Hon'ble Member, and accordingly sanctioned the enhancement. There is little reason, therefore, for moving a resolution on the subject now."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned to Tuesday the 3rd February 1920 at 11 A.M. at Government House, Calcutta.
